ACCUSTOMED in the present day to the highest degree of civil and religious liberty that man perhaps can ever expect to enjoy, free to express our opinions without the terrors of the stake or the tortures of the rack, to awe us into silence, or force us into dissimulation, it is with a mixture of curiosity and indignant surprise that we cast back our glance over a space of centuries, and see our ancestors struggling in all the mazes of ignorance and the labyrinths of superstition, alike passive under the mental tyranny of their monkish rulers and the bodily servitude of their despotic Lords.

But every thing in this world changes, and excessive tyranny only more effectually prepares the way for perfect freedom. The minds of men in some degree induced to reason by the measures of Henry the Eighth, were no longer to be blinded by false pretences or intimidated by impotent threats ; and the commencement of the Reformation dawned steadily and beautifully through the mists of papistic craft that the mental sloth of ages had permitted to accumulate.

It is difficult for us to imagine the despotic control at that time exercised over the whole faculties, whether physical or mental, of our ancestors ; and it requires some effort to picture to ourselves the revivifying effect that must have attended the spreading of the reformed doctrines. Men, who had seldom exerted their reasoning powers, were at once invited to discuss theological difficulties, and to solve the deepest mysteries of religion : and as by the reformed tenets every matter was open for discussion, there were few bounds set to inquiry ; but various tenets and various opinions were as quickly spread, as eagerly adopted.

At this critical moment a translation of that Book, by all allowed to be the only proper guide of conduct, the only safe chart by whose aid man could hope to steer through the stormy seas and dangerous shoals with which his course is surrounded, was published and set forth : and its effect in hushing controversy and silencing factious clamour, may not unaptly be compared to that of the sun, when he breaks through the fast flitting clouds, and shining forth, dispels them by his brightness; and day, beautiful day, reigns in all its splendour.

The light that thus broke through the mental darkness of the reign of Henry the Eighth, fed as it was by the Holy Word of God, burnt purely and steadily; and although adverse winds and hostile gusts shook its flame for a time during the reign of Mary, they could not extinguish it, but left it to throw its calm and heavenly rays on our own and future ages.

That translation of the Bible is now for the first time reprinted,* and words of ours are not necessary either to point out its worth or to extol its merit, to cite it for its interest or celebrate it for its rarity—but it goes forth once again into the world as the labour of a man eminent for his piety and learning, as a faithful version of the original Scriptures, and as one of those means to which we may gratefully ascribe the establishment of our present national religion.

THE ORIGINAL EDITION OF THIS BIBLE, PRINTED IN 1535.

WHILE the reprint of this Bible cannot fail to be welcome to the public generally, there are many who, we feel certain, will not be dissatisfied to have some bibliographical details concerning so curious and valuable a book.

The following account will be purely and strictly of a bibliographical nature; both because it would exceed our limits to give any other, and because a work has been recently published,* in which full information on the subject renders any further notice on our part unnecessary.

The book itself is printed in a very peculiar angular Swiss or German type. Its size is a small folio, and there is no name of place or printer in it.

Many and various are the suppositions as to where it was printed. Some say Zurich, others Frankfort, and indeed most of the principal cities in Germany, in their turn, come in for a share of the honour. The only circumstance from which any satisfactory conclusion can be drawn, is the resemblance existing between the type or wood-cuts contained in it, and those in any work of which the printer is known. Proof of this description exists in favour of Frankfort, where some works were printed in the years 1533, 1539, and 1551, by Christian Egenolph, in which similar wood-cuts appear; but on very close examination, although seemingly precisely alike, they will be found to be different wood-cuts, copies of each other; so that this proof is of very little value, even independent of the fact, that other books, printed at other places, are to be found, which have some of the wood-cuts in them, apparently the same as those used in the Bible. Then as to the resemblance of the type, which was indeed what induced Mr. Wanley to conclude it was printed at Zurich; it appears to be no better criterion than that of the wood-cuts, since somewhat similar type is to be found in books printed at several different places.

The only satisfactory proof that could be relied on, would be, tracing in the work of some known printer, precisely the same type as that used in this edition. Meantime we should be content to allow Zurich to enjoy the honour so long generally ascribed to it, of having put forth this volume; at least until such time as its rivals shall bring forward some stronger proof of their claims than any hitherto adduced. Indeed it seems to be somewhat in favour of the title of Zurich, that the only other edition of this Bible, printed abroad (in 1550), was printed at that place, in the house of Christopher Forshower, or Froshover, in a similar type, only smaller and sharper. Although this circumstance is indeed urged by some as first giving rise to the report, that the present edition had likewise been printed there.

The copies of this Bible known to exist, are those in the Libraries of the British Museum.—Bodleian. Public Library, Cambridge.—King's College, Cambridge.—Sion College.—All Souls' College.—Trinity College, Dublin.—Lambeth Library.—Bapt. Mns. Bristol.—DUKE OF SUSSEX.—Earl Jersey.—Earl Spencer.—Dr. Coombe.—The late William Coombes, Esq.—George Offor, Esq.—B. Harrison, Esq.—Rev. R. Daley.—Lea Wilson, Esq.; and Mr. Reed.^b

Bibliographical Description.

"Of seven copies of this edition," says Mr. Cotton, "which I have seen, that in the British Museum is the only one that has the title-page, and even that is made up from two copies. Of the others, the Bodleian copy is by far the finest." Not only is the title-page of the one in the Museum made up from two copies, but it is even made up from two separate wood-cuts of the same design; for in the one, as will presently be seen, the texts in the scrolls are in English, in the other, in Latin.

The title is as follows:—

"BIBLIA
The Bible, that is, the holy Scripture of the Olde and New Testament, faith fully and truly translated out of Douche and Latyn in to Englyshe.
M.D.XXXV.

S. Paul. II. Tessa. III.

Praie for vs, that the worde of God maie haue fre passage, and be glorified ¶.

S. Paul Col. III.

Let the worde of Christ dwell in you plen teously in all wysdome ¶.

Josue I.

Let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exercyse thyselfe therin daye and night ¶.

This mention of its being translated "out of Douche and Latyn," was no doubt a bookselling artifice of the time, to make the work circulate better, as being intimately connected with the reformed doctrines, which were then equally well known by the term of German or Dutch doctrines. Nay, we are even told that the early reformers of that day were commonly called Germans, on account of their adoption of those reformed opinions which first sprung up in Germany. That Coverdale did not follow Luther's version, it only requires a very slight comparison of texts to prove; but he no doubt availed himself, where there occurred any difficult reading, of all the different means of assistance within his power, as indeed he himself intimates in his prologue to the reader.

The above title is printed in a compartment of six wood-cuts, of which the top and bottom ones are of the whole width of the page. The wood-cut at the top represents original sin, and Christ's resurrection; the one at the bottom represents the king seated on his throne, the bishops on his right hand, and the peers on his left, kneeling. The bishops are in the act of presenting the Bible to his Majesty, which he graciously receives. The royal arms underneath. A scroll on the bishops' side with the text, "O how swete are thy wordes vnto my throte: yee more then honey ꝑc. Psal. 118." On the other side a scroll, of which the Latin is, "Non enim erubescio Euangelii, virtus enim dei est in salutem Rom. i." On the right of this wood-cut, outside of the scroll, is a whole-length figure of St. Paul; on the left, also outside of the scroll, the figure of David playing on the harp. The other four wood-cuts represent Moses receiving the tables; Aaron reading the law to the people; our Saviour giving his disciples power to preach and heal; and St. Paul preaching. These cuts, as well as others, occurring throughout the work, are well executed, and Sebald Behem of Nuremberg was most probably the artist employed.

On the reverse of the title is, "The bokes of the whole Byble, how they are named in Englysh and Latyn, how longe they are wrytten in the allegacions, how many chapters euery boke hath, and in what leafe every one begynneth." It contains, however, only references to the first four parts; those to the Apocrypha and the New Testament were probably on another leaf, which is missing in this copy (the Museum one).

Then comes the dedication, "Vnto the most victorious Prynce and oure most gracyous soueraigne Lorde, kynge Henry the eyght, kynge of Englonde and of Fraunce, lorde of Irlonde, &c." signed "Youre graces humble subiecte and daylie oratour, Myles Couerdale." 5 pages. The Museum copy has "Quene Anne" in the dedication; Sion College has "Quene Jane;" Lambeth Library has a copy with each; the Bodl'ian has "Quene Anne;" All Souls' College has neither; Dr. Coombe's has neither; the late Mr. Coombes's has "Quene Anne."

Then "A prologe. Myles Couerdale Unto the Christen reader." 6 pages.

Then "The bokes of the hole Byble" &c., 2 pages. This is evidently part of another edition inserted in this copy (the Museum one), or rather this set of preliminary pieces do not belong to this title-page; since a portion of the same information is to be found printed on the reverse of the title-page.

The contents of "The first boke of Moses," 1 page.

"The first boke of Moses, called Genesis." Then should come, according to Herbert, a map of the Holy land. The four other books of Moses follow, with tables of contents prefixed to each: in all, fol. i—xc. Signature a i, to p vi, in sixes. The first leaf appears not to have any signature, or else it has been rubbed out in this copy (the Museum one), the second leaf being marked a ii.

Then comes a title-page: "The seconde parte of the olde Testament." with the names of the books contained underneath. This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse "The boke of Josua. What this boke conteyneth." Joshua to Hester, fol. ii—cxx (the reverse of). Tables of contents at the commencement of each book. Signature a ij, to v v vi, in sixes.

"The boke of Job," table of contents. "The Psalter." "The Prouerbes of Salomon," table of contents. "Ecclesiastes," table of contents. "Salomons Ballettes." From Job to Salomons Ballettes, fol. i—lii. Signature A a, to Ji iiij, in sixes.

Then comes another title-page: "All the Prophetes in Englishe." with the names of the books contained underneath. This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, the contents of "the Prophet Essay." The contents prefixed to each Prophet. In all, fol. ii—cii, (the reverse of). Signature A a a ij, to Rrrvi, in sixes.

Another title-page: "Apocripa The bokes and treatises which amonge the fathers of olde are not rekened to be of like autorithe with the other bokes of the byble, nether are they foude in the Canon of the Hebrue." Then follow the names of the books. At the bottom, "Vnto these also belongeth Baruc, whom we haue set amōge the prophetes next vnto Jeremy, because he was his scribe, and in his tyme." This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, "The translatoure vnto the reader." containing some observations on the nature of these books. Underneath the contents of the first book. The contents are prefixed to each book, except to "Certayne chapters of Hester." "The songe of the iij children." "The story of Susanna" and "The story of Bel," In all, fol. ii—lxxxiii (the reverse of), falsely numbered lxxxi. Signature A ij to O v, in sixes, the last leaf blank.

Then the title page: "The new testament." underneath, the books named. Also in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, the contents of "The gospell of S. Mathew." The contents before each book. In all, fol. ii—cxlii (the reverse of). Signature AA ij, to TT v, in sixes.

On the reverse of the last leaf; "Printed in the yeare of oure LORDE M.D.XXXV. and fynished the fourth daye of October."

At the beginning of Genesis are six cuts in wood, describing the six days' work of the creation; and in different parts of the work are other cuts, also in wood, some of them very spirited and well executed, representing the history therein mentioned, and most probably done, as before stated, by Sebald Behem of Nurembergh. There are also some initial letters of a very elegant character, from designs of Holbein.

This Bible, as will be seen by the above description, is divided into six parts, of which four have separate title-pages. That there should be no separate title-page to the first part is not odd, as it scarcely seemed to want one; but it is rather curious that there should be none to the third part; and that there never was any printed, and that it is not missing from the present copies, is clear, since the first leaf is numbered fol. i, which would not otherwise have been the case. The type, as before mentioned, is an angular Swiss or German. The title-page and its reverse are in the same letter as the body of the text. But the dedication, the prologue, the names of "the bokes of the whole Byble," and the contents of Genesis, are in a different character, and were most probably printed after the arrival of the volume in England. There are a few marginal references, which are in Roman letters. On fol. xli. of part I. is a large wood-cut of the Tabernacle and its contents; this is repeated on the reverse of fol. lvi. The initial letter of Genesis is a large flourished text capital. A full page contains fifty-seven lines.

Whether this edition ever had a table of the Epistles and Gospels for the Sundays, &c. at the end, is not known. No copy has yet been found, that we are aware of, containing any such table; but it seems not improbable that it had, since we find one in the reprints in quarto and in folio, by Nicholson, in 1537; and also in the edition of 1550.

It is not known how many copies of this edition were issued from the press, but the number must have been very great, when we consider that it was the first edition of the whole Bible in English ever offered to the public, at a time, when, excited by the writings daily put forth by the reformers, they were most eager to peruse it; and that Grafton, when he published Matthew's Bible in 1537, although of a much larger size, and consequently more expensive, ventured to print as many as 1500 copies.

This Bible was reprinted in folio and in quarto in 1537, by Nicholson, in Southwark, with a very few slight and trifling alterations. It was also printed again in 1550, which last edition was put forth anew in 1553, with a reprinted title-page and preliminary pieces. The edition of 1535, as we find by a copy in the library of Earl Jersey, had also a reprinted title-page in 1536.

VNTO THE MOST VICTORIOUS PRYNCE AND OURE MOST GRACIOUS SOUERAIGNE LORDE,

KYNGE HENRY THE EYGHTE,

KYNGE OF ENGLONDE AND OF FRAUNCE, LORDE OF IRLONDE. ¶C. DEFENDOUR OF THE FAYTH, AND VNDER GOD THE CHEFE AND SUPPREME HEADE OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLONDE.

CAIPHAS beyng bysshope of that yeare, lyke a blynde prophete (not vnderstandyng what he sayd) prophecied,^a that it was better to put Christ vnto death, then that all the people shulde perysshe: he meanyng, that Christ was an heretike, a deceauer of the people, & a destroyer of the lawe, and that it was better therfore to put Christ vnto death, thā to suffre hym for to lyue, and to deaceue the people. ¶c. where in very dede Christ was the true prophete, the true Messias, and the onely true Sauour of the worlde, sent of his heauenly father to suffre the moste cruell, most shamefull, and most necessary death for our redempcyon: accordyng to y^e meanyng of the prophecie truely vnderstonde.

Euen after the same maner y^e blynde bysshope of Rome, (that blynde Baalam I saye) not vnderstandyng what he dyd, gaue vnto your grace this tittle: Defendour of the fayth, onely bycause your hyghnes suffied your bysshoppes to burne Gods worde the rote of fayth, and to persecute the louers and mynisters of y^e same. where in very dede the blynde bysshope (though he knewe not what he dyd) prophecied, that by the ryghteous admyonstracyon and contynuall diligence of youre grace, the fayth shulde so be defended, that Gods worde the mother of Fayth with the frutes therof, shulde haue his fre course thorowe out all Christendome, but specyally in your realme.

Yf your hyghnesse now of your pryncely benignte wyll pardon me to compare these two bysshoppes (I meane bysshope Caiphas and the bysshope of Rome) & theyr prophcies together, I doute not but we shal fynde them agree lyke brethren, though the one be a Iewe and the other a counterfayte Christian. Fyrst, Caiphas prophecied that it was better to put Christ vnto death, then that the people shulde perysshe. The bysshope of Rome also, not knowyng what he prophecied, gaue youre grace this tittle: Defendour of the fayth. The trueth of both these prophcies is of the holy goost (as was Baalams prophecie) though they that spake thē, knewe not what they sayd. The trueth of Caiphas prophecie is, that it was necessary for mans saluacyon, that Christ by his death shulde ouercome death, and redeme vs. And the trueth of oure Baalams prophecie is, ^b y^e your grace in very dede shulde defende the Fayth, Yee euen the true fayth of Christ, no dreames, no fables, no heresie, no papisticall inuencions, but the vncorrupte fayth of Gods most holy worde, which to set forth (praysed be the goodnes of God, and increace youre gracyous purpose) your hyghnes with youre most honorable counsell, applyeth all his studye and endenoure.

These two blynde bysshopes now agree in y^e vnderstādyng of theyr prophcies: for Caiphas taketh Christ for an heretike, Oure Balaā taketh the worde of Christ for heresie. Caiphas iudgeth it to be a good dede to put Christ vnto death, that he shulde not deceaue the people. Oure Balaam calleth defendyng of the fayth, the suppressing, kepyng secrete, and burnyng of the worde of fayth: lest the lyght thereof shulde vter his darknes: lest his owne Decretales & Decrees, his owne lawes and constitucions, his owne statutes and inuencions shulde come to none effecte: lest his intollerable exactions and vsurpacions shulde lose theyr strengthe: lest it shulde be known what a thefe and murtherer he is in the cause of Christ, and how haynous a traytoure to God and man in defrauding all Christen kynges & prynces of theyr due obedience: lest we youre graces subiectes shulde haue eyes in the worde of God, at the last to spye out his crafty coueyaūce and iuglynges: and lest men shulde se, how sore he and his false Apostles haue deceaued all Christendome, specyally youre noble realme of Englonde.

Thus your grace seyth how brotherly the Iewysh bysshoppe and oure Balaam agree together, not onely in myter and outwarde appareance: but as the one persecuted the Lorde Iesus in his owne persone, so doth the other persecute his worde and resysteth his holy ordynance in the auctorite of his anoynted kynges. For so moche nowe as the worde of God is the onely trueth that dryueth awaye all lyes, and dis-closeth all iuglyng and disceate, therefore is oure Balaam of Rome so lothe that the scripture shulde be knowē in the mother tonge: lest yf kynges and prynces (specially aboue all other) were exercysed therin, they shulde reclame and chalenge agayne theyr due auctorite, which he falsely hath vsurped so many yeres, and so to tye hym shorter: and lest the people beyng taught by the worde of God, shulde fall from y^e false fayned obediēce of hym and his disguysed Apostles, vnto the true obedience commaunded by Gods owne mouthe: as namely, to obey theyr prynce, to obey father and mother. &c. and not to steppe ouer father and mothers bely to enter in to his paynted religions, as his ypocrites teache: For he knoweth well ynough, that yf the cleare Sonne of Gods worde come ones to the heate of the daye, it shal dryue awaye all the foule myst of his deuylsh doctrines. Therefore were it more to the mayntenance of Antichristes kyngdome, that the worlde were styll in ignorance and blyndnes, and that the scripture shulde neuer come to lyghte. For the scripture (both in the olde testament and in the new) declareth most abouūdauntly that the office, auctorite and power geuen of God vnto kynges, is in earth aboue all other powers: let them call the selues Popes, Cardynalles, or what so euer they will, "the worde of god declareth them (yee and commaundeth them vnder payne of dampnacion) to be obedient vnto the temporall swerde: As in the olde Testament all the Prophetes, Prestes and Leuites were. And in the new Testament ^b Christ & his Apostles both were obedient them selues, and taught obedience of all men vnto theyr prynces ād temporall rulers: which here vnto vs in the worlde present the persone of God, and are called ^c Goddes in the scripture, by-cause of the excellēcy of theyr office. And though there were no mo auctorities but the same, to proue the peminence of the temporall swerde, Yet by this the scripture declareth playnly, that as there is nothyng aboue God, so is there no man aboue the kyng in his realme but that he onely vnder God is the chefe heade of all the cōgregacyon and church of the same. And in token that this is true, there hath ben of olde antiquite (and is yet vnto this daye) a lounyng ceremonye vsed in your realme of Englonde, y^e whā your graces subiectes reade your letters, or begynne to talke or comē of your hyghnes, they moue theyr bonettes for a signe & token of reuerence vnto your grace, as to their most soueraigne lorde & heade vnder God. which thyng no man vseth to do to eny bysshoppe. wherby (yf oure vnderstondyng were nat blynded) we myght euidently perceauē, that euen very nature teacheth vs the same, that scripture cōmaūdeth vs: and that lyke as it is agaynst Gods worde that a kyng shulde not be the chefe heade of his people, euen so (I saye) is it agaynst kynde that we shulde knowe any other heade aboue hym vnder God.

And that no prest nor bysshoppe is exempte (nor can be lawfully) from the obedience of his prynce, the scripture is full both of straye cōmaūdemētes, & practises of the holiest men. *Aaron was obedient vnto Moses, and called hym his lorde, though he was his owne brother. * Eleasar and Phineas were vnder the obediēce of Iosua. * Nathan the prophete fell downe to the grounde before kyng Daud, he had his Prynce in such reuerence (He made not the kyng for to kysse his fote as the bysshoppe of Rome maketh Emperours to do) Notwithstondyng he spared not to rebuke hym, and that ryght sharply whan he fell from the worde of God to adultery & manslaughter. For he was not afrayed to reprove hym of his synnes, nomore than Helyas the prophete stode in feare to saye vnto kyng Achab: † It is thou and thy fathers house that trouble Israel, because ye haue forsaken y^e commaundementes of the Lorde, and walke after Baal. And as Johan Baptyste durst saye vnto Kyng Herode: † It is not lawfull for the to take thy brothers wyfe. But to my purpose I passe ouer innumerable mo ensamples both of the olde Testament and of the new, for feare lest I be to teduous vnto your grace. Sūma, in all godly regimentes of olde tyme the kyng and tēporall iudge was obeyed of euery man, and was alwaye vnder God the chefe and supreme heade of the whole congregacyon, † and deposed euen prestes whan he sawe an vrgent cause, as Salomon dyd vnto Abiathar. who coulde than sonde agaynst the godly obediēce of his prynce (excepte he wolde be at defyaunce with God and all his holy ordinaunces) that were well acquaynted with the holy scripture, which so earnestly cōmendeth vnto euery one of vs the auctorite and power geuen of God vnto kynges and temporall rulers? Therefore doth Moses so strately † forbyde the Israelites to speake so moche as an euell worde agaynst the prynce of y^e people, moche lesse than to disobeye hym, or to withstonde hym. Doth not † Ieremy the prophete and † Baruc also exhorte the people in captiuite, to praye for the prosperous welfare of the kyng of Babilon, and to obeye hym, though he was an infidele? In the new Testament whā oure sauioure Christ (beyng yet fre & Lorde of al kynges & prynces) shewed his obediēce in payenge the trybute to oure ensample, † dyd he not a miracle there in puttyng the peece of money in the fysshes mouth (that Peter myght paye the customer therewith) and all to stablysshe the obediēce dū vnto prynces? § Dyd not Ioseph and Mary the mother of our sauiour Christ departe frō Nazareth vnto Bethleē, so farre from home, to shewe theyr obediēce in payenge the taxe to the prynce? And wolde not oure Sauioure be borne in the same obediēce? † Doth not Paule pronounce hym to resyste God hym selfe, that resysteth the auctorite of his prynce? And (to be shorte) the Apostle Peter † dothe not onely stablysshe the obediēce vnto prynces and temporall rulers but affirmeth playnly the kyng (and no bysshoppe) to be the chefe heade. Innumerable places mo are there in scripture, which bynde vs to the obediēce of oure prynce, and declare vnto vs, that no man is nor can be lawfully excepte from the same: but that all the mynisters of Goddes worde are vnder the tēporall swerde: & Prynces onely to owe obediēce vnto God & his worde.

And where as Antichrist vnto youre graces tyme dyd thrust his heade into y^e imperiall crowne of your hyghnes (as he doth yet with other noble prynces mo) that lerned he of Sathā the authour of pryde, and therein doth he both agaynst the doctryne & also agaynst y^e ensample of Christe: whiche because his kyngdome was not of this worlde, medled with no temporall matters, as it is euident both by his wordes and practyse: Luc. xii. Math. xxvi. Ioh. vi. Ioh. xviii, where he y^e hath eyes to se, maye se: & he y^e hath eares to heare, maye heare, y^e Christes admystration was nothyng tēporall, but playne spiritual, as he hym selfe affirmeth & proueth in the fourth chapter of saynt Luke out of the prophete Esay: where all bysshoppes and prestes maye se, how farre theyr byndyng and lowsyng extendeth, and where in theyr office consisteth, namely in preachyng the Gospell. & c.

wherfore (most gracyous prynce) there is no tonge I thynke, that can fully expresse and declare the vntollerable iniuries, which haue bene done vnto God, to al prynces and to the comynalties of all christen realmes, sence they which shulde be onely the ministers of Gods worde, became lordes of the worlde, and thrust y^e true and iust prynces out of theyr rowmes. whose herte wolde not pitie it (yee euē with lamentacyon) to remember but onely the vntollerable wronge done by that Antychrist of Rome vnto youre graces most noble predecessore kynge Iohn? I passe ouer his pestilent pykyng of Peter pens out of youre realme: his stealynge awaye of youre money for pardons: benefices and bysshopyrkes: his disceauyng of youre subiectes soules with his deuelyshe doctrynes and sectes of his false religions: his bloudsheddyng of so many of your graces people, for bokes of the scripture. whose herte wolde not be greued (yee and that out of measure) to call to remembraunce, how obstinate and disobedient, how presumptuous & stubborn that Antychrist made the bysshoppes of youre realme agaynst your graces noble predecessours in tymes past, as it is manifest in y^e Cronicles? I trust verely there be no suche now within youre realme: Yf there be, let them remembre these wordes of scripture: "Presumptuousnes goeth before destructio, & after a proude stomacke there foloweth a fall.

what is now the cause of all these vntollerable and nomore to be suffred abhominacions? Truly euen the ignorance of the scripture of God. For how had it els ben possible, that such blyndnes shulde haue come in to y^e worlde, had not y^e lyghte of Gods worde bene extyncte? How coulede men (I saye) haue bene so farre from the true seruyce of God, and from the due obedience of theyr prynces, had not the lawe of God bene clene shut vp, depressed, cast asyde, and put out of remembrance? As it was afore the tyme of that noble kynge Iosias, and as it hath bene also amonge vs vnto youre graces tyme: by whose most ryghteous admystracyon (thorowe the mercifull goodnes of God) it is now founde agayne, *as it was in the dayes of that most vertuous kynge Iosias. And praysed be the father, the sonne, and the holy goost worlde without ende, which so excellently hath endewed youre Pryncely hert with such seruientnes to his honour, and to the welth of youre louyng subiectes, that I maye ryghtuously (by iust occasyons in youre persone) copare youre hyghnes vnto that noble and gracyous kynge, y^e lanterne of lyghte amonge prynces, that feruent protectour and defender of the lawes of God: which comanded straitly (as youre grace doth) that the lawe of God shulde be redde and taught vnto all y^e people: set the prestes to theyr office in the worde of god: destroyed Idolatry and false ydols: put downe all euell customes and abusyons: set vp the true honour of God: applyed all his studye and endeuoure to the ryghtuous admystracyon of the most vncorrupte lawe of God. &c. O what felicitie was amonge y^e people of Ierusalem in his dayes? And what prosperous health both of soule & body foloweth the lyke mynistracion in youre hyghnes, we begynne now (praysed be God) to haue experience. ^b For as false doctryne is the origenall cause of all euell plagis and destruccyon, so is y^e true executyng of the lawe of God ad the preaching of the same, the mother of all godly prosperite. The onely worde of god (I saye) is the cause of all felicitie, ^c it bryngeth all goodnes with it, it bryngeth lernynge, it gedreth vnderstandynge, it causeth good workes, it maketh chyl dren of obedience, breuely, it teacheth all estates theyr office and duety. Seynge then that the scripture of God teacheth vs every thyng sufficiently, both what we oughte to do, and what we oughte to leaue vndone: whome we are bounde to obey, and whome we shulde not obeye: therfore (I saye) it causeth all prosperite, and setteth every thyng in frame: and where it is taught and knowen, it lygheneth all darkenesses, cōforteth all sory hertes, leaueth no poore man vnhelped, suffreth nothyng amysse vnamended, letteth no prynces be disobeyed, permytteth no heresie to be preached: but refourmeth all thinges, amēdeth that is amysse, and setteth every thyng in order. And why? because it is geuen by the inspiracyon of God, therfore is it euer bryngynge profyte and frute, by teachynge, by improvyng, by amēdyng and refourmyng all thē y^e wyl receaue it, ^d to make them perfecte & mete vnto all good workes.

Considerynge now (most gracyous prynces) the inestimable treasure, frute & prosperite euerlastynge, that God geueth with his worde, and trustynge in his infynite goodnes that he wolde brynge my symple and rude labour herin to good effecte, therfore as the holy goost moued other mē to do the cost herof, so was I boldened in God, to labour in the same. Agayne, consyderynge youre Imperiall maiestye not onely to be my naturall soueraigne liege Lorde & chefe heade of y^e church of Englōde, but also the true defender and maynteyner of Gods lawes, I thought it my dutye and to belonge vnto my allegiaunce, whan I had translated this Bible, not onely to dedicate this translacyon vnto youre hyghnesse, but wholly to commytte it vnto the same: to the intent that yf any thyng therin be translated amysse (for in many thynges we fayle, euen whan we thynke to be sure) it may stōde in youre graces handes, to correcte it, to amende it, to improue it, yee & cleane to reiecte it, yf youre godly wysdome shall thynke it necessary. And as I do with all humbles submitte myne vnderstondyng and my poore translacyon vnto y^e spirite of trueth in your grace, so make I this protestacyon (hauyng God to recorde in my cōscience) that I haue neither wrested nor altered so moch as one worde for the mayntenaūce of any maner of secte: but haue with a cleare conscience purely & faythfully translated this out of fyue sundry interpreters, hauyng onely the manyfest trueth of the scripture before myne eyes: Trustyng in the goodnes of God, that it shalbe vnto his worshippe: quietnes and tranquillite vnto your hyghnes: a perfecte stablyshment of all Gods ordy-naunces within youre graces domynion: a generall comforte to all Christen hertes, and a continuall thankfulnessse both of olde and yonge vnto god, and to youre grace, for beyng oure Moses, and for bringyng vs out of this olde Egypte from the cruell handes of our spirituall Pharao. For where were the Iewes (by ten thousande partes) so moch bounde vnto "Kynge Dauid, for subduyng of greate Goliath and all theyr enemyes, as we are to your grace, for delyueryng vs out of oure olde Babylonycall captiuyte? For y^e which delyueraunce and victory I beseke oure onely medyatoure Iesus Christ, to make soch meanes for vs vnto his heauenly father, y^e we neuer be vnthankfull vnto him ner vnto youre grace: but that we euer increace in the feare of him, in obedience vnto your hyghnesse, in loue vnfayned vnto oure neighbours: and in all vertue that commeth of God. To whom for y^e defendyng of his blessed worde (by your graces most rightfull administracyon) be honoure and thanks, glory and domynion, worlde without ende, Amen.

MYLES COUERDALE.

A P R O L O G E.

MYLES COUERDALE VNTO THE CHRISTEN READER.

CONSIDERYNGE how excellent knowlege and lernynge an interpreter of scripture oughte to haue in the tongues, and ponderynge also myne owne insufficiency therin, & how weake I am to perfourme y^e office of a translature, I was the more lothe to medle with this worke. Notwithstandynge whan I cōsidered how greate pytie it was that we shulde wante it so longe, & called to my remembraunce y^e aduersite of them, which were not onely of rype knowlege, but wolde also with all theyr hertes haue perfourmed y^t they beganne, yf they had not had impediment: considerynge (I saye) that by reason of theyr aduersyte it coule not so soone haue bene broughte to an ende, as oure most prosperous nacyon wolde fayne haue had it: these and other reasonable causes consydered, I was the more bolde to take it in hande. And to helpe me herin, I haue had sondrye translacions, not onely in latyn, but also of the Douche interpreters: whom (because of theyr synguler gyftes & speciaall diligence in the Bible) I haue ben the more glad to folowe for the most parte, accordynge as I was requyred. But to saye the trueth before God, it was nether my labourer ner desyre, to haue this worke put in my hande: neuertheles it greued me y^t other nacyōs shulde be more plenteously prouyded for with y^e scripture in theyr mother tongue, then we: therefore whan I was instantly requyred, though I coule not do so well as I wolde, I thought it yet my dewtye to do my best, and that with a good wyll.

where as some men thynke now y^e many translacyons make diuysyon in y^e fayth and in the people of God, y^t is not so: for it was neuer better with the congregacion of god, then whan euery church almost had y^e Byble of a sondrye trāslacion. Amonge the Grekes had not Origen a specyall translacyon? Had not Vulgarius one peculyar, & lykewyse Chrysostom? Besyde the seuentye interpreters, is there not the translacyon of Aquila, of Theodotio, of Symachus, and of sondrye other? Agayne amonge the Latyn men, thou findest y^t euery one almost vsed a specyall & sondrye translacyon: for in so moch as euery byshoppe had the knowlege of y^e tongues, he gaue his diligence to haue the Byble of his awne translacion. The doctours, as Hireneus, Cyprianus, Tertullian, S. Iherom, S. Augustine, Hylarius & S. Ambrose vpon dyuerse places of the scripture, reade not y^e texte all alyke.

Therefore oughte it not to be taken as euell, y^t soch men as haue vnderstandynge now in oure tyme, exercise them selues in y^e tongues, & geue theyr diligence to translate out of one language in to another. Yee we ought rather to geue god hye thanks therefore, which thorow his sprete stereth vp mēs myndes, so to exercise them selues therin. wolde god it had neuer bene left of after y^e tyme of S. Augustine, then shulde we neuer haue come in to soch blindnes & ignoraūce, in to soch erreours & delusyons. For as soone as the Byble was cast asyde, & nomore put in exercise, then beganne euery one of his awne heade to wryte what so euer came in to his brayne and y^t semed to be good in his awne eyes: and so grewe y^e darknes of mēs tradiciōs. And this same is y^e cause y^t we haue had so many wryters, which seldome made mēcyon of y^e scripture of the Byble: & though they some tyme aleged it, yet was it done so farre out of season & so wyde from y^e purpose, that a mā maye well perceaue, how that they neuer sawe the oryginall.

Seynge then y^t this diligent exercise of translatinge doth so moch good & edifyeth in other languages, why shulde it do euell in oures? Doubtes lyke as all nacyons in y^e dyuersite of speaches maye knowe one God in the vnyte of faith, and be one in loue: euen so maye dyuerse translacyons vnderstonde one another, & that in the head articles & grounde of oure most blessed faith, though they vse sondrye wordes. wherefore me thynke we haue greate ocaseyon to geue thanks vnto God, that he hath opened vnto his church the gyfte of interpretacyon & of pryntynge, and that there are now at this tyme so many, which with soch diligēce and faithfulness interpret y^e scripture to the honoure of god and edifyenge of his people, where as (lyke as whan many are shut-ynge together) every one doth his best to be nyest the marke. And though they can not all attayne therto, yet shuteeth one nyer then another, and hyteth it better then another, yee one can do it better thē another. who is now then so vnreasonable, so despytefull, or enuyous, as to abhorre him y^e doth all his diligence to hytte y^e prycke, and to shute nyest it, though he mysse & come not nyest the mark? Ought not soch one rather to be commēded, and to be helped forwarde, that he maye exerceyse himselfe the more therin?

For the which cause (concyng as I was desyred) I toke the more vpon me to set forth this speciall translaycon, not as a checker, not as a reprobuer, or despyser of other mens translaycons (for amonge many as yet I haue founde none without occasion of greate thankesgeyunge vnto god) but lowly & faythfully haue I folowed myne interpreters, & that vnder correctyon. And though I haue fayled eny where (as there is noman but he mysseth in some thyng) loue shall constyre all to y^e best without eny peruerse iudgment. There is noman luyunge y^e can se all thynges, nether hath god geuen eny man to knowe every thyng. One seyth more clearly then another, one hath more vnderstondyng then another, one can vtter a thyng better then another, but noman ought to enuye, or dispyse another. He that can do better then another, shulde not set him at naught y^e vnderstondeth lesse: Yee he that hath y^e more vnderstondyng, ought to remembre that the same gyfte is not his but Gods, and y^e God hath geuē it him to teach & enforme the ignoraunt. Yf thou hast knowlege therefore to iudge where eny faute is made, I doute not but thou wilt helpe to amende it, yf loue be ioyned with thy knowledge. Howbeit wherin so euer I can perceaue by my selfe, or by the informacyon of other, that I haue fayled (as it is no wonder) I shall now by the helpe of God ouerloke it better & amende it.

Now wil I exhorte the (who so euer thou be y^e readest scripture) yf thou fynde oughte therin y^e thou vnderstondest not, or that apareth to be repugnaunt, geue no temerarious ner haystye iudgmēt therof: but ascrybe it to thyne awne ignorance, not to the scripture, thynke y^e thou vnderstondest it not, or y^e it hath some other meanyng, or y^e it is happly ouersene of y^e interpreters, or wronge prynced. Agayne, it shall greatly helpe y^e to vnderstonde scripture, yf thou marke not onely what is spoken or wyrtten, but of whom, & vnto whom, with what wordes, at what tyme, where, to what intent, with what circumstance, consyderinge what goeth before, and what foloweth after. For there be some thynges which are done & wryttē, to the intente y^e we shulde do lykewyse: as whan Abraham beleueth God, is obedient vnto his worde, & defendeth Loth his kynsman from violent wronge. There be some thynges also which are wryttē, to the intente y^e we shulde eschue soch lyke. As whan Dauid lyeth with Vrias wyfe, & causeth him to be slayne. Therefore (I saye) whan thou readest scripture, be wyse & circumspecte: & whan thou comest to soch straunge maners of speakeyng & darke sentences, to soch parables & similitudes, to soch dreames or visions as are hyd from thy vnderstondyng, cōmytte them vnto God or to the gyfte of his holy sprete in them y^e are better lerned then thou.

As for the commendacyon of Gods holy scripture, I wolde fayne magnifye it as it is worthy, but I am farre vnsufficiēt therto. & therfore I thoughte it better for me to holde my tonge, then with few wordes to prayse or commēde it: exhortyng y^e (most deare reader) so to loue it, so to cleue vnto it, & so to folowe it in thy daylye conuersacyon, y^e other men seyng thy good workes & the frutes of y^e holy goost in the, maye prayse the father of heauen, & geue his worde a good reporte: for to lyue after the lawe of God, & to leade a vertuous conuersacyon, is the greatest prayse y^e thou canst geue vnto his doctryne.

But as touchyng the euell reporte and disprayse that the good worde of God hath by the corrupte and euell conuersacyon of some, y^e daylye heare it and professe it outwardly with theyr mouthes, I exhorte y^e (most deare reader) let not y^e offende the ner withdrawe thy mynde frō the loue of y^e truthe, nether moue y^e to be partaker in lyke vnthankfulnes: but seyng y^e lighte is come in to the worlde, loue no more the workes of darknes, receaue not the grace of god in vayne. Call to thy remembraunce how louyng & mercifull God is vnto the, how kyndly and fatherly he helpeth the in all trouble, teacheth thyne ignorance, healeth the in all thy sycknesse, forgeueth the all thy synnes, fedeth y^e, geueth the drynke, helpeth y^e out of preson, norysheth the in straunge countrees, careth for the, & seyeth y^e thou wante nothinge. Call this to mynde (I saye) & that earnestly, and consyde how thou hast receaued of god all these benefites (yee and many mo then thou canst desyre) how thou art bounde lykewyse to shewe thy selfe vnto thy neyghboure as farre as thou canst, to teach him yf he be ignoraunt, to helpe him in all his trouble, to heale his syknes, to forgeue him his offences, and that hartely, to fede him, & to cherish him, to care for him, and to se y^e he wante nothyng. And on this behalfe I beseke the (thou y^e hast y^e ryches of this worlde, and louest God with thy harte) to lyfte vp thyne eyes, and se how greate a multitude of poore people renne thorow euery towne: haue pitie on thyne awne flesh, helpe them with a good harte, and do with thy counsell all that euer thou canst, that this vnshamefast beggyng maye be put downe, that these ydle folkes maye be set to laboure, & that such as are not able to get theyr lyuynge, maye be prouyded for. At the leest thou y^e art of counsell with such as are in auctoryte, geue them some occasion to cast theyr heades together, and to make prouysyon for the poore. Put thi^e in remembrance of those noble cities in other countrees, that by the auctoryte of theyr prynces hane so rychely ad well prouided for theyr poore people, to the greate shame & dishonesty of vs, yf we lykewyse receauynge y^e worde of God, shewe not soch lyke frutes therof. wolde God y^e those men (whose office is to maynteyne y^e comon welth) were as diligent in this cause as they are in other. Let vs beware by tymes, for after vnthankfulnes there foloweth euer a plage: the merciful hande of God be with vs, & defende vs that we be not partakers therof.

Go to now (most deare reader) & syt the downe at the Lordes fete and reade his wordes, & (as Moses teacheth the Iewes) take them in to theyr herte, & let thy talkynge & communicacion be of them whan thou syttest in thyne house, or goest by y^e waye, whan thou lyst downe, & whan thou ryseth vp. And aboue all thynges fasshyon thy lyfe, & cōuersacion acordyng to the doctryne of the holy goost therin, that thou mayest be partaker of y^e good promyses of god in the Byble, & be heyre of his blessinge in Christ. In whom yf thou put thy trust, & be an vnfayned reader or hearer of hys worde with thy hert, thou shalt fynde swetenesse theryn, & spye woderous thynges, to thy vnderstondynge, to the auoydynge of all sedycious sectes, to the abhorrynge of thy olde synfull lyfe, & to the stablyshynge of thy godly cōuersacyon.

In the first boke of Moses (called Genesis) thou mayest lerne to knowe the almighty power of god in creatynge all of naught, his infinite wysdome in ordryng the same, his ryghteousnes in punyshynge y^e vngodly, his loue & fatherly mercy in comfertynge the righteous with his promes. &c.

In the seconde boke (called Exodus) we se the myghty arme of god, in deluerynge his people from so greate bondage out of Egypte, and what prouysyon he maketh for them in the wildernes, how he teacheth them with his wholsome worde and how the Tabernacle was made and set vp.

In the thyrde boke (called Leuiticus) is declared what sacrifices the prestes & Leuites vsed, and what theyr office & ministracyon was.

In the fourth boke (called Numerus) is declared how the people are nombred and mustred, how the captaynes are chosen after y^e trybes & kynreds, how they wete forth to y^e battayll, how they pitched theyr tentes, & how they brake vp.

The fyfth boke (called Deuteronomium) sheweth how that Moses now beyng olde, rehearseth the lawe of god vnto y^e people, putteth them in remembrance agayne of all the wonders & benefites that god had shewed for them, and exhortheth them earnestly to loue y^e Lorde theyr god, to cleue vnto him, to put their trust in him and to herken vnto his voyce.

After the death of Moses doth Iosue bryng the people in to the lōde of promes where God doth wonderous thynges for his people by Iosue, which distributeth y^e londe vnto them, vnto euery trybe theyr possession. But in theyr wealth they forgat the goodnes of God, so that oft tymes he gaue thi^e ouer in to the hande of theyr enemies. Neuertheles whan so euer they called faithfully vpon him, and conuerted, he deluiered them agayne, as the boke of Iudges declareth.

In the bokes of the kynges, is describyed the regimēt of good and euell prynces, and how the decaye of all nacions commeth by euell kynges. For in Ieroboam thou seyst what myschefe, what ydolatrye & soch like abominacyon foloweth, whā the kyng is a maynteyner of false doctryne, ad causeth the people to synne agaynst God, which fallinge awaye from gods worde, increased so sore amonge them, that it was the cause of all theyr sorowe and misery, & the very occasion why Israel first and then Iuda, were caryed awaye in to captiuite. ¹Agayne, in Iosa-phat, in Ezechias and in Iosias thou seyst the nature of a vertuous kyng. He putteth downe the houses of ydolatrie, seyth that his prestes teach nothyng but y^e lawe of God, cōmaundeth his lordes to go with them, and to se that they teach the people. In these kynges (I say) thou seyst the cōdicyon of a true defender of y^e fayth, for he spareth nether cost ner labour, to manteyne the lawes of God, to seke the welth & prosperite of his people, and to rote out the wicked. And where such a prince is, thou seyst agayne, how God defendeth him and his people, though he haue neuer so many enemies. Thus wente it with thē in the olde tyme, and euen after y^e same maner goeth it now with vs: God be prayed therefore, ād graunte vs of his fatherly mercy, that we be not vnthankfull: lest where he now geueth vs a Iosaphat, an Ezechias, yee a very Iosias, he sende vs a Pharaο, a Ieroboam, or an Achab.

In the two first boke of Esdras & in Hester thou seyst the deluyeraunce of the people, which though they were but fewe, yet is it vnto vs all a speciall cōforte, for so moch as God is not forgetfull of his promes, but bryngeth them out of captiuite, acordyng as he had tolde them before.

In the boke of Iob we lerne comforte and pacience, in that God not onely punysheth the wicked, but proueth & tryeth the iust and righteous (howbeit there is noman innocent in his sighte) by dyuerse troubles in this lyfe, declaryng therby, y^e they are not his bastardes, but his deare sonnes, and that he loueth them.

In the Psalmes we lerne how to resorte onely vnto God in all oure troubles, to seke helpe at him, to call onely vpon him, to satle oure myndes by paciēce, & how we ought in prosperite to be thankfull vnto him.

The Prouerbes and the Preacher of Salomon teach vs wysdome, to knowe God, oure owne selues, and the worlde, and how wayne all thynges are, saue onely to cleue vnto God.

As for the doctryne of the Prophetes, what is it els, but an earnest exhortacion to eschue synne, & to turne vnto God? a faythfull promes of the mercy ād pardon of God, vnto all them y^e turne vnto him, and a threatenynge of his wrath to the vngodly? sauynge that here and there they prophcey also manifestly of Christ, of y^e expulsion of the Iewes, and callynge of the Heythen.

Thus moch thought I to speake of y^e olde Testament, wherin almyghtie God openeth vnto vs his myghtye power, his wysdome, his louynge mercy & righteousnesse; for the which cause it oughte of no man to be abhorred, despysed, or lightly regarded, as though it were an olde scripture y^e nothyng beloged vnto vs, or y^e now were to be refused. For it is Gods true scripture & testimony, which the Lorde Iesus cōmaundeth the Iewes to search. who so euer beleueth not the scripture, beleueth not Christ, and who so refuseth it, refuseth God also.

The New Testament or Gospell, is a manyfest and cleare testimony of Christ how God performeth his oath and promes made in the olde Testament, how the New is declared and included in the Olde, and the Olde fulfilled and verified in the New.

Now where as the most famous interpreters of all geue sondrye iudgmentes of the texte (so farre as it is done by y^e sprete of knowlege in the holy goost) me thyne noman shulde be offended there at, for they referre theyr doinges in mekenes to the sprete of trueth in the congregacyon of god: & sure I am, that there commeth more knowlege and vnderstandinge of the scripture by theyr sondrie translaycons, then by all the gloses of oure sophisticall doctours. For that one interpreteth somthyng obscurely in one place, the same translateth another (or els he him selfe) more manifestly by a more playne vocable of the same meanyng in another place. Be not thou offended therefore (good Reader) though one call a scribe, that another calleth a lawyer: or elders, that another calleth father & mother: or repentaunce, that another calleth pennaunce or amendment. For yf thou be not disceaue by mens tradiciōs, thou shalt fynde no more dyuersite betwene these termes then betwene foure pens and a grote. And this maner haue I vsed in my translaycon, callynge it in some place pennaunce, that in another place I call repentaunce, and that not onely because the interpreters haue done so before me, but that the aduersaries of the trueth maye se, how that we abhorre not this worde pēnaunce (as they vntruly reporte of vs) no more then the interpreters of latyn abhorre penitence, when they reade respiscere. Onely our hertes desyre vnto God, is, that his people be not bylynded in theyr vnderstandynge, lest they beleue pennaunce to be ought saue a very repētaunce, amēdment, or conuersyon vnto God, and to be an vnfayned new creature in Christ, and to lyue acordyng to his lawe. For els shall they fal in to the olde blasphemy of Christes bloude, and beleue, that they the selues are able to make satisfaction vnto God for theyr awne synnes, from the which erreure god of his mercy and pléteous goodnes preserue all his.

Now to conclude: for so moch as all the scripture is wrytten for thy doctryne & ensample, it shalbe necessary for the, to take holde vpon it, whyle it is offred the, yee and with ten handes thankfully to receaue it. And though it be not worthely ministred vnto the in this translacyon (by reason of my rudnes) Yet yf thou be feruēt in thy prayer, God shal not onely sende it the in a better shappe, by the mynistracyon of other that beganne it afore, but shall also moue the hertes of them, which as yet medled not withall, to take it in hande, and to bestowe the gifte of theyr vnderstandyng theron, as well in oure language as other famous interpreters do in other languages. And I praye God, that thorow my poore ministracyon here in, I maye geue them that can do better, some occasyon so to do: exhortyng the (most deare reader) in the meane whyle on Gods behalfe, yf thou be a heade, a Iudge, or ruler of y^e people, that thou "let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exercise thyselfe therin both daye and nyghte, and be euer readyng in it as longe as thou lyuest: that thou mayest lerne to feare the Lorde thy God, & not to turne asyde from the commaundement, nether to the right hande ner to the left: lest thou be a knower of personnes in iudgmēt, ^band wrest the righte of the straunger, of the fatherles or of the wedowe, and so y^e curse to come vpon the. But what office so euer thou hast ^cwayte vpon it, and execute it, to the mayntenance of peace, to the welth of thy people, defendyng the lawes of God, and the louers therof, and to the destruccyon of the wicked.

then thou woldest teach the people eny other thyng then Gods worde take the boke in thyne hande, & reade the wordes enē as they stonde therein (for it is no shame so to do, it is more shame to make a lye) This I saye for soch, as are not yet experte in the scripture, for I reprove no preaching without the boke as longe as they saye the trueth.

Yf thou be a man that hast wyfe and childrē, first /loue thy wyfe, acordyng to the ensample of the loue, wherwith Christ loued the cōgregacion, and remembre that so doynge, thou louest euen thyselfe: yf thou hate her, thou hatest thine awne flesh: yf thou cherishe her and make moch of her, thou cherisest & makest moch of thyselfe, for she is bone of thy bones, & flesh of thy flesh. And who so euer thou be that hast children, ^fbryng them vp in the nurtour and informacion of the Lorde. And yf thou be ignoraunt, or art otherwyse occupied lawfully that thou canst not teach them thy selfe, then be euen as diligent to seke a good master for thy childrē, as thou wast to seke a mother to beare them: for there lieth as great weight in the one as in y^e other. Yee better it were for the to be vnborne, then not to feare God, or to be euel brought vp. which thyng (I meane bryngyng vp well of children) yf it be diligently looked to, it is the vpholdinge of all comon welthes: and the negligence of the same, the very decaye of all realmes.

Fynally, who so euer thou be, take these wordes of scripture in to thy herte, and be not onely an outwarde hearer, but a doer thereafter, and practyse thyselfe therin: that thou mayest fele in thine hert, the swete promyses therof for thy consolacion in all trouble, & for the sure stablyshinge of thy hope in Christ, and haue euer an eye to y^e wordes of scripture, that yf thou be a teacher of other thou mayest be within the boundes of the trueth, or at the least though thou be but an hearer or reader of another mans doynge, thou mayest yet haue knowlege to iudge all spretes, and be fre from euery erreure, to the vtter destruccyon of all sedicious sectes & straunge doctrynes, that the holy scripture maye haue fre passage, and be had in reputacion, to the worshipp of the author therof, which is euen God himselfe: to whom for his most blessed worde be glory & domynion now & euer. Amen.

The first boke of Moses, called Genesis.

The first Chapter.

IN þ̃ begynnynge God created heauen ⁊ earth: and þ̃ earth was voyde and emptie, and darcknes was vpon the depe, ⁊ þ̃ sprete of God moued vpō the water.

And God sayde: let there be light, ⁊ there was light. And God sawe the light that it was good. Then God deuýded þ̃ light from the darcknes, and called the light, Daye: and the darcknes, Night. Then of the euenynge and mornynge was made the first daye.

And God sayde: let there be a firmament betwene the waters, and let it deuýde þ̃ waters a sunder. Then God made þ̃ firmamēt, and parted the waters vnder the firmamēt, from the waters aboue the firmament: And so it came to passe. And God called þ̃ firmament, Heauen. Then of the euenynge ⁊ mornynge was made the seconde daye.

And God sayde: let the waters vnder heauen gather thē selues vnto one place, þ̃ the drye londe maye appeare. And so it came to passe. And God called þ̃ drye londe, Earth: and the gatheringe together of waters called he, þ̃ See. And God sawe þ̃ it was good.

3 And God sayde: let þ̃ earth bringe forth grene grasse and herbe, that beareth sede: ⁊ frutefull trees, that maye beare frute, euery one after his kynde, hauynge their owne sede in them selues vpon the earth. And so it came to passe. And the earth brought forth grene grasse and herbe, þ̃ beareth sede euery one after his kynde, ⁊ trees bearinge frute, ⁊ hauynge their owne sede in them selues, euery one after his kynde. And God sawe that it was good. Then of the euenynge ⁊ mornynge was made the thirde daye.

And God sayde: let there be lightes in þ̃ firmament of heauen, to deuýde the daye frō the night, that they maye be vnto tokēs, seasons, dayes, and yeares. And let them be lightes in þ̃ firmament of heauen, to shyne vpon the earth: And so it came to passe. And God made two greate lightes: one greater light to rule the daye, and a lesse light to rule the night, and (he made) starres also. And God set them in the firmament of heauen, þ̃ they might shyne vpō earth, and to rule the daye and the night, and to deuýde the light from darcknes. And God sawe that it was good. Then of the euenynge and mornynge was made the fourth daye.

^b And God sayde: let the waters brynge forth creatures that moue and haue life, ⁊ foules for to flye aboue the earth vnder the firmamēt of heauen. And God created greate whalles, and all maner of creatures that lyue and moue, which the waters brought forth euery one after his kynde: and all maner of fethered foules, euery one after his kynde. And God sawe that it was good, and blessed them, sayenge: Growe, and multiplie, and fyll the waters of the sees, and let the foules multiplie vpon the earth. Then of the euenynge and mornynge was made the fifth daye.

And God sayde: let þ̃ earth brynge forth lyuynge soules, euery one after his kynde: catell, wormes ⁊ what as hath life vpon earth, euery one after his kynde. And so it came to passe. And God made þ̃ beastes of the earth euery one after his kynde, and catell after their kynde, and all maner wormes of the earth after their kynde. And God sawe that it was good.

similitude after oure licknesse, that he maye haue rule ouer the fysh of the see, and ouer the foules vnder y^e heauen, and ouer catell, and ouer all the earth, and ouer all wormes that crepe on y^e earth. "And God created man after his licknesse: after y^e licknesse of God created he him, male & female created he them.

And God blessed them, and sayde vnto them: ^aGrowe, and multiplie, and fyll the earth, and subdue it, & haue domynion ouer the fish of the see, and ouer the foules of the ayre, and ouer all the beastes that crepe vpon the earth.

^cAnd God sayde: lo, I haue geuen you all maner herbes that beare sede vpon the whole earth, and all maner frutefull trees that beare sede, to be meate for you. And to all beastes of the earth, and to all foules vnder the heauen, and to euery worme that hath life (vpon earth) all maner grene herbes to eate. And so it came to passe. "And God behelde all y^e he had made, and lo, they were exceeding good. Then of the euenyng and mornynge was made the sixte day.

The ij. Chapter.

ATHUS was heauē and earth fynished with all their hoost, and thus in the seuenth daye God ended his worke, which he had made,^e & rested in the seuenth daye from all his workes which he had made: And blessed the seuenth daye, & sanctified it, because y^e in it he rested from all his workes, which God created and made.

These are the generacions of heauē and earth whan they were created, in the tyme whan the LORDE God made heauen and earth: before there was eny twygg vpon earth, and or euer there grew eny grene herbe vpon the felde. For the LORDE God had yet sent no rayne vpon y^e earth, nether was there eny man to tylle the earth. But there arose a myst from the earth, & watered B all the londe. And y^e LORDE God shope man euē of the mould of the earth, & brethed in to his face y^e breth of life. / And so was man made a luyng soule.

The LORDE God also planted a gardē of pleasure in Eden, towarde y^e east, and set man therein whom he had made. And the LORDE God caused to sprynge out of the earth all maner trees, pleasaut to loke vpon, and good to eate: and the tre of life in the myddest of the garden,^f and the tre of knowledge of good and euell.

And out of Eden there wente a ryuer, to water the garden, and there deuyded it selfe in to foure heade waters. The first is called Phison, which renneth aboute all the londe of Heuylā. ^gAnd there is founde golde, (& the golde of that cōtre is precious,) and there is founde Bedellion, and the precious stone ^h*Onix. The second water is called Gihon, which runneth aboute the whole londe of y^e Moriās. The thirde water is called Hydeckell, which runneth towarde the east syde of y^e Assiriās. The fourth water is Euphrates.

And the LORDE God toke man, & set him in the pleasaut garden of Eden, to dresse it & to kepe it. And the LORDE God commaunded man, sayēge: "Thou shalt eate of all maner trees in y^e garden: But of y^e tre of knowledge of good and euell, shalt thou not eate. For loke in what daye so euer thou eatest therof, thou shalt dye the death.

And the LORDE God sayde: It is not good y^e mā shulde be alone. I wil make him an helpe,ⁱ to beare him cōpany. And whan God the LORDE had made of the earth all maner beastes of the felde, & all maner foules vnder the heauē, he brought them vnto man, to se what he wolde call thē: For as mā called all maner of liuinge soules, so are their names. And man gaue names vnto all maner catell, & vnto the foules vnder the heauē, and vnto all maner beastes of y^e felde. But vnto man there was founde no helpe, to beare him company.

Then the LORDE God caused an herde slepe to fall vpon man, and he slepte. And he toke out one of his rybbes, and (in steade therof) he fylled vp y^e place with flesh. And the LORDE God made a woman,^k of y^e rybbe that he toke out of man, and brought her vnto him. Then sayde man: This is once bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She shalbe called woman, because she was takē of man. / For this cause shal a man leaue father and mother, and cleue vnto his wife, &

A BUT the serpent was sotyller then all the beastes of the felde^a (which \S LORDE God had made) and sayde vnto ^bthe woman: Yee, hath God sayde in dede: Ye shall not eate of all maner trees in the garden? Then sayde the woman vnto the serpent: We eate of the frute of the trees in the garden: But as for the frute of the tre that is in the myddes of the garden, God hath sayde: Eate not ye of it, and touch it not, lest ye dye.

Then saide the serpent vnto the woman: ^cTush, ye shall not dye the death. For God doth knowe, that in what daye so euer ye eate of it, youre eyes shalbe opened, and ye shal be as God, and knowe both good and euell. And the woman sawe that \S tre was good to eate of, and lustye vnto the eyes, and a pleasaunt tre ^d to make wyse, and toke of the frute of it, and ate, and gaue vnto hir husbände also therof, and he ate. Then were the eyes of them both opened, and they perceived that they were naked,^e and sowed fygge leaues together, and made them apurns.

B And they herde the voyce of the LORDE God, which walked in the garden in the coole of the daye. And Adam hyd him self with his wyfe, from the presence of \S LORDE God amonge the trees of the garden. And \S LORDE God called Adam, and sayde vnto him: Where art thou? And he saide: I herde thy voyce in the garden, and was afraied, because I am naked, and therefore I hyd my self. And he sayde: who tolde the, that thou art naked? Hast thou not eaten of the tre, wherof I commaunded the, \S thou shuldest not eate?

C Then sayde Adam: The woman which thou gauest me (to beare me company) gaue me of the tre, and I ate. And the LORDE God sayde vnto the woman: wherfore hast thou done this? The woman sayde: the serpent disceaue me so, that I ate.^d Then sayde the LORDE God vnto the serpent: Because thou hast done this, cursed be thou aboue all catell and aboue all beastes of the felde. Vpon thy bely shalt thou go, \S earth shalt thou eate all the dayes of thy life. And I wyll put enemyte betwene the and the woman, and betwene thy sede^e and hir sede.^f The same shal treade downe thy heade, and thou shalt treade him on the heale.

And vnto the woman he sayde: I will increase thy sorow, whan thou art with childe: with payne shalt thou beare thy childre, and \S thy lust shal pertayne vnto thy husbände, and he shal rule the.

And vnto Adam he sayde: For so moch as thou hast herkened vnto the voyce of thy wyfe, and hast eaten of the tre, wherof I commaunded the, sayenge: thou shalt not eate of it. Cursed be \S earth for thy sake. With sorowe shalt thou eate therof, all the dayes of thy life. Thornes and thistles shalt it beare vnto the, and thou shalt eate the herbes of the felde. In the sweate of thy face shalt thou eate thy bred, tyll thou be turned agayne vnto earth, whēce thou art takē: ^gfor earth thou art, and vnto earth shalt thou be turned agayne.

And Adam called his wyfe Heua, because she is the mother of all luyng. And the LORDE God made Adam \S his wyfe garmentes of skynnes, \S those he put on them. And the LORDE God sayde: lo, Adam is become as it were one of vs, \S knoweth good \S euell. But now lest he stretch his hande, and take also of the tre of life, and eate, and lyue for euer. Then the LORDE God put him out of the garden of Eden, to tyll \S earth, whēce he was takē. And he cast Adam out. And before the garden of Eden he set Cherubes, and a naked fyrie swerde, to kepe \S waye vnto the tre of life.

MOROUER Adam laye with Heua his wyfe, which cōceaued \S bare Cain, and sayde, I haue opteyned \S man of the LORDE. And she proceeded forth, \S bare his brother Abell. And Abell became a shepherde, but Cain became an huszbande man.

And it fortunēd after certaine daies, that Cain brought of the frute of the earth, an offrynge vnto \S LORDE. And Abell brought also of the firstlinges of his shepe, and of f fat of them. "And the LORDE had respecte vnto Abell and to his offerynge: but vnto Cain and his offerynge he looked not. Then was Cain exceddinge wroth, and his countenance chaunged. And the LORDE sayde vnto Cain: Why art thou angrie? and why doth thy countenance change? Is it not so? that yf thou do well, thou shalt receaue it: but and yf thou do euell, thy synne lyeth open in the dore? *Shal he then be subdued vnto the? and wilt thou rule him? And Cain talked with Abell his brother.

33 And it happened, that whan they were in the felde, Cain arose agaynst Abell his brother, and slew him. Then sayde the LORDE vnto Cain: Where is Abell thy brother? He sayde: I can not tell. a Am I my brothers keeper? And he sayde: What hast thou done? c The voyce of thy brothers bloude crieth vnto me out of the earth. And now shalt thou be cursed vpon the earth, which hath opened hir mouth, and receaued thy brothers bloude of thine hande. Whan thou tyllest f grounde, she shall hensforth not geue hir power vnto the. d A vagabunde and a rennagate shalt thou be vpon f earth. And Cain sayde vnto f LORDE: my synne is greater, then that it maye be forgeuen me. Beholde, thou castest me out this daye from out of f londe, and from thy sight must I hyde my self, and must be a vagabunde and a rennagate vpon f earth. And thus shal it go with me: that who so fyndeth me, shal slaye me.

c But the LORDE sayde thus vnto him: f Who so euer slayeth Cain, it shalbe auenged seuenfolde. And the LORDE put a marck vpon Cain, that no man which founde him, shulde kyll him. So Cain wente out from f face of the LORDE, and dwelt in the lande Nod, vpon the east syde of Eden.

And Cain laye with his wyfe, which conceaued and bare Henoch. And he buylded a cite, and called it after the name of his sonne Henoch. And Henoch begat Irad, Irad begat Mahuiael. Mahuiael begat Mathusael. Mathusael begat Lamech.

And Lamech toke him two wyues: f one was called Ada, g the other Zilla. And Ada bare Label, of whom came they that dwelt in tentes and had cattell. And his brothers name was Iuball: Of him came they that occupied harpes g pypes. And Zilla she also bare Tubalcain, a worker in all connyngye poyntes of metall g yron. And Tubalcains sister was called Naema.

And Lamech sayde vnto his wyues Ada and Zilla: Heare my voyce (ye wyues of Lamech) and herken vnto my wordes: for I haue slayne a man, and wounded my selfe: and (haue kyled) a yonge man, and gottē my self strypes. Cain shalbe auēged seue tymes: but Lamech seuen and seuentie tymes.

Adam laye yet with his wyfe agayne, g she bare a sonne, and called him Seth. For God (sayde she) hath apoynted me another sede, for Abell, whom Cain slew. And Seth begat a sonne also, and called him Enos. At the same tyme beganne men to call vpon the name of the LORDE.

The 6. Chapter.

The vi. Chapter.

SO whan men beganne to multiplie vpon the earth, and had begot them daughters, the children of God sawe the daughters of men, that they were fayre, and toke vnto the wyues such as they liked. Then sayde \ddagger LORDE: My sprete shal not allwaye stryue with man, for he is but flesh also. [†] I wil yet geue him respyte an hundredth and twēty yeares. There were gauntes also in the worlde at that tyme. For whan the children of God had lyen with the daughters of men, and begotten them children, \ddagger same (children) became mightie in the worlde, and men of renowe.

But whan the LORDE sawe \ddagger the wickednes of man was increased vpon \ddagger earth, and that all \ddagger thought and imaginacion of their hert was but onely euell continually, [†] it repented him, that he had made man vpon the earth, and he sorowed in his hert, and sayde: I wyll destroye man kynde which I haue made, from the earth: both man, beast, worme, and foule vnder the heauen: for it repenteth me, that I haue made them. [†] Neuertheles Noe founde grace in the sight of the LORDE.

This is \ddagger generacion of Noe. Noe was a righteous and perfecte mā, [†] and led a godly life in his tyme, and begat thre sonnes: Sem, Ham and Iaphet. Notwithstandinge \ddagger earth was corrupte in \ddagger sight of God, and full of myschefe. Then God lokyd vpon \ddagger earth: and lo, it was corrupte (for all flesh had corrupte his waye vpon the earth.)

Then sayde God vnto Noe: The ende of C all flesh is come before me, for the earth is full of myschefe before them. And lo, I wyll destroye them with the earth. Make the an Arcke of Pyne tre, and make chambers in it, and pitch it within and without with pitch and make it after this fashion: The length shal be thre hundredth cubites, the bredth fiftie cubites, and the heygth thirtie cubites. A wyndow shalt thou make aboue of a cubyte greate: but the dore shalt thou set in the myddest in the syde of it: And the Arke shalt thou make with thre loftes one aboue another. For lo, I wyll bringe a floude of water vpon the earth, to destroye all flesh (wherin the breth of life is) vnder the heauē: All that is vpon earth, shal perishe.

But with the wyll I make a couenaunt, B and thou shalt go in to the Arcke with thy sonnes, with thy wyfe, and with thy sonnes wyues. And of all creatures what so euer flesh it be, thou shalt bringe in to the Arcke, euen a payre: the male and the female, that they maye lyue with the: Of foules after their kynde, of beastes after their kynde, and of all maner wormes of the earth after their kinde. Of every one of these shal there a payre go in vnto the, that they maye lyue. And thou shalt take vnto the all maner of meate that maye be eaten, and shalt laye it vp in stoare by the, that it maye be meate for the and them. And Noe dyd acordinge to all that God commaunded him.

The viij. Chapter.

AND ¶ LORDE sayde vnto Noe: Go in to the Arcke thou & thy whole house: ^afor the haue I sene righteous before me at this tyme. ^bOf all cleane beastes take vnto the seuen and seuen, the male and his female. And of vnclane beastes a payre, the male and his female. Like wyse of the foules vnder the heauen, seuen and seuen, the male and his female, that there maye be sede left a lyue vpon the whole earth.

For yet after seuen dayes, I will sende raine vpon the earth fourtie dayes and fourtie nightes, and wyll destroye all manner of thynges that I haue made, from of the face of the earth.

B And Noe dyd all that the LORDE commaunded him. Sixe hūdreth yere olde was he, whan the water floude came vpon earth. ^cAnd he wente in to the Arcke, with his sonnes, his wyfe, and his sonnes wyues, for the waters of the floude. Of cleane beastes and of vnclane, of all fethered foules, & of all that crepeth vpon earth, wente in vnto him to the Arcke by pares, a male and a female, as ¶ LORDE comaunded him. And whan the seuen dayes were past, the water floude came vpon the earth.

In the sixe hundreth yere of Noes age, vpon the seuentene daye of the seconde moneth, that same daye were all ¶ fountaynes of the greate depe broken vp, and the wyndowes of heauen were opened, and there came a rayne vpon ¶ earth fourtie dayes and fourtie nightes.

C Vpon the selfe same daye wēte Noe in to the Arcke, with Sem, Ham and Iaphet his sonnes, and with his wyfe, and the thre wyues of his sonnes, and all manner of beastes after their kynde, all manner of catell after their kynde, all manner of crepyng thynges (that crepe vpō the earth) after their kynde, and all manner of foules (what so euer coude flye & what so euer had fethers) after their kynde: These wente all vnto Noe in to the Arcke by cooules, of all flesh in whom was the breth of life. And these were the male & the female of all manner of flesh, and wente in, acordinge as God commaunded him. And the LORDE shut (the dore) vpon him.

^dThen came the water floude fourtie dayes vpon the earth, and the water increased, and bare vp the Arcke, and lift it vp ouer ¶ earth. Thus the water preuayled, and increased sore vpon the earth, so that the Arcke wente vpon the waters. Yee the waters preuayled and increased so sore vpon earth, that all the hye mountaynes vnder the whole heauen were couered. Fyftene cubytes hye preuayled ¶ waters ouer the mountaynes, which were couered.

Then all flesh that crepte vpon earth, perished, both foules, catell, beastes, and all ¶ moued vpon earth, and all men. What so euer had the breth of life vpon the drye londe, dyed.

^eThus was destroyed all that was vpon the earth, both man and beast, both wormes and foules vnder ¶ heauē: all these were destroyed from the earth, Saue Noe onely remainyd, and they that were with him in the Arcke. And the waters preuayled vpon the earth, an hundreth and fyfte dayes.

The viij. Chapter.

THEN God remembred Noe and all the beastes, and all the catell that were with him in the Arcke, and caused a wynde to come vpon the earth: and ¶ waters ceased, and the fountaynes of the depe and the wyndowes of heauen were stoppe, and the rayne of heauē was forbydden, and the waters ranne styll awaye from ¶ earth, and decreased after an hundreth and fyfte dayes.

Vpon the seuentene daye of the seventh moneth rested the Arcke vpon the mountaynes of Ararat. And the waters wēte awaye and decreased vntyll the tenth moneth: for the first daye of the tenth moneth, the toppes of the mountaynes appeared.

After fourtie dayes Noe opened ¶ wyndow of the Arcke which he had made, & sent forth a rauen, which flew out, and ^fcame agayne, vntyll the waters were dried vp vpō the earth.

B Then sent he forth a doue from him, to wete, whether the waters were fallē vpon the earth. But when ¶ doue coude fynde no restynge place for hir fete, she came agayne vnto him in to the Arke, for the waters were yet vpon the face of all the earth. And he put out his hande, and toke her to him in to the Arke.

Then he abode yet seven dayes mo, & sent out the doue agayne out of the Arke: & she returned vnto him aboute the euen tyde: and beholde, she had broken of a leaf of an olyue tre, & bare it in hir nebb. Then Noe perceived, that the waters were abated vpon the earth. Neuertheles he taried yet seven other dayes, and sent forth the doue, which came nomore to him agayne.

In the sixte hundreth and one yere of Noes age, vpon the first daye of y first moneth, the waters were dried vp vpon the earth. Then Noe toke of the hatches of the Arke, and sawe y the face of the earth was drye. So vpon the seven and twenty daye of the seconde moneth the whole earth was drye.

Then spake God vnto Noe, and sayde: Go out of the Arke, thou and thy wyfe, and thy sonnes, and thy sonnes wyues with the. As for all the beastes that are with the, what so euer flesh it be (both foule & catell and all maner of wormes that crepe vpon the earth) let them go out with the, and be ye occupied vpon the earth, growe and multiplie vpon the earth.

So Noe wente out, with his sonnes, and with his wife, and with his sonnes wyues. All the beastes also and all the wormes, and all the foules, and all that crepte vpon the earth, wente out of the Arke, euery one vnto his like.

And Noe buylded an altare vnto y LORDE, and toke of all maner of cleane beastes & of all maner of cleane foules, and offred brēt sacrifices vpon y altare. And y LORDE smelled the swete sauoure, & sayde in his hert: I wyl hence forth curse the earth nomore for mās sake, for the ymaginacion of mans hert is euell, euen from the very youth of him. Therefore from hēce forth I wil nomore smyte all that lyueth, as I haue done. Nether shall sowynge tyme and haruest, colde and heate Sommer and wynter, daye and night cease so longe as the earth endureth.

The ix. Chapter.

AND God blessed Noe and his sonnes, and sayde vnto them: increace & multiplie, and fyll the earth. The feare also and drede of you be vpon all beastes of the earth, vpon all foules vnder the heauen, and vpon all that crepeth on the earth, and all fshes of the see be geuen in to youre hādes. All that moueth and hath life, be youre meate. Euen as the grene herbe, so haue I geuē you all. Onely eate not the flesh with the bloude, wherin the soule is: For the bloude of you wherin youre soule is, wyl I requyre of the hande of all beastes: and the soule of mā wyl I requyre of mans hande, yee euery mans soule of anothers hande.

He that sheddeth mās bloude, his bloude shal be shed by man agayne, for God made man after his owne liknesse. As for you, be ye frutefull, and increace, and be occupied vpon the earth, that ye maye multiplie therein.

Farthermore, God sayde vnto Noe and to his sonnes with him: Beholde, I make my couenaunt with you, and with youre sede after you, and with euery lyuyng creature that is with you, both foule, catell, and all beastes vpon the earth with you, of all that is gone out of the Arke, what so euer beast of the earth it be: And thus I make my couenaunt with you, that hence forth all flesh shal not be destroyed with the waters of eny floude, and from hence forth there shal come no floude to destroye the earth.

And God sayde: This is the token of my couenaunt which I haue made betwene me and you, and all lyuyng creatures amonge you for euermore: My bowe will I set in the cloudes, and it shal be the token of my couenaunt betwene me and y earth: so that whā I brynge cloudes vpon the earth, the bowe shal appeare in the cloudes. And then wyl I thynke vpon my couenaunt betwixte me and you and all lyuyng creatures in all maner of flesh: so that from hence forth there shal nomore come eny floude of water to destroye all flesh. Therefore shall my bowe be in the cloudes, that I maye loke vpon it, and remembre the euerlastynge couenaunt, betwixte God and all lyuyng creatures in all flesh that is vpon earth. God sayde also vnto Noe: This is the tokē of the couenaunt, which I haue made betwene me and all flesh vpon earth.

The sonnes of Noe which wente out of the Arke, are these: Sem, Ham and Iaphet.

So whan Noe awaked from his wyne, and perceaued what his yonger sonne had done vnto him, he sayde: Cursed be Canaan, and a seruauent of seruauentes be he vnto his brethren. He sayde morouer: Prayed be the LORDE God of Sem, and Canaan be his seruauent. God increase Iaphet, and let him dwell in the tentes of Sem, and Canaan be his seruauent.

And Noe lyued after the floude thre hundredth & fiftie yeaere, so ȝ his whole age was ix. hūdreth and fyfthe yeaere, and so he dyed.

The x. Chapter.

¶ THIS is the generacion of the childrē of Noe, Sem, Ham, and Iaphet, & they begat children after the floude.

^b The children of Iaphet are these: Gomer, Magog, Madai, Iauan, Tubal, Mesech, and Thyras. The childrē of Gomer are these: Ascnas, Riphath and Togarma. The children of Iauan are these: Elisa, Tharsis, Cithim and Dodanim: Of these are deuided the Iles of ȝ Heithen in their countrees, euery one after his speach, kynred and people.

The childrē of Ham are these: Chus, Misraim, Phut and Canaan. The children of Chus are these: Seba, Heuila Sabtha, Reyman and Sabthecha.

¶ The children of Reyman are these: Sheba and Dedā. Chus also begat Nemrod, which beganne to be mightie in the earth, and was a mightie hunter in the sight of the LORDE. Therof cometh the prouerbe: This is a mightie hunter before the LORDE like as Nemrod. And the originall of his kyngdome was ^c Babel, Erech, Acad & Chalne in ȝ londe of Synear. Out of that lōde came Assur, and buylded Ninieue, and ȝ stretes of ȝ cite, and Calah, and Resen betwene Ninieue & Calah: This is a grete cite.^d Mizraim begat Ludim, Enamim, Leabim, Naphtuhim, Pathrusim & Casluhim, from whence came the Philistynes and Capthorims. Canaā also begat Zidon his eldest sonne, & Heth, Iebusi, Emori, Girgosi, Hiti, Arki, Sini, Aruadi, Zemari & Hamati: frō whence ȝ kynreds of ȝ Cananites are dispersed abroad. And ȝ Coastes of ȝ Cananites were frō Sidō forth thorow Gerar vnto Gasa, tyll thou comest vnto Sodoma, Gomorra, Adama, Zeboim, & vnto Lasa. These are the children of Ham in their kynreds, tungen, londes & people. And Sem which is ȝ father of all the children of Eber, & the elder brother of Iaphet, begat childrē also. And these are his children: Elā, Assur, Arphachad, Lud & Aram. The childrē of Aram are these: Vz, Hul, Gether & Mas.

And Arphachad begat Sala, and Sala begat Eber. Eber begat two sonnes: the name of the one was Peleg, because that in his tyme the worlde was deuyded, and his brothers name was Iaketan, and Iaketan begat Almodad, Saleph, Hazarmaphet, Iarah, Hadoram, Vsal, Dikela, Obal, Abimael, Seba, Ophir, Heuila & Iobab: All these are ȝ childrē of Iaketan. And their dwellynge was from Mesa, tyll thou come vnto Sephar a mountayne of ȝ east. These are ȝ children of Sem in their generacions, tungen, londes and people.

This is now ȝ generacion of ȝ children of Noe in their kynredes & people. Of these were ȝ people vpon earth spred a brode after ȝ floude.

Therefore is it called Babell, because the LORDE cōfounded there the language of all the worlde, and from thēce scatred them abrode in to all londes.

These are ¶ generaciōs of Sem. Sem was an hundreth yeare olde, and begat Arphachsad two yeare after the floude, and lyued thereafter fyue hūdreth yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Arphachsad was fyue ¶ thirtie yeare olde, and begat Salah, and lyued thereafter foure hundreth and thre yeare, and begat sonnes ¶ daughters.

C Salah was thirtie yeare olde, and begat Eber, ¶ lyued thereafter foure hūdreth ¶ thre yeare, ¶ begat sonnes and daughters.

Eber was foure and thirtie yeare olde, ¶ begat Peleg, and lyued thereafter foure hundreth and thirtie yeare, and begat sonnes ¶ daughters.

Peleg was thirtie yeare olde, and begat Regu, and lyued thereafter two hūdreth and nyene yeare, and begat sonnes ¶ daughters.

Regu was two and thirtie yeare olde, and begat Serug, and lyued thereafter two hundreth and seuen yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Serug was thirtie yeare olde, and begat Nahor, and lyued thereafter two hundreth yeare, and begat sonnes ¶ daughters.

Nahor was nyene and twentye yeare olde, and begat Terah, and lyued thereafter an hundreth and nyentene yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters.

D Terah was seuentie yeare olde, and begat Abram, Nahor and Haran.

These are the generaciōs of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor and Haran. ¶ And Haran begat Lot, but Harā dyed before Terah his father in ¶ londe where he was borne, at Vr in Chaldea.

Then Abram and Nahor toke them wyues. Abrams wife was called Sarai, ¶ ¶ Nahors wyfe Milca the daughter of Haran, which was father of Milca and Isca. But Sarai was baren, and had no childe.

¶ Then toke Terah Abrā his sonne, ¶ Lot his sonne Harans sonne, ¶ Sarai his daughter in lawe, his sonne Abrams wife, ¶ caried them with him from Vr in Chaldea, to go in to the lande of Canaan. And they came to Haran, ¶ dwelt there. And Terah was two hundreth ¶ fyue yeare olde, and dyed in Haran.

The xij. Chapter.

AND ¶ LORDE sayde vnto Abram: ¶ ¶ Get the out of thy cōuntrie, and from thy kynred, and out of thy fathers house, in to a londe which I wil shew the. And I wil make of the a mightie people, and wyll besse the, and make the a greate name, yee thou shalt be a very blessynge. ¶ I wil besse them that besse the, and curse them that curse the: and in the shal all the generaciōs of the earth be besse.

Then wente Abram out, as the LORDE commaunded him, and Lot wente with him. Fyue ¶ seuentie yeare olde was Abrā, whan he wente out of Haran. So Abram toke Sarai his wife, and Lot his brothers sonne, with all their goodes which they had gotten, and soules which they begat in Harā, and departed to go in to ¶ londe of Canaan. ¶ And whē they were come in to the same londe, he wente thorow, tyll he came vnto the place of Sichem, and vnto the Okegroue of More: ¶ for ¶ Cananites dwelt in ¶ lōde at ¶ same time.

Then the LORDE appeared vnto Abrā, ¶ sayde: ¶ This londe wil I geue vnto thy sede. And there he buylded an aulter vnto ¶ LORDE, which appeared vnto him. Thē brake he vp frō thēce, vnto a mountayne ¶ laye on ¶ east syde of the cite of Bethel, ¶ pitched his tent: so ¶ he had Bethel on the west side, and Ay on ¶ east syde: ¶ there buylde he an altare also vnto the LORDE, ¶ called vpon the name of the LORDE. Afterwarde departed Abram farther, ¶ toke his iourneye southwarde. But there came a derth in the londe.

Then wente Abram downe in to Egipte to kepe himself there as a straunger, for the derth was sore in the londe. And whan he was come nye for to entre in to Egipte, he sayde vnto Sarai his wife: Beholde, I knowe y^e thou art a fayre woman to loke vpon. Now when the Egipcians se the,^a they wil saye: She is his wife, and so shal they slaye me, and saue the alyue. Therefore (I pray y^e) saye thou art my sister, that I maye fare the better by reason of the, and that my soule maye lyue for thy sake.

Now when he came in to Egipte, y^e Egipcians sawe y^e woman, y^e she was very faire: ⁊ Pharaos prynces sawe her also, ⁊ prayed her before him. Then was she brought in to Pharaos house, and Abram was well intreated for hir sake: and he had shepe, oxē, and he Asses, seruauntes, maydēs, she Asses and Camels.

^aBut y^e LORDE played Pharao ⁊ his house with greate plages, because of Sarai Abrās wife. Then Pharao called Abrā vnto him, and sayde: Why hast thou dealt thus with me? Wherefore toldest thou not me at the first, y^e she was thy wife? Why saydest thou then, that she was thy sister? Wherefore I toke her to my wife. And now lo, there is thy wife, take her, and go thy waye. He gaue his officers also a charge ouer him, to conueye him out, and his wife, and all that he had.

The xiiij. Chapter.

SO Abrā departed out of Egipte, with his wife, ⁊ with all y^e he had, ⁊ Lot with him also, towarde y^e south. Abram was very rich in catell, siluer ⁊ golde. And he wente on forth from the south vnto Bethel, vnto the place where his tent was at y^e first, betwene Bethel and Ay: euen vnto y^e place where he had made the altare before, ⁊ where he called vpon the name of the LORDE. Lot also which wente with him, had shepe, greate catell ⁊ tentes: so y^e the londe was not able to receaue them, that they might dwell together: for ^athe substance of their riches was so greate, that they coude not dwell together. And there fell a strife betwene the hirdmen of Abrams catell, and the hirdmen of Lots catell. The Cananites also and the Pheresites dwelt at that tyme in the londe.^c

Then sayde Abram vnto Lot: O let there be no strife betwene me and the, and betwene my hyrdmen and thine, for we are brethrē. Is not all the whole londe open before the?

Depart from me, I praye the. Yf thou wilt go to the left hande, I wil take the right: Or yf thou wilt go to the right hande, I wil take the left. Then Lot lift vp his eyes, and behelde all the cowntre rounde aboute Iordā, that it was a plenteous cowntre of water. For before the LORDE destroyed Sodoma and Gomorra, it was rounde aboute Zoar, euen as the pleasant garden of the LORDE, and as the londe of Egipte.

Then Lot chose all the coastes of Iordā, and toke his iourney towarde y^e East. ^eAnd so the one brother departed from the other. Abram dwelt in the lande of Canaan, and Lot in the cities of the same coastes, and pitched his tent towarde Sodome. But y^e men of Sodome were wicked, and ^asynned exceedingly agaynst the LORDE.

Now when Lot was departed from Abram, the LORDE saide vnto Abram: Lift vp thine eyes, and loke from the place where thou dwellest, northwarde, southwarde, eastwarde, and westwarde: for all the londe that thou seist, wyll I geue vnto the ^aand to thy sede for euer, and wyll make thy sede as the dust of the earth: so that yf a man can nombre the dust of the earth, he shall nombre thy sede also. Arise, and go thorow the londe, in the length and bredth, for I wyl geue it vnto the.

So Abram remoued his tent, and ^awente and dwelt in y^e Okegroue of Mamre, which is in Ebron, and buylded there an altare vnto the LORDE.

AND it chauned in the tyme of Amraphel the kyng of Synear, Arioch the kyng of Ellasar, Kedorlaomer the kyng of Elam, ⁊ Thydeal the kyng of y^e Heithen, That they made warre with Bera y^e kyng of Sodome, and with Birsā the kyng of Gomorra, ⁊ with Sineab the kyng of Adama, ⁊ with Semeaber the kyng of Zeboim, and with the kyng of Bela, which is called Zoar. These came all together in to the brode valley, where now the salt see is: for twolue yeares were they subiectes vnto kyng Kedorlaomer, ⁊ in the thirtieth yeare they fell from him. Therefore in the fourteenth yeare came Kedorlaomer, and the kynges y^e were with him, ⁊ smote the Giauntes in Astaroth Karnaim, ⁊

Susim at Ham, & Emim in the felde of Kiriathaim, and y^e Horites in their owne mount Seir vnto the playne of Pharan, which bordreth vpō the wildernes. And then they turned, & came to the well of iudgment (which is Cades) & smote all the countre of the Amalechites, and also the Amorites, that dwelt in Hazezon Thamar.

33 Then wente out the kynge of Sodome, & the kynge of Gomorra, & the kynge of Adama, and the kynge of Zeboim, and the kynge of Bela (called Zoar) & prepared them selues to fight in the brode valley with Kedorlaomer the kynge of Elam, & with Thideal y^e kynge of the Heithen, & with Amraphel y^e kynge of Synear, & with Arioch the kynge of Ellasar: foure kynges with fyue. And y^e brode valley had many slyme pyttes. But the kynge of Sodoma and Gomorra were put to flight, & fell there, & the residue fled vnto y^e mountaynes. Then toke they all the goodes at Sodoma and Gomorra, & all their vytales, & wente their waye. They toke Lot also Abrams brothers sonne, & his good (for he dwelt at Sodome) and departed.

Ⓒ Then came one that had escaped, and tolde Abram the Aleaunt, which dwelt in the Okegroue of Mamre the Amoryte, which was the brother of Escol & Aner: for these were confederate with Abram.

Now whan Abram herde y^e his brother was taken, he harnessed his bonde seruauntes borne in his owne house, thre hundred & eightene, & folowed after them vntill Dan, & deuyded thē, & fell vpō them by night with his seruauntes, and smote thē, and chased them awaye vnto Hoba, which lieth on y^e left hande of the cite of Damascos, and brought agayne all the goodes, and also his brother Lot, and his goodes, y^e women also and the people. And as he came agayne from the slaughter of Kedorlaomer & of the kinges that were with him, the kynge of Sodome wente to mete him in to the playne felde, which is called kynges dale.

34 But Melchisedech the kynge of Salem brought forth bred and wyne. And he beyng the prest of the most hye God, blessed him and sayde: Blessed be thou Abram vnto the most hye God possessor of heauen and earth.

And praysed be God the Hiest, which hath delyuered thine enemies in to thy handes. And Abram gaue him tythes of all.

Then sayde the kynge of Sodome vnto Abram: Geue me the soules, and take y^e goodes vnto thy self. But Abram sayde vnto the kynge of Sodome: I lift vp my honde vnto the LORDE the most hye God, possessor of heauen and earth, that I wyll not take of all that is thyne, so moch as a threde or a shue lachet, lest thou shuldest saye: I haue made Abram ryche: Saue onely that which the yonge men haue spent, and the men Aner Escol and Mamre, that wente with me, let them take their parte.

The rb. Chapter.

IT happened after these actes, y^e the worde 35 of y^e LORDE came vnto Abra in a rysion, and sayde: Feare not Abram, I am thy shyld and thy exceeding greate rewarde. But Abram sayde: LORDE LORDE, what wilt thou geue me? I go childles, and the seruaunt of my house (this Eleasar of Damascos) hath a sonne. And Abram sayde morouer: Beholde, vnto me hast thou geuen no sede: and lo, the sonne of my householde shal be myne heyre. And beholde, the worde of the LORDE spake vnto him, and saide: He shal not be thine heyre, but one that shal come out of thine owne body, he shal be thine heyre. And he bad him go forth, and sayde: Loke vp vnto heauen, and tell y^e starres: Canst thou nombre them? And he sayde vnto him: *Euen so shal thy sede be.

36 Abram beleued the LORDE, and y^e was counted vnto him for righteousnes. And he sayde vnto him: I am y^e LORDE, y^e brought the from Vr out of Chaldea, to geue y^e this londe to possesse it. But Abram sayde: LORDE LORDE, Wherby shall I knowe, that I shall possesse it? And he sayde vnto him: Take a cow of thre yearre olde, and a she goate of thre yearre olde, and a ramme of thre yearre olde, and a turtill doue, and a yonge pigeon. And he toke all these, and deuyded them in the myddes, and layde the one parte ouer agaynst the other, but the foules deuyded he not. And the foules fell vpō the flesh, but Abram droue them awaye.

Now when the Sonne beganne to go downe, there fell an heuy slepe vpon Abram. And lo, feare and greate darcknes fell vpon him. And he sayde vnto Abram: knowe this of a suertye, that "thy sede shalbe a straüger, in a londe that is not theirs. And they shall make bonde men of them, and intreate them euell foure hundreth yeares. But the people who they shal serue, wyl I iudge. Afterwarde shall they go forth with greate substance: and thou shalt departe vnto thy fathers in peace,^c and shalt be buried in a good age. And after the fourth generacion^d they shall come hither agayne, for the wickednes of y^e Amorites is not yet full.

So whan the Sonne was downe, and it was waxed darcke: Beholde, there smoked a fornace, and a fyre brande wente betwene y^e partes. "The same daye made the LORDE a couenaüt with Abram, and sayde: Vnto thy sede wil I geue this löde, from the water of Egipte, vnto the greate water Euphrates: the Kenytes, the Kenizites, the Kydmonites, the Hethites, the Pherezites, the Giautes, the Amorites, the Cananites, the Gergesites, and the Iebusites.

The xviij. Chapter.

SARAI Abrams wife bare him no children: but she had an handmayde an Egipcian, whose name was Agar, and sayde vnto Abram: Beholde, the LORDE hath closed me, that I can not beare. "Go in (I praye the) vnto my mayde: peraduenture I shalbe multipliéd by her, more then by myself. And Abram herkened vnto the voyce of Sarai. Than Sarai Abrams wife toke Agar hir mayde y^e Egipcian (after they had dwelt ten yeare in the londe of Canaan) and gaue her vnto hir huszbande Abrā, to be his wife. And he wente in vnto Agar, and she conceaued. Now whan she sawe y^e she had conceyued, she despyed hir mastresse.

Then sayde Sarai vnto Abram: I must suffre wronge for thy sake. I layde my mayde by the: but now because she seyth, that she hath conceaued, I must be despyed in hir sight: the LORDE be iudge betwene me and the. And Abram sayde vnto Sarai: Be-holde, thy mayde is vnder thine auctorite, do with her, as it pleaseth the.

Now whan Sarai dealt hardly with her, she fled from her. But the angell of the LORDE founde her besyde a well of water in the wilderness (euen by the well in the waye to Sur) and sayde vnto her: Agar Sarais maide, whence comest thou? and whyther wylt thou go? She sayde: I fle fro my mastresse Sarai. And the angel of the LORDE sayde vnto her: Returne to thy mastresse agayne, and submitte thyself vnder hir hande.

And the angel of the LORDE sayde vnto her: Beholde, I wil so encrease thy sede, that it shall not be nombred for multitude. And the angel of the LORDE sayde further vnto her: Beholde, thou art with childe,^a and shalt bringe forth a sonne, and shalt call his name Ismael, because the LORDE hath herde thy trouble. He shal be a wyld man. His hande agaynst euery man, and euery mans hande agaynst him: and he shal dwel ouer agaynst all his brethren.

And she called the name of the LORDE y^e spake vnto her: Thou art the God that seist me. For she sayde: Of a suertye I haue sene the back partes of him that sawe me. Therefore called she the well: The well of the liuinge that sawe me. Which (well) is betwene Cades and Bared.

And Agar bare Abram a sonne,^a and Abram called his sonnes name which Agar bare him, Ismael. And Abram was foure score yeare olde and sixe, whan Agar bare him Ismael.

And Abrahā ſayde vnto God: O that Iſmael might lyue in thy ſight. Then ſayde God: †Yee euen Sara thy wyfe ſhall beare the a ſonne, and thou ſhalt call his name Iſaac: for with him wil I make my euerlaſtinge couenaunt, and with his ſede after him. Euen vpon one daye were they all circumcyded: Abraham, and Iſmael his ſonne, and all the men in his houſe, (whether they were borne at home, bought, or eny other ſtraüger:) they were all circumcyded with him.

The ruij. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE appeared vnto him in the †Okegroue of Mamre, as he ſat in his tent dore in the heate of ſ daie. And as he lift vp his eyes, and looked, beholde, there ſtoode thre men ouer agaynſt him. And whan he ſawe them, he ranne to mete them from his tent dore, and bowed him ſelf downe vpon the grounde, and ſayde: †LORDE, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy ſight, go not by thy ſeruaüt. Abraham wente a pace in to the tent to Sara, and ſayde: †Make haist, ⁊ mangle thre peckes of fyne meele, knede it, and bake cakes. And he ranne to the beaſtes, ⁊ fet a calf that was tender and good, and gaue it vnto a yonge man, which made it ready at once. And Sara herde that out of the tent dore, which was behynde his backe. And Abraham and Sara were both olde, & well stryken in age: so that it wente nomore with Sara after þe maner of wemen: therfore laughed she with in hir self, and sayde: Now that I am olde & my lord olde also, shal I yet geue my self to lust?

Then sayde þe LORDE vnto Abraham: Wherefore doth Sara laugh, and saye: Is this true in dede, that I shal beare, and yet am olde? Shulde eny soch thinge be to harde for the LORDE? "Aboute this tyme (yf I lyue) I will come to the agayne, & Sara shal haue a sonne. Then Sara denyed it, and sayde: I laughed not, for she was afraied. But he sayde: It is not so, thou dydest laugh. Then the men stode vp from thence, and turned them toward Sodome: and Abraham wente with them, to brynge them on their waye.

C Then sayde the LORDE: How can I hyde from Abraham, þe thinge that I wil do? seyng he shal be a greate and mightie people, and all þe people vpō earth shalbe blessed in him? For I knowe him that he wil cōmaunde his children and his housholde after him, to kepe the waye of þe LORDE, and to do after right and conscience, that the LORDE maye bringe vpō Abraham what he hath promised him. And the LORDE sayde: There is a crie at Sodome and Gomorra, which is greate, & the synnes are exceedinge greuous: therfore will I go downe & se, whether they haue done all together, accordinge to that crye, 'which is come before me, or not, that I maye knowe. And the men turned their face, and wete toward Sodome. But Abraham stode still before þe LORDE, and stepte vnto him, and sayde:

Wilt thou then destroye the righteous with the vngodly? Peraduēture there maye be fiftie righteous within þe cite: wilt thou destroye those, and not spare the place, for fiftie righteous sake that are therin? That be farre fro the, þe thou shuldest do this, and to slaye the righteous with the vngodly, and that the righteous shulde be as the vngodly. That be farre from the. Shulde not the iudge of all the worlde do accordinge to right? And the LORDE sayde: Yf I fynde fiftie righteous at Sodome in the cite, I wil spare all the place for their sakes.

Abraham answered, and sayde: O se, I haue taken vpon me to speake vnto the LORDE, howbeit I am but ^adust and aszhes. Peraduēture there maye be fyue lesse then fiftie righteous therin: Wilt thou then destroye the whole cite because of those fyue? He sayde: yf I fynde fyue and fourtie therin, I will not destroye them.

And he proceded further to speake vnto him, and sayde: Peraduēture there might be fourtie founde therin. And he sayde: I wil do nothinge vnto them for those fortyes sake. Abraham sayde: Oh let not my LORDE be angrie, that I speake yet more. Peraduēture there might be thirtie founde therin. And he sayde: Yf I fynde thirtie therin, I will do nothinge vnto them. And he sayde: O se, I haue taken vpon me to speake vnto my LORDE.

Peraduēture there might be twētie founde therin. He answered: I wyll not destroye them for those twēties sake. And he sayde: O let not my LORDE be angrie, that I speake yet once more. Peraduēture there might be ten founde therin. He saide: I wil not destroye them for those ten sake.

And the LORDE wente his waye, whan he had left talkyng with Abraham. And Abraham returned vnto his place.

The xii. Chapter.

IN the euenyng came the two angels vnto Sodome. And Lot sat vnder the gate of the cite. And whē he sawe them, he rose vp for to mete them, and bowed him self downe to the grounde vpon his face, & sayde: Se lordes, turne in (I praye you) in to youre seruantes house, and tarye all night: let youre fete be waszhen, so maye ye ryse to-morrow by tymes, and go youre waye. Neuertheles they sayde: Nay, but we wyll byde in the stretes all night. "Then compelled he them sore: and they turned in vnto him, and came in to his house. Beholde, I haue two daughters, which yet haue knowne no man: them will I brynge out vnto you, do with them as it liketh you. Onely do nothinge vnto these men of God, for therefore are they come vnder the shadowe of my rofe. But they sayde: Come thou hither. Then sayde they: Camest not thou onely herin as a stranger, and wilt thou now be a iudge? Wel, we will deale worse with the thē with them.

And the men at f dore of the house were "smyttē with blyndnesse both small and greate, so that they coude not fynde the dore.

And f men saide vnto Lot: Hast thou yet here eny sonne in lawe, or sonnes or daughters? Who so euer belongeth vnto the in the cite, brynge him out of this place: for we must destroye this place, because the crye of them is greate before the LORDE, which hath sent vs to destroye them. Then wente Lot forth, and spake to his sonnes in lawe, which shulde haue married his daughters, and sayde: O stonde vp, and get you out of this place, for the LORDE wyll destroye this cite. Neuertheles they toke it but for a sporte.

Now whan the mornynge arose, the angels caused Lot to spede him, and sayde: "Stonde vp, take thy wife & thy two daughters which are at hande, that thou also perishe not in the synne of this cite. But whyle he prolonged the tyme, the men caught him and his wife, and his two daughters by the hande (because the LORDE was mercifull vnto him,) and brought him forth, & set him without the cite.

And whē they had brought him out, they sayde: Saue thy soule, and loke not behynde the, nether stonde thou in all this countre: Saue thy self vpon the mountayne, that thou perish not. Then sayde Lot vnto thē: Oh no my LORDE, beholde, in as moch as thy seruāt hath founde grace in thy sight, now make thy mercy greate, which thou hast shewed vnto me, in that thou sauest my soule alnye. I can not saue my self vpon the mountayne. There might some mysfortune fall vpon me, that I shulde dye. Beholde, here is a cite by, that I maye flye vnto, and it is a litle one: let me saue myself there in. Is it not a litle one, that my soule maye lyue?

Then sayde he vnto him: Beholde, I haue lokyd vpon the in this poynte also, that I will not ouerthrowe the cite, wherof thou hast spoken. Haist the, and saue thy self there: for I can do nothinge tyll thou be come thither. Therefore is the cite called Zoar. And the Sonne was vp vpon the earth, whan Lot came in to Zoar.

35 Then the LORDE caused brymstone and fyre to rayne downe from the LORDE out of heauen vpon Sodoma and Gomorra, and ouerthrew those cities, the whole region, and all that dwelt in the cities, and that that grew vpon the earth. And his wife lokyd behynde her, and was turned in to a pillar of salt.

Abraham rose vp early in the mornynge, and gat him vnto the place, "where he had stonde before the LORDE, and turned his face towarde Sodoma and Gomorra, and all f londe of that countre, and lokyd. And beholde, there rose vp a smoke from f countre, as it had bene f smoke of a fornace. For whan God destroyed f cities of the region, he thought vpon Abraham, and conueyed Lot out of the cities which he ouerthrew, wherin Lot dwelt.

And Lot departed out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountaynes with both his daughters (for he was affrayed to tary at Zoar) and so remayned he in a caue with both his daughters.

Then sayde f elder vnto the yonger: Oure father is olde, and there is not a man more vpon earth, that can come in vnto vs after the maner of all the worlde. Come therefore, let vs geue oure father wyne to drynke, and lye with him, that we maye saue sede of oure father. So they gaue their father wyne to drynke that same night. And the elder daughter wente in, ^a and laye with hir father:

and he perceaued it not, nether when she laye downe, ner when she rose vp.

On the morow the elder sayde vnto the yonger: Beholde, yesternight laye I with my father: let vs geue him wyne to drynke this night also: that thou mayest go in and lye with him, that we maye saue sede of oure father. So they gaue their father wyne to drynke that night also: And the yonger arose like wyse, and laye with him: & he perceaued it not, nether when she laye downe, ner when she rose vp.

Thus were both the daughters of Lot with childe by their father. And the elder bare a sonne, and called him Moab, of whom come & Moabites vnto this daye. And & yonger bare a sonne also, and called him the sonne Ammi, of whom come the children of Ammon vnto this daye.

The xx. Chapter.

AS for Abraham, he departed thence, in to the south cowntre, and dwelt betwixte Cades and Sur, and was a straunger at Gerar, and sayde of Sara his wife: "She is my sister. Then Abimelech the kinge of Gerar sent for her, and caused her be fett awaye.

But God came to Abimelech by night in a dreame, & sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou art but a deed man, for the womans sake which thou hast taken, for she is a mans wife. Neuertheles Abimelech had not yet touched her, and sayde: LORDE, wilt thou sleie a righteous people? Sayde not he vnto me: she is my sister? Yee and sayde not she her self also: he is my brother? With a pure hert & with innocent handes haue I done this.

And God sayde vnto him in a dreame: I knowe that thou dydest it with a pure hert, and therefore I kepte the, that thou shuldest not synne agaynst me, nether haue I suffred the to touch her. Now therefore delyuer the man his wife ageyne, for he is a prophet: and let him pray for &, and thou shalt lyeue. But and yf thou delyuer her not ageyne, be sure, that thou shalt dye the death, and all that is thine.

Then Abimelech rose vp by tymes in the mornynge, and called all his seruantes, and tolde all these thinges in their eares, and the men were sore afrayed, and Abimelech called Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Wherefore hast thou done this vnto vs? And what haue I offended &, that thou shuldest brynge on me and on my kyngdome so greate a synne? Thou hast not dealt with vs, as a man shulde deale. And Abimelech saide morouer vnto Abraham: What sawest thou, & thou hast done this thinge?

Abraham sayde: I thought: Peradventure there is no feare of God in this place, & they shall sleie me for my wifes sake, And of a trueth she is my sister, for she is my fathers daughter, but not my mothers daughter, and is become my wife. So whan God charged me to wädre out of my fathers house, I sayde vnto her: Shew this kyndnes vpon me, that, where so euer we come, thou saye of me, that I am thy brother.

Then toke Abimelech shepe and oxen, seruantes and maydens, and gaue them vnto Abraham, and delyuered him Sara his wife agayne, and sayde: Beholde, my londe stondesth open before the, dwell where it liketh the. And vnto Sara he sayde: Beholde, I haue geuen thy brother a thousande syluer pens: lo, he shalbe vnto the a couerynge of the eyes, for all that are with the, and euery where, and a sure excuse.

As for Abraham, he prayed vnto God: Then God healed Abimelech, and his wyfe, and his maydens, so that they bare childe. For afore the LORDE had closed all the matrices of Abimelechs house, because of Sara Abrahams wife.

The xxi. Chapter.

THE LORDE also vysited Sara, accordinge * as he had promysed: & dealt with her, euen as he had sayde. And Sara was with childe, and bare Abraham a sonne in his olde age, euen in the tyme appoynted, like as God had spoken vnto him afore. And Abraham called his sonne which was borne vnto him (whō Sara bare him) Isaac, and circumcided him the eight daye, † like as God commaunded him. An hundredth yere olde was Abrahā, whan his sonne Isaac was borne vnto him.

And Sara sayde: God hath prepared a ioye for me, for who so euer hearth of it, wyll reioyse with me. She sayde morouer: Who wolde haue saide vnto Abraham, that Sara shulde geue children sucke, and beare him a sonne in his olde age? And the childe grew, and was weened. And Abraham made a greate feast, in y daye whan Isaac was weened.

13 And Sara sawe the sonne of Agar the Egipcian (whom she had borne vnto Abraham) that he was a mocker, and sayde vnto Abraham: "Cast out this bonde mayden and hir sonne, for this bonde maydēs sonne shall not be heyre with my sonne Isaac. This worde displeased Abraham sore, because of his sonne.

Neuertheles God sayde vnto him: let it not displease the because of the childe and the hand mayde: What so euer Sara hath sayde vnto the, folowe it, ^afor in Isaac shall the sede be called vnto the. ^bAs for the bonde maydens sonne, I wyll make a people of him also, because he is of thy sede.

Then Abraham rose vp early in the mornynge, and toke bred and a botell with water, and put it vpon Agars shulders, and gaue her the childe, and sent her awaye. Then departed she, and wandred out of the waye in y wyldernes beside Berseba. Now whan the water in the botell was out, she layed the childe vnder a bush, and wente, and sat hir downe ouer on y other syde, a bowe shote of. For she sayde: I can not se the childe dye. And she sat hir downe ouer on y other syde, and lifte vp hir voyce, and wepte.

C Then God herde the voyce of the childe, and the angell of God called vnto Agar out of heauen, and sayde vnto her: What ayleth the, Agar? Feare not, for God hath herde y voyce of the childe, where he lyeth. Aryse and take the childe, and holde him by the hande, ^dfor I wyll make a greate people of him. ^eAnd God opened hir eyes, that she sawe a well of water.

Then wente she and fylled y botell with water, and gaue y childe drynke. And God was with the childe, which grew vp, and dwelt in y wildernes, and became a connyng archer, and dwelt in y wildernes of Pharan, and his mother toke him a wyfe out of the londe of Egipte.

^fAt the same tyme talked Abimelech and Phicol his chefe captayne with Abraham, and sayde: God is with the in all that thou doest.

Therefore sweare now vnto me by God, that thou wilt not hurt me, ner my children, ner my childers children: but that thou shalt shewe vnto me (and to the londe wherin thou art a straunger) ^gthe same kyndnesse that I haue done vnto the.

Then sayde Abraham: I wyll sweare. And Abraham rebuked Abimelech for the well of water, ^hwhich Abimelechs seruantes had taken awaye by violence. Then answered Abimelech: I knewe not who dyd it, nether dyddest thou tell me, and I haue not herde of it but this daye.

Thē toke Abraham shepe and oxen, and gaue them vnto Abimelech, and they both made a bonde together. And Abraham set seuen lames by them selues. Then sayde Abimelech vnto Abraham: What meane those seuen lames, which thou hast set by them selues? He answered: seue lames shalt thou take of my hande, that they maye be wytnes vnto me, that I haue dygged this well. Therefore is the place called Berseba, because they sware there both together. And so they made the bonde at Berseba.

Then rose Abimelech and Phicol his chefe captayne, and departed agayne in to the londe of y Philistynes. And Abraham planted trees at Berseba, and called vpon the name of the LORDE y euerlastinge God, and was a straunger in y londe of the Philistynes a longe season.

The rrj. Chapter.

AFTER these actes God tempted Abraham, ⁱand sayde vnto him: Abraham. And he answered: I am here. And he sayde: Take thy sonne, this onely sonne of thine, euē Isaac whom thou louest, and go thy waye in to the londe of Moria, ^koffre him there for a burntofferynge, vpon a mountayne that I shal shew the. Then Abraham stode vp by tymes in the mornynge, and saddled his Asse, and toke with him two yonge men, and his sonne Isaac, and cloue wodd for the brent offerynge, gat him vp, and wente on vnto the place, wherof the LORDE had sayde vnto him.

Vpon the thirde daye Abraham lift vp his eyes, and sawe the place a farre of, and sayde vnto his yonge mē: Tary ye here with the Asse: as for me and the childe, we wyl go yonder: and whan we haue worshipped, we wyl come to you againe. And Abrahā toke the wodd to the brentofferynge, and layed it vpon Isaac his sonne. As for him self, he toke the fyre and a knyfe in his hande, and wente on both together.

Then sayde Isaac vnto his father Abraham: My father. Abraham answered: here I am, my sonne. And he sayde: lo, here is fyre and wodd, but where is the shepe for the brentofferynge? Abraham answered: My sonne, God shall prouyde him a shepe for the brentofferynge. And they wente both together.

And whan they came to the place which God shewed him, Abraham buylded there an altare, and layed the wodd vpon it, and bande his sonne Isaac, layed him on the altare, aboue vpō the wodd, and stretched out his hande, and toke the knyfe, to haue slayne his sonne.

Then the angell of the LORDE called from heauen vnto him, and sayde: Abraham Abraham. He answered: Here am I. He sayde: Laye not thy handes vpon the childe, & do nothinge vnto him: *for now I knowe that thou fearest God, and hast not *spared thine only sonne for my sake. Then Abraham lift vp his eyes, and sawe behynde him a ramme, holdē fast by the hornes in the breres, and wente, and toke the ramme, and offred him for a brent sacrifice, in steade of his sonne. And Abraham called the place: The LORDE shall prouyde. Therefore it is a comon sayenge yet this daye: Vpon the mountayne shal the LORDE prouyde.

And the angell of the LORDE cryed vnto Abraham from heauen the seconde tyme, and sayde: ^bI haue sworn by myne owne self (sayeth the LORDE) that for so moch as thou hast done this, and hast not spared thine only sonne, I wyl prosper and multiplie thy sede as the starres of heauen, and as the sonde vpon the see shore. ^cAnd thy sede shall possesse the gates of his enemies: and ^din thy sede shal all the nacions of the earth be blessed, because thou hast herkened vnto my voyce.

So Abraham turned ageyne to the yonge men, and they gat vp, and wente together vnto Berseba, and dwelt there.

After these actes it fortunēd, that it was tolde Abraham: Beholde, Milca hath borne children also vnto thy brother Nahor: namely, [†]Hus [‡] eldest, and [§]Bus his brother, and Kemnel, of whom came the Syrians: and Ceced, and Haso, and Pildas, and Iedlaph and Bethuel. And Bethuel begat Rebecca. These eight dyd Milca beare vnto Nahor Abrahams brother. And his concubyne called Rehuma, bare also: namely, Theba, Sahan, Thahas, and Maacha.

The xxiij. Chapter.

SARA was an hundreth and seuē and twentye yeare olde: so longe lyued she, and dyed in the head cite which is called Hebron, in the lande of Canaan. ^aThen wente Abraham, to mourne and wepe for her. Afterwarde he stode vp from his coarse, and talked with the Hethites, and sayde: I am a straüger and an indweller amonge you, geue me a possession to bury in with you, that I maye bury || my coarse by me.

Then the Hethites answered Abraham, and sayde vnto him: O heare lorde, thou art a prynce of God amonge vs: bury thy dead in the best of oure sepulchres, there shall none of vs forbyd [‡], that thou shuldest not bury thy deed in his sepulchre. Then Abraham stode vp, and thanked the people of [§]londe: namely the Hethites.

And he talked with them, and sayde: Yf it be yourc wyll that I burye my coarse by me, heare me the, & speake for me to Ephron the sonne of Zoar, that he maye geue me the dubble caue, which he hath in [‡]ende of his felde. For a reasonable money let him geue it me, for a possession to burye in amōge you. For Ephron dwelt amonge the Hethites.

Then answered Ephron the Hethite vnto Abraham, that the Hethites might heare, before all that wente out and in at the gates of his cite, and sayde: No my lorde, but heare me: As for the felde, and the caue also that is therin, I geue it the: and in the sight of my people I geue it the, to burye thy deed in.

Then Abraham thanked the people of the londe, and talked with Ephron, that the people of the londe might heare, and sayde: Heare me then, Receaue of me the money that I

C Ephron answered Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Heare me my lorde: The felde is worth foure hundredth Sycles of syluer: but what is that betwixte me and the? Burye thy deed. Abraham herkened vnto Ephron, and weyed him the money which he had sayde, that the Hethites might heare: namely foure hundredth syluer sycles of currant money amonge marchauntes.

Thus Ephrons felde (where in the dubble caue is) which lyeth ouer before Mamre, euen the felde and the caue, was made sure for Abrahams owne good, with all the trees of the felde also rounde aboute, in the sight of the Hethites, and of all that go out and in at the gates of his cite. Then Abraham buried Sara his wife in the dubble caue of the felde, that lyeth ouer before Mamre (that is, Hebron) in the londe of Canaan. So the felde and the caue therein was made sure of the Hethites vnto Abraham, for a possession to bury in.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

A BRAHAM was olde and well stricken in age, and the LORDE had blessed him in all thinges. And he sayde vnto his eldest seruaunt of his house, which had the rule of all his goodes: "Laye thine hāde vnder my thye, that I maye make the sweare by ꝑ LORDE the God of heauen and earth, that thou take no wife vnto my sonne amonge ꝑ daughters of ꝑ Cananites, (amonge whom I dwell) but that thou go in to my cuntrye, and * to myne owne kynred, and brynge my sonne Isaac a wife.

The seruaunt sayde: What and the woman wyl not folowe me in to this cuntrye? shal I then cary thy sonne agayne in to yonder londe, where thou camest out of? Abraham sayde vnto him: Beware of that, that thou brynge not my sonne thither agayne. The LORDE, the God of heauen, which toke me fro my fathers house and from the londe of my kynred, and that talked with me, and sware also vnto me, and sayde: "Vnto thy sede wyll I geue this londe: Euen he shall sende his angell before the, that thou maiest brynge my sonne a wife from thence. But yf the woman wyll not folowe the, thou art discharged of this oath: onely brynge not my sonne thither agayne. Then ꝑ seruaunt layed his hāde vnder his master Abrahams thye, and sware the same vnto him.

So the seruaunt toke ten Camels of the Camels of his master and departed, and had with him of all maner of goodes of his master, and gat him vp, and departed vnto Mesopotamia, to the cite of Nahor. Then let he the Camels lye downe without before the cite besyde a well of water in the euenynge, aboute the tyme that the women vsed to go forth, and to drawe water. And he sayde:

O LORDE, thou God of my master Abraham, mete me to daye, and shew mercy vnto my master Abraham. Lo, I stonde here besyde the well of water, ꝑ the mens daughters of this cite wyll come forth to drawe water: Now yf there come a damsell, to whom I saye: bowe downe thy pytcher, ꝑ let me drynke, and yf she saye: drynke, and I wyll geue thy Camels drynke also: That ꝑ same be she, whom thou hast prouyded for thy seruaunt Isaac: ꝑ that I maye knowe by ꝑ same that thou hast shewed mercy vpon my master.

And or euer he had left of speakynge, beholde, Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel (which was the sonne of Milca, that was the wyfe of Nahor Abrahams brother) came forth, and bare a pytcher vpon hir shulder, and she was a very fayre damsell of face, and yet a virgin, and vnknowne of eny man: She wente downe to the well, and fylled hir pitcher, and came vp agayne. Then ranne the seruaunt to mete her, and sayde: Let me drynke a litle water out of thy pitcher. And she sayde: drynke syr.

And haistely let she downe the pitcher in hir hande, and gaue him drynke. And whan she had geuen him drynke, she sayde: I wyll drawe for thy Camels also, tyll they haue dronke ynough. And she made haist, and poured out hir pitcher in to the trough, and ranne agayne to the well to drawe, and drew for all his Camels. The mā marueyled at her, and helde his tonge, tyll he knewe whether the LORDE had prospered his iourney or not.

Now whan the Camels had all dronken, he toke a goldē earynge of half a Sycle weight, and two bracelettes for hir handes, weyng ten Sycles of golde, and sayde: Daughter, whose art thou? tell me. Is there rowme for vs in thy fathers house to lodge in? She sayde vnto him: I am the daughter of Bethuel, the sonne of Mylca, "whom she bare vnto Nahor. And sayde morouer vnto him: We haue plentye of litter and prouender, and rowme ynough to lodge in.

32 Then the man bowed himself, and thanked the LORDE, and sayde: Prayed be the LORDE the God of my master Abraham, which hath not withdrawn his mercy and his trueth fro my master, for the LORDE hath brought me the waye to my masters brothers house. And the damsell ranne and tolde all this in hir mothers house. And Rebecca had a brother called Laban.

And Laban ranne to the man without by the well syde: and that came by the reason that he sawe the earynges, and the braceletttes vpon his sisters handes, and herde the wordes of Rebecca his syster, that she sayde: thus spake the man vnto me.

And whan he came to the man, beholde, he stode by the Camels at the well syde. And he sayde: Come in * thou blessed of the LORDE, wherfore stondest thou without? I haue dressed the house, and made rowme for $\frac{y}{f}$ Camels. So he brought the man in to $\frac{y}{f}$ house, and vnbridled the Camels, and gaue them litter and prouender, and water to wash his fete, and the mens that were with him, and set meate before him.

33 Neuertheles he sayde: I wil not eate, tyll I haue fyrst tolde myne earāde.^b They answered: Tell on. He sayde: I am Abrahams seruauant, and the LORDE hath prospered my master richely, so $\frac{y}{f}$ he is become greate: and he hath geuen him shepe and oxē, syluer and golde, seruantes and maidens, Camels and Asses: yee and ^cSara my masters wife hath borne my master a sonne in hir olde age: vnto him hath he geuen all that he hath.

And my master hath taken an ooth of me and saide: Thou shalt not take a wife for my sonne amonge the daughters of the Cananites, in whose lande I dwell, but go thy waye to my fathers house and to myne owne kynred, and there take a wyfe for my sonne. But I sayde vnto my master: What and the woman wyl not folowe me? Then sayde he vnto me: The LORDE (before whom I walke) shall sende his angell with the, and prospere thy journey, that thou mayest take a wife for my sonne of myne owne kynred, and of my fathers house. And so whan thou comest to my kynred, yf they geue her not vnto $\frac{y}{f}$, thou shalt be discharged of myne ooth.

So I came this daye vnto the well of water, and sayde: O LORDE thou God of my master Abraham, Yf thou hast prospered my journey that I go: Beholde, I stonde here by the well of water: Now yf there come forth a virgin to draw water, and I saye vnto her: geue me a litle water to drinke out of thy pitcher, and she saye vnto me: Drynke thou, and I wyll drawe water for thy Camels also: that the same be the womā, which the LORDE hath prouyded for my masters sonne. Now or euer I had spoken out these wordes in my hert, beholde, Rebecca commeth forth with a pitcher vpon hir shulder, and goeth downe to the well, and draweth.

Then sayde I: geue me a drynke. And immediatly she toke downe the pitcher fro hir shulder, and sayde: drynke, and I wyll geue thy Camels drynke also. So I dranke, and she gaue the Camels also to drynke. And I axed her, and sayde: Doughter, whose art thou? She answered: I am $\frac{y}{f}$ daughter of Bethuel the sonne of Nahor, whom Milca bare vnto him. Then layed I the earynge vpon hir face, and the braceletttes vpon hir handes, and bowed myself, and thanked the LORDE, and prayed the God of my master Abraham, which had brought me $\frac{y}{f}$ right waye, to take my masters brothers daughter vnto his sonne.

Yf ye be they then that shew mercy and faithfulness vnto my master, tell me: Yf not, yet tell me, that I maye turne me to $\frac{y}{f}$ right hande or to the left.

Then answered Laban and Bethuel, and sayde: This is come of the LORDE, therefore can we saye nothings agaynst the, nether euell ner good. There is Rebecca before the, take her, and go thy waye, that she maye be thy masters sonnes wife, as the LORDE hath sayde. When Abrahams seruauant herde these wordes, he bowed him self vnto the LORDE flat vpon the earth, and toke forth Jewels of syluer and golde, and rayment, and gaue them vnto Rebecca. But vnto hir brethren and the mother, he gaue spycs. Then he ate and dronke, and the men also that were with him, and taried there all night.

5 But in the mornynge he arose, and sayde: Let me departe vnto my master. Neuerthelesse hir brother and hir mother sayde: Let the damsell tary with vs at the leest ten dayes, and then shall she go. Then sayde he vnto them: holde me not, for the LORDE hath prospered my journey: let me go, that I maye departe vnto my master. Then sayde they: let vs call the damsell, and axe her, what she sayeth therto. And they called Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Wilt thou go with this man?

And she answered: Yee I wyll go with him. So they let Rebecca their syster go with hir norse and Abrahams seruaunt, and his men. And they blessed Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Thou art oure syster, growe in to many thousande tymes thousandes, and thy seide possesse the gates of his enemies.

So Rebecca gat hir vp with hir damells, and satt them vpon the Camels, and wente their waye after the man. And the seruaunt toke Rebecca, and departed.

As for Isaac, he was commynge from * the well of y luyngge ⁊ seynge, for he dwelt in the south cowntre, and was gone forth to his meditations in the felde aboute the euen tyde. And he lift vp his eyes, and sawe, that there were Camels commynge. And Rebecca lift vp hir eyes, and sawe Isaac. Then lighted she of the Camell, and sayde vnto y seruaunt: What man is this, that commeth agaynst vs in the felde? The seruaunt sayde: The same is my master.

Then toke she hir cloke, and put it aboute her. And the seruaunt tolde Isaac all the earande that he had done. Then Isaac brought her in to his mother Saras tent, and toke Rebecca, and she became his wife, and he loued her. So Isaac was comforted ouer his mother.

The xxb. Chapter.

12 A BRAHAM toke another wife called Ketura, which bare him Simram ⁊ Iaksan, Medan ⁊ Midian, Iesbak and Suah. Iaksan begat Seba and Dedan. The children of Dedan were Assurim, Latusim, and Leumim. The children of Midian were Ephraim, Hanoth, Abida and Eldaa. All these are the children of Ketura. And Abraham gaue all his goodes vnto Isaac: As for the children that he had of the concubynes, he gaue them giftes, and (whyhe he yet lyued) he sent the awaye from his sonne Isaac, eastwarde in to the east cowntre.

This is the age of Abraham which he lyued: euen an hundreth and fyue and seuentye yere, and fell sicke and dyed in a good age, whan he was olde, ⁊ ⁊ had lyued ynough and was gathered vnto his people. And his sonnes Isaac and Ismael buried him in the dubble caue in the felde of Ephron the sonne of Zoar the Hethite, which lyeth ouer before Mamre, ⁊ in the felde that Abraham bought of the Hethites. There was Abraham buried with Sara his wife. And after the death of Abraham God blessed his sonne Isaac. And he dwelt by the well of the luyngge and seynge.

This is the generacion of Ismael Abrahams sonne, whom Agar Saras mayde the Egipcian bare vnto him. And these are the names of Ismaels children, of whom their kynredes are named. The eldest sonne of Ismael, Nebaioth, Cedar, Abdeel, Mibsan, Misma, Duma, Masa, Hadar, Thema, Iethur, Naphis, and Kedma. These are the childre of Ismael with their names in their courtes and cities ⁊ twolue londeprynces. And this is the age of Ismael, euen an hundreth and seuen and thirtie yere, and he fell sicke and dyed, and was gathered vnto his people. He dwelt from Heuila vnto Sur towarde Egipte, as men go to the Assirians. And he dyed in the presence of all his brethren.

This is the generacion of Isaac the sonne of Abrahā. Abraham begat Isaac. Isaac was fourtye yere olde, whan he toke to wyfe Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel y Syrian of Mesopotamia, ⁊ Sister of Laban the Syrian.

Isaac besought the LORDE for his wyfe (because she was baren) and the LORDE was intreated, and Rebecca his wyfe conceaued. And the children stroue together in hir wombe. Then sayde she: Yf it shulde go so with me, why am I then with childe? And she wente for to axe the LORDE. And the LORDE sayde vnto her: Two maner of folke are in thy wombe, and two maner of people shall be deuyded out of thy body, and the one nacion shall ouercome the other, ⁊ and the greater shall serue the lesse.

Now when the tyme came that she shulde be deluyered, ^a beholde, there were two twyns in hir wombe. The first that came forth, was reed, all rough as an hyde, and they called him Esau. Anone thereafter came his brother forth, which helde the hele of Esau with his hâde,^b and they called him Iacob. Three score yere olde was Isaac, when they were borne. And when the boies were growne vp, Esau became an hunter, ^c an huszbande man. As for Iacob, he was a symple man, and dwelt in the tentes. And Isaac loued Esau, because he ate of his venison. But Rebecca loued Iacob.

And Iacob dight a meace of meate. Thē came Esau from the felde, and was weery, and sayde vnto Iacob: Let me proue of ^d y reed meace of meate, for I am fayntie (therfore is he called Edom.) But Iacob sayde: Sell me this daye thy byrthright. Esau answered: Lo, I must dye neuerthelesse, what good then shall my byrthright do me? Iacob sayde: Then swere vnto me euen this same daye. And he sware vnto him, and so he solde his byrthright vnto Iacob.^e Then Iacob gaue him bred and that meace of ryse. And he ate and dronke, and stode vp, and wente his waye. And so Esau regarded not his byrthright.

The xxvi. Chapter.

THERE came a derth in the londe, passinge the other ^f that was in Abrahams tyme. And Isaac wente to Gerar, vnto Abimelech the kyng of ^g y Philistynes. Then the LORDE appeared vnto him, and sayde: ^h Go not downe in to Egipte, but tary in the lande that I shall saye vnto the. Be thou a straüger in this lande, and I wil be with the and blesse the. For vnto the and thy sede wyll I geue all this londe, and wyll perfourme myne ooth that I sware to thy father Abraham. And I wyll multiplye thy sede as the starres of heauen,ⁱ and vnto thy sede wyll I geue all this londe, and thorow thy sede shall all nacions be blessed, because Abraham was obedient vnto my voyce, and kepte myne ordinaunces, my cōmaundementes, my statutes, and my lawes.

So Isaac dwelt at Gerar. And when the men of the same place axed him of his wyfe, he sayde: she is my sister. ^k For he was afraied to saye: she is my wyfe, (thinkinge thus:) they might slaye me for Rebeccas sake, for she was beutifull to loke vnto. Now when he had bene there a longe season, Abimelech the kyng of the Philistynes loked out at a wyndow, and sawe Isaac sportinge with Rebecca his wyfe.

Then Abimelech called Isaac, and sayde: ^l Beholde, she is thy wyfe, why saydest thou then: She is my sister? Isaac answered him: I thought, I might peradventure haue died because of her. Abimelech sayde: Why hast thou then done this vnto vs? It coude lightly haue come to passe, that some of the people might haue lyeu with thy wyfe, and so hadde thou broughte synne vpō vs. Thē Abimelech commaunded all the people, and sayde: Who so toucheth this man or his wyfe, shal dye the death.

And Isaac sowed in that londe, and fōude the same yere an hundreth buszshels, for the LORDE blessed him. And he became a greate man, wente forth, and grew, tyll he was exceedinge greate, so that he had moch good in shepe and greate catell, and a greate housholde. Therefore had the Philistynes envye at him, ^m and stoppedd all the welles, that his fathers seruauantes had dygged in the tyme of Abraham his father, and fylled them with earth, In so moch that Abimelech also himself sayde vnto him: Departe from vs, for thou art farre mightier then we.

Then departed Isaac from thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there. And when he was satied, he caused to dygge vp the welles agayne, that they had dygged vp in his father Abrahā's tyme, which the Philistynes had stoppe after the death of Abraham, and he called thē after ⁿ y same names that his father had named them withall.

Isaacs seruauantes also dygged in the valley, and there they founde a well of luyng water.

^o But the hyrdmen of Gerar stroue with Isaacs hyrdmen, and saide: The water is oures. Then called he the well Eseek, because they had done him wronge.

Then dygged they another well, and stroue for that also: therfore called he it Sytena. So he gatt him from thence, and dygged another well, for the which they stroue not: therefore he called it Rehoboth, and sayde: Now hath the LORDE made vs rowne, and lett vs growe in the londe. Afterwarde he departed thence vnto Berseba.

23 And the LORDE appeared vnto him the same night, and sayde: I am the God of thy father Abraham, feare thou not, for I am with the, and wyl blesse the, and multiplie thy sede for my seruauit Abrahams sake. Then buylded he an altare there, and called vpon the name of the LORDE, and pitched his tent there, and there his seruantes dygged a well.

And Abimelech wente vnto him from Gerar, and Ahusath his frende, and Phicol his chefe captayne. 24 But Isaac sayde vnto them: Wherefore come ye to me? seyng ye hate me, and haue put me awaye from you? They sayde: We se with open eyes, that the LORDE is with the, therefore we deuyd that there shulde be an ooth betwixte vs and the, and that we wolde make a bonde with the, that thou do vs no harme, like as we haue not hurte the, and as we haue done nothinge vnto the, but all good, and let the departe in peace.

As for the, thou art ʒ blessed of the LORDE. Then Isaac made them a feast, and they ate and dronke. And on the morow they arose, and sware one to the other. And Isaac let them go, and they departed from him in peace.

The same daye came Isaacs seruantes, and tolde him of the well that they had digged, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde water. And he called it Saba. Therefore is ʒ cite called Bersaba vnto this daye.

The xxij. Chapter.

25 WHAN Esau was fourtye yeare olde, he toke wyues: Iudith the daughter of Beri the Hethite, and Basmath the daughter of Elon the Hethite: both these were disobedient vnto the sprete of Isaac and Rebecca.

And it came to passe when Isaac was olde, his eyes waxed dymme of sight, and he called Esau his greater sonne, and sayde vnto him: My sonne. He answered him: Here am I. And he sayde: Beholde, I am olde, and knowe not whan I shal dye. Now therefore take thy geer, thy quyer and thy bowe, and get the forth to the felde, and take me some venyson, and make me meate (soch as I loue) and brynge it me herein, that I may eate, ʒ my soule maye blesse the, before I dye.

But Rebecca herde these wordes, that Isaac sayde vnto his sonne. And Esau wente his waye in to the felde, to hunte venyson, and to brynge it home. Then sayde Rebecca vnto Iacob hir sonne: beholde, I haue herde thy father talkinge with Esau thy brother, and sayenge: Brynge me venyson, and make me meate, that I maye eate, and blesse the before ʒ LORDE, yer I dye. Now therefore my sonne, heare my voyce, what I commaunde the: Go thy waye to the flocke, and fetch me two good kyddes, that I maye make meate of them for thy father, soch as he loueth: this shalt thou brynge in vnto thy father, that he maye eate, that he maye blesse the before his death.

Neuertheles Iacob sayde vnto Rebecca his mother: Beholde, my brother Esau is rough, and I am smooth: then might my father peradventure fele me, and I shulde seme vnto him as though I begyled him, and so brynge a curse vpon me and not a blessinge. Then sayde his mother vnto him: That curse be vpon me my sonne, folowe thou my voyce: go thy waye and fetch it me. So he wente his waye, and fetched it, and brought it vnto his mother.

Then his mother made meate, aordinge 26 as his father loued, and toke Esaus hir elder sonnes costly rayment (which she had with her in ʒ house) and put them vpon Iacob hir yonger sonne. But the kyddes skynnes put she aboute his handes, and where he was smooth aboute the neck: and so she put the meate with bred (as she had made it) in hir sonne Iacobs hande.

And he brought it in vnto his father, and sayde: My father. He answered: here am I, who art thou my sonne? Iacob sayde: I am Esau thy firstborne sonne, I haue done as thou saydest vnto me: aryse, syt vp, and eate of my venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. But Isaac sayde vnto his sonne: My sonne, how hast thou founde it so soone? He answered: The LORDE thy God brought it to my hande.

Then sayde Isaac vnto Iacob: Come nere my sonne, that I maye fele the, whether thou be my sonne Esau or not. So Iacob wete vnto Isaac his father. And when he had felt him, he sayde: The voyce is Iacobs voyce, but the handes are the handes of Esau. And he knew him not, for his handes were rough like as f handes of his brother Esau. And he blessed him.

B And he sayde vnto him: art thou my sonne Esau? He answered: Yee I am. Then sayde he: Bringe me here then to eate of thy venyson my sonne,* that my soule maye blesse the. Then he brought it him, and he ate: and he brought him wyne also, and he dranke. And Isaac his father sayde vnto him: Come nye, and kysse me my sonne. So he came nye, and he kyssed him.

Then smelled he the sauoure of his clothes, and blessed him, and sayde: Beholde, the smell of my sonne is as f smell of the felde, which f LORDE hath blessed.^a God geue the of the dew of heauen, and of the fatnesse of the earth, and plenteousnes of corne and wyne. Nacions be thy seruantes, and people fall downe at thy fote. Be thou lorde ouer thy brethren, and thy mothers children fall downe at thy fote. ^bCursed be he, that curseth the: and blessed be he, that blesseth the.

E Now whan Isaac had made an ende of blessinge, and Iacob was scace gone out from his father Isaac, his brother Esau came from his huntinge, and made meate also, and brought it vnto his father, and sayde vnto him: Aryse my father, and eate of thy sonnes venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. Then answered him Isaac his father: Who art thou? He sayde: I am Esau thy firstborne sonne. Then was Isaac exceedingly amased aboue measure, and saide: Who? Where is then the hunter that brought me, and I haue eaten of all afore thou camest, and haue blessed him? And he shall be blessed still.

Whan Esau herde these wordes of his father, he cried loude, and was exceedyng sory, and sayde vnto his father: O blesse me also my father. But he sayde: Thy brother came with sotylyte, and hath taken thy blessinge awaye. Then sayde he: He maye well be called Iacob, for he hath vndermined me now two tymes. My byrth right hath he awaye, and beholde, now taketh he awaye my blessinge also.

F And he sayde: Hast thou not kepte one blessyng for me? Isaac answered, and sayde vnto him: I haue made him lorde ouer f , and all his brethren haue I made his seruantes. With corne t wine haue I prouyded him. What shal I do vnto the now my sonne? Esau sayde vnto his father? Hast thou not one blessinge more my father? O blesse me also my father.

And he lift vp his voyce, t wepte.^c Then Isaac his father answered and sayde vnto him: ^dBeholde, thou shalt haue a fat dwellinge ypon earth, t of f dew of heauen from aboue: with thy swerde shalt thou get thy luyngne, and shalt serue thy brother. And it shall come to passe, f thou shalt put of his yock,^e and plucke it from thy neck.

And Esau bare euell wyll vnto Iacob, G because of the blessinge that his father had blessed him withall,^f and sayde in his herte: The tyme wyll come shortly, that my father shal mourne, for I wil slaye my brother Iacob. Thē was it tolde Rebecca of these wordes of hir elder sonne, and she sent, and bad call for Iacob hir yonger sonne, and saide vnto him: Beholde, thy brother Esau threateneth the, that he wil slaye the. And now my sonne heare my voyce: Get the vp, and flye vnto my brother Laban in Haran, and tary there with him a while, t tyll the furiousnes of thy brother be swaged, and till his wrath agaynst f be turned from the, and he forget what thou hast done vnto him. So wyll I then sende for the, and cause the be fetched from thēce. Why shulde I be robbed of you both in one daye?

And Rebecca sayde vnto Isaac: I am weery of my life, because of the daughters of Heth: Yf Iacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, f which are as the daughters of this londe, what shall this life then profit me?

The xxvii. Chapter.

THEN called Isaac his sonne Iacob and A blessed him, and charged him, t sayde vnto him: Take not a wife of the daughters of Canaan, but get the vp, and go in to Mesopotamia vnto the house of Bethuel thy mothers father, and take f there a wife of f daughters of Laban thy mothers brother. And the Allmightie God blesse the, and make the frutefull, and multiplye the, (that thou mayest be a multitude of people) and geue the the blessynge of Abraham vnto f t thy sede with the, that thou mayest possesse the lande, wherein thou art a straunger,* which God gaue vnto Abraham. So Isaac let Iacob departe, that he might go in to Mesopotamia vnto Laban the sonne of Bethuel of Siria, f brother of Rebecca, his and Esaus mother.

B Now when Esau sawe that Isaac had blessed Iacob, and let him departe in to Mesopotamia, that he might take a wife there: and f , as he blessed him, he charged him, t sayde: Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan, and that Iacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone vnto Mesopotamia: seynge also that Isaac his father looked not gladly vpon the daughters of Canaan, he wente his waye vnto Ismael, and besyde the wyues that he had afore, he toke a Mahaloth the daughter of Ismael (Abraha's sonne) the sister of Nebaioth, to wife.

C As for Iacob, he departed from Bersaba, and wente vnto Haran and came to a place, where he taried all night: for the Sonne was downe. And he toke a stone of f place, t put it vnder his heade, and layed him downe in f same place to slepe. And he dreamed, and beholde, there stode vpon f earth, a ladder, whose toppes reached vnto the heauen. And beholde, the angels of God b wente vp and downe vpon it, and the LORDE stode vpon it, and sayde:

a I am the LORDE God of thy father Abraham, and the God of Isaac: The londe f thou lvest vpon, wyl I geue vnto the, c and to thy sede: and thy sede shal be as f dust of f earth. And thou shalt sprede forth towarde the west, east, north, and south: and t thorow the and thy sede shall all the kynreds vpon earth be blessed. And beholde, I am with f , and wyl kepe the where so euer thou goest, t wyl brynge the hither agayne in to this lande: for I wil not leaue the, tyll I haue made good, all that I haue promysed the.

D Now when Iacob awaked from his slepe, he saide: Surely the LORDE is in this place, and I knew not. And he was afraied, and sayde: How fearfull is this place? here is no thinge els but an house of God, t a gate vnto heauē. And Iacob arose early in the mornynge, and toke the stone f that he had layed vnder his heade, and set it vp, and poured oyle vpon it. And he called the place Bethel, but afore the cite was called Lus. And Iacob made a vowe, and sayde: c Yf God wyl be with me, and kepe me in this iourney f I go t geue me bred to eate, and clothinge to put on, and brynge me peaceably home agayne vnto my father: The shall the LORDE be my God, and this stone that I haue set vp, shal be an house of God: and all that thou geuest me, I wyl geue the the tenth therof.

The xxi. Chapter.

THEN Iacob gat him vp vpon his fetes: A and wente in to the east cowntre, t looked aboute him, and beholde, there was a well in the felde, and f flockes of shepe therby, for the flockes dranke of the well. And there laye a greete stone at the welles mouth, and thither they vsed to brynge the flockes, and to roule the stone from f mouth of the well, and to geue the shepe drynke, t so they put the stone agayne vpon the welles mouth in to his place.

And Iacob sayde vnto them: Brethren, whēce be ye? They answered: we are of Haran. He sayde vnto them: Knowe ye Laban the sonne of Nahor? They answered: We knowe him well. He sayde: a Is he in good health? They answered: he is in good health. And lo, there commeth his daughter Rachel with the shepe. He sayde: It is yet hye daye, t is not yet tyme to dryue in the catell: geue the shepe to drynke, t go youre waye, t fede them. They answered: We can not, tyll all the flockes be brought together, and tyll we roule the stone from the welles mouth, t so geue the shepe drynke.

Whyle he yet talked with them, Rachel B came with hir fathers shepe, for she kepte f shepe. Whan Iacob sawe Rachel f daughter of Laban his mothers brother, and the shepe of Laban his mothers brother, he wēte, t rouled the stone from the welles mouth, and gaue his mothers brother shepe to drynke, and kyssed Rachel, lift vp his voyce, and wepte, and tolde her, f he was hir fathers brother, and f sonne of Rebecca. Then ranne she, and tolde her father.

Whā Laban herde of Iacob his sisters sonne, he ranne to mete him, and embraced him, and kyssed him, and brought him in to his house.

And so he tolde him all this matter. The sayde Laban vnto him: Wel, thou art my bone and my flesh. Abyde with me a moneth longe. But after that saide he vnto Iacob: Because thou art my brother, shalt thou therefore serue me for nought? Tell me, what shall thy wages be. Laban had two daughters, the eldest was called Lea, & the yongest Rachel. And Lea was tender eyed, but Rachel was beutyfull & well fauoured of face, and Iacob loued her well, and sayde: I will serue the seuen yeare, for Rachel thy yongest daughter. Laban answered: It is better that I geue her the, then vnto another: tary thou with me.

¶ So Iacob serued seuen yeare for Rachel, and they semed vnto him but few dayes, he loued her so well. And Iacob saide vnto Laban: geue me my wyfe, for the tyme is come that I shulde lye with her. The Laban bad all the people of that place, and made a mariage. But at euē he toke his daughter Lea, and brought her in vnto him, and he laye with her. And Laban gaue Zilpa his mayde vnto his daughter Lea to be hir mayde.

But on the morow, beholde, it was Lea. And he sayde vnto Laban: Why hast thou done this vnto me? Haue not I serued ŷ for Rachel? Why hast thou then begyled me? Laban answered: It is not the maner in oure countre, to mary the yongest before the eldest. Holde out this weke, & I will geue the this also, for the seruyce ŷ thou shalt do me yet seuen yeares more. Iacob dyd so, & helde out ŷ weke. Then gaue he him Rachel his daughter to wyfe. And Laban gaue Bilha his mayden vnto Rachel his daughter to be hir mayden. So he laye with Rachel also, & loued Rachel more the Lea, and serued him yet seuen yeares more.

¶ But when the LORDE sawe, that Lea was nothinge regarded, he made her frutefull, and Rachel baren. And Lea cōceaued, and bare a sonne, whom she called Ruben, and sayde: "The LORDE hath loked vpon my aduersite. Now wyll my huszbande loue me. And she conceaued agayne, and bare a sonne, and sayde: The LORDE hath herde that I am despyed, and hath geuē me this also, and she called him Symeon. She cōceaued yet agayne, and bare a sonne, and sayde: Now wyll my huszbande kepe me company agayne, for I haue borne him thre sonnes, therefore called she his name Leui. She conceaued ŷ fourth tyme, and bare a sonne, and sayde: Now wyll I geue thanks vnto the LORDE, therefore called she him Iuda, and left bearynge.

The xii. Chapter.

¶ WHEN Rachel sawe that she bare no children vnto Iacob, she had enuy at hir sister, & saide vnto Iacob: Geue me childrē also, or els I am but deed. But Iacob was very wroth at Rachel, & sayde: Am I then in Gods steade, which kepeth ŷ frute of thy wombe from ŷ? Neuertheles she sayde: Beholde, there is Bilha my mayden, lye with her, ŷ she may beare vpon my lappe, & that I maye be increased by her. And so she gaue him Bilha hir mayden to wyfe.

And Iacob laye with her. So Bilha conceaued, and bare Iacob a sonne. Then sayde Rachel: God hath geuen sentence on my syde, and herde my voyce, and geuē me a sonne, therefore called she him Dan. Bilha Rachels mayde cōceaued agayne, and bare another sonne vnto Iacob. Then sayde Rachel: God hath turned it with me, and my sister, and I haue gottē the vpper hande. And she called him Nephthali.

Now whan Lea sawe that she had left bearynge, she toke Silpa hir mayde, and gaue her vnto Iacob to wyfe. So Silpa Leas mayde bare Iacob a sonne. Then saide Lea: This is good lucke, & she called him Gad. After this Silpa Leas mayde bare Iacob another sonne. Then sayde Lea: Well is me, for the daughters will call me blessed, and she called him Asser.

Ruben wente out in the tyme of ŷ wheate haruest, and founde Mandragoras in the felde, and brought them home vnto his mother Lea. Then sayde Rachel vnto Lea: Geue me some of thy sonnes Mādragoras. She answered: Hast thou not yough that thou hast taken awaye my huszbande, but wilt take awaye my sonnes Mādragoras also? Rachel saide: Wel, let him lye with the this night for thy sonnes Mādragoras. Now whan Iacob came home at euen from the felde, Lea wente forth to mete him, and sayde: Thou shalt lye with me, for I haue bought the for my sonnes Mādragoras.

And he slepte with her that night. And God herde Lea, and she conceaued, and bare Jacob the fifth sonne, ⁊ sayde: God hath rewarded me, because I gaue my mayden vnto my huszbande, and she called him Isachar. Lea conceaued yet agayne, and bare Iacob the sixte sonne, and sayde: God hath endewed me with a good dowry. Now wyl my huszbande dwell with me agayne, for I haue borne him sixe sonnes, ⁊ she called him Zabulon. After that she bare a doughter, whom she called * Dina.

Neuertheles God thought vpō Rachel, and herde her, and made her frutefull. Then she conceaued, and bare a sonne, and sayde: God hath taken away my rebuke, and she called him Ioseph, and sayde: God geue me yet another sonne.

Now whan Rachel had borne Ioseph, Iacob sayde vnto Laban: ^b Let me go, ⁊ departe in to my place and vnto myne owne lande: geue me my wyues and my children, (for the which I haue serued the) ⁊ I maye go: for thou knowest, what seruyce I haue done the. Laban sayde vnto him: Can I not fynde fauoure in thy sight? I perceauē, that God hath blessed me for thy sake. Appoynte thou the rewarde, ⁊ I shal geue the. But he saide vnto him: Thou knowest how I haue serued the, and what maner of catell thou hast vnder me. Thou haddest but litle afore I came hither, but now is it growne in to a multitude, and the LORDE hath blessed ⁊ for my sake. And now whan shall I loke to myne owne house also? He saide: What shal I then geue the?

Iacob sayde: Thou shalt geue me nothinge at all, but yf thou wilt do this for me ⁊ I saye, then wyl I fede and kepe thy shepe agayne. I wyl go thorow all thy flockes to daye, and separate thou from amonge them all the shepe that be spotted and partye coloured, and all blacke shepe amonge the lambes. Now loke what shalbe partie coloured and spotted amonge the kyddes, the same shal be my rewarde: so shal my righteousnes testifie with me to daye or tomorow, whan it cometh vnto my rewarde before the, so that, what so euer is not spotted and partye coloured amonge the kyddes, and blacke amonge the lambes, let that be theft with me.

Then sayde Laban: Beholde, let it be so as thou hast sayde. And that same daye he sundered out the speckled and partye coloured goates, and all the spotted and partye coloured kyddes (where there was eny whyte vpon them) and all that was black amonge the lambes, and put them vnder the hande of his children, and made rowme of thre dayes iourney wyde betwixte him and Iacob. So Iacob kepthe the residue of Labans flocke.

But Iacob toke stauē of grene wyllyes, hasell and of chestnottrees, and pylled whyte strekes in them, and layed the stauē that he had pylled, in the drynkinge troughes before the flocke, which came there to drynke, that they shulde conceaue, whan they came to drynke. So the flockes conceaued ouer ⁊ stauē, and brought forth speckelde, spotted and partye coloured.

Then Iacob parted ⁊ lambes, and put them to the flocke vnto the spotted: and all that was blacke in Labans flocke, that put he vnto the spotted. And he made him a flocke of his owne, which he put not vnto Labans flocke. Neuertheles in the first buckynge tyme of the flockes, he layed the stauē in the drynkinge troughes before the eyes of the flockes, that they shulde conceaue ouer the stauē. But in the latter buckynge tyme he layed them not in. So the later were Labans, but the firstlinge were Iacobs. Thus the man became exceedinge riche, so that he had many shepe, maydens ⁊ seruantes, Camels and Asses.

The xxxi. Chapter.

HE herde also of ⁊ wordes of Labans children, that they sayde: Iacob hath brought all oure fathers good vnto him self, ⁊ of oure fathers good hath he gotten these riches. And Iacob behelde Labans countenance, ⁊ beholde, it was not towarde him as yesterdaye and yeryesterdaye.

And the LORDE sayde vnto him: ^c Departe agayne to thy fatherlāde, and to thy kynred, I wyl be with the. Then sent Iacob and bad call Rachel and Lea in to the felde to his flockes, and sayde vnto them: I se youre fathers countenance, that it is not towarde me like as yesterdaye and yeryesterdaye: but the God of my father hath bene with me. And ye knowe, that I haue serued youre father with all my power.

And he hath disceaumed me, and chaunged my wages now ten tymes. But God hath not suffred him, to do me harme. Yf he sayde: The partye coloured shalbe thy rewarde, then the whole flocke bare partye coloured. Yf he sayde: The speckelde shalbe thy rewarde, the whole flocke bare speckelde. Thus hath God withdrawn youre fathers goodes from him, and geuen them vnto me. For when the buckynge tyme came, I lift vp myne eyes and sawe in a dreame, and beholde, the rammes leapte vpon the flocke that was speckelde, spotted, & partye coloured.

And the angel of God sayde vnto me in a dreame: Iacob. And I answered: here am I. He sayde: lift vp thine eyes, and beholde, the rammes leape vpon the speckelde, spotted, and partye coloured flocke: for I haue sene all ŷ Laban doth vnto the. I am ŷ God at * Bethel, where thou dydest anoynte the stone, & maydest a vowe there vnto me. Get the vp now, & departe out of this londe, & go agayne in to the londe of thy kynred.

Then answered Rachel and Lea, and sayde vnto him: As for vs, we haue no porcion ner inheritaunce more in oure fathers house, & he hath coited vs as straungers, for he hath solde vs, & spent vp oure wages. Therefore hath God withdrawe oure fathers riches from him vnto vs & oure children. What so euer now God hath sayde vnto the, that do.

So Iacob gat vp, and set his children and wyues vpon Camels, and caried awaye all his catell and all his substaunce, that he had gotten at Mesopotamia, ŷ he might come vnto Isaac his father in the lande of Canaan. Labā was gone to clyppe his flocke, and Rachel stole awaye ŷ hert of Laban ŷ Syrian, in ŷ he tolde him not that he fled. So he fled, & all that was his, gat vp, and passed ouer the water, & wente straight towards the mount Gilead.

Vpon the thirde daye it was tolde Laban, that Iacob fled. And he toke his brethrē vnto him, and folowed after him seuen dayes iourney, and ouertoke him vpon the mount Gilead. But God came vnto Laban the Syrian in a dreame by night, & sayde vnto him: Bewarre, that thou speake nothinge to Iacob but good. And Labā drew nye vnto Iacob. As for Iacob, he had pyched his tente vpon the mount. And Laban with his brethrē pyched his tent also vpon the same mount Gilead.

* Gen. 28. d. * Gen. 38. b. 2 Re. 13. e. † Gen. 35. a.

Then sayde Laban vnto Iacob: What hast thou done, that thou hast stollen awaie my hert, and caried awaye my daughters, as though they had bene taken captiue with ŷ swerde? Wherefore kepest thou that secrete, that thou woldest flye, and hast stollen awaye fro me, and toldest me not, that I might haue brought the on the waye with myrth, with synginge, with tabrettes and harpes? and hast not suffred me to kysse my children and daughters? Thou hast done foolishly, and so moch might I haue made, that I coude haue done you euell: but youre fathers God saide yesterdaye vnto me: Bewarre, that thou speake nothinge vnto Iacob but good. And for so moch then as thou woldest nedes departe, and longedest sore after thy fathers house, why hast thou stollen away my goddes?

Iacob answered and sayde vnto Laban: I was afrayed, that thou shuldest haue taken away thy daughters from me: but loke by whom thou fyndest thy goddes, let the same dye here before oure brethren. Seke that thine is by me, and take it awaye. (But he knew not, that Rachel had stollen them.) Then wente Laban in to Iacobs tent, and in to Leas tent, and in to both the maydens tētes, and founde nothinge: and out of Leas tente he wente in to Rachels tent. Then toke Rachel the ymages, and layed them vnder the Camels strawe, and sat downe vpon them. But Laban searched the whole tent, and founde nothinge. Then sayde she vnto hir father: Be not angrie my lorde, that I can not ryse vp vnto the: for it goeth with me after the maner of women. So he sought, and founde not the ymages.

And Iacob was wroth, and chode with Laban, answered & sayde vnto him: What haue I trespassed or offended, ŷ thou art so whote vpon me? Thou hast searched all my housholde stuff, & what hast thou founde of thy housholde stuff? Laye it here before my brethren & thine, ŷ they maye iudge betwene vs both. Twentye yeare haue I bene with the: thy shepe & goates haue not bene vnfrutefull, the rammes of thy flocke haue I not eaten: Loke what was *†*orne of beasts, I brought it not vnto ŷ, I was fayne to paie it my self: thou requyrest it of my hande, whether it were stollen from me by daye or by night. On the daye tyme the heate cōsumed me, and the frost on the night, and my shepe departed fro myne eyes.

J Thus haue I serued twentye yere in thy house, fourtene yeares for thy daughters, & sixe for thy flocke, and ten tymes hast thou changed my rewarde: & yf the God of my father the God of Abraham, and the feare of Isaac had not bene on my syde, thou haddest latten me go awaye emptye. But God hath loked vpon myne aduersite and laboure, and rebuked the yesterdaye.

Laban answered and sayde: The daughters are my daughters, & the children are my childrē, and the flockes are my flockes, & all that thou seist is myne. What can I do this daye vnto these my daughters, or to their children whom they haue borne? Now therefore come on, let vs make a couenaunt (I & thou) which maye be a wytnesse betwene me and the. Then toke Iacob a stone, & set it vp (for a pilor or markstone) and sayde vnto his brethren: Gather stones. And they toke the stones, and made an heape, & ate vpon the same heape. And Labā called it Iegar Sahadutha, but Iacob called it Gilead: (either of them after the properte of his language.)

C Then sayde Laban: * This heape be wytnesse betwene me and the this daye (therfore is it called Gilead) and a testimony, for he sayde: The LORDE loke betwene me and yf whan we are departed † one from † other: †, thou vexe my daughters, or take other wyues vnto them. There is no mā with vs, but lo, God is the wytnesse betwene me and the. And Laban sayde morouer vnto Iacob: Beholde, this is the heape, and this is the markstone that I haue set vp betwixte me and the: the same heape be wytnesse, and the same markstone also be wytnesse, yf I passe ouer vnto the, or yf thou passe ouer this heape & markstone vnto me, to do eny harme. The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, and the God of their fathers, be iudge betwene vs.

And Iacob sware vnto him by the feare of his father Isaac. And Iacob offred an offerynge vpon the mount, and called his brethrē to eate bred. And whan they had eaten, they taried vpon the mount all night. But vpon the morow Laban rose vp early, kyssed his childrē & daughters, & blessed thē, & departed, and came agayne vnto his place. As for Iacob, he wente on his journey, & the angels of God met him. And whan he sawe them, he sayde: It is Gods hoost, & called the same place Mahanaim.

The xxxij. Chapter.

I ACOB sent messaugers before him to his brother Esau † into the lande of Seir, of the felde of Edom, & commaunded thē, & sayde: Saye thus vnto my lorde Esau: Thy seruauit Iacob sendeth † this worde: I haue bene out with Laban, & haue bene hither to amonge straungers, & haue oxen & Asses, shepe, seruauites & maydēs, and haue sent forth to shewe it the my lorde, † I might fynde fauoure in thy sight.

The messaugers came agayne vnto Iacob, and sayde: We came vnto thy brother Esau, & he commeth forth also agaynst the with foure hundred men. Then was Iacob sore afrayed, and wyst not what waye to turne him self, & deuyded the people that was with him, and the shepe, and the oxen, & the Camels in to two droues, & sayde: Yf Esau come vpon the one droue, and smyte it, the other shal escape.

Iacob sayde morouer: O God of my father Abrahā, God of my father Isaac, LORDE thou that saydest vnto me: † Departe agayne to thine owne londe and to thy kynred, and I wyl do the good: I am to litle for all the mercies and all the trueth that thou hast shewed vnto thy seruauit (for I had nomore but this staff whan I wente ouer this Iordan, and now am I become two droues) deluyer me from † hande of my brother, frō the hāde of Esau, for I am afrayed of him, lest he come and smyte me the mother with the children. Thou saydest: I wyl do the good, and wyl make thy sede as the sonde of † see, which can not be nombred for multitude.

And there he taried that night, and toke of C soch as came to hande, * a present vnto his brother Esau, two hundred she goates, twentye he goates, two hundred shepe, twentye rammes and thirtie mylck camels with their foales, fortye kyne, ten bullockes, twentye she Asses with ten foales, and put them in the handes of his seruauites, euery flock by them selues, & sayde vnto them: Go ye forth before me, & put a space betwixte one flocke after the other, and commaunded the first and sayde:

When my brother Esau meteth the, and axeth the: Whose art thou? ⁊ whyther goest thou? and whose are these that thou dryuest before the? Thou shalt saye: They be thy seruauit Jacobs, which sendeth a present vnto his lorde Esau, and commeth behynde vs him self.

Thus commaunded he the seconde also, and the thirde, and all them that folowed the flockes, and sayde: Like as I haue tolde you, so speake ye vnto Esau, whan ye mete him, and saye vnto him also: Beholde, thy seruauit Iacob is behynde vs. For he thought: I wyll reconcyle him with the present that goeth before me, after warde wyll I se him my self, peradventure he shall receaue me to grace.

So the present wente before him, but he taried in the tente the same night, and rose vp in y^e night, and toke his two wyues and the two maydens and his eleuen sonnes, and wente vnto the foorde of Iacob, toke them and caried them ouer the water, so that all that he had came ouer, and taried him self alone on this syde.

Then wrestled there a man with him vntyll the breake of y^e daye. And whan he sawe y^e he might not ouercome him, he touched the senowe of his thye, and y^e senowe of his thye shrancke in wrestlinge with him. And he sayde: Let me go, for y^e daye breaketh on. But he answered: I will not let y^e go, excepte thou blesse me. He sayde: What is thy name? He answered: Iacob. He sayde: Thou shalt nomore be called Iacob, but Israel, for thou hast stryuen with God and with men, and hast preuayled. And Iacob axed him, ⁊ sayde: Tell me, what is thy name? But he sayde: Why axest thou what my name is? And he blessed him there. And Iacob called the place Peniel, for I haue sene God face to face, ⁊ my soule is recouered. And as he came ouer frō Peniel, y^e Sonne rose ypō him, ⁊ he halted vpon his thye. Therefore eate the children of Israel no vane vpon the senow of y^e thye vnto this daye, because y^e vane vpon the senow of Iacobs thye was touched.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

IACOB lift vp his eyes, ⁊ sawe his brother Esau cōmyng with foure hundred men: and he deuyded his children vnto Lea vnto Rachel, and to both the maydēs, and set the maydens with their children before, and Lea with hir childrē after, and Rachel with Ioseph hynder most. And he wente before them, and bowed him self to the grounde seven tymes, tyll he came to his brother. * But Esau ranne to mete him, and embraced him, and fell aboute his neck, ⁊ kyssed him, and wepte, and lift vp his eyes, and sawe the wyues with the children, and sayde: What are these with the? He answered: They are the children, which God hath geuen vnto thy seruauit. And the maydens came forth with their children, and dyd their obeysaunce vnto him.

Lea came forth also with hir childrē, and kneled vnto him. Afterwarde came Ioseph and Rachel forth, and kneled vnto him likewise. And he sayde: What meanest thou with all the droue that I met? He answered: that I might fynde grace in the sight of my lorde. Esau sayde: I haue ynough my brother, kepe that thou hast. Iacob answered: Oh nay, but yf I haue founde grace in thy sight, receaue my present of my hande (for I sawe thy face, as though I had sene the face of God) and be at one with me. Take this present in good worth, that I haue brought y^e, for God hath geuen it me, ⁊ I haue ynough of all thinges. So he compelled him to take it.

And he sayde: Let vs go on and take oure iourney, I wyll go in thy company. But he sayde vnto him: My lorde, thou knowest that I haue tender children by me, and small and greate catell also, which are yet but yonge: yf they shulde be dryūe ouer in one daye, the whole flocke wolde dye. Let my lorde go on before his seruauit. I wyll dryue after fayre and softly, (there after as the catell ⁊ the children can go,) tyll I come to my lorde in Seir. Esau sayde: Yet wil I leaue some of my people with the. He answered: What nede is it? Let me but onely fynde grace in the sight of my lorde.

So Esau departed againe the same daye toward Seir, and Iacob toke his iourney toward Sucoth, and buylded him an house, and made tētes for his catell. Therefore is the place called Sucoth.

Afterwarde came Iacob peaceably vnto the cite of Sichem, which lyeth in y^e lande of Canaan, after that he was come agayne out of Mesopotamia, and pitched before the cite, and bought a pece of londe of the children of Hemor \S father of Sichem for *an hundreth pens. There pitched he his tent, and there he set vp an altare, and called vpon the name of the mightie God of Israel.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

ADINA \S daughter of Lea, which she bare vnto Iacob, wente out to beholde the daughters of the londe. Whan Sichem the sonne of Hemor the Heuite (which was lorde of the löde) sawe her, he toke her, and laye with her, and forced her, and his hert hanged vpon her, and he loued \S damsell, and talked louyngly with her, and spake to his father Hemor: Get me this mayden to wife.

And Iacob vnderstode, that Dina his daughter was defyled, and his sonnes were with the catell in the felde, and Iacob helde his tonge tyll they came. Then Hemor the father of Sichem wente forth vnto Iacob to comen with him. In the meane season came Iacobs sonnes from \S felde. And whan they herde it, it greued the men, and they were very wroth, that he had wrought folly in Israel, and lyen with Iacobs daughter: for so was not the vse to do.

B Then comened Hemor with thē, and sayde: My sonne Sichems hert longeth for youre daughter, O geue hir him to wife: make frendshippe with vs, geue vs youre daughters, and take ye oure daughters, and dwell with vs, the londe shall be open vnto you, dwell and occupie, and haue youre possessions therin. And Sichem sayde vnto hir father and brethren: Let me fynde grace with you: loke what ye appoynte me, I will geue it: requyre the dowrye and gift of me hardely, I will geue it acordinge as ye wyll axe, onely geue me the damsell to wife.

Then Iacobs sonnes answered Sichem and Hemor his father (and spake disceatfully, because their sister Dina was defyled) τ sayde vnto them: That can we not do, to geue oure sister to an vncircumcided man: for that were a shame vnto vs.

C Neuertheles we wyll consente vnto you, yf ye wyll be like vnto vs, and be circumcided as many as are males amonge you: then will we geue you oure daughters, and take youre daughters vnto vs, and dwell with you, and be one people. But yf ye wyll not herken vnto vs, to be circumcided, then wyl we take oure daughter, and go oure waye.

These wordes pleased Hemor and his sonne wel, and the yonge man deferde not to do the same, for he had lust to Iacobs daughter: and he was holden in honour aboue all in his fathers house. Then came Hemor and Sichem his sonne vnder \S gate of cite, and comened with the citisens of the cite, and saide: These men are peaceable with vs, and will dwell in the lande and occupye: now is the londe brode of both the sydes, we wyl take their daughters vnto vs, and geue them oure daughters.

But then wyll they consent vnto vs, to dwell by vs, and to be one people with vs, yf we circumeise all the men children amonge vs, like as they are circumcysed: their catell and goodes, and all that they haue, shal be ours, yf we consent vnto them, that they maye dwel with vs.

And they herkened vnto Hemor and Sichem his sonne, as many as wente out and in at \S gate of his cite, and circumcided all the males, that wente out and in at his cite. And vpon the thirde daye (whan it was panefull to them) \S the two sonnes of Iacob Simeon and Leui Dinas brethren, toke euery man his swerde, and wente boldly in to the cite, \dagger and slew all the males, and slew Hemor also and Sichem his sonne with the edge of the swerde, and toke their sister Dina out of Sichems house, and wente their waye.

Then came Iacobs sonnes ouer the slayne, and spoyled the cite (because they had defyled their sister) and toke their shepe, oxen, Asses, and what so euer was in the cite and in the londe, and all maner of goodes: All their children and wyues toke they captiue, and spoyled all \S was in the houses.

And Iacob sayde vnto Symeon and Leui: Ye haue brought it so to passe, \S I stynke before the inhabitants of this lande, \S Cananites and Pheresites, τ I am but a small nombre: Yf they gather them selues now together against me, they shal slaye me, so shal I be destroyed with my house. But they answered: Shulde they the deale with oure sister as with an whoore?

AND God sayde vnto Iacob: Get the vp, and go vnto Bethel, τ dwell there, and make there an altare vnto the God, that appeared vnto the, *whan thou fleddest from thy brother Esau. Then sayde Iacob vnto his housholde and to all ȳ were with him: Put awaye from you ȳ straunge [†]goddess, that are amonge you, and clesne youre selues, and chaunge youre clothes, and let vs get vp, and go vnto Bethel, that I maye there make an altare vnto the God, [†]which herde me in the tyme of my trouble, and hath bene with me in the waye that I haue gone.

33 Then gaue they him all the straunge goddesses that were vnder their handes, and their earynges, and he buried them vnder an Oke that stode besyde Sichem, & departed. And there came a feare of God vpon the cities that laye rōude aboute, so that they folowed not after ȳ sonnes of Iacob. So came Iacob vnto Lus in ȳ lande of Canaan (which is called Bethel) and all the people that were with him, and there he bylde an altare, and called ȳ place Bethel, because the LORDE appeared vnto him there, whan he fled from his brother. Then dyed [†]Debora Rebekcas nurse, and was buried beneth Bethel vnder the Oke, and it was called the Oke of lamentacion.

[†]And God appeared agayne vnto Iacob, after that he was come out of Mesopotamia, and blessed him, & saide vnto him: [†]Thou art called Iacob, neuertheles thou shalt nomore be called Iacob, but Israel shal be thy name. And so was he called Israel.

© And God sayde vnto him: [†]I am the All mightie God, be frutefull and multiplye: people and a multitude of people shal come of the, and [†]kynges shall come out of thy loynes: and the lande that I gaue vnto Abraham and Isaac, wyl I geue vnto the, & wyl geue it vnto thy sede after the. So God departed from him, from ȳ place where he talked with him. And Iacob set vp a piler of stone, in the place where he talked with him, & poured drynk-offerynges thereon, and poured oyle vpon it. And Iacob called ȳ place where God talked with him, Bethel.

34 And he departed from Bethel: and whan he was yet a felde brode from Ephrath, Rachel traueyled, & the byrth came harde vpon hir. But whan she had soch payne in traueylng, ȳ myd wife sayde vnto her: [†]a feare not, for thou shalt haue this sonne also. But as hir soule was departyng, ȳ she must dye, she called him Ben Oni: neuertheles his father called hi Bē Iamin. [†]So Rachel died, & was buried in the waye towardē Ephrath, which now is called Bethlehē. And Iacob set vp a piler vpon hir graue, there is Rachels grauestone vnto this daye. And Israel departed, and pitched his tent beyonde the tower of [†]Eder.

And it chaunced, that when Israel dwelt in that londe, Ruben wente [†]and laye with Bilha his fathers concubine, and that came to Israels eares.

And Iacob had twolue sonnes. The sonnes of Lea were these: Ruben Jacobs first borne sonne, Simeon, Leui, Iuda, Isachar, & Zabulō. The sonnes of Rachel, were Ioseph and Ben Iamin. The sonnes of Bilha Rachels mayde: Dan, and Nepthali. The sonnes of Silpa Leas mayde: Gad and Aser. These are ȳ sonnes of Iacob, which were borne vnto him in Mesopotamia. And he came to his father Isaac to Mamre in to the head cite which is called Hebron, where in Abrahā [†]Isaac were straungers. And Isaac was an hundredth & foure score yeaere olde, & fell sicke, and dyed, & was gathered vnto his people, whan he was olde, & had lyued ynough: and his sonnes Esau & Iacob buried him.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

THIS is the generaciō of Esau, which is called Edom. Esau toke wyues of the daughters of Canaan. [†]Ada the daughter of Elō the Hethite: & Ahalibama the daughter of Ana, the childes childe of Zibeon the Heuyte: And Basmath [†]Ismaels daughter, the sister of Nebaioth. And Ada bare Eliphaz vnto Esau. Basmath bare Reguel. Ahalibama bare Ieus, Iaelam, & Korah. These are the childre of Esau, ȳ were borne vnto him in the lande of Canaan.

And Esau toke his wiues sonnes & daughters, and all the soules of his house, his substaunce, and all the catell with all the goodes that he had gotten in the lande of Canaan, and wente in to a countre awaye frō his brother Iacob: for their substaunce was so greate, that they coude not dwell together: and the londe wherein they were straungers, might not holde them because of their goodes. So Esau dwelt vpon mount Seir. And Esau is Edom.

33 This is ꝑ generaciō of Esau, of whō are come ꝑ Edomites vpon ꝑ mount Seir. And these are ꝑ names of the childrē of Esau: Eliphaz ꝑ sonne of Ada Esaus wife: Reguel ꝑ sonne of Basmath Esaus wife: The sonnes of Eliphaz were these: Theman, Omar, Zepho, Gaethan & Kenas. And *Thimna was a concubine of Elyphas ꝑ sonne of Esau, and bare him Amaleck. These are ꝑ children of Ada Esaus wyfe.

The children of Reguel are these: Nahath, Serah, Samma, Misa. These are the children of Basmath Esaus wife.

The children of Ahalibama Esaus wife, the daughter of Ana, that was the childes childe of Zibeon (which she bare vnto Esau) are these: Ieus, Iaelam and Korah.

C These are the prynces amōge the childrē of Esau. The children of Eliphaz the first sonne of Esau, were these: The prynce Theman, ꝑ prynce Omar, the prynce Zepho, the prynce Kenas, the prynce Korah, the prynce Gaethan, the prynce Amaleck. These are the prynces of Eliphaz in the lāde of Edō, and are the children of Ada.

And these are the children of Reguel Esaus sonne: ꝑ prynce Nahath, ꝑ prynce Serah, ꝑ prynce Sāma, ꝑ prynce Misa. These are ꝑ prynces of Reguel in ꝑ londe of ꝑ Edomites, & they are ꝑ children of Basmath Esaus wife. These are the children of Ahalibama Esaus wife: The prynce Ieus, ꝑ prync Iaelam, the prynce Korah. These are the prynces of Ahalibama, ꝑ daughter of Ana Esaus wife.

10 These are ꝑ childrē of Esau and their prynces. He is Edom. The children of Seir ꝑ Horite ꝑ dwelt in the londe, are these: Lothan, Sobal, Zibeon, Ana, Dison, Ezer & Disan. These are the prynces of the Horites, all children of Seir in the londe of Idumea. But ꝑ childrē of Lothan were these: Hori, & Hemā, & Lothās sister was called †Thimna.

The children of Sobal were these: Aluā, Manahat, Ebal, Sepho & Onā. The childrē of Zibeō were: Aia & Ana. This is the same Ana ꝑ foude †Mules in ꝑ wyldernes, whā he kepte his fathers Zibeons Asses. The children of Ana were: Dison: & Ahalibama, ꝑ is ꝑ daughter of Ana. The childrē of Dison were: Hemdan, Eszban, Iethrā & Charan. The children of Ezer were: Bilhan, Seauā, & Ackan. The children of Disan were: Vz & Aran.

These are ꝑ prices of ꝑ Horites: The prync Lothan, ꝑ prynce Sobal, ꝑ prynce Zibeō, ꝑ prynce Ana, ꝑ prynce Dison, ꝑ prync Ezer, ꝑ prynce Disan. These are the prynces of the Horites, which ruled in ꝑ londe of Seir.

15 The kynges that reigned in the londe of Edumea (before the childrē of Israel had eny kynge) are these: Bela ꝑ sonne of Beor was kynge in Edumea, & ꝑ name of his cite was Dinhaba. And whā Bela died, Iobab ꝑ sonne of Serah of Bosra was kynge in his steade. When Iobab dyed, Husam out of ꝑ lōde of the Themanites was kynge in his steade. When Husam dyed, Hadad ꝑ sonne of Bedad (which slewe ꝑ Madianites in ꝑ Moabites felde) was kynge in his steade, & the name of his cite was Auth. When Hadad dyed, Samla of Masreck was kynge in his steade. Whā Samla died, Saul of Rehoboth by ꝑ water syde, was kynge in his steade. When Saul dyed, Baal Hanā the sonne of Achbor was kynge in his steade. Whā Baal Hanā the sonne of Achbor dyed, Hadad was kynge in his steade, & the name of his cite was Pagu, & his wifes name was Mehet Abeel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mesahab. Thus are the prynces of Esau called in their kynreds, places & names: The prynce Thymna, ꝑ prynce Alua, ꝑ prynce Ietheth, the prynce Ahalibama, the prynce Ela, the prynce Pynon, the prynce Kenas, ꝑ prynce Theman, ꝑ prync Mibzar, the prync Magdiel, ꝑ prynce Irā. These are the prynces in Edumea, like as they dwelt in ꝑ lāde of their possessions. And Esau is ꝑ father of ꝑ Edomites.

The xxxviij. Chapter.

1 IACOB dwelt in ꝑ lande, wherin his father was a straunger, namely in the lāde of Canaā. And these are ꝑ generaciōs of Iacob. Ioseph was seuētene yeaere olde, whā he became a keeper of the catell with his brethern, & the lad was with the children of Bilha & Silpa his fathers wyues, and tolde their father of ꝑ euell reporte ꝑ was of thē. Israel loued Ioseph more thē all his childrē because he had begottē him in his olde age, and he made him a cote of many coloures.

Now whā his brethrē sawe, ꝑ his father loued him more thē all his brethrē, they had euell wyll at him, & coude not speake a freflylly worde vnto hi. *Ioseph also had once a dreame, and tolde his brethre therof. The hated they him y more, for he sayde: Heare I praye you what I dreamed. Me thought we were byndinge sheeues vpō y felde, & my shefe arose, and stode vp, and youre sheeues rounde aboute made obeysaunce vnto myshefe.

33 Then sayde his brethre vnto him: Shalt thou be oure kinge, and haue domyniō ouer vs? And they hated him yet y more, because of his dreame, & his wordes. And he had yet another dreame, which he tolde his brethre, & saide: Beholde, I had yet another dreame: Me thought y Sonne & y Moone & eleuen starres made obeisaunce to me. And whā this was tolde his father and his brethre, his father reprobud him, & sayde vnto him: What maner of dreame is this, y thou hast dreamed? Shall I & thy mother, & thy brethren come & fall before y vpon the grounde? And his brethre had envie at him. But his father marked this sayenge.

C Now whā his brethren were gone forth to kepe their fathers catell in Sichē, Israel sayde vnto Ioseph: Do not thy brethren kepe the catell in Sichem? Come, I wil sende the vnto thē. He answered: †Here am I. And he sayde: Go thy waye, and loke whether it be well with thy brethren and with y catell, and brynge me worde agayne how it is. And he sent him out of the valley of Hebron, to go vnto Sichem.

Then a certayne man founde him, waddinge out of his waye in the felde, which axed him, and sayde: Whom sekest thou? He answered: I seke my brethren: tell me I pray the where they kepe. The man sayde: They are gone from hence, for I herde them saye: let vs go vnto Dothan. Then folowed Ioseph after his brethren, and founde them at Dothan.

34 Now when they sawe him a farre of, afore he came at thē, they deuyseed to sleve him, and sayde one to another: Lo, there cometh the dreamer, †come on, and let vs sleve him, & cast him in a pytt, and saye: a wicked beast hath deuoured him: thē shal it be sene, what his dreames are.

When Ruben herde that, he wolde haue delyuered him out of their handes, & sayde: y O let vs not sleve a soule. Ruben sayde morouer vnto him: Shed no bloude, but cast him in to this pytt y is in the wyldernes, & laye ye no hādes vpon him. (He wolde haue delyuered him out of their hādes, y he might haue brought him agayne vnto his father.)

35 Whan Ioseph now came to his brethre, they stryped him out of his cote, that partye coloured cote which he had vpon him, & toke him and cast him in to a pytt. But the same pytt was emptye, and no water in it, & they sat them downe to eate. In the meane season they lift vp their eyes, and sawe a cōpany of Ismaelites cōmynge from Gilead, with their camels, which bare spyses, balme, and myrre, and were goinge downe in to Egipte.

Then saide Iuda vnto his brethre: what helpeth it vs, that we sleve oure brother, and hyde his bloude? Come, let vs sell him vnto the Ismaelites, that oure handes be not defyled vpon him, for he is oure brother, oure flesh and bloude. And they herkened vnto him.

And as the Madianites marchaunt men wente by, they drew Ioseph out of the pytt, and solde him vnto the Ismaelites (for twētye syluer pens) which brought him in to Egipte.

36 Now whan Ruben came agayne vnto the pytt, & founde not Ioseph therin, he rent his clothes, and came agayne to his brethre and sayde: The lad is not yonder, whyther shal I go? Then toke they Iosephs cote & slewe a goate, and dyped the cote in y bloude, and sent awaye that partie coloured cote, and caused it be brought vnto their father and sayde: This haue we founde, loke, whether it be thy sonnes coate, or no.

But he knewe it, and sayde: It is my sonnes coate, †a wicked beast hath deuoured him, & rauyshinge beast hath rauyshed Ioseph. And Iacob rēte his clothes, and put a sack cloth aboute his loynes, & mourned for his sonne a longe season. And all his sonnes & daughters came vnto him to cōforte him. But he wolde not be cōforted, & saide: With sorowe wil I go downe in to the graue vnto my sonne. And his father wepte for him. But the Madianites †solde him in Egipte vnto Potiphar Pharaos chefe Marshall.

called Hyra at Odollam. And there Iuda sawe a mā of Canaās daughter called Sua, and toke her. And whē he had lye with her, she concealed and bare a sonne, whom she called Er.

And she concealed agayne, & bare a sonne whō she called Onā. She proceeded yet further, & bare a sonne, whō she called Sela. And whā she had borne him, she left of bearinge.

And Iuda gaue his first sonne Er a wife, whose name was Thamar. But he was wicked before the LORDE, therefore the LORDE slew him. Then sayde Iuda vnto his sonne Onan: Go lie with thy brothers wife, and marye thyself with her, that thou mayest rayse vp sede vnto thy brother. But when Onan knewe that the sede^a shulde not be his owne, when he laye with his brothers wife, he let it fall vpon the earth and destroyed it, & he shulde not geue sede vnto his brother. This thinge that he dyd displeased the LORDE sore, and he slewed him also.

Then sayde Iudas vnto Thamar his sonnes wyfe. Remayne a wyddow in thy fathers house, tyll my sonne Sela be growne: for he thought: peraduenture he might dye also like as his brethren. So Thamar wente hir waye, and remained in hir fathers house. Now whā many dayes were past, & daughter of Sua Iudas wife dyed. And whan Iuda had left mournynge, he wente vp vnto Thimnath^{*} to clyppe his shepe with his shepherde Hyra of Odollam.

Then was it tolde Thamar: beholde, thy father in lawe goeth vp vnto Thimnath, to clyppe his shepe. Then put she of & wyddowes garments that she had vpon her, couered and dysgyssed hir self, & sat hir downe without the porte by the waye syde towarde Thymnath. For she sawe that Sela was growne, and she was not geuen vnto him to wife.

Now whan Iuda sawe her, he thought it had bene an whoore, for she had couered hir face: and he gat him to her in the waye, and saide: I praye the let me lye with the, for he knewe not that it was his daughter in lawe. She answered: What wilt thou geue me, that thou mayest lie with me? He sayde: I wil sende the a kydd from the flocke. She answered: Geue me a pledge then, tyll thou sende it me. He sayde: What pledge wilt thou that I geue the?

She answered: Thy signet, and thy bracelet, and thy staff that thou hast in thy hāde. Then he gaue it her, and laye with her, and she was with childe of him. And she gat hir vp, and wente hir waye, and layed of hir cloke, and put on hir wyddowes garnētes agayne.

Iuda sent the kydd by his shepherde of Odolla, to fetch the pledge agayne from the woman, and he founde her not. Then axed he the men of the same place, & sayde: Where is the whoore[†] that sat without in the waye? They answered: There hath no whoore bene here. And he came agayne vnto Iuda, and saide: I haue not founde her, morouer & men of the same place saide: that there hath no whoore bene there. Iuda sayde: Let her take it vnto her, lest we happily be shamed, for I haue sent the kydd, and thou hast not founde her.

After thre monethes it was tolde Iuda: Thamar thy daughter in lawe hath plaied the whoore: and beholde, by whordome is she gotten with childe. Iuda sayde: brynge her forth, that she maye be brent. And whan she was brought forth, she sent vnto hir father in lawe, and sayde: By the man[‡] I oweth these, am I with childe. And she sayde: Knowest thou whose is this signet, this bracelet & this staff? Iuda knewe thē, & sayde: She is more righteous thē I, for I gaue hir not my sonne Sela: But he laye nomore with her.

Whan the tyme came that she shulde be delyuered, there were two twyns founde in hir wombe. And as she was now in trauelynge, the one put out his hande. Then the mydwife toke and boude a reed threde aboute it, and saide: This shal come out first. But whan he pluckte in his hande agayne, his brother came forth. And she sayde: Wherfore is there a rent mayde for thy sake? And he was called[†] Phares. Afterwarde came his brother forth, which had & reed threde aboute his hande, and he was called Zarah.

The xxxij. Chapter.

I^aOSEPH was brought downe in to Egipte, & Potiphar an Egipciā^b Pharaos chefe marshall bought him of & Ismaelites, & brought him downe. And & LORDE was with Ioseph, in so moch & he became a luckye mā, & was in his master ȝ Egipcians house. And his master sawe ȝ the LORDE was with him: for what so euer he dyd, the LORDE made it to prospere in his hāde: so ȝ he founde fauoure in his masters sight, ȝ was his seruaut. He made him ruler of his house, and put all that he had, vnder his hande. And from the tyme forth that he had made him ruler of his house and all his goodes, ȝ LORDE blessed the Egipcians house for Iosephs sake: and there was nothyng but the very blessinge of the LORDE in all ȝ he had in ȝ house ȝ in the fælde, therefore left he all ȝ he had, in Iosephs hande. And medled with nothyng himself, saue onely the bred that he ate. And Ioseph was fayre of bewtye, and well fauoured of face.

33 And it fortunēd after these actes, that his masters wife cast hir eyes vpon Ioseph, and sayde: Slepe with me. But he denyed, and saide vnto her: Beholde, my master knoweth not what is in ȝ house, and all that he hath, that hath he put vnder my hande. And there is no man so greates in the house as I, and he hath kepte nothyng fro me, excepte the: for thou art his wife. How shulde I then do so greates euell, and synne agaynst God? But she spake soch wordes vnto Ioseph daylie. Neuertheles he herkened not vnto her, to slepe by her, or to be in her company.

Ⓢ It fortunēd vpon a tyme, that Ioseph wente in to the house to do his busynesse, and there was none of ȝ folkes of the house thereby. And she caught him by his garment, ȝ sayde: Slepe with me. But he left the garment in hir hande, and fled, and gat him out of the house.

Now whā she sawe that he had left his garmēt in hir hande, and fled out, she called the folkes in the house, and sayde vnto thē: Lo, he hath brought vs in the Hebrue, to do vs shame. He came in here vnto me, to slepe by me: but I cried with loude voyce. And whan he herde that I made a noyse ȝ cried, he left his garmēt here by me, and fled, and ranne out.

34 And she layed vp his garmēt by her, tyll his master came home, and tolde him euen the same wordes, and sayde: The Hebrue seruaut whom thou broughtest here vnto vs, came in here to me, for to do me shame. But whan I made a noyse and cried, he left his garment here by me, and fled out. Whan his master herde the wordes of his wyfe which she tolde him, and sayde: Thus hath the Hebrue seruaut done vnto me, he was very wroth.

Then his master toke him, and put him in the preson, ȝ wherin the kinges presoners laie. And there he laye in preson. But the LORDE was with him, and had mercy vpon him, ȝ caused him to fynde fauoure in the sight of the officer of ȝ preson, so that he committed all the presoners of the preson vnto his hādes: that what so euer were done, might be done by him. For the officer of the preson sawe, ȝ the LORDE was with him in all ȝ was vnder his handes, and that what so euer he dyd, the LORDE made it to come prosperously to passe.

The xl. Chapter.

35 AND it fortunēd after this, that ȝ kynge of Egiptes chefe butlar and ȝ chefe baker offended their lorde the kynge of Egipte. And Pharaos was angrie with them, ȝ caused them be put in preson in ȝ chefe marshalls house, where Ioseph laye presoner. And the chefe marshall put Ioseph vnto them, ȝ he might serue them. And so they were in preson for a season.

And they dreamed, both the butlar ȝ the baker in one night, euery mā his owne dreame, and euery dreame had his interpretaciō. Now in the mornynge whan Ioseph came in vnto them, and sawe that they lokēd sadly, he axed them and sayde: Why loke ye so sadly to daye? They answered: We haue dreamed, and haue no man to declare it vnto vs. Ioseph sayde: Interpretinge belongeth vnto God, but tell it me yet.

Then the chefe butlar tolde Ioseph his dreame, and saide vnto him: I dreamed that there was a vyne before me, which had thre braunches, and it budded, grewe and bare blossoms, and the grapes therof were rype. And I had Pharaos cuppe in my hande, ȝ toke (the grapes) and wronge thē in to ȝ cuppe, and gaue Pharaos the cuppe in his hāde.

Ioseph sayde: This is the interpretaciō: The thre braunches are thre dayes, and ouer thre dayes shall Pharaos take the, and putt the in thine office agayne, that thou mayest geue him the cuppe in his hande after the olde maner, whā thou wast his butlar. But whan thou art in thy prosperite, thynke vpon me, and shewe me kyndnesse, that thou mayest certifie Pharaο of me, y he maie bringe me out of this house: for I was preuely caried out of the lande of the Hebrues, and here also haue I done nothinge, that they shulde haue put me in this dongeon.

¶ Whan the chefe baker sawe, that the interpretation was good, he sayde vnto Ioseph: I dreamed, that I bare thre wyker baskettes vpon my heade, and in y vppermost baszket all maner of bakē meates vnto Pharaο, and the foules ate out of the baszket vpon my heade.

Ioseph answered, and sayde: This is the interpretation: The thre baszkettes are thre dayes, and after thre dayes shall Pharaο take the, and hange the vpon the galowe, and the foules shal eate thy flesh from of y.

And vpon the thirde daye it came to passe, that Pharaο helde his * byrth daye, and made a feast vnto all his seruantes, and toke the chefe butlar and the chefe baker before all his seruantes, and restored the chefe butlar to his butlarshipe agayne, so that he reached the cuppe in to Pharaοs hande. As for the chefe baker, he caused him be hanged like as Ioseph had interpreted vnto him. Neuerthelesse the chefe butlar thought not on Ioseph, but forgat him.

The xlii. Chapter.

¶ AND after two yeaes Pharaο had a dreame, how that he stode by a water syde: and beholde, out of the water there came seuen goodly kyne, and fatteshed, and wente fedinge in the medowe. After these he sawe other seuen kyne come out of the water, which were euell faoured and leane fleshed, and wente by the kyne vpon y water syde: and the euell faoured leene kyne ate vp the seuen goodly and fatt kyne. Then Pharaο awaked.

And he slepte agayne, and dreamed the seconde tyme. And he sawe that seuen eares of corne grewe vpon one stalke, full and good. Afterwarde he sawe seue thynne and blasted eares come vp, and the seuen thynne eares deuoured the seuen greate and full eares. Then Pharaο awaked, and sawe that it was a dreame. And whan it was daye, his sprte was troubled, and he sente out, & caused to call all the soithsayers in Egipte & all the wyse men, and tolde them his dreame. But there was none, that coude tell Pharaο the interpretation of it.

Then spake the chefe butlar vnto Pharaο, and saide: This daye do I remembre my fawte. Whan Pharaο was angrie with his seruantes, and put me in preson with y chefe baker in y chefe marshals house, we dreamed both in one night euery mā his dreame, hauinge his owne interpretation. Then was there with vs a yonge man an Hebrue, the chefe marshals seruauant, vnto whom we tolde it, and he declared oure dreames vnto vs, vnto euery mā according to his dreame. And as he declared it vnto vs, so came it to passe. For I was restored vnto myne office, and he was hanged.

Then Pharaο sent and called for Ioseph and they let him out of the dongeon. And he let himself be shauen, and chaunged his clothes, and came in vnto Pharaο. Then saide Pharaο vnto him: I haue dreamed a dreame, and there is no man that can interpret it: but I haue herde tell of the, that whā thou hearest a dreame, thou declarest it. Ioseph answered Pharaο, and sayde: God shall geue Pharaο a prosperous answeere, yee well without me.

Pharaο sayde vnto Ioseph: I dreamed that I stode by a water syde, and beholde, out of the water there came seuen kyne, fatteshed and goodly, and wente fedinge in y medowe. And after them I sawe other seue kyne come out, thynne, euell faoured, and leenfleshed. So euell faoured sawe I neuer in all the lande of Egipte. And the seuen leene and euell faoured kyne, ate vp the seuen first fat kyne. And whan they had eatē them vp, a man coude not perceaue that they had eaten them, & were as euell faoured as they were afore. Then I awaked.

And I sawe agayne in my dreame seuen eares of corne, growinge vpō one stalke, full and good. Afterwarde there spronge vp seuen wythred eares, thynne and blasted, and the seuen thynne eares deuoured the seuen good eares. And I haue shewed it vnto my soithsayers, but they can tell me nothinge therof.

Ioseph answered Pharaο: Both Pharaοs dreames are one. God sheweth Pharaο what he wil do. The seuen good kyne are seuen yeaes, and the seuen good eares are seuen yeares also. It is one dreame. The seuen leene and euell fauoured kyne, that came vp after them, are seuen yeares. And the seuen thynne and blasted eares, shalbe seuen yeares of derth. This is now the thinge which I tolde Pharaο, that God sheweth Pharaο, what he wyll do.

Beholde, there shal come seuen yeares with greate plenteousnes in y whole lande of Egipte, and after the same there shall come seuen yeares of derth, so that all this plenteousnes shalbe forgotten in y lande of Egipte: and the derth shall consume the lande, so that the plenteousnes shal not be perceaued in the lande, because of the derth that commeth thereafter, for it shall be very greate. Where as Pharaο dreamed the seconde tyme, it signifieth that this thinge is surely prepared of God, and that God wil shortly brynge the same to passe.

¶ Let Pharaο now proude for a man of vnderstandinge ⁊ wysdome, whom he maye set ouer the lande of Egipte, and se that he ordene officers in the londe, and take y fifth (parte) of the lande of Egipte in the seuen plenteous yeares, and gather all y foode y shal come of the plenteous yeares, that they maye laye vp corne vnder Pharaοs power for sustenance in the cities, and kepe it, y there maye be foode founde prepared for the lande in the seuen deare yeares, which shall come vpon the lande of Egipte, that the lande be not destroyed of honger. The sayenge pleased Pharaο well and all his seruantes. And Pharaο sayde vnto his seruantes: How might we fynde such a man, in whom is the sprete of God? And sayde vnto Ioseph: For so moch as God hath shewed y all this, there is none of soch vnderstandinge ⁊ wysdome as thou.

¶ Thou shalt be ouer my house, and acordinge vnto thy worde^a shall all my people obeye: onely in the kynges seate wyll I be more then thou. And he sayde: Beholde, I haue set the ouer the whole lande of Egipte. And he toke of his ringe from his hāde, and gaue it Ioseph in his hāde, and clothed him with whyte sylke, and honge a cheyne of golde aboute his neck, and made him ryde vpō the seconde charet: and caused it be proclaimed before him, that men shulde bowe their knees vnto him, as to him whō Pharaο had set ouer the whole lande of Egipte.

And Pharaο sayde vnto Ioseph: I am Pharaο: without thy wyll shall no man moue his hande or his fote in all the lāde Egipte. And he called him * Zaphnath Paena, ⁊ gaue him a wife, euen Asnath the daughter of Potiphar the prest of On. So Ioseph wente out, for to vyset the lande of Egipte. (And he was thirtie yeare olde, whan he stode before Pharaο.) And he departed from Pharaο, and wente thorow all the lande of Egipte.

And the londe dyd so those seuen plenteous yeares, and they gathered all the foode of the seuen yeares that were in the lande of Egipte, ⁊ layed it in the cities. Loke what foode grewe in the felde rounde aboute euery cite, they put it therin. So Ioseph layed vp the corne in stoare, and that moch aboute measure, as the sonde of the see: in so moch y he left of nombrynge of it, for it coude not be nombred.

^b And vnto Ioseph there were borne two sonnes (before y derth came) whom Asnath the daughter of Potiphar prest of On bare vnto him. And the first called he Manasses: for God (sayde he) hath caused me to forget all my labour, and all my fathers house. The seconde called he Ephraim: for God (sayde he) hath caused me to growe in y lande of my trouble.

Now whan y seuen plenteous yeares were ended in Egipte, then beganne the seuen deare yeares to come, wherof Ioseph had sayde. And there was derth in all landes, but in all the lāde of Egipte there was foode. Now whan the lande of Egipte beganne to suffre honger also, the people cryed vnto Pharaο for bred. But Pharaο sayde vnto all y Egipcians: Go vnto Ioseph, what he sayeth vnto you, y doo. So whan there was derth in all y lāde, Ioseph opened all y was by him, ⁊ solde vnto the Egipcians. Thus y derth preuayled in the lande, ⁊ all countrees came to Egipte to bye at Ioseph: for the derth was mightie in all landes.

The xliij. Chaptr.

WHAN Iacob sawe that there was moch corne in Egipte, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Why gape ye? Beholde, I heare that there is moch corne in Egipte, go downe & bye vs corne, ⁊ we maie lyue, & not dye. So Iosephs ten brethrē wente downe to bye corne in Egipte. As for Ben Iamyn Iosephs brother, Iacob wolde not let him go with his brethrē, for he sayde: Some mysfortune might happen vnto him. So ⁊ childrē of Israel came to bye corne, amonge other ⁊ came with them: for there was derth also in ⁊ lande of Canaan. But Ioseph was gouernoure in the lande, and solde corne vnto all the people in the lande.

Now whā his brethrē came to him, they fell downe to the grounde before him vpon their faces. And he sawe them, & knewe thē, and helde him self straunge towarde them, and talked roughly with them, and saide vnto them: Whence come ye? They sayde: Out of the lande of Canaan to bye vytaile. Neuertheles though he knewe them, yet knewe they not him. And Ioseph thought vpon ⁊ dreames that he had dreamed of them,* and sayde vnto them: Ye are spies, and are come to se where the lande is open.

33 They answered him: No my lorde, thy seruauntes are come to bye vytaile: we are all one mans sonnes, we are vnfayned, and thy seruauntes were neuer spies. He sayde vnto thē: No, but ye are come to se where the lande is open. They answered him: We thy seruauntes are twolue brethren, the sonnes of one man in the lāde of Canaan, and the yongest is with oure father: as for one, he is awaye.

Ioseph sayde vnto them: This is it that I sayde vnto you: spies are ye. Here by wyll I proue you: By the life of Pharaο ye shall not get hence, excepte youre yongest brother come hither. Sende awaye one of you to fetch youre brother, but ye shalbe in preson. Thus wyll I trye out youre wordes, whether ye go aboute with trueth or not: for els, by the life of Pharaο ye are spies. And he put thē together in wardē thre dayes longe.

¶ Vpon the thirde daye he sayde vnto thē: Yf ye wil lyue, thē do thus, for I feare God: Yf ye be vnfayned, let one of youre brethren lye bounde in youre preson: but go ye youre waye, and cary home the necessary foode, & brynge me youre yongest brother, so wyll I beleue youre wordes, that ye shall not dye. And so they dyd.

* Gen. 37. a.

And they sayde one to another: This haue we deserved against oure brother, in that we sawe the anguysh of his soule, whan he besought vs, and we wolde not heare him: therefore cometh now this trouble vpon vs. Ruben answered them, and saide: Tolde not I you ⁊ same, whan I sayde: * O synne not agaynst ⁊ lad, but ye wolde not heare. Now is his bloude requyred. But they knew not that Ioseph vnderstode it, for he spake vnto thē by an interpreter. And he turned him from them, and wepte. Now whan he had turned him to them agayne, and talked with them, he toke Symon from amonge them, & bounde him before their eyes, and commaunded to fyll their sakes with corne, and to put euery mans money in his sack, and to geue euery one his expenses by the waye. And so was it done vnto them.

And they laded their corne vpon their Asses, and departed thence. But whan one opened his sacke to geue his Asse prouender in the Inne, he spied his money in his sack mouth, and sayde vnto his brethren: My money is restored me agayne: lo, it is in my sack. Then their hertes fayled them, and they were afraied amonge them selues, and sayde: Wherefore hath God done this vnto vs?

Now whan they came home to Iacob their father in the lāde of Canaan, they tolde him all that had happened vnto them, & sayde: The man that is lorde of the londe, spake roughly to vs, and toke vs for spies of the countre. And whan we answered: we are vnfayned, & were neuer spies, but are twolue brethren the sonnes of oure father: one is awaye, and the yongest is yet this daye with oure father in the lande of Canaan, He sayde: Hereby wyll I marke, that ye are vnfayned: Leaue one of youre brethren with me, & take foode necessary for youre houses, & go youre waye, and brynge youre yongest brother vnto me: so shal I knowe that ye are no spies, but vnfayned: thē shal I deluyr you youre brother also, and ye maye occupie in the lande.

And whan they opened their sackes, euery man founde his boundell of money in his sacke. And whā they and their father sawe, that it was the bundels of their money, they were afraied.

Then sayde Iacob their father: Ye haue robbed me of my children. Ioseph is awaye,

* Ge. 37. d.

Simeon is awaye, and ye will take Ben Iamin awaye: It goeth all ouer me. Ruben answered his father & sayde: Yf I brynge him not to the agayne, then slaye my two sonnes: delyuer him but in to my hande, I wyl brynge him agayne vnto the. He sayde: my sonne shal not go downe with you: for his brother is deed, and he is left alone. Yf eny mysfortune shulde happen vnto him by the waye y^e ye go, ye shulde bringe my graye hayre with sorowe downe vnto the graue.

The xliij. Chapter.

BUT the derth oppressed y^e lande. And whan all the vytales that they had brought out of Egipte were spent, Iacob their father sayde vnto them: Go agayne, and bye vs a litle foode.

The Iuda answered him, and sayde: The man sware vnto vs, and sayde: ye shal not se my face, excepte youre brother be with you. Yf so be now that thou wilt sende oure brother with vs, we wil go downe, and bye the foode. But yf thou wilt not sende him, we wyl not go downe. For the man sayde vnto vs: Ye shal not se my face, excepte youre brother be with you.

Israel sayde: Wherefore haue ye done this euell vnto me, to tell y^e man, that ye had yet a brother? They answered: The man enquired so strately of vs and of oure kynrede, & sayde: Is youre father yet a lyue? Haue ye yet a brother? Then tolde we him, as he axed vs. How coulde we knowe, that he wolde saye: brynge youre brother downe with you? Then sayde Iuda vnto Israel his father: Let the lad go with me, that we maye get vs vp and take oure iourney, and lyue, and not dye, both we and thou, and oure childrē. * I wyl be suertye for him, of my handes shalt thou requyre him. Yf I brynge him not vnto the agayne, & set him before thine eyes, I wil beare y^e blame my life longe. For yf we had not made this tarienge, we had now bene come agayne twyse.

Then sayde Israel their father vnto the: Yf it must nedes be so, then do this: take of the best frutes of the lande in youre sakes, and brynge the man a present: a curtesy balme, and hony, and spyes, and myrre, and dates, and almondes. Take other money with you also, and the money that was brought agayne in your sacke mouthes, cary it agayne with you: peraduenture it was an ouersight. And take youre brother, get you vp, & go agayne vnto the man. The Allmightie God geue you mercy in the sight of y^e man, that he maye let you haue youre other brother, and Ben Iamin. As for me, I must be as one, that is robbed of his children.

Then they toke the present, and other money with them, and Ben Iamin, gat the vp, and wente in to Egipte, and stode before Ioseph. Then Ioseph behelde them with Ben Iamin, and sayde vnto the ruler of his house: Bring these men in, and sley, & make ready, for they shal dyne with me at noone. And the man dyd as Ioseph had him, & brought the men in to Iosephs house.

Whan they were brought in to Iosephs house, they were afrayed, and sayde: We are brought hither because of the money, that came agayne in oure sackes at the first, to pyke a quarell with vs, and to laye somethinge to oure charge, and to take vs for bonde seruantes with oure Asses.

Therefore came they to y^e man, that was ruler of Iosephs house, and talked with him at the doore, and sayde: Syr, + we came downe at the first to bye foode, and whan we came in the Inne, and opened oure sackes, beholde, euery mans money was in his sack mouth with full weight: therefore haue we brought it with vs agayne, & haue brought other money with vs also, to bye foode: but we can not tell, who put oure money in oure sackes.

He sayde: Be content, feare you not, youre God euen y^e God of youre fathers hath geuē you y^e treasure in youre sackes, I had youre money. And he brought forth Simeon vnto them, and led them in to Iosephs house, and gaue them water to wash their fete, & gaue their Asses prouender.

And they made readye y^e present, ageynst Ioseph came at noone: for they herde, y^e they shulde dyne there. Now whan Ioseph wente in to the house, they brought him home y^e present that they had, and fell downe to the grounde before him. But he welcomed them curteously, and sayde: Is youre father (that olde man which ye tolde me of,) in good health? Is he yet aloue? They answered: Thy seruauent oure father is in good health, and is yet alyue. And they bowed them selues, and fell downe before him.

And he lift vp his eyes, and sawe his brother Ben Iamin his mothers sonne, and saide:

* Is this youre yongest brother, that ye tolde me of? And he sayde morouer: God be mercifull vnto the my sonne. And Ioseph made haist (for the grounde of his hert was kyndled towarde his brother) and sought how he might wepe, & wente in to his chamber, and wepte there.

¶ And whan he had washed his face, he wente out, and refrayned him self, and sayde: set bred (on the table.) And they brought vnto him by him self, and vnto them by the selues, and to the Egipcians also that ate with them, by them selues. (For the Egipcians darre not eate bred with the Ebrues, that is an abhominacion vnto them.) And they were set ouer agaynst him, the first borne accordinge to his first byrth, and the yongest after his youth. They marueled at it amonge them selues, and there were brought them sundrye meates from his table. But Ben Iamins parte was fyue tymes more then the other. And they dronke, and were mery with him.

The xliiij. Chapter.

¶ AND Ioseph commaunded the ruler of his house, and sayde: Fyll the mens sakes with foode, as moch as they maye carye, and put euery mans money in his sacke mouth, & put my syluer cuppe in the sack mouth of the yongest with the money for fyve tayles. He dyd as Ioseph had sayde. And on the morow whan it was daye, they let fyve men go with their Asse.

But whan they were out of the cite, and not come farre, Ioseph sayde to the ruler of his house: Vp, and folowe after the me, and whan thou ouertakest them, saie vnto them: Wherefore haue ye rewarded euell for good? Is not that it, that my lorde drynketh out of? and that he prophecieth withall? It is euell done of you, that ye haue done.

¶ I And whan he had ouertaken them, he sayde the same wordes vnto them. They answered him: Wherefore saiest my lorde soch wordes? God forbyd, that thy seruantes shulde do eny soch thinge? Beholde, the money that we foude in oure sakes mouthes, that brought we vnto the agayne, out of the lande of Canaan: how shulde we then haue stollen either syluer or golde out of thy lordes house? Loke by whom it shall be founde amonge thy seruantes, let him dye: yee and we also wyll be my lordes bondmen. He sayde: let it so be, as ye haue spoken. Loke by whom it shall be founde, let him be my seruauant, but ye shalbe harmlesse.

And they made haist, and toke downe euery man his sack to the grounde, and euery man opened his sack: And he searched & beganne at the greatest vnto the yongest, and the cuppe was founde in Ben Iamins sacke. Then rente they their clothes, and euery man lade the burthen vpon his Asse, & wente agayne vnto the cite. And Iuda wente with his brethren vnto Iosephs house (for he was there yet) and they fell before him on the grounde. Ioseph sayde vnto them: What maner of dede is this, that ye haue done? Knewe ye not, that soch a man as I am, can prophecy?

Iuda sayde: What shall we saye vnto my lorde? or how shal we speake? and what excuse shal we make? God hath founde out fyve wickednesse of thy seruantes. Beholde, we and he, by whom the cuppe is founde, are my lordes seruantes. But he sayde: God forbyd that I shulde do so. The man by whom the cuppe is founde, shall be my seruauant, but go ye vp in peace vnto youre father.

The stepte Iuda vnto him, and sayde: My lorde, let thy seruauant speake one worde in thine eares my lorde, be not displeased at thy seruauant also, for thou art euē as Pharao. My lorde axed his seruantes, and sayde: Haue ye yet a father or brother? Then answered we: We haue a father, which is olde, and a yonge lad begotten in his age, and his brother is deed, & he is left alone of his mother, and his father loueth him.

¶ I Then saydest thou: Brynge him downe vnto me, and I wil se him. But we answered my lorde: The lad can not come from his father, yf he shulde come from him, he were but a deed man. Then saydest thou vnto thy seruantes: ¶ Yf youre yongest brother come not hither with you, ye shall se my face no more. Then wente we vp vnto thy seruauant my father, and tolde him my lordes wordes. Then sayde ouer father: Go youre waye agayne, and bye vs a litle foode. But we sayde: We can not go downe, excepte oure youngest brother be with vs, then wyl we go downe: for we darre not loke the man in the face, yf oure yongest brother be not with vs. Then sayde thy seruauit my father vnto vs: Ye knowe that my wife bare me two sonnes, one wente out fro me, and I sayde: he is torne in peces. *Yf ye take this fro me also, and eny mysfortune happē him, then shal ye brynge my gray heer with sorowe downe vnto the graue.

32 Yf I now come home vnto my father, & the lad be not with me (seyng his soule hangeth by the soule of this) then shall it come to passe, that yf he se not the lad there, he shal dye. So shal we thy seruantes brynge the gray heer of thy seruauit oure father with sorowe downe to the graue. For I thy seruauit became suertye for the lad vnto my father, and sayde: yf I brynge him not agayne, I will beare the blame all my lyfe longe. Therefore let thy seruauit byde here in steade of þ̄ lad, to be my lordes bonde man, and let the lad go vp with his brethren. For how can I go vp vnto my father, yf the lad be not with me? Then shulde I se the mysery that shulde happen vnto my father.

The xlv. Chapter.

21 THEN coude not Ioseph refrayne him self before all them that stode aboute him: and he cōmaunded euery man to go out from him, and there stode no man by him, whan Ioseph vttered him self vnto his brethren. And he wepte loude, so that þ̄ Egipcians and Pharaos housholde herde it. *And he sayde vnto his brethren: I am Ioseph, is my father yet alue? And his brethren coude not answere him, they were so abashed before his face. But he sayde: Come nye vnto me. And they came nye. And he sayde: I am Ioseph youre brother, *whom ye solde in to Egipte. And now vexē not youre selues, & thinke not þ̄ there is eny wrath, because ye solde me hither. +For God sent me hither before you, for youre lyues sake. For these are now two yeaes, that þ̄ derth hath bene in the lande, and there are yet fyue yeaes behynde, wherin there shalbe no plowinge ner haruest.

23 But God sent me hither before you, þ̄ he might let you remayne vpon earth, and to saue youre lyues by a greate delyuerance. And now, it was not ye then that sent me hither, but God which hath made me a father vnto Pharao, & lorde ouer all his house, and a prynce in the whole lande of Egipte. Haist you therefore, and go vp vnto my father, and saye vnto him: Thy sonne Ioseph sendeth the this worde: God hath made me lorde in all Egipte, come downe vnto me, tarye not, thou shalt dwel in the lande of Gosen, and be with me: thou and thy children, and thy childers childrē, thy small and greates catell, and all that thou hast. There wyl I make prouysion for the (for there are yet fyue yeaes of derth) that thou perishe not with thine house, and all that is thyne. Beholde, youre eyes and the eyes of my brother Ben Iamin se, that I myne owne self speake vnto you by mouth. Shewe my father all my worshippe in Egipte, and all that ye haue sene: haist you, and come downe hither with my father.

And he fell aboute his brother Ben Iamyns neck, and wepte, and Ben Iamin wepte vpon his neck also. And he kyssed all his brethren, and wepte vpon them. And afterwarde talked his brethren with him. And this tydinges came in to Pharaos house: Iosephs brethren are come, which pleased Pharao well, and all his seruantes.

And Pharao spake vnto Ioseph: Saye vnto thy brethren: Do thus, lade youre beastes, go youre waye, and whan ye come in to the lande of Canaan, take youre father and youre housholde, and come vnto me, I wyl geue you of the goodes in the lāde of Egipte, so that ye shall eate the fatt in the lande. And he commaunded them, Do thus, Take you charettes out of þ̄ lande of Egipte for youre children and wyues, and brynge youre father, and come, and regarde not youre housholde stuff: for the goodes of all the lāde of Egipte shalbe yours.

24 The children of Israel dyd so, and Ioseph gaue thē charettes acordinge to Pharaos commaundement, and expenses by the waye, and gaue them all, vnto euery one a change of rayment: but vnto Ben Iamin he gaue three hundreth syluer pens, and fyue change of rayment. As for his father, he sent him ten Asses laden with goodes out of Egipte, and ten Asses with corne and bred, and vytayles for his father by þ̄ waye. So he sent awaye his brethren, and sayde vnto them: Strue not by the waye.

¶ Thus they departed out of Egipte, and came to the lande of Canaan vnto Iacob their father, and tolde him, and sayde: Thy sonne Ioseph is yet aloue, and is a lord in all the lande of Egipte. But his hert wauered, for he beleued them not. Thē tolde they him all the wordes of Ioseph, which he had sayde vnto them. And whan he sawe f̄ charettes that Ioseph had sent to fetch him, his sprete reuyued, & he sayde: I haue ynough, that my sonne Ioseph is yet a liue I wil go, and se him, before I dye.

The rlii. Chapter.

¶ ISRAEL toke his iourney with all that he had. And whan he came to Berseba, he offered offerynges vnto f̄ God of his father Isaac. And God spake vnto him in a vision by night: Iacob Iacob. He sayde: here am I. And he saide: I am f̄ mightie God of thy father, be not afrayed to go in to Egipte, for there wyl I make a greate people of the. I wyl go downe with the, & wil brynge the vp also. And Ioseph shal laye his hande vpon thine eyes.

Then Iacob gat him vp from Berseba, and f̄ children of Israel caried Iacob their father with their children and wyues vpon the charettes that Pharaο had sent to cary him. And they toke their catell & substaunce which they had gotten in the lande of Canaan, and so came in to Egipte: * Iacob & all his sede with him, his children & his childers children with him, his daughters, and the daughters of his children, & all his sede.

¶ These are f̄ names of the children of Israel, which came in to Egipte, Iacob & his sonnes. † The first borne sonne of Iacob: Ruben. The children of Ruben: Hanoch, Pallu, Hezron and Charmi. ‡ The children of Simeon: Iemuel, Iamin, Ohad, Iachim, Zohar and Saul the sonne of the Cananitish woman. The childrē of Leui: Gerson, Cahath & Merari. The childrē of Iuda: Er, Onan, Sela, Phares & Serah. But Er and Onan dyed in the lande of Canaan. The childrē of Phares: Hesron and Hamul. The children of Isachar: † Thola, Phua, Job & Semron. The children of Zabulon: Sered, Elon and Iahleel. These are the childrē of Lea, which she bare vnto Iacob in Mesopotamia with his daughter Dina. These all together with sonnes & daughters make thre & thirtie soules.

The childrē of Gad: Zipheon, Haggi, Suni, Ezbon, Eri, Arodi and Areli. The children of Asser: Iemna, Iesua, Iesui, Bria & Sera their sister. The children of Bria: Heber and Malchiel. These are the children of Silpa, ‡ whom Laban gaue vnto Lea his daughter, and she bare vnto Iacob these sixtene soules.

The childrē of Rachel Iacobs wife: Ioseph and Ben Iamin. And vnto Ioseph in f̄ lande of Egipte f̄ were borne Manasses and Ephraim, whom Asnath the daughter of Potiphar prest of On bare vnto him. The children of Ben Iamin: Bela, Becher, Asber, Gera, Naamā, Ehi, Ros, Mupim, Hupim and Ard. These are the children of Rachel, which were borne vnto Iacob, fourtene soules altogether.

The children of Dan: Husim. The childrē of Nephtali: Iahzeel, Guni, Iezer, Sillem. These are the children of Bilha, whom Laban gaue vnto his daughter Rachel, & she bare Iacob these seven soules. All the soules f̄ came with Iacob in to Egipte, † which proceeded out of his loynes (besyde the wyues of his childrē) are altogether sixe & sixtie soules. And Iosephs childrē which were borne vnto him in Egipte, were two soules: so that all the soules of the house of Iacob which came in to Egipte, were seuentye.

And he sent Iuda before him vnto Ioseph, to shew him the waye to Gosen, & they came in to the lande of Gosen. Then Ioseph bended his charett fast, and wente vp to mete Israel his father vnto Gosen. And whan he sawe him, he fell aboute his neck, & wepte sore vpon his neck. Then sayde Israel vnto Ioseph: Now am I content to dye, for so moch as I haue sene thy face, that thou art yet aloue.

Ioseph sayde vnto his brethren, & to his fathers house: I will go vp, & tell Pharaο, & saye vnto him: My brethrē and my fathers house are come vnto me out of the lande of Canaan, and are keepers of catell (for they are men that deale with catell:) their small & greate catell, and all that they haue, haue they brought with them. Now yf Pharaο call you, and saye: what is youre occupaciō? then ye shal saye: Thy seruantes are men y haue dealt with catell from oure youth vp hytherto, both we & oure fathers, that ye maye dwell in the lande of Gosen: for the Egipcians abhorre all keepers of catell.

The xlvij. Chapter.

THEN came Ioseph, and tolde Pharaō & sayde: My father and my brethren, their small & greate catell, & all y they haue, are come out of y lande of Canaan: & beholde, they are in the lande of Gosen. And he toke fyue of his brethren, & presented them vnto Pharaō. Then sayde Pharaō vnto his brethren: What is youre occupaciō? They answered: Thy seruantes are keepers of catell, we and oure fathers also. And they sayde morouer vnto Pharaō: We are come to dwell with you in the lande, for thy seruantes haue no pasture for their catell, so sore doth the derth oppresse the lande of Canaan. Now therefore let thy seruantes dwell in the lande of Gosen.

Pharaō sayde vnto Ioseph: Thy father and thy brethren are come vnto the: the lande of Egipte is open before the, let them dwell in the best place of the lande, & se y they dwell euen in the lande of Gosen. And yf thou knowest that there be men of actiuyte amōge thē, make thē rulers of my catell.

Ioseph brought in Iacob his father also, & set him before Pharaō. And Iacob thanked Pharaō. But Pharaō axed Iacob: How olde art thou? Iacob sayde: The tyme of my *pylgremage is an hūdreth and thirtie yeares: litle and euell is the tyme of my pilgremage, and attayneth not vnto the tyme of my fathers in their pylgremages. And Iacob thanked Pharaō, and wēte out from him.

So Ioseph prepared dwellinges for his father and his brethren, & gaue them a possession in the lande of Egipte, euen in the best place of the lande, namely, in the lande of Raemeses, as Pharaō cōmaunded. And he made prouysion for his father and his brethren, and all his fathers house with bred, euen as yonge children.

There was no bred in all the londe, for the derth was very sore: so y the lande of Egipte & the lande of Canaan were famished by y reason of the derth. And Ioseph brought together all the money that was founde in Egipte and Canaan, for y corne that they bought. And he layed vp all the money in Pharaos house.

Now whan money fayled in the lande of Egipte and Canaan, all the Egipcians came vnto Ioseph, & saide: Geue vs bred. Why suffrest thou vs to dye before y, because we are without money? Ioseph saide: Brynge hither youre catell, so wil I geue you for youre catell, seynge ye are without money. Then brought they their catell vnto Ioseph. And he gaue thē bred for their horses, shepe, oxen and Asses. So he fed them with bred y yeare, for all their catell.

Whan y yeare was ended, they came vnto him the next yeare, & sayde vnto him: We wil not hyde it from oure lorde, y not onely the money, but all the catell also is spent vnto oure lorde: & there is nothinge left more for oure lorde, but onely oure body & oure lande. Wherefore suffrest thou both vs to dye, and oure londe? Take vs and oure lāde for bred, that we and oure lande maye be bonde vnto Pharaō: geue vs sede, that we maye lyue and not dye, & y the lande become not a wilderness.

So Ioseph toke all the lande of Egipte in for Pharaō: for the Egipcians solde euery man his lande, because y derth was so mightie vpon them: and so the lōde became Pharaos, with the people that wente out and in at his cities, from one syde of Egipte vnto the other, excepte the prestes londe, that toke he not in: For it was ordered of Pharaō for the prestes, that they shulde eate that which was appoynted them, which he gaue them, therefore they neded not to sell their londes.

Then sayde Ioseph vnto the people: Beholde, I haue taken possession of you and youre lande this daye for Pharaō, Beholde, there haue ye sede, sowe the londe, and of the corne ye shall geue the fifth parte vnto Pharaō: foure partes shalbe yours, to sowe the londe for youre sustenance, and for youre houses and children.

They sayde: Let vs but lyue, & fynde grace before the oure lorde, we wyl gladly be Pharaos seruantes: So Ioseph made thē a lawe vnto this daye ouer the Egipcians londe, to geue Pharaō the fifth parte, excepte the prestes londe, which was not bonde vnto Pharaō.

So Israel dwelt in Egipte in the londe of Gosen, and had it in possession, and grew and multiplied exceedingly. And Iacob lyued seuentene yere in the lande of Egipte, so that his whole age was an hūdreth and seven and fourty yeres.

Now when the tyme came that Israel shulde dye, he called Ioseph his sonne, and sayde vnto him: Yf I haue founde grace in thy sight, * then laye thine honde vnder my thye, y thou shalt shewe mercy and faithfulness vpon me, and not burye me in Egipte, but I will lye by my fathers, and thou shalt carie me out of Egipte, and burye me in their buryall. He sayde: I wil do as thou hast sayde. But he sayde: ' Then swere vnto me. And he sware vnto him. The Israel bowed himself toward the bed heade.

The xliiij. Chapter.

AFTER this it was tolde Ioseph: Beholde, thy father is sicke. And he toke with him his two sonnes Manasses and Ephraim. Then was it tolde Iacob: beholde, thy sonne Ioseph cometh vnto y. And Israel toke a corage vnto him, and sat vp vpō y bed, and sayde vnto Ioseph: The Almightye God appeared vnto me at Lus in y lāde of Canaan, and blessed me, and sayde vnto me: Beholde, I wil cause y to growe and increase and wyll make a multitude of people of y, and wil geue this lāde vnto thy sede after y for an euerlasting possession. Therefore shal now thy two sonnes Manasses and Ephraim (which were borne vnto the in Egipte, before I came hither vnto the) be myne, like as Ruben and Simeon. As for those that thou begetttest after the, they shal be thine owne. But these shalbe named with the names of their brethren in their inheritance.

And whā I came out of Mesopotamia, Rachel dyed by me in the lāde of Canaan, by the waye, when there was yet but a felde brede vnto Ephrath: and I buried her in the waye toward Ephrath, which now is called Bethlehem.

And Israel loked vpon Iosephs sonnes, and sayde: What are these? Ioseph answered: They are my sonnes, which God hath geuen me here. He sayde: Brynge the hither to me, y I maye blesse the. (For Israels eyes were heuy for age, and he coude not well se.)

And he brought the vnto him. So he kyssed them, and embraced the, and sayde vnto Ioseph: Beholde, I haue sene thy face, which I thought not: and lo, God hath caused me to se thy sede also. And Ioseph toke them from his lappe, and they fell downe to the grounde vpon their face.

Then Ioseph toke them both, Ephraim in his right hande toward Israels left hāde, and Manasses in his left hande toward Israels right hāde, and brought the vnto him. But Israel stretched out his right hande, and layed it vpō y heade of Ephraim y yōgest and his left hande vpō Manasses heade, and did so wyttling with his handes, for Manasses was y firstborne. And he blessed Ioseph, and sayde: The God before whō my fathers Abrahā and Isaac haue walked: y God y hath fed me my lyfe longe vnto this daye: the angell which hath delyuered me frō all euell, blesse these laddes, y they maye be called after my name, and after y name of my fathers Abrahā and Isaac, y they maye growe and multiplie vpon earth. But whā Ioseph sawe y his father layed y right hāde vpō Ephraims heade, it displeased him, and he lift vp his fathers hande, to remoue it frō Ephraims heade vnto y heade of Manasses, and sayde vnto him: Not so my father, this is y firstborne, laye thy right hāde vpō his heade. Neuertheles his father wolde not, and sayde: I knowe it well my sonne, I knowe it well, this shal be a people also, and shal be greate: but his yonger brother shal be greater the he, and his sede shal be full of people. So he blessed them the same daye and sayde: In y shal Israel blesse, so y it shal be sayde: God set the as Ephraim and Manasses. And so he set Ephraim aboue Manasses.

And Israel sayde vnto Ioseph: Beholde, I dye, and God shall be with you, and brynge you agayne in to y lande of youre fathers. I haue geuen the a peece of londe, without thy brethren, which I gat with my swerde and my bowe out of the hande of the Amorites.

The xliij. Chapter.

AND Iacob called his sonnes, and sayde: Gather you, y I maie tell you, what shal happen vnto you in y last times: Come together, and heare ye childre of Iacob: Herken vnto Israel youre father.

Cursed be their wrath, because it is so fearece: and their indignacion, because it is so rigorous. I wil deuyde them in Iacob, and scatter them in Israel.

¶Luda, thou art he. Thy brethren shall praye the: for thy hāde shal be in thine enemies neck: thy fathers children shall stoupe vnto the. ¶Iuda is a yonge lyon, thou art come vp hye my sonne, frō the spoyle. He kneeled downe and couched himself as a lyon & as a lionesse: who wil rayse him vp? The cepter shal not be remoued frō Iuda, ner a master frō his fete, till the Worthye come, and vnto him shal the people fall. He shall bynde his foale vnto the vyne, and his Asses colte to y noble branch. He shal wash his garment in wyne, and his mantell in the bloude of grapes. His eyes are roudier then wyne, and his teth whyter then mylck.

¶Zabulon shal dwell in the hauen of the see, and in the porte of shippes, and shal border vpon Sydon.

Isachar shal be a stronge Asse, & laye him downe betwixte y borders. And he saw rest, that it was good, and the lande, that it was pleasaunt. And bowed downe his shulder to beare, and became a seruauit vnto trybute.

¶Dan shal be iudge in his people, as well as a trybe in Israel. Dan shalbe a serpent in the waye, and an edder in the path, and byte the horse in the heles, that his ryder maye fall backward. LORDE I loke for thy saluacion.

As for Gad, a wapened hoost of men shal fall violently vpon him, but he shall hurte them in the hele.

Of Asser cōmeth his fat bred, and he shal geue delicates vnto kynge.

The fruteful sonne Ioseph, that florishinge sonne to loke vpon, the daughters go vpō the wall. And though the shoters angered him, stroue with him, and hated him, yet his bowe bode fast, and the armes of his hādes were made strōge by the handes of y Mightie in Iacob. Of him are come herdmen & stones in Israel. Of thy fathers God art thou helped, & of the Allmightie art thou blessed, with blessinges of heauen from aboue, with blessinges of y depe y lyeth vnder, with blessinges of brestes & wombes. The blessinges promised vnto thy father and my fore elders go mightely, after the desyre of the hyst in the worlde: these shal light on Iosephs heade, and on the toppe of his heade, that was separate from his brethren.

Ben Iamin, a raushinge wolfe. In the mornynge shal he deuoure the praye, but in the euenynge he shal deuyde the spoyle.

All these are the twolue trybes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake vnto them, whan he blessed them, euery one with a sundrye blessinge.

And he commaunded them, and sayde vnto them: I shal be gathered vnto my people, †burye me with my fathers in y caue which is in the felde of Ephron the Hethite, in the dubble caue that lyeth ouer against Mamre in y lande of Canaā, which Abrahā bought with the felde, of Ephron the Hethite for a possession to burye in. ¶There buryed they Abrahā & Sara his wife, there buried they Isaac also & Rebecca his wife: & there buried I Lea, in the good of the felde & of the caue therin, which was bought of the Hethites.

And whan Iacob had ended this commaundement vnto his children, he pluckte his fete together vpon the bed, and died, and was gathered vnto his people. Thē fell Ioseph vpon his fathers face, and wepte, and kyssed him.

The I. Chapter.

AND Ioseph cōmaūded his seruauites y Phisiciās, to embawne his father. And the Phisicians embawmed Israel, till fourty dayes were ended (for so longe endured the dayes of embawminge) & the Egipcians beywayled him seuentye dayes.

Now whan the mournynge dayes were ended, Ioseph spake vnto Pharaos housholde, & sayde: Yf I haue founde fauoure in youre sight, the speake vnto Pharao and saie: My father hath taken an ooth of me, & sayde: Beholde, I dye, "burye me in myne owne graue, which I dygged for myself in the lāde of Canaan. Therefore wyl I now go vp, and burye my father, and come agayne. Pharao saide: Go thy waye vp, and burye thy father, acordinge as thou hast sworne vnto him.

33 So Ioseph wete vp, to burye his father. And there wete with him all Pharaos seruantes y were the elders of his courte, and all y elders of the lande of Egipte, & all Iosephs housholde, and his brethren, and his fathers housholde. Onely their children, shepe & oxen left they in y lāde of Gosen, & toke their iourney vp with him, vpō charettes and horses, and the company was excedinge greate.

Now whan these came to the playne of Atad y lyeth beyonde Iordane, they made there a very greate and bytter lamentacion, & he mourned for his father seūc dayes. And whā the people in the lande (the Cananites) sawe the mournynge in the playne of Atad, they sayde: The Egipcians make there greate lamētacion. Therefore is the place called: The lamentacion of the Egipcians, which lyeth beyonde Iordane.

And his children dyd as he had cōmaunded them, and caried him to y lande of Canaan, and buried him in y dubble caue, that Abraham bought with the felde for a possession to bury in, of Ephron y Hethite ouer ageynst Mamre. So Ioseph toke his iourney agayne in to Egipte with his brethren, and with all those that wente vp with him to burye his father, whan they had buried him.

But Iosephs brethrē were afrayed, whā their father was deed, and sayde: Ioseph might happily haue indignacion at vs, and recompense vs all the euell that we dyd vnto him, "therefore let they saye vnto him: Thy father commaunded before his death, and sayde: Thus shal ye saye vnto Ioseph: O forgeue thy brethren the offence and their synne, that they dyd so euell vnto the. O forgeue now this trespass of vs the seruantes of thy fathers God. But Ioseph wepte, whan they spake so vnto him.

And his brethren wente, and fell downe before him, and sayde: Beholde, here are we thy seruantes. Ioseph sayde vnto thē: Feare ye not, for I am vnder God. Ye thought euell ouer me, but God hath turned it vnto good, to do as it is come to passe this daye, for the sayunge of moch people. Therefore be not ye now afrayed, I wyl care for you and youre children. And he comforted them, and spake louyngly vnto them.

Thus dwelt Ioseph in Egipte with his fathers house, and lyued an hūdreth and ten yeaere, and sawe Ephrayms children, vnto y thirde generacion: In like maner the children of Machir the sonne of Manasses, begat children also vpon Iosephs lappe.

And Ioseph sayde vnto his brethren: I dye, and God wyl vyset you, and brynge you out of this lande, to the lande that he sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. Therefore toke he an ooth of the childrē of Israel, and sayde: Whan God shal vyset you, the cary my bones frō hence. So Ioseph dyed, whā he was an hūdreth and ten yeaere olde, and they embawmed him, & layed him in a chest in Egipte.

The first Chapter.

A THESE are f names of the c childrē of Israel, that came with Iacob in to Egipte: euery one came in with his house, Ruben, Simeon, Leui, Iuda, Isachar, Zabulō, Ben Iamin, Dan, Nephtali, Gad and Aser. And of all the soules that came out of the loynes of Iacob, there were seuentie.

As for Ioseph, he was in Egipte all ready. Now whā Ioseph was deed, and all his brethren, and all they that lyued at that tyme, the children of Israel grewe,^b and increased, and multiplied, and became exceedinge mightie, so f the lande was full of them.

B Thē came there a new kynge ouer Egipte, which knewe nothinge of Ioseph, and sayde vnto his people: Beholde, the people of the children of Israel are many, t mightier then we: Vp, let vs deale wysely with them, f there be not so many of them. For yf there shulde ryse vp eny warre agaynst vs, they might ioyne them selues also vnto oure enemies, and ouercome vs, t so get them out of the lande.

And he set worke masters ouer them, to kepe them vnder with burthens. (For they buylded the cities Phiton and Raemeses, for treasuries vnto Pharaο.) But the more they vexed them, the more they multiplied and grew.

C Therefore had they indignaciō at the children of Israel, and the Egipcians compelled the children of Israel without mercy to do seruyce, and made their lyues bytter vnto them with greuous laboure in claye and brycke, and with allmaner of bondage in f felde, and with allmaner of laboure, which they layed vpon them without mercy.

And the kynge of Egipte sayde vnto the mydwuyes of the Hebrueswemen. (Of the which one was called Siphra, and the other Pua:) Whan ye helpe the women of the Hebrues, and se vpon the stole, that it is a sonne, then slaye him: but yf it be a daughter, let her lyue. Neuertheles the mydwuyes feared God, t dyd not as the kynge of Egipte commaunded them, but let the children lyue.

D Then the kynge of Egipte called the mydwuyes, and sayde vnto them: Wherefore do ye this, that ye let the children lyue? The mydwuyes answered Pharaο: The women of the Hebrues are not as the women of Egipte, for they are sturdy women: or euer the mydwuyes come at them, they are deluyered.

Therefore God dealt well with the mydwuyes. And the people multiplied, and became exceedinge mightie. And for so much as the mydwuyes feared God, * he made them houses. Then Pharaο commaunded all his people and sayde: All the sonnes that are borne, cast in to the water, but let all the daughters lyue.

The ij. Chapter.

A ND there wente forth a man of the house of Leui,^c and toke a daughter of Leui. + And the wife conceaued and bare a sonne. And whan she sawe f it was a proper childe, she hyd him thre monethes. And whan she coude hyde him no longer, she toke an Arke of redes, and dawbed it ouer with sylme and pitch, and layed the childe therin, and set it amonge the redes by the waters brynke. But his sister stode a farre of, to wete what wolde come of him.

And Pharaοs daughter came downe, to wash herself in the water: And hir maydens walked by the water syde: and whan she sawe the Arke amonge the redes, she sent one of hir maydens, and caused it to be fett. And whan she opened it, she sawe f childe: and beholde the babe wepte. Then had she pytie vpon it, and sayde: It is one of the Hebrues children.

Then sayde his syster vnto Pharaοs daughter: Shal I go, and call the a nurse of the Hebrues women, to nurse f the childe? Pharaοs daughter sayde vnto her: Go thy waye. The mayde wente, and called the childes mother. Then sayde Pharaοs daughter vnto her: Take this childe, and nurse it for me, I wyll geue f thy rewarde. The woman toke the childe, and nursed it.

And whan the childe was growne, she brought it vnto Pharaοs daughter, and it became hir sonne, and she called him Moses. For she sayde: I toke him out of the water.

Vpon a tyme whan Moses was greate, he wente forth vnto his brethren, and lokod vpon their burthens, and sawe, that an Egipcian smote one of his brethren f Hebrues. And he lokod rounde aboute him: and whan he sawe that there was no man, he slew the Egipcian, and buried him in the sonde.

The next daye he wente forth also, and sawe two men of the Hebrues stryunge together, and sayde to the vngodly: Wherefore smyttest thou thy neighbour? But he sayde: * Who made the a ruler or iudge ouer vs? Wilt thou slaye me also, as thou slewest the Egypcian? The was Moses afrayed, and sayde: How is this knowne? And Pharao herde of it, and sought for Moses, to slaye him. But Moses fled from Pharao, and kepte him in the lande of Madian, and sat him downe by a wells syde.

The prest Madian had seuen daughters, which came to drawe water, and fylled the troughes, to geue their fathers shepe to drinke. Then came the shepherdes, and droue the awaye. But Moses gat him vp, and helped them, and gaue their shepe to drynke. And when they came to Reguel their father, he said: How came ye so soone to daie? They sayde: A man of Egipte deluyered vs from y shepherdes, and drew vnto vs, and gaue the shepe to drynke. He sayde vnto his daughters: Where is he? Wherefore let ye the man go, that ye called him not to eate with vs?

And Moses was content to dwell with the man. And he gaue Moses his daughter Zipora, which bare him a sonne, and he called him Gerson, for he sayde: I am become a straunger in a straunge lande. And she bare him yet a sonne, whom he called Elieser, and sayde: The God of my father is my helper, and hath deluyered me from Pharaos hade.

But after this in processe of tyme, the kynge of Egipte dyed. And the childre of Israel sighed ouer their labour, and cried. And their crye ouer their labour, came before God. And God herde their cōplaynte, and remēbred his couenaunt † with Abraham Isaac and Iacob. And God loked vpon the childre of Israel, and God knew it.

The iij. Chapter.

MOSEs kepte the shepe of Iethro his father in lawe prest of Madian, and droue the shepe on the backsyde of the wyldernes, and came to the mountayne of God, Horeb. And the angell of y LORDE appeared vnto him in a flāme of fyre out of the bush. And he sawe that y bush brent with fyre, and yet was not consumed, and saide: I wil go hence, and se this greate sight, why y bush is not brent.

Whan the LORDE sawe, that he wente his waye to se, God called vnto him out of the bush, and sayde: Moses, Moses. He answered: Here am I. He sayde: Come not hither, put thy shues of thy fete,^b for the place where vpon thou stondest, is an wholly groude. And he sayde morouer:^c I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, y God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. And Moses couered his face, for he was afrayed to loke vpon God.

And the LORDE sayde: I haue sene the trouble of my people in Egipte,^d and haue herde their crye ouer those that oppresse them. I knowe their sorowe, and am come downe to deluyer them from the power of the Egipcians, and to carye them out of that lode, in to a good and wyde londe, euen in to a londe that floweth with mylke and hony: namely, vnto the place of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuytes and Iebusites. For so moch now as the cōplaynte of the children of Israel is come before me, and I haue sene their oppression wherwith the Egipcians oppress them: Go now thy waye therfore,^e I wil sende the vnto Pharao, that thou mayest brynge my people the children of Israel out of Egipte. Moses sayde vnto God: Who am I, y I shulde go vnto Pharao, and brynge the children of Israel out of Egipte?

He sayde: I wyll be with the: and this shall be the token, y I haue sent the. Whan thou hast brought my people out of Egipte, ye shal serue God vpon this mountayne. Moses sayde vnto God: Beholde, whan I come to the childre of Israel, and saye vnto them: The God of youre fathers hath sent me vnto you, and they saye vnto me: What is his name? what shal I saye vnto them? God saide vnto Moses: I wyl be what I wyll be. And he sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto y children of Israel: I I wyl be hath sent me vnto you. And God sayde morouer vnto Moses: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the children of Israel: The LORDE God of youre fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, y God of Iacob hath sent me vnto you, this is my name

The iiii. Chapter.

33 MOSSES answered, & sayde: Beholde, they shall not beleue me, ner heare my voyce, but shal saye: The LORDE hath not appeared vnto the. The LORDE sayde vnto him: What is y^e, that thou hast in thine hande? He saide a staff. He sayde: Cast it from the vpon the grounde. And he cast it fro him: then was it turned to a serpent. And Moses fled fro it. But y^e LORDE saide vnto him: Stretch forth thine hande, & take it by the tayle. Then stretched he forth his hande, and toke it, and it became a staff agayne in his hande. Therefore shal they beleue that y^e LORDE God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac & God of Iacob hath appeared vnto the.

And he thrust it in to his bosome, & toke it out: beholde, the was it leper like snowe. And he saide: Put it in to thy bosome agayne. And he put it agayne in to his bosome, & toke it out: beholde, the was it turned againe as his flesh. Yf they wil not beleue the, ner heare y^e voyce of the first token, yet shal they beleue the voyce of the seconde token. But yf they wil not beleue these two tokens ner heare thy voyce, then take of the water of the ryuer, and poure it vpon the drye londe: so shall the same water y^e thou hast takē out of y^e ryuer, be turned vnto bloude vpō y^e drye londe.

But Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: "Oh C my LORDE, I am a man that is not eloquēt, from yesterdaye & yesterdaye, & sence the tyme y^e thou hast spoken vnto thy seruaut: for I haue a slowe speach, & a slowe tunge. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Who hath made the mouth of man? Or who hath made the domme, or the deaf, or the seynge or y^e blynde? Haue not I the LORDE done it? Go now thy waye therfore, I wil be with thy mouth, & teach the what thou shalt saye.

But Moses sayde: My LORDE, sende whom thou wilt sende. Then was the LORDE very angrye at Moses, and saide: Do not I knowe then, y^e thy brother Aaron the Leuite is well spoken? And beholde, he shal go forth to mete y^e: "¶ whan he seyth the, he shal reioyce from his hert. Thou shalt speake vnto him, & put the wordes in his mouth: & I wil be with thy mouth & his, and teach you what ye shall doo: & he shall speake vnto the people for the. He shal be thy mouth, & thou shalt be his God. And take in thine hande this staff, wherwith thou shalt do tokens.

Moses wēte, and came agayne vnto Iethro his father in lawe, and sayde vnto him: Let me go (I praye the) that I maye turne agayne vnto my brethrē, which are in Egipte, and se whether they be yet aluye. Iethro sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace. The LORDE sayde also vnto him in Madian: Go thy waye, turne againe in to Egipte, for y^e mē are deed, that sought after thy life. So Moses toke his wife, and his sonnes, and caried them vpon an Asse, & wente againe in to the lande of Egipte, & toke the staff of God in his hande. And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: When thou comest agayne in to Egipte, se y^e thou do

And thou shalt saie vnto Pharaο: Thus sayeth ⁊ LORDE: Israel is my firstborne sonne, ⁊ I saie vnto the: Let my sonne go, ⁊ he maye serue me: Yf thou wilt not let him go, ⁊ then wil I slaye thy firstborne sonne.

¶ And as he was by the waye in the Inne, the LORDE met him, and wolde haue slayne him. Then toke Zipora *a stone, and circumcyded the foreskynne of hir sonne, and touched his fete, and sayde: A bloody brydegrome art thou vnto me. Thē let he him go. But she sayde: A bloody brydegrome, because of the circumcision.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Aaron: Go mete Moses in the wilderness. And he wēte, ⁊ met him on the mount of God, and kyssed him. And Moses tolde Aaron all the wordes of the LORDE, which had sent him: ⁊ all the tokens ⁊ he had charged him withall. And they wēte, ⁊ gathered all the elders of the childrē of Israel. And whan they herde ⁊ the LORDE vsyted the children of Israel, and loked vpon their trouble, they bowed them selues, and worshipped.

The b. Chapter.

¶ AFTERWARDE wente Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ spake vnto Pharaο: Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: let my people go, ⁊ they maye kepe holy daye vnto me in the wilderness. Pharaο answered: †What felowe is the LORDE, that I must heare his voyce, and let Israel go? I knowe not the LORDE, nether wil I let Israel go.

They sayde: The God of the Hebrues hath called vs. Let vs go now therfore three dayes iourney in the wilderness, ⁊ do sacrifice vnto the LORDE oure God, ⁊ there happen not vnto vs pestilence or swerde. Thē sayde ⁊ kyng of Egipte vnto thē: Why make ye ⁊ people (thou Moses ⁊ Aaron) to leaue thyr worke? Get you hēce to youre labour. Pharaο saide morouer: Beholde, ⁊ people are to many in ⁊ lande, and yet wil ye byd them ceasse from thyr labour.

cōmaunde the workmasters of the people, and their officers, and sayde: Ye shal not gather and geue the people eny more strawe, to burne bryck, as yesterdays and yesterdays. Let them go, and gather them strawe them selues. And the nombre of the brycke which they made yesterdays ⁊ yesterdays, shall ye laye vpon them neuertheles, and mynish nothinge therof: for they are ydle. Therfore crye they and saye: We wil go, and do sacrifice vnto oure God. Let the men be kepte downe with labour, ⁊ they maye haue to do, ⁊ not to turne them selues to false wordes.

Then wente the workmasters of the people ⁊ their officers out, ⁊ spake vnto the people: Thus sayeth Pharaο: There shall no strawe be geuen you, go youre waye youre selues, and get you strawe, where ye can fynde it. But of youre labour there shall nothinge be mynished. Then were the people scatred in all ⁊ lande of Egipte, to gather stubble, that they might haue strawe.

And the workmasters haisted them forward, ⁊ sayde: Fulfill youre daye worke, like as whan ye had strawe. And the officers of ⁊ children of Israel, whom Pharaοs workmasters had set ouer them, were beaten, ⁊ it was saide vnto them: Wherefore haue ye not fulfilled youre appoynted daye worke to daye and yesterdays, like as in tymes past?

¶ Than wente the officers of the children of Israel, ⁊ cōplayned vnto Pharaο: Wherefore wilt thou deale thus with thy seruantes? Thy seruantes haue no strawe geuen thē, ⁊ yet must we make the brycke that are appoynted vs. And beholde, thy seruantes are beaten, ⁊ thy people are euell intreated. Pharaο sayde: Ye are ydle, ydle are ye, therfore saye ye: we will go, and do sacrifice vnto the LORDE. Go now youre waye therfore, ⁊ worke: there shall no strawe be geuen you, but the nombre of brycke shal ye delyuer.

¶ Then sawe the officers of the children of Israel, ⁊ it was not amended, for it was sayde: ye shal mynish nothinge of the daye worke of the brycke. And whan Moses ⁊ Aaron wente from Pharaο, they came forth to mete them, ⁊ sayde vnto them: The LORDE loke vpon you, ⁊ iudge it, for ye haue made the sauoure of vs to stynte before Pharaο and his seruantes, and haue geuen them a swerde in their handes, to slaye vs.

But Moses came agayne vnto the LORDE, and sayde: LORDE, wherfore dealest thou so euell with this people? Wherfore hast thou sent me? For sence the tyme that I wente in vnto Pharaο, to speake vnto him in thy name, he hath dealt euell with this people, and thou hast not deluyered thy people. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Now shalt thou se, what I wil do vnto Pharaο, for thorow a mightie hande must he let them go, thorow a mightie hande must he dryue them from him out of his lande.

The bi. Chapter.

32 AND God spake vnto Moses, and sayde vnto him: I am y LORDE, and I appeared vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, an Allmightie God: but y my name, LORDE, haue I not shewed vnto them: My couenaunt also haue I made with them, b that I wil geue them the lande of Canaan, the lande of their pilgrimage, wherin they haue bene straungers. Morouer I haue herde the complaynte of the children of Israel, whom y Egipcians oppresse with labour, and haue remembered my couenaunt.

Therefore saye vnto the childrē of Israel: I am the LORDE, and wil brynge you out from youre burthens in Egipte, and wil rydd you from youre labour, and wil delyuer you thorow a stretched out arme and greate iudgmētes, and will receaue you for my people, and will be youre God: so that ye shal knowe, that I the LORDE am youre God, which brynge you out from the burthen of Egipte, and will brynge you in to the lande, ouer the which I haue lift vp my hande, to geue it vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, y same wil I geue vnto you for a possession. I the LORDE.

33 Moses tolde this vnto the childrē of Israel. But they herkened not vnto him, for very anguyshe of sprete, and for sore labour. The spake the LORDE vnto Moses, and sayde: Go thy waye, and speake vnto Pharaο the kyng of Egipte, y he let the childrē of Israel go out of his lande. But Moses spake before y LORDE, and saide: Beholde, y childrē of Israel herke not vnto me, how shulde Pharaο the heare me? And I am also of vncircumcised lippes.

This is y Aaron and Moses, vnto whom y LORDE sayde: Bringe y childrē of Israel out of the lande of Egipte with their armies. It is they (namely Moses and Aaron) y spake vnto Pharaο the kyng of Egipte, y they might brynge the children of Israel out of Egipte. The same daie spake y LORDE vnto Moses in y lande of Egipte, and sayde: I am y LORDE, speake thou vnto Pharaο y kyng of Egipte, all y I saye vnto y . And he answered before ꝑ LORDE: Beholde, I am of vncircumcised lippes,^a how shall Pharao the heare me?

The viij. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, I haue made the a God ouer Pharao, ⁊ Aarō thy brother shal be thy prophet. Thou shalt speake all ꝑ I cōmaūde ꝑ: but Aaron thy brother shal speake vnto Pharao, ꝑ he maye let the childrē of Israel go out of his lande. ^aNeuertheles I wil harden Pharaos hert, ꝑ I maye multiplie my tokens ⁊ wonders in the lande of Egipte. And Pharao shal not heare you, ꝑ I maye shewe my hande in Egipte, ⁊ brynge myne armyes, euen my people the childrē of Israel out of ꝑ lande of Egipte, by greate iudgmētes. And ꝑ Egipcians shal knowe, ꝑ I am the LORDE, when I shal stretch out my hande vpon Egipte, and brynge the children of Israel out from amonge them.

Moses and Aaron dyd as the LORDE cōmaūded them. And Moses was foure score yeare olde, ⁊ Aaron thre ⁊ foure score yeare olde, when they spake vnto Pharao. And ꝑ LORDE sayde vnto Moses ⁊ Aaron: Whan Pharao sayeth vnto you: Shew youre wonders, then shalt thou saye vnto Aaron: Take thy staff, and cast it before Pharao, ⁊ it shal turne to a serpent.

Then wēte Moses ⁊ Aaron in vnto Pharao, ⁊ dyd as the LORDE cōmaūded them. And Aaron cast his staff before Pharao ⁊ before his seruantes, ⁊ it turned to a serpēt. Then Pharao called for ꝑ wyse men ⁊ Sorcerers. And the Sorcerers of Egipte also dyd like wyse with their Sorceries, and eueri one cast his staff before him, ⁊ they turned vnto serpentes. But Aarons staff deuoured their staues. So Pharaos hert was hardened, and he herkened not vnto them, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

C And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: The hert of Pharao is hardened, he refuseth to let ꝑ people go. Get ꝑ vnto Pharao in the mornyng, beholde, he shal come vnto ꝑ water, mete thou him vpō the waters brynke, ⁊ take ꝑ staff which turned to a serpēt, in thine hande, ⁊ saye vnto him: The LORDE God of the Hebrues hath sent me vnto the, ⁊ sendeth ꝑ worde: ^aLet my people go, that they maye serue me in the wyldernes: but hither to thou woldest not heare.

Therefore thus sayeth the LORDE: Hereby shalt thou knowe, ꝑ I am ꝑ LORDE. Beholde, with the staff ꝑ I haue in my hande, wil I smyte the water which is in ꝑ ryuer, ⁊ it shal be turned in to bloude: so that the fishes in the ryuer shall dye, ⁊ the ryuer shall stynke: ⁊ it shall greue the Egipcians to drynke of ꝑ water of the ryuer.

And ꝑ LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saye vnto Aaron: Take thy staff, ⁊ stretch out thine hāde ouer ꝑ waters of Egipte, ouer their ryuers ⁊ brokes ⁊ poudes, ⁊ ouer all water poles, ꝑ they maye be turned to bloude, ⁊ that there maye be bloude in all ꝑ lande of Egipte, both in vessels of wodd and stone.

^aMoses ⁊ Aaron dyd as ꝑ LORDE cōmaūded them, ⁊ lift vp the staff, ⁊ smote the water ꝑ was in the ryuer, before Pharao ⁊ his seruantes, ⁊ all the water in the ryuer was turned in to bloude, ⁊ the fysh in the ryuer dyed, ⁊ the ryuer stanke, so ꝑ the Egipcians coude not drynke of the water of ꝑ ryuer, ⁊ there was bloude in all the lande of Egipte. And the Sorcerers also of Egipte, dyd likewyse with their Sorceries. But Pharaos hert was hardened, ⁊ he herkened not vnto the, like as the LORDE had sayde. And Pharao turned him self, ⁊ wente home, ⁊ set not his hert there on. All the Egipcians dygged rōūde aboute ꝑ ryuer, for water to drinke: for they coude not drynke of ꝑ water out of the ryuer. And this endured seuen dayes longe, that the LORDE smote the ryuer.

The viij. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go thy waye to Pharao, ⁊ speake vnto him: Thus saieth the LORDE: Let my people go, ꝑ they maye serue me: Yf thou wilt not let the go, beholde, I wil smyte all ꝑ borders of thy lōde with frogges, so ꝑ the ryuer shal scraule with frogges: these shal clymme vp, ⁊ come in to thine house, in to thy chamber, where thou slepest, vpon thy bed, and in to the houses of thy seruantes, amonge thy people, in to thine ouens, and vpon thy dowe: and the frogges shall come vp vpon the, and vpon thy people, and vpon all thy seruantes.

thy staff ouer the streames, ⁊ ryuers, ⁊ pondes, and let frogges come vpon the londe of Egipte. And Aaron stretched his hāde ouer the waters in Egipte, ⁊ there came vp frogges, so ⁊ the londe of Egipte was couered.

The Sorcerers also dyd likewise, with their Sorcerirs, ⁊ caused frogges to come vpō ⁊ lode of Egipte. Thē called Pharaō for Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ sayde: *Praye the LORDE for me, ⁊ he maye take awaye the frogges fro me ⁊ fro my people, ⁊ I will let ⁊ people go, ⁊ they maye do sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

Moses sayde: Hauē thou the honoure before me, ⁊ appoynte me, whā I shal praye for ⁊, for thy seruantes and for thy people: ⁊ the frogges maye be dryuen awaye frō the ⁊ frō thy house, ⁊ remayne onely in the ryuer. He sayde: Tomorrow. He sayde: Euen as thou hast sayde, ⁊ thou mayest knowe, ⁊ there is none like vnto the LORDE oure God: And the frogges shal be takē from the, ⁊ from thy house, from thy seruantes, ⁊ from thy people, ⁊ remayne onely in the ryuer.

So Moses ⁊ Aaron wēt from Pharaō, ⁊ Moses cried vnto the LORDE for the appoyntment ouer the frogges, which he had promysed vnto Pharaō. And ⁊ LORDE dyd as Moses sayde. And the frogges dyed in ⁊ houses, in ⁊ courtes, ⁊ vpon ⁊ felde: ⁊ they gathered thē together, here an heape, ⁊ there an heape, ⁊ the lande stanke of them. But whan Pharaō sawe ⁊ he had gotten breth, his hert was hardened, and he herkened not vnto thē, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saie vnto Aaron: Stretch out thy staff, ⁊ smyte the dust vpon the earth, ⁊ there maye be lyse in the whole lōde of Egipte. They dyd so. And Aaron stretched out his hande with his staff, ⁊ smote the dust vpon the earth, ⁊ there were lyse vpon men and vpon catell: All the dust of the lande was turned vnto lyse in all the lande of Egipte.

The Sorcerers also assayde likewise with their Sorcerirs ⁊ they might brynge forth lyse, but they coude not. And ⁊ lyse were vpon men ⁊ catell. Then sayde ⁊ Sorcerers vnto Pharaō: It is the fynger of God. But Pharaos hert was hardened, ⁊ he herkened not vnto thē, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

And ⁊ LORDE saide vnto Moses: Get ⁊ vp tomorrow by tymes, ⁊ stonde before Pharaō:

beholde, he wil go vnto the water, ⁊ speake thou vnto him: Thus saith ⁊ LORDE: let my people go, ⁊ they maye serue me: yf not, beholde, I wil cause cruell wormes (or flies) to come vpon the, thy seruantes, thy people, ⁊ thy house, so ⁊ all the Egipcians houses, ⁊ the felde, and what theron is shall be full of cruell wormes: ⁊ the same daye wil I separate the londe of † Gosen, wherin my people are, so ⁊ no cruell worme shalbe there, that thou mayest knowe, that I am ⁊ LORDE in the myddest of the earth. And I wil set a deluyeraunce betwene my people and thynne. Tomorrow shal this token come to passe.

And the LORDE dyd so. And there came perlous cruell wormes in to Pharaos house, in to his seruantes houses, ⁊ vpon all the londe of Egipte: and the londe was marred with noysome wormes.

Thē called Pharaō for Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ sayde: Go youre waye, ⁊ do sacrifice vnto youre God in ⁊ londe. Moses sayde: It is not mete, ⁊ we shulde so do, so shulde we offer ⁊ abhominacion of ⁊ Egipcians vnto the LORDE oure God. Beholde, yf we shulde offer the abhominacion of ⁊ Egipcians before their eyes, shulde they not stone vs? Thre dayes iourney will we go in the wyldernes, and do sacrifice vnto the LORDE oure God † like as he hath sayde vnto vs.

Pharaō sayde: I wil let you go, ⁊ ye maie do sacrifice vnto the LORDE youre God in the wyldernes (onely ⁊ ye go no farther) ⁊ praye for me. Moses sayde: Beholde, whan I am come forth from ⁊, I wil praye vnto ⁊ LORDE, ⁊ the cruell wormes maye be taken from Pharaō, ⁊ from his seruantes, ⁊ frō his people, euen tomorrow: onely disceaue me nomore, that thou woldest not let the people go to do sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

And Moses wēt out from Pharaō, and prayed vnto the LORDE. And the LORDE dyd as Moses sayde, ⁊ toke awaye the cruell wormes from Pharaō, from his seruantes, and from his people, so ⁊ there remainyd not one. But Pharaō hardened his hert euē then also, and let not ⁊ people go.

The ix. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go in † to Pharaō, and speake vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of ⁊ Hebrues:

* 3 Re. 13. b. Exod. 9. f. and 10. c. Acto. 8. c.

† Ge. 47. g. † Exod. 3. c.

let my people go, ꝑ they maye serue me. Yf thou wilt not, but holde them longer, beholde, the hande of the LORDE shal be vpon thy cattell in the felde, vpon horses, vpon Asses, vpon Camels, vpon oxen, vpon shepe with a very sore pestilence. And ꝑ LORDE shall make a diuysion betwene the cattell of the Israelites & the Egipcians, so ꝑ there shal nothinge dye of all that the children of Israel haue. And ꝑ LORDE appoynted a tyme, and sayde: Tomorow shal the LORDE do this vpon earth.

33 And the LORDE dyd the same on the morow. And there dyed of all maner of cattell of the Egipcians: but of ꝑ cattell of ꝑ childre of Israel there dyed not one. And Pharaos sent thither, & beholde, there was not one of the cattell of Israel deed. But Pharaos hert was hardened, so ꝑ he let not ꝑ people go. Then sayde ꝑ LORDE vnto Moses & Aaron: Take youre handes full of aszshes out of the fornace, & let Moses sprenkle it towarde heauen before Pharao, that it maye be dust in all the lande of Egipte, & that there maye be sores & blaynes vpon men & vpon cattell in all the lande of Egipte.

And they toke aszshes out of ꝑ fornace, & stode before Pharao, & Moses sprenkled it towarde heauē. Then were there sores and blaynes vpon men & vpon cattell, so that the Sorcerers might not stōde before Moses by reason of the sores. For there were sores vpō the Sorcerers as well as vpon all the Egipcians. But the LORDE hardened Pharaos hert, so that he herkened not vnto them, euē as the LORDE had sayde vnto Moses.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: Get the vp tomorow by tynes, & stonde before Pharao, & speake vnto him: Thus sayeth ꝑ LORDE God of the Hebrues: let my people go, ꝑ they maye serue me, els wyll I at this tyme sende all my plagis in to thine hert, & vpon thy seruauētes & vpon thy people: that thou mayest knowe, ꝑ there is none like me in all londes. For I will now stretch out my hande, & smyte the & thy people with pestilence, so ꝑ thou shalt be roted out from the euen. Yet haue I *stered ꝑ vp for this cause, euen to shew my power vpon ꝑ, and that my name might be declared in all londes.

13 Thou holdest my people yet, & wilt not let them go, beholde, tomorow aboute this tyme

* Some reade: I haue holden the vp.

wyll I cause a mightie greate hayle to rayne, soch as hath not bene in the londe of Egipte, sence the tyme that it was grouēd, hither to. And now sende thou, & saue thy cattell, & all ꝑ thou hast in the felde: for all men & cattell that shalbe founde in the felde, & not brought in to the houses, yf the hayle fall vpon them, they shall dye. Now who so feared the worde of the LORDE amonge Pharaos seruauētes, caused his seruauētes & cattell to flye in to the houses: but loke whose hertes regarded not the worde of ꝑ LORDE, left their seruauētes and cattell in the felde.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: 35 Stretch out thy hande towarde heauē, that it maye hayle vpon all the lande of Egipte, vpon men, vpon cattell, & vpon all herbes of the felde in the lande of Egipte. So Moses stretched out his staff towarde heauen, and the LORDE caused it to thonder & hayle, so ꝑ the fyre ranne alonge vpon the earth. Thus the LORDE hayled & rayned vpon the londe of Egipte, so that the hayle & fyre wente so horribly together, as neuer was in all the lāde of Egipte, sence the tyme that there were people therin. And the hayle smote the whole land of Egipte, all that was vpon ꝑ felde, both men & cattell, & smote all the herbes vpon the felde, & brake all the trees vpon ꝑ felde, saue onely in the lande of Gosen, where the childre of Israel were, there it hayled not. Then sent Pharao & called for Moses & Aaron, & sayde vnto them: Now haue I synned, ꝑ LORDE is righteous, but I & my people are vngodly. Yet praye ye vnto the LORDE, that the thonder & hayle of God maye cease, then wyll I let you go, that ye shal tary here no longer. Moses sayde vnto him: Whan I am come out of the cite, I wyll stretch out myne handes vnto the LORDE, so shal the thonder cease, & there shal be nomore hayle: that thou mayest knowe, that the earth is the LORDES. But I knowe, ꝑ both thou & thy seruauētes feare not yet the LORDE God. Thus the flax and the barlye were smytten: 36 for the barlye was shot vp, & ꝑ flax was boullid: but the wheate and ꝑ rye were not smytten, for they were late sownen.

So Moses wente from Pharao out of ꝑ cite, & stretched out his hādes vnto ꝑ LORDE. And ꝑ thōder & the hayle ceased, & the rayne dropped not vpō the earth. But whā Pharao sawe þ̃ the rayne ⁊ thonder ⁊ hayle ceased, he synned agayne, and herdened his hert, he ⁊ his seruantes. So Pharaos hert was hardened, þ̃ he let not the childrē of Israel go, euē as the LORDE had sayde by Moses.

* Psal. 77. e. and 104. d.

The x. Chapter.

AND the LORDE saide vnto Moses: Go in vnto Pharao, for I haue hardened his hert ⁊ the hertes of his seruantes, þ̃ I might do these my tokēs amonge thē, ⁊ that thou mightest shewe it in the eares of thy children ⁊ of thy childers children, what I haue done in Egipte, and how I haue shewed my tokens amonge thē, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

So Moses ⁊ Aaron wente in vnto Pharao, ⁊ spake vnto him: Thus sayeth þ̃ LORDE God of the Hebrues: How longe refuseth thou to submyt thy self vnto me, to let my people go, þ̃ they maye serue me? Yf thou wilt not let my people go, beholde, tomorrow wil I cause greshoppers to come vpon all places, þ̃ they maye couer the lande, so þ̃ the lande can not be sene, ⁊ they shal eate vp þ̃ is left you ⁊ was deliuered frō the hayle: ⁊ shal eate vp all your grene trees vpon the felde, ⁊ shal fyll thy house, all thy seruantes houses, ⁊ all the Egiptians houses: soch as thy fathers ⁊ thy fathers fathers haue not sene, sens the tyme þ̃ they were vpon earth vnto this daye. And he turned him, ⁊ wente out from Pharao. Then saide Pharaos seruantes vnto him: How longe shall we be snared after this maner? Let the men go, that they may serue þ̃ LORDE their God. Knowest thou not yet, þ̃ Egipte is destroyed? Moses ⁊ Aaron were brought agayne to Pharao, which saide vnto them: Go youre waye, ⁊ serue þ̃ LORDE youre God. But who are they þ̃ shall go? Moses sayde: We wil go with yonge ⁊ olde, with sonnes and daughters, with shepe and oxē: for we haue a feast of the LORDE. He sayde vnto thē: Let it be so, the LORDE be with you: Shulde I let you go ⁊ youre childrē also? loke that ye haue not some myscheffe in hāde. Not so, but go ye that are men, and serue the LORDE, for that was youre desyre. And they thrust them out from Pharao.

Thē saide þ̃ LORDE vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hande ouer þ̃ londe of Egipte, for the *greshoppers, þ̃ they maye come vpō þ̃ londe of Egipte, ⁊ eate vp all the herbes in the londe, with all þ̃ escaped the hayle. Moses stretched out his staff ouer þ̃ lande of Egipte, ⁊ the LORDE brought an east wynde in to the londe all þ̃ daye ⁊ all þ̃ night, ⁊ in the mornynge, the east wynde brought the greshoppers. And they came ouer the whole lande of Egipte, and lighted in all places of Egipte, so exceadinge many, that before tyme there were neuer soch, nether shalbe here after: for they couered the londe, and made it darcke. And they ate vp all the herbes in þ̃ londe, ⁊ all the frutes vpon the trees which remayned from þ̃ hayle, ⁊ left no grene thinge behinde in the trees ⁊ herbes vpon the felde in all the lande of Egipte.

Then Pharao called for Moses ⁊ Aaron in all þ̃ haist, ⁊ saide: I haue synned against the LORDE youre God, ⁊ agaynst you: forgeue me my synne this once also, ⁊ pray the LORDE youre God, þ̃ he maye take awaye fro me this death onely. And he wēte out from Pharao, ⁊ prayed vnto the LORDE. Thē the LORDE turned a maruelous strōge west wynde, and toke vp the greshoppers, ⁊ cast them in to the reed see, so that there was not one left in all the quarters of Egipte. But the LORDE hardened Pharaos hert, that he let not the childrē of Israel go. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hāde towarde heauen, that it be so darck in the londe of Egipte, þ̃ it maye be felt. And Moses stretched out his hāde towarde heauen, thē was there a thicke darkness "in all the londe of Egipte three dayes, so þ̃ in thre dayes no mā sawe another, nor rose vp from þ̃ place where he was. But with the childrē of Israel there was light in their dwellings. Then Pharao called for Moses, ⁊ sayde: Go youre waye ⁊ serue the LORDE: onely leaue youre shepe ⁊ youre oxen here: let youre childrē go with you also. Moses sayde: Thou must geue vs offringes and brent offeringes, that we maye do sacrifice vnto the LORDE oure God. Oure catell shal go with vs, and there shal not one hooffe be left behynde: for we must take therof for the seruyce of the LORDE oure God. Morouer we knowe not wherewithall we shal serue þ̃ LORDE, tyll we come thither. But the LORDE hardened Pharaos hert, þ̃ he wolde not let them go. And Pharao sayde vnto him: Get the hence fro me, & bewarre, that thou come nomore in my sight: For loke what daie so euer thou comest in my sight, thou shalt dye. Moses answered: Eue as thou hast sayde, I wil come no more in thy sight.

The xi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I wil yet brynge a plage vpon Pharao and Egipte: after γ shal he let you go from hence, & shal not onely let all go, but also dryue you hence. Therefore saye now vnto the people, γ every man borowe of his neighbour, & every woman of hir neighbouresse, Jewels of syluer & golde: for the LORDE shal geue the people fauoure in the sight of γ Egiptia γ s. And Moses was a very greate man in the lande of Egipte, in γ sight of Pharaos seruautes, & in the sight of the people.

B And Moses sayde: Thussayeth the LORDE: At mydnight wil I go out in the lande of Egipte, & all γ first borne in the lande of Egipte shall dye: from Pharaos first sonne (γ sitteth vpon his seate) vnto the first sonne of the mayde seruaunte which is behynde γ myll: & all the first borne amonge the catell: & there shalbe a greate crie in all the lande of Egipte, soch as neuer was, ner shalbe. But amonge all the childre of Israel there shall not a dogg quatch with his tonge, fro men vnto catell, γ ye maye knowe, how γ the LORDE hath put a differce betwixte Egipte & Israel. Th γ shal all these thy seruautes come downe vnto me, & fal at my fote, & saye: Get the out, thou & all the people that are vnder the. After that wyl I departe. And he wete fro Pharao with a wroth full displeasure. The LORDE saide vnto Moses: Pharao herkeneth not vnto you, γ many worders maye be done in γ lade of Egipte. And Moses & Aaron dyd all these worders before Pharao: but γ LORDE hardened his hert, γ he wolde not let γ childre of Israel go out of his londe.

The xij. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses & Aaron in the londe of Egipte: This moneth shal be with you γ first moneth & at it ye shall begynne the monethes of the yere. Speake ye vnto all the congregacion of Israel, & saye: Vpon γ tenth daye of this moneth let every one take a * labe (or a kydd) where a housholder is, to every house a labe. But yf the housholde be to few for a lambe, th γ let him & his neighbour γ is next vnto his house, take it accordinge to the nombre of γ soules, and counte to the lambe, what every man maye eate. But it shal be a lambe without blemish, a male, & of a yere olde. From amonge the lambes & goates shal ye take it.

And ye shal kepe it vnto γ fourtene daye of the moneth. And every man of the congregacion of Israel shal slaye it aboute the eueninge. And they shal take of his bloude, and stryke it on both the syde postes of the dore, and on the vpperdore post of the house, that they eate it in. And so shal they eate flesh γ same night, roasted at the fyre, & vneleued bred, and shal eate it with sowre sawse. Ye shal not eate it rawe, ner sodden with water, but onely roasted at the fyre, his heade with his fete and pertenaunce. And ye shal leaue nothyng of it ouer vntyll the mornynge: but yf eny thinge be left ouer vntyll the mornynge, ye shal burne it with fyre.

Of this manner shal ye eate it: Ye shal be gyrded aboute youre loynes, and haue youre shues vpon youre fete, and staues in youre handes, and ye shal eate it with haist: for it is γ LORDES Passeouer. For in the same night wil I go thorow the londe of Egipte, & smyte all the firstborne in the lande of Egipte, from men vnto catell, & vpon all the goddes of Egipte wyl I do execucion. Euen I the LORDE. And the bloude shal be youre token, vpon the houses wherin ye are: γ when I se the bloude, I maye passe ouer, and that the plage happen not vnto you, to destroye you, when I smyte the londe of Egipte.

And this daye shall ye haue for a remembrance, and ye shall kepe it holy for a feast vnto the LORDE, ye & all youre posterities, for a perpetuall custome. Seven dayes shall ye eate vneleued bred: namely, vpon the first daie shal ye leaue of with leued bred in youre houses. Who so euer eateth leued bred from the first daye vnto γ seuenth that soule shal be roted out from Israel. The first daye shall be called holy amonge you, and the seuenth also. No maner of worke shall ye do therin, saue what belongeth to the meate for all maner of soules, that onely maye ye do for you. And kepe you to leuended bred.

For euen vpon that same daye wil I brynge youre armies out of the londe of Egipte, therfore shall ye and all youre posterities kepe this daye for a perpetuall custome. Vpon the fourtene daye of the first moneth, ^aat euen, shall ye eate vneuended bred, vnto the one and twentye daye of the moneth, at euen: so that there be no leuended bred founde in youre houses seuen dayes. For who so euer eateth leuended bred, that soule shall be roted out from the congregacion of Israel, whether it be a straunger or borne in the londe. Therfore eate no leuended bred, but onely vneuended bred in all youre dwellynges.

¶ And Moses called all the Elders of Israel, and sayde vnto them: Chose out, and take to euery housholde a shepe, and kyll Passeouer vnto the LORDE; and take a bunch of ysopo, and dyppe it in the bloude in the basen, and stryke it vpon the vpperposte and vpon the two syde postes, and none of you go out at the dore of his house vntyll [†] mornynge, for the LORDE wyll go aboute and plage the Egipcians. And whan he seyth the bloude vpo the vpperposte, and vpon the two syde postes, he wyl passe ouer by the dore, and not suffice the destroyer to come in to youre houses to plage. Therfore kepe this custome for the and thy children for euer.

And whan ye be come in to [‡] londe that the LORDE shal geue you, (as he hath sayde) then kepe this seruyce.* And whan youre children saye vnto you: What seruyce is this, that ye haue? Ye shal saye: It is the sacrifice of the LORDES Passeouer, which passed ouer by the children of Israel in Egipte, whan he plaged the Egipcians, and saued oure houses. Then the people bowed them selues, and worshipped. And the children of Israel wente and dyd, as the LORDE had commaunded Moses and Aaron.

¶ ^bAnd at mydnight the LORDE smote all the firstborne in the lande of Egipte: from Pharaos first sonne (which sat vpon his seate) vntyll the first sonne of the presoner that was in the preson, and all the firstborne of the catell. Then Pharao arose [‡] same night, and all his seruauantes, and all the Egipcians, [¶]

there was a greate crye in Egipte: for there was no house wherin there was not one deed.

And he called for Moses and Aaron in [‡] night, and sayde: 'Get you vp, and departe out fro my people, ye and the children of Israel: go youre waye, and serue the LORDE, as ye haue sayde: and take youre shepe and youre oxen with you, [†]as ye haue sayde, and departe, and blesse me also. And the Egipcians were feare vpon the people, to dryue them haistely out of the londe, for they sayde: we are all but deed.

And the people toke the rawe dowe, before it was leuended (for their foode) bounde in their clothes vpon their shulders. And the children of Israel had done [‡]as Moses sayde, and borrowed Iewels of syluer and golde, and clothes of the Egipcians: the LORDE also had geuen the people fauoure in the sight of the Egipcians, that they lent them, and so they spoyled the Egipcians.

Thus [‡] children of Israel toke their iourney [¶] from Raemes^d to Suchoth, [¶]sixte hundreth thousande men of fote, besyde childre. There wente with them also moch comō people, and shepe, and oxen, and excedinge many catell.

And of the rawe dowe that they brought out of Egipte, they baked vneuended cakes: for it was not leuended, in so moch as they were thrust out of Egipte, and coude not tary: nether had they prepared them eny other meate.

The tyme [‡] the children of Israel dwelt in Egipte, is foure hondreth and thirtie yeares. Whan the same were ended, the whole hoost of the LORDE wente out of the londe of Egipte in one daye. Therfore shall this night be kepte vnto the LORDE, because he brought them out of the londe of Egipte: And the children of Israel shall kepe it vnto the LORDE, they and their posterities.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses and Aaron: [¶]This is the maner of the keypyng of Passeouer: There shal no straunger cate of it. But who so is a bought seruauit let him be circumcysed, [¶]then eate therof. A straunger and an hyred seruauit shal not eate of it. In one house shal it be eatē. Ye shal cary none of his flesh out of the house, and [¶]ye shal not breake a bone of him. The whole congregacion of Israel shal do it.

But yf there dwel a straunger with the, ⁊ wil holde Passeouer vnto the LORDE, let him circumcyse euery one that is male, and then let him first come, and do it, and be as one that is borne in the londe: for there shal no vncircumcysed eate therof. One maner of lawe be vnto him ⁊ is borne in the londe, ⁊ vnto the straüger ⁊ dwelleth amöge you. And all the childrē of Israel dyd as the LORDE commaunded Moses ⁊ Aaron. So vpō one daye the LORDE brought the childrē of Israel out of the lōde of Egipte with their armyes.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ saide: "Sanctifie vnto me euery firstborne, ⁊ breakeþ all maner of Matrices amonge the childrē of Israel, both of men ⁊ catell: for they are myne. Then saide Moses vnto ⁊ people: Thinke vpō this daye, in the which ye are gone out of Egipte from the house of bōdage, how ⁊ ⁊ LORDE brought you out frō thence with a mightie hāde. Therefore shall ye eate no sowre dowe. This daye are ye gone out, euē in ⁊ moneth of Abib.

"Now whā ⁊ LORDE hath brought ⁊ in to ⁊ lande of ⁊ Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Heuites ⁊ Iebusites, which * he sware vnto thy fathers to geue ⁊ (euen a londe that floweth with mylke ⁊ hony) then shalt thou kepe this seruyce in this moneth. Seuē dayes shalt thou eate vñleuened bred, ⁊ vpon the seuenth daye is the LORDES feast: therfore shalt thou eate vñleuened bred seuē dayes, that there be no sowre dowe, ner sowred bred sene in all thy quarters.

13 And thou shalt tell thy sonne at the same tyme, ⁊ saye: Because of that, which ⁊ LORDE dyd for me, whan I departed out of Egipte. Therefore shalt it be a signe vnto ⁊ in thine hande, and a token of remembraunce before thine eyes, that the lawe of ⁊ LORDE maye be in thy mouth, how that ⁊ LORDE brought the out of Egipte with a mightie hande: Therefore kepe this maner yearly in his tyme.

Whan the LORDE now hath brought ⁊ in to ⁊ lande of the Cananites (as he hath sworne vnto the and thy fathers) * and hath geuen it the, then shalt thou sunder out vnto the LORDE all that breaketh the Matrice, and firstborne amonge thy catell, such as is male.

The firstborne of the Asse shalt thou bye out with a shepe: but yf thou redeme it not, then breake his neck. All the firstborne of men amonge thy children shalt thou redeme.

And whan thy childre axeth the to daie or tomorow: What is this? Thou shalt saye vnto him: The LORDE brought vs out of Egipte from the house of bondage with a mightie hande: for whan Pharaο was loth to let vs go, the LORDE slew all the firstborne in the lande of Egipte, from the firstborne of men vnto ⁊ firstborne of the catell: therfore offer I vnto the LORDE all that breaketh ⁊ Matrice, beyng a male, and ⁊ firstborne of my children I redeme. And this shal be a signe vnto the in thine hande, and a token to thinke vpon before thine eyes, how that the LORDE brought vs out of Egipte with a mightie hande.

Now whan Pharaο had let ⁊ people go, 14 God led them not the waye thorow the lōde of the Philistynes, which was ⁊ nexte: for he thoughte: The people might repēt, whā they se warre, and so turne in agayne in to Egipte. Therefore led he the people aboute, euen the waye thorow the wyldernes by ⁊ reed see. And the childrē of Israel wente harnesssed out of the londe of Egipte. And Moses toke Iosephs bones with him, † for he toke an ooth of the children of Israel, and sayde: God wyll surely vyset you, therfore cary awaye my bones with you from hence.

So they toke their journey frō Suchoth, ⁊ pitched their tētes in Ethā in ⁊ edge of the wildernes. 15 And ⁊ LORDE wēte before the by daye in a piler of a cloude, to lede the ⁊ right waye: and by night in a piler of fyre, that he might shewe the light to walke both by daie and night. The piler of the cloude departed neuer from the people by daye, and the pyler of fyre departed not from the by night.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, 16 and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and byd them that they turne aboute, ⁊ pitch their tentes before the valley of Hyroth, betwixte Migdol ⁊ the see toward Baal Zephō, and there pitch ⁊ tentes right ouer by the see. For Pharaο shall saye of the children of Israel: They can not tell how to get out of the londe, the wyldernes hath shut them in. And I wyll harden his hert, [¶] he shal folowe after them, [¶] I wil get me honoure vpon Pharao, and vpon all his power. And [¶] Egipcias shal knowe, [¶] I am the LORDE. And they dyd so.

B And when it was tolde [¶] kinge of Egipte, [¶] [¶] people fled, his hert [¶] his seruantes were turned agaynst [¶] people, [¶] saide: Why haue we done this, that we haue let Israel go, [¶] they shulde not serue vs? And he bounde his charettes fast, and toke his people with him, and toke sixe hūdreth chosen charettes, and the other charettes besyde that were in Egipte, and the captaynes ouer all his: for the LORDE hardened [¶] hert of Pharao kynge of Egipte, that he folowed after the children of Israel. And the children of Israel wente out with an hye hande.

C And the Egipcians folowed after thē, [¶] [¶] ouertoke them (where they had pitched by [¶] see) with horses and charettes, and horsmē, and with his power, in the valley of Hyrath toward Baal Zephon. And whan Pharao came nye them, [¶] the children of Israel lift vp their eyes, and beholde, [¶] Egipcians wente behinde thē, and they were sore afayed, and cried vnto the LORDE.

And sayde vnto Moses: Were there no graues in Egipte, [¶] [¶] thou hast brought vs awaye to dye in the wyldernes? Wherefore hast thou done this vnto vs, that thou hast caried vs out of Egipte? Is not this it, that we sayde vnto the in Egipte? Leauē of, [¶] let vs serue the Egipcians: for it were better for vs to serue the Egipcians, then to dye in the wyldernes? Moses sayde vnto the people: [¶] Feare you not, stonde styll, and beholde, what a saluacion the LORDE shall shewe vpon you this daye: [¶] for these Egipcians whom ye se this daye, shall ye neuer se more for euer: the LORDE shal fight for you, onely quyetē youre selues.

D The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Wherefore criest thou vnto me? Speake vnto [¶] children of Israel, [¶] they go forward. But lift thou vp thy staff, [¶] stretch out thine hāde ouer [¶] see, [¶] [¶] parte it asunder, [¶] the children of Israel maye go in thorow [¶] myddest of it vpon the drye grounde. Beholde, I wyll harden [¶] hert of the Egipcians, [¶] they shall folowe after you. Thus wyl I get me honoure vpon Pharao, [¶] vpon all his power, vpō his charettes and horsmen: and the Egipcians shal knowe, that I am [¶] LORDE, whan I haue gotten me honoure vpon Pharao, vpon his charettes, and vpon his horsmen.

[¶] Then the angell of God [¶] wente before the armies of Israel, remoued, and gat him behynde them: and the cloudy piler remoued also from before them, and stode behinde thē and came betwixe the armies of the Egipcians and the armies of Israel. It was a darcke cloude, and gaue light that night, so that all the night longe these and they coude not come together.

E Whā Moses now stretched forth his hāde ouer [¶] see, [¶] the LORDE caused it to passe awaye thorow a mightie eastwynde all that night, and made the see drye, [¶] and [¶] water deuyded it self a sunder. And the children of Israel wente in thorow the middest of [¶] see vpon the drye grounde: and [¶] water was vnto them as a wall, vpon their right hande [¶] vpō their lefte. And [¶] Egipcias folowed, [¶] wente in after thē, all Pharaos horsmen, [¶] charettes, [¶] horsmē, euē in to [¶] myddest of [¶] see.

Now whan the mornynge watch came, the LORDE [¶] looked vpō the armies of the Egipcians out the piler of fire and [¶] cloude, [¶] troubled their armies, and smote the wheles from their charettes, [¶] ouerthrew them with a storme. Then sayde the Egipcians: [¶] Let vs flye from Israel, the LORDE fighteth for the agaynst the Egipcians.

F But [¶] LORDE saide vnto Moses: Stretch out thyne hande ouer the see, that [¶] water maye come agayne vpon the Egipcians, vpon their charettes, and horsmen. Then Moses stretched out his hande ouer the see, and the see came agayne before daye in his course and strength, and the Egipcians fled agaynst it. Thus the LORDE ouerthrew them in the myddest of the see, [¶] so that the water came agayne, and couered [¶] charettes and horsmen, and all Pharaos power which folowed after them in to the see, so that there remayned not one of them. But the children of Israel [¶] wente drye thorow [¶] myddest of the see, and the water was vnto them as a wall vpon their right hande and vpon their lefte.

Thus the LORDE deluyered Israel in y daye from the hande of the Egipcians. And they sawe the Egipcians deed vpon y see syde, and the greате hande y the LORDE had shewed vpon the Egipcians. And y people feared y LORDE, and beleued him, and his seruauнт Moses.

The xv. Chapter.

THEN sange Moses and the childrē of Israel this songe vnto the LORDE, and sayde:

I will synge vnto y LORDE, for he hath done gloriously, howe y charēt hath he ouer throwne in the see.

The LORDE is my strength, and my songe, and is become my saluacion.

This is my God, I wil magnifie him: He is my fathers God, I wil exalte him.

The LORDE is the right man of warre, LORDE is his name. The charettes of Pharaο y his power, hath he cast in to the see.

His chosen captaynes are drowned in the reed see, y deupe hath couered them: they fell to the grounde as a stone.

Thy right hande (O LORDE) is glorious in power: thy right hāde (O LORDE) hath smytten the enemies.

And with thy greате glory thou hast destroyed thine aduersaries: thou sentest out thy wrath, y it cōsumed them, euen as stobbe.

In the breth of thy wrath the waters fell together, the floudes wente vpon a heape: The depes plomped together in y myddest of the see.

The enemie thought: I will folowe vpon them, and ouertake them, and deuyde y spoyle, and coole my mynde vpon them.

I wil drawe out my swerde, and my hande shal destroye them.

Thou blewest with thy wynde, the see couered them, and they sancke downe as leed in the mightie waters.

LORDE, who is like vnto the amonge y goddes? Who is so glorious in holynes, fear full, laudable, and doinge wonders?

Whan thou stretchedest out thy right hande, the earth swallowed them vp.

Thou of thy very mercy hast led this people, whom thou hast deluyered, and with thy strength thou hast brought them vnto the dwellynge of thy Sanctuary.

Whan y nacions herde this, they raged, sorowe came vpon the Philistynes.

Then were y prynces of Edom afraied, tremblynge came vpō y mightie of Moab, all the indwellers of Canaan waxed faynte harted.

Let feare and drede fall vpon them thorow thy greате arme, that they maye be as styll as a stone, tyll thy people (O LORDE) be gone thorow, tyll thy people whom thou hast gotten, be gone thorow.

Brynge them in, and plante them vpon the mountayne of thy enheritaunce, vnto y place that thou hast made for thyne owne dwellynge: euen to thy tēple (O LORDE) which thy handes haue prepared.

The LORDE shal be kyng for euer y euer. For Pharaο wente in to the see with horses, and charettes, and horsmen, and the LORDE made the see fall agayne vpon them.

But the children of Israel wēte drye thorow the myddest of the see.

And Miriam the prophetisse, Aarons sister, toke a tymbrell in hir hande, and all the women folowed out after her with timbrels in a daunse. And Miriam sange before thē: O let vs synge vnto the LORDE, for he hath done gloriously, man and horse hath he ouer throwne in the see.

Moses caused the children of Israel to departe out from the reed see, vnto the wyldernes of Sur, y they wente thre dayes in y wildernes, y they founde no water. Then came they to Marath, but they coude not drinke y water for bytternes, for it was very bytter. Therefore was it called Marah, (y is bytternes.) Then y people murmured against Moses, y sayde: What shal we drynke? And Moses cried vnto y LORDE, which shewed him a tre: this he put in y water, thē was it swete.

There he made thē a statute, and a lawe, and tempted them, and sayde: Yf thou wylt herken vnto the voyce of y LORDE thy God, y do that which is right in his sighte, and geue eare vnto his commaundementes, y kepe all his statutes, then wyl I laye vpon y none of the sicknesses, that I layed vpon Egipte, for I am the LORDE thy surgione.

The xvi. Chapter.

AND they came vnto Elim, where there were twolue welles of water, and seuentie palme trees, and there they pitched by y water syde. From Elim they toke their journey, and the whole congregacion of the children of Israel came in to the wyldernes of Sin (which lyeth betwene Elim and Sinai) vpon the fyfthene daye of the seconde moneth, after that they were departed out of the londe of Egipte. And y whole multitude of the children of Israel *murmured agaynst Moses and Aaron in y wildernes, and saide vnto them: Wolde God we had dyed in the londe of Egipte by the hande of the LORDE, whan we sat by y flesh pottes, and had bred ynough to eate: for ye haue brought vs out in to this wyldernes, to cause this whole multitude dye of hunger.

The sayde y LORDE vnto Moses: beholde I wyl rayne you bred from heauen, and let the people go out, and gather daylie, what they nede, that I maye proue whether they walke in my lawe or not. But vpon the sixte daye they shal prepare the selues, that they maye brynge in twyse as moch as they gather daylie.

Moses and Aaron saide vnto all the children of Israel: At euen ye shall knowe, that the LORDE hath brought you out of the lode of Egipte, and in the mornynge shall ye se the glory of the LORDE: for he hath herde youre grudgings agaynst the LORDE. For what are we, that ye grudge agaynst vs?

*Moses sayde morouer: At euen shall the LORDE geue you flesh to eate, and in the mornynge bred ynough: because y LORDE hath herde youre grudgings, that ye haue grudged agaynst him. For what are we? Your murmuringe is not agaynst vs, but against the LORDE. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Speake vnto the whole multitude of y children of Israel: Come forth before the LORDE, for he hath herde youre murmurings.

C And whyle Aaron spake thus vnto the whole congregacion of the childre of Israel, they turned them toward the wyldernes: and beholde, the glory of the LORDE appeared in a cloude, and the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I haue herde the murmuringe of y children of Israel. Tell them: At euen shall ye haue flesh to eate, and in the mornynge shal ye be fylled with bred, & ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE youre God.

And at euen the quayles came vp, and couered the tentes: and in the mornynge the dewe laye rounde aboute the tentes. And whan the dew was falle, beholde, there laye a thinge in the wildernes, thynne and small, as the horefrost vpon the grounde.

And whan the children of Israel sawe it, they saide one to another:† This is Mā. For they wyst not what it was. But Moses sayde vnto them: It is the bred that y LORDE hath geuē you to eate. This is it that y LORDE hath commaunded: Euery one gather for himself as moch as he eateth, and take a Gomor for euery heade, acordinge to the nombre of the soules in his tente.

And the children of Israel dyd so, and gathered some more, some lesse. But whan it was measured out with y Gomor, †be that gathered moch, had not the more: and he y gathered litle, wanted nothinge, but euery one gathered for himself, as moch as he ate. And Moses sayde vnto them: Let no mā leaue ought therof vntyll the mornynge. But they harkened not vnto Moses. And some left of it vntill the morninge. Then waxed it full of wormes and stanke. And Moses was angrie at them.

And euery mornynge they gathered for them selues, as moch as euery one ate: but as soone as it was whote of the Sonne, it melted awaye. And vpon the sixte daye they gathered twyse as moch of bred, two Gomors for one. And all the rulers of the congregaciō came in, and tolde Moses. And he sayde vnto them: This is it, that the LORDE hath sayde: Tomorrow is the Sabbath of the holy rest of the LORDE: loke what ye wil bake, that bake: and what ye wyll seeth, that seeth and that remaineth ouer, let it remayne, y it maye be kepte vntyll the mornynge. And they let it remayne tyll the morow, as Moses commaunded. Then stanke it not, nether was there eny worme therin. Thē sayde Moses: Eate that to daye, for to daye is y Sabbath of the LORDE, to daye shal ye fynde none in the felde. Sixe dayes shall ye gather it, but the seuenth daye is the Sabbath, wherin there shal be none.

But vpon the seuenth daye there wente out some of the people to gather, and founde nothinge. Then sayde y LORDE vnto Moses: "How longe refuse ye to kepe my commandementes and lawes? Beholde, y LORDE hath geuen you the Sabbath, therefore vpon the sixte daye he geueth you bred for two dayes: therefore let euery man now byde at home, and noman go forth of his place vpon the seuenth daye.

f So the people rested vpō y seuenth daye. And the house of Israel called it Man, and it was like Coriander sede, and whyte,^a t had a taist like symnells with hony.

And Moses sayde: This is it that y LORDE hath commanded: Fill a Gomor therof to be kepte for youre posterities, y they maye se the bred, wherwith I fed you, whan I brought you out of y lande of Egipte. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Take a cruse, and put a Gomor full of Man therin, and laye it vp before the LORDE, to be kepte for youre posterities, as the LORDE commanded Moses. So Aaron layed it vp there for a testimony to be kepte.

^a And the children of Israel ate man fourtye years, tyll they came vnto a lande, where people dwelt: euen vntyll they came to y borders of the lande of Canaan ate they Man. A Gomor is the tenth parte of an Ephā.

The xliij. Chapter.

a AND the whole multitude of the children of Israel wēte on their iourneys out of the wyldernes of Sin (as the LORDE cōmaunded thē) t pitched in Raphidim. "Then had the people no water to drynke. And they chode with Moses, t sayde: Geue vs water, y we maye drynke. Moses sayde vnto thē: Why chydye ye with me? Wherfore tēpte ye y LORDE? But whan the people thyrsted there for water, they murmured agaynst Moses, t sayde: / Wherfore hast thou caused vs to come out of Egipte? to let vs, oure children, and oure cattell dye of hunger?

b Moses cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: What shal I do with this people? They are all most ready to stone me. The LORDE saide vnto him: Go before the people, t take some of the elders of Israel with y , and take in thine hande thy staff, wherwith thou smotest the water, and go thy waye: Beholde, ^a I wyl stonde there before the vpon a rock in Horeb, there shalt thou smyte the rocke, so shall there water runne out, that the people maye drynke. Moses dyd so before the elders of Israel. ^a Then was that place called Massa Meriba, because of the chydyinge of the children of Israel, and because they tempted y LORDE, and sayde: Is the LORDE amonge vs, or not?

c Then came Amaleck, t fought agaynst Israel in Raphidim. And Moses sayde vnto Iosua: Chose vs out men, go out, t fight against Amaleck, tomorow wil I stōde vpō the toppe of the hyll, t haue y staff of God in my hande. And Iosua dyd as Moses bade him, t fought agaynst Amalek. Moses t Aaron t Hur wente vp to y toppe of the hyll. And whā Moses helde vp his hāde, Israel had the victory: ⁱ but whan he let downe his hande, Amalek had the victory.

But Moses hādes were heuy, therefore toke they a stone, t layed it vnder him, that he might syt vpon it. And Aaron t Hur stayed vp his hādes, the one vpon the one syde, and the other vpon y other syde. So his handes were stedfast vnto y Sonne wente downe. And Iosua discomfited Amalek, t his people thorow the edge of the swerde.

And y LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Wryte this for a remēbraunce in a booke, t cōmytte it vnto y eares of Iosua: ^a for I wyl rote out Amalek from vnder heauen, so that he shall nomore be remembred. And Moses buylded an altare vnto the LORDE, and called it: ⁱ The LORDE Nissi, for he sayde: The battayll of the LORDE shalbe agaynst Amalek thorow an hande vnder the defence of God from childe to childes childe.

And the other was called Eliaser, for he sayde: The God of my fathers hath bene my helpe, and hath deluyered me from Pharaos swerde.

Now whā Iethro Moses father in lawe, and his sonnes and his wife came vnto him in the wyldernes by the mount of God, where he had pitched his tent, he sent worde vnto Moses: I Iethro thy father in lawe am come vnto the, and thy wife and both hir children with her. Then wente Moses forth to mete him, and dyd obeysaunce vnto him, and kyssed him. And whan they had saluted ech other, they wente in to the tente.

Then Moses tolde his father in lawe all that the LORDE had done vnto Pharaο and the Egipcians for Israels sake, and all the trauaile that had happened them by ꝑ waye, and how the LORDE had deluyered them. Iethro reioysed ouer all ꝑ good that the LORDE had done for Israel, ꝑ he had deluyered them from the hāde of the Egipcians. And Iethro sayde: Prayed be the LORDE, which hath deluyered you from the hande of the Egipcians and of Pharaο, (and) that knoweth how to deluyer his people from the Egipcians hande. Now I knowe, that the LORDE is greater thē all goddes, because they dealt proudly with them. And Iethro toke brentofferynges, and offered vnto God. Then came Aaron and all ꝑ elders of Israel to eate bred with Moses father in lawe before God.

On the next morow sat Moses to iudge the people, and the people stode rōide aboute Moses from the mornynge vntyll ꝑ euen. But whan his father in lawe sawe all that he dyd with the people, he sayde: What is this, that thou doest with the people? Wherefore syttest thou alone, and all ꝑ people stonde rōide aboute from the morninge vntyll the euen? Moses answered him: The people come to me, ꝑ axe counsell at God: for whan they haue any thinge to do, they come vnto me, that I maye iudge betwixte euery one ꝑ his neyghboure, and shewe them the statutes of God, and his lawes.

His father in lawe sayde vnto him: It is not well that thou doest. Thou weeriest thy self, and the people that is with the. This busynesse is to sore for the, thou canst not perforce it alone. But herken vnto my voyce, I will geue the counsell, and God shall be with the. Be thou vnto the people to God warde, and brynge the causes before God, and prouide them with statutes and lawes, that thou mayest shewe thē the waie wherin they shulde walke, and the workes that they shulde do.

But loke out amonge all the people, for honest men, that feare God, such as are true, ꝑ hate couetousnes: make these rulers ouer them, some ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten, that they maye allwaye iudge the people. But where there is eny greate matter, ꝑ that they brynge the same vnto the, and iudge the small causes them selues: so shall it be lighter for the, yf they beare the burthen with the. Yf thou shalt do this, then mayest thou endure the thinge that God chargeth the withall, and all this people maie go peaceably vnto their place.

Moses herkened vnto the voyce of his father in lawe, and dyd all that he sayde. And he chose honest men out of all Israel, and made them heades ouer the people, some ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten, that they might allwaye iudge the people. As for such causes as were herde, they brought them vnto Moses, and iudged the small matters them selues. So Moses let his father in lawe departe in to his owne londe.

The xix. Chapter.

IN the thirde moneth after that the children of Israel were gone out of the londe of Egipte, they came the same daye in to the wyldernes of Sinai (for they were departed from Raphidim, and wolde in to the wyldernes of Sinai) ꝑ and there they pitched in the wyldernes ouer against the mounte. And Moses wente vp vnto God.

And the LORDE called vnto him out of the mount, and sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the house of Iacob, and tell the children of Israel: Ye haue sene what I haue done vnto the Egipcians, and how I haue borne you vpon Eagles wynges, ꝑ brought you vnto my self. Yf ye wyll harken now vnto my voyce, and kepe my couenaunt, ye shal be myne owne before all people: for the whole earth is myne: and ye shall be vnto me ꝑ a presterly kingdome, and an holy people. B Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and layed before them all these wordes, that the LORDE had commaunded. And all the people answered together, and sayde: *All that the LORDE hath sayde, wyll we do.

And Moses tolde the wordes of the people vnto the LORDE agayne. And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, I wyll come vnto the in a thicke cloude, that the people maye heare my wordes, which I speake vnto the, and beleue the for euer. And Moses shewed the wordes of the people vnto the LORDE.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go vnto the people, and sanctifie thē to daye and to-morow, y they maye wash their clothes, and be ready agaynst the thirde daye: for vpon the thirde daye shall the LORDE come downe vpon mount Sinai before all the people. And set markes rounde aboute the people, and saye vnto them: Bewarre, that ye go not vp in to y mount, ner touch y border of it. † For who so euer toucheth y mōūt, shal dye y death. There shal no hāde touch it, but he shall either be stoned, or shot thorow: whether it be beest or man, it shal not lyue. When the horne bloweth, then shal they come vp vnto the mounte.

C Moses wente downe from the mount vnto the people, and sanctified them. And they waszshed their clothes. And he sayde vnto them: Be ready agaynst the thirde daye, and no man come at his wife.

Now whan the thirde daye came (and it was early) it beganne to thonder and lighten, and there was a thicke cloude vpon the mount, and a noyse of a trumpet exceedinge mightie. And the people that were in the tentes, were afrayde. And Moses brought the people out of the tentes to mete with God, and they stode vnder the mount.

But all mount Sinai smoked, because y LORDE came downe vpō it with fyre. And the smoke therof wente vp as the smoke of a fornace, so that the whole mount was exceedinge terrible. And the noyse of the trompet wete out, and was mightie. Moses spake, ⁊ God answered him loude. Now whan the LORDE was come downe vpon mount Sinai, euen vpon the toppe of it, he called Moses

But Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: The people can not come vp vpon mount Sinai, for thou hast charged vs, ⁊ sayde: Set markes aboute the mount, and sanctifie it.

The LORDE sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, get y downe. Thou and Aaron with the shalt come vp: but the rulers and y people shal not preasse to come vp vnto y LORDE, lest he smyte thē. And Moses wente downe to the people, and tolde them.

The xxij. Chapter.

THOU shalt not accepte a vayne tale, that thou woldest manteyne the vngodly, and be a false wytnesse.

Thou shalt not folowe the multitude vnto euell, ne answer at the lawe that thou woldest (to folowe the multitude) turne a syde from the right.

Thou shalt not paynte a poore mā's cause. ^a Yf thou mete thine enemies oxen or Asse, goinge astraye, thou shalt brynge the same vnto him agayne.

^b Yf thou se the Asse of him that hateth the, lye vnder his burthen, thou shalt not let him lye, but shalt helpe him vp.

Thou shalt not wraist the righte of thy poore in his cause. Kepe the farre from false matters. ^c The innocent and righteous shalt thou not sleie, for I iustifie not ^d vngodly.

^e Thou shalt not take giftes: for giftes blinde euen them ^f are sharpe of sight, ^g wraist the righteous causes.

Ye shall not oppresse a straunger, for ye knowe the hert of straungers, ^h for so moch as ye youre selues also haue bene straungers in the londe of Egipte.

Sixe yeares shalt thou sowe thy londe, and gather in the frute therof: ⁱ In the seuenth yeare shalt thou let it rest and lye still, that the poore amonge thy people maye eate therof: and loke what remayneth ouer, let ^j beestes of the felde eate it. Thus shalt thou do also with thy vynyarde and olyue trees.

^k Sixe dayes shalt thou do thy worke, but vpon the seuenth daye thou shalt kepe holy daye, that thine oxen and Asse maye rest, and that the sonne of thy handmayden and the straunger maye refresh them selues.

All that I haue sayde vnto you, that kepe. And as for the names of other goddes, ye shall not remembre them, and out of youre mouthes shal they not be herde.

Thre tymes in the yeare shalt thou kepe feast vnto me: namely the feast of vñleuended bred shalt thou kepe, that thou eate vñleuended bred seuen dayes (like as I commaunded ^l) in the tyme of ^m moneth Abib, for in the same wentest thou out of Egipte. (But shall haue destroyed them: then ⁊ shalt thou not worships their goddes, ner serue them, nether shalt thou do as they do, but shalt ouerthrowe their goddes, ⁊ breake thē downe.

 ¶ But ¶ LORDE youre God shal ye serue, so shal he blesse thy bred ⁊ thy water, and I wyl remoue all sicknesse from the.

¶ There shalbe nothinge baren ner vnfrute-growe, ⁊ haue the londe in possession. And I wil set the borders of thy londe, euen from the reed see vnto ¶ see of the Philistynes, ⁊ from the wylternes vnto the ⁊ water. For I wil delyuer the indwellers of the londe in to thine hande, ¶ thou shalt dryue them out before the. ¶ Thou shalt make no couenaunt with them ner with their goddes, but let thē not dwell in thy lande, that they make the not synne ageynst me. ¶ For yf thou serue their goddes, it wil surely be thy decaye.

The xliiij. Chapter.

AND he sayde vnto Moses: Come vp vnto the LORDE thou ⁊ Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and the seuentie elders of Israel, ⁊ worships afare of. But let Moses onely come nye vnto the LORDE, and let not them come nye, and let not the people also come vp with him.

Moses came and tolde the people all the wordes of the LORDE, ⁊ all the lawes. Then answered all the people with one voyce, and sayde: ¶ All ¶ wordes that the LORDE hath sayde, wyl we do.

Then wrote Moses all the wordes of ¶ LORDE, ⁊ gat him vp by tymes in the mornyng, ⁊ buylded an altare vnder ¶ mount with twolue pilers, according to the twolue trybes of Israel: ⁊ sent twolue yonge mē of the children of Israel, to offre burntofferynges, and peace offerynges theron of bullockes vnto the LORDE.

And Moses toke the half parte of the bloude, and put it in a basen, the other half sprenkled he vpon the altare: ⁊ toke the boke of ¶ couenaunt, ⁊ cried in the eares of the people. And when they had sayde: All ¶ the LORDE hath sayde, wil we do, ⁊ herken vnto him: ¶ Moses toke the bloude, ⁊ sprenkled it vpon the people, ⁊ sayde: Beholde, this is ¶ bloude of the couenaunt that the LORDE maketh with you vpon all these wordes.

Then wente Moses ⁊ Aaron, Nadab ⁊ Abihu, ⁊ the seuentie elders of Israel vp, ⁊ sawe ¶ God of Israel. Vnder his fete it was like a stone worke of Saphyre, ⁊ as the fashion of heauē, whā it is cleare, ⁊ he put not his hāde vpō the pryncipall of Israel. And when they had sene God, they ate ⁊ dronke.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: ¶ Come vp vnto me vpon the mount, ⁊ remayne there,
 ¶ I maye geue the tables of stone, ⁊ ¶ lawe ⁊

The xrb. Chapter.

AND ⁊ LORDE talked with Moses ⁊ sayde: ^aSpeake vnto ⁊ childrē of Israel, ⁊ they geue me an Heue offerynge, ⁊ take the some of euery man, that hath a fre wyllynge hert therto. And this is the Heue-offerynge that ye shal take of them: Golde, syluer, brasse, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte twyned sylke, goates hayre, reed skynnes of rammes, doo skynnes, Fyrre tre, oyle for lampes, spyes for the anoyntyng oyle, and for swete incense. Onix stones and set stones for the ouerbody cote and for the brestlappe.

And they shall make me a Sanctuary, that I maie dwell amonge them. Like as I shal shewe ⁊ a patrone of the Habitation, and of all the ornaments therof, so shall ye make it.

Make an Arke of Fyrre tre two cubytes ⁊ a half longe, ^aa cubyte ⁊ a half brode, and a cubyte ⁊ an half hie: this shalt thou ouerleye with pure golde within and without, ⁊ make an hie vpō it a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and cast foure rynges of golde, ⁊ put them in the foure corners of it, so that two rynges be vpon the one syde, and two vpon the other syde. And make staues of Fyrre tre, and ouer laye them with golde, and put them in the rynges alonge by the sydes of the Arke, to beare it withall: and they shal abyde styll in the rynges, ⁊ not be takē out. And in ⁊ Arke thou shalt laye the wytnesse, that I wyl geue the. Thou shalt make a Mercy-seate also of pure golde, two cubytes and a half longe, and a cubyte ⁊ a half brode.

And thou shalt make two Cherubyns of beaten golde vpō both ⁊ endes of the Mercy-seate, ⁊ the one Cherub maye be vpon the one ende, ⁊ the other vpon the other ende, ⁊ so to be two Cherubyns vpon the endes of the Mercyseate. And the Cherubyns shall sprede out their wynges ouer an hie, ⁊ they maye couer ⁊ Mercyseate with their wynges: ⁊ ⁊ either of their faces maye be right ouer one agaynst another, and their faces shal lōke vnto the Mercyseate.

And thou shalt set ⁊ Mercyseate aboue vpon the Arke. And in the Arke thou shalt laye the wytnesse, ⁊ I shal geue the. ^cFrom ⁊ place wyll I testifie vnto ⁊, and talke with the, namely, from ⁊ *Mercyseate (betwixte the two Cherubyns) which is vpon the Arke of wytnesse, of all that I wyl cōmaunde ⁊ vnto the children of Israel.

^dThou shalt make a table also of Fyrre tre, two cubites longe, and one cubyte brode, and a cubyte and a half hie, and ouerlaye it with pure golde, and make a crowne of golde rounde aboute it, and an whope of an hāde brede hie, and a crowne of golde vnto ⁊ whope rounde aboute.

And vnto it thou shalt make foure rynges of golde, on the foure corners in the foure fete of it: harde vnder the whope shall ⁊ rynges be, to put in staues and to beare the table with all: and thou shalt make the staues of Fyrre tre, ⁊ ouerlaye them with golde, ⁊ the table maye be borne therwith.

Thou shalt make also his diszshes, spones, pottes, and flat peeces of pure golde, to poure out and in. ^fAnd vpon the table thou shalt all waye set shewbred before me.

Morouer thou shalt make a candelsticke of fyne beaten golde, ^gwhere vpon shall be the shaft with branuches, cuppes, knoppes, and floures. Sixe branuches shall proceade out of the sydes of the candelsticke, out of euery syde thre branuches. Euery branch shal haue thre cuppes, (like allmondes) thre knoppes, and thre floures. These shalbe the sixe branuches of the candelsticke. But the shaft of the candelsticke it self shal haue foure cuppes, knoppes and floures, and allwaie a knoppe vnder two braunches, of the sixe that procede out of the candlisticke. For both the knoppes and braunches shall procede out of the shaft, all one pece of fyne beaten golde.

And thou shalt make seuen lampes aboue there on, that they maye geue light one ouer agaynst another, and snoffers and out quencheres of pure golde. Out of an hundreth pounce weight of pure golde shalt thou make it, with all this apparell. * And se that thou make it after the patrone that thou hast sene in the mount.

The xxvi. Chapter.

THE habitation shalt thou make of ten curteynes, of whyte twyned sylke, of yalowe sylke, of scarlet and purple. Cherubyns shalt thou make thereon of broderd worke. The length of one curteyne shalbe eight and twentye cubytes $\frac{1}{2}$ bredth foure cubytes: and all the ten shalbe like, and shalbe coupled fyue and fyue together, one vnto the other. And thou shalt make loupes of yalowe sylke by the edge of euery curteyne, where they shalbe coupled together, that there maye be euer two and two fastened together vpon their edges: fiftie loupes vpon euery curteyne, that one maye fasten the other together. And thou shalt make fiftie buttons of golde, wherwith the curteynes maye be coupled together, one to the other, that it maye be one couerynge.

13 Thou shalt make a couerynge also of goates heyer for a tente ouer the habitation, * of eleuen curteynes. The length of one curteyne shalbe thirtie cubytes, the bredth foure cubytes. And all the eleuen shalbe alike greate: fyue shalt thou couple together by the selues, $\frac{1}{2}$ sixe also by them selues, $\frac{1}{2}$ thou mayest dubble the sixte curteyne in the fore front of the Tabernacle. And vpon euery curteyne thou shalt make fiftie loupes vpon the edges of them, that they maie be coupled together by the edges. And fiftie buttons of brasse shalt thou make, and put the buttons in to the loupes, that the tent maye be coupled together, and be one couerynge.

As for the remnant of the curteynes of the tente, thou shalt let the halfe parte hang ouer behynde $\frac{1}{2}$ tete, vpon both the sydes a cubyte longe, $\frac{1}{2}$ the resydue maye be vpon the sydes of the Tabernacle, $\frac{1}{2}$ couer it vpon both the sydes.

Besydys this couerynge thou shalt make a couerynge of reed skynnes of rammes. And aboue this a couerynge of doo skinnes.

Thou shalt make bordes also for the habitation, of Fyrre tre, which shall stonde: one borde shalbe ten cubytes longe, $\frac{1}{2}$ a cubyte $\frac{1}{2}$ a half brode. Two fete shal one borde haue, that one maye be set by the other.

Thus shalt thou make all the bordes for $\frac{1}{2}$ Tabernacle: Twentye of them shal stode towarde the south, which shal haue fourtye sokettes of syluer vnder them, two sokettes vnder euery borde for his two fete.

Likewyse vpon the other syde towarde the north there shall stonde twentye bordes also, and fourtye sokettes of syluer, two sokettes vnder euery borde.

But behynde the habitation towarde $\frac{1}{2}$ west thou shalt make sixe bordes, and two bordes mo for the two corners of the habitation, that euery one of them both maye be coupled from vnder vp with his corner borde, and aboue vpon the heade to come eauen together with a clape: so that there be eight bordes with their syluer sokettes, wherof there shalbe sixtene, two vnder euery borde.

And thou shalt make barres of fyrr tre, fyue for the bordes vpon the one syde of the Tabernacle, and fyue for the bordes vpon the other syde of the Tabernacle, and fyue for the bordes behinde $\frac{1}{2}$ Tabernacle towarde the west. And the barres shalt thou shute thorow $\frac{1}{2}$ myddest of the bordes, and faste altogether from $\frac{1}{2}$ one corner to $\frac{1}{2}$ other. And thou shalt overlaye the bordes with golde, and make their rynges of golde, that the barres maye be put therin. And the barres shalt thou overlaye with golde, and so shalt thou set vp the Tabernacle, accordinge to $\frac{1}{2}$ fashion as thou hast sene vpon $\frac{1}{2}$ mount.

And thou shalt make a vayle of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, $\frac{1}{2}$ whyte twyned sylke. And Cherubyns shalt thou make thereon of broderd worke, and shalt hange it vpon foure pilers of Fyrre tre which are overlayed with golde, hauynge knoppes of golde, and foure sokettes of syluer. And the vayle shalt thou fasten with buttons, and set the Arke of wytnesse within the vayle, that it maye be vnto you a difference betwixte the holy and the Most holy.

¶ And thou shalt set the Mercy seate vpon the Arke of wytnesse in the Most holy. But set the table without the vayle, and the candlestick ouer agaynst þy table vpon þy south syde of the Tabernacle, that the table maie stonde on the north syde.

And in the dore of the Tabernacle thou shalt make an hanginge, of yalow sylke, purple, scarlet and whyte twyned sylke. And for the same hanginge thou shalt make fyue pilers of Fyrr tre, ouerlaid with golde, with knoppes of golde. And shalt cast fyue sokettes of brasse for them.

The xxvij. Chapter.

¶ AND thou shalt make an altare of Firre tre, "fyue cubytes longe & brode, þy it maye be foure square, & thre cubytes hye: thou shalt make hornes vpon the foure corners of it, & shalt ouer laye it with brasse. Make ashpānes, shouels, basens, fleshokes, cole pānes. All þy apparell therof shalt thou make of brasse. Thou shalt make a gredyron also like a nett, of brase, & foure brasen rynges vpon the foure corners of it: from vnder vp aboute the altare shalt thou make it, so that the gredyron reach vnto þy myddest of the altare. Thou shalt make staues also for the altare, of Fyrr tre, ouer layed with golde, and shalt put the staues in the rynges, that the staues maye be on both the sydes of þy altare, to beare it withall. And holowe with bordes shalt thou make it, like as it is shewed in the mount.

¶ And to þy habitacion thou shalt make a courte, an hangynge of whyte twyned sylke: vpō þy one syde an C. cubytes lōge towarde the south, & xx. pilers vpon xx. brasen sokettes, & the knoppes with their whopes of syluer. Likewise vpon þy north syde there shal be an hanginge of an C. cubytes lōge, twenty pilers vpon twenty brasen sokettes, and their knoppes with their whopes of syluer.

But vpon the west syde the bredth of þy courte shal haue an hanginge of fiftie cubites longe, & ten pilers vpon ten sokettes. Vpō the east syde also shal the bredth of the courte haue fiftie cubytes, so that the hangynge haue vpon one syde fyftene cubites, and thre pilers vpō thre sokettes: And vpon þy other syde fyftene cubytes also, and thre pilers vpō thre sokettes.

And in the courte gate there shalbe an hangynge twenty cubytes brode, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke, wrought with nedle worke, and foure pilers vpon their foure sokettes. All the pilers rounde aboute the courte shall haue syluer whopes, & syluer knoppes, & sokettes of brasse. And the length of þy courte shal be an hūdreth cubytes, the bredth fiftie cubytes, the heygth fyue cubytes, of whyte twyned sylke and þy sokettes therof shalbe of brasse. All þy vessels also of the habitacion to all maner seruyce, and all the nales of it, and all the nales of the courte shalbe of brasse.

Commaunde þy children of Israel, "þy they bring vnto þy the most cleare & pure oyle oliue beaten, to geue lighte, þy it maye all waye be put in the lāpes in the Tabernacle of wytnes without the vayle, that hangeth before the wytnesse. And Aarō and his sonnes shal dresse it from the euenynge vntyll þy mornynge before the LORDE. This shalbe vnto you a perpetuall custome for youre posterities amonge the children of Israel.

The xxvij. Chapter.

¶ AND thou shalt take vnto the Aaron thy brother and his sonnes frō amonge the childrē of Israel, that he maye be my prest: namely Aaron & his sonnes Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar: & thou shalt make holy clothes for Aarō thy brother, honorable and glorious, & shalt speake vnto all them that are wise of hert, whom I haue fylled with the sprete of wisdome, that they make garmentes to Aaron for his consecracion, that he maye be my prest.

These are þy garmentes which they shal make: a brestlappe, an ouerboddy cote, a tuncyle, an albe, a myter and a girdell. Thus shal they make holy garmentes for thy brother Aarō and his sonnes, that he maye be my prest. They shal take therto golde, yalow silke, scarlet, purple, and whyte sylke.

The ouerboddy cote shal they make of golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke of broderd worke, that it maye be festened together vpon both the sydes by þy edges therof. And his gyrdell vpō it shal be of þy same workmāshippe & stuff, euen of golde yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke. And thou shalt take two Onix stones, and graue in them the names of the children of Israel. Syxe names vpon the one stone, and the sixe other names vpon the other stone accordinge to the order of their age. This shalt thou do by the stonegrauers that graue signettes, so that $\frac{1}{2}$ stones with the names of the children of Israel to be set rounde aboute with golde: and thou shalt put them vpon the two shulders of the ouer body cote, that they maye be stones of remembrance for the children of Israel, that Aaron maye beare their names vpon both his shulders before the LORDE for a remembrance.

C Thou shalt make hokes of golde also, and two wrethē cheynes of pure golde, and shalt fasten them vnto the hokes.

The brestlappe of iudgment shalt thou make of broderd worke, euen after the worke of the ouerbody cote: of golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke. Foure square shall it be and dubble, an hande bredth longe, and an handebredth brode. And thou shalt fill it with foure rowes full of stones. Let the first rowe be a Sardis, a Topas, and a Smaragde. The seconde: a Ruby, a Saphyre, and a Dyamonde. The thirde: a Ligurius, an Achatt, and an Ametyst. The fourth: a Turcas, an Onix, and a Iaspis. In golde shall they be sett in all the rowes, and shal stonde accordinge to $\frac{1}{2}$ twolue names of the children of Israel, grauen of the stonegrauers, euery one with his name accordinge to the twolue trybes.

D And vpon the brestlappe thou shalt make wrethen cheynes by $\frac{1}{2}$ corners of pure golde, and two golde rynges, so, that thou fastē the same two rynges vnto two edges of the brestlappe, and put the two wrethē cheynes of golde in the same two rynges, that are in two edges of the brestlappe. But the two endes of $\frac{1}{2}$ two wrethen cheynes shalt thou fasten in the two hokes vpon the ouerbody cote one ouer agaynst another.

And thou shalt make two other rynges of golde, and fasten them vnto $\frac{1}{2}$ other two edges of $\frac{1}{2}$ brestlappe, namely to $\frac{1}{2}$ borders therof, wherwith it maye hange on the ynsyde vpon the ouerbody cote. And yet shalt thou make two rynges of golde, and fasten them vpon the two edges beneth to the ouerbody cote, vpon the outsyde one ouer agaynst another, where the ouerbody cote ioyneth together. And the brestlappe shall be fastened by his rynges vnto the rynges of the ouerbody cote with a yalow lace, that it maye lye close vpon the ouerbody cote, and that the brestlappe be not lowshed from the ouerbody cote.

Thus shall Aaron beare the names of the children of Israel in $\frac{1}{2}$ brestlappe of iudgment vpon his hert, whan he goeth in to the Sanctuary, for a remembrance before the LORDE allwaye. And in the brestlappe of iudgment thou shalt put * light and perfectnesse, that they be vpon Aarōs hert, whan he goeth in before the LORDE, and that he maye beare the iudgment of the children of Israel vpon his hert before the LORDE allwaye.

Thou shalt make the tynycle also to the ouerbody cote all of yalow sylke, and aboue in the myddest there shal be an hole, and a bonde folden together rounde aboute the hole, that it rente not. And beneth vpon the hemme thou shalt make pomgranates of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple rounde aboute, and belles of golde betwixte the same rounde aboute: that there be euer a golden bell and a pomgranate, a golden bell and a pomgranate rounde aboute the hemme of the same tynycle. And Aaron shall haue it vpon him whā he mynistreth, that the soude therof maye be herde, whan he goeth out and in at the Sanctuary before the LORDE, that he dye not.

Thou shalt make a foreheade plate also of pure golde, and graue therin (after the workmanship of the stone grauer): the holynes of the LORDE, & with a yalow lace shalt thou fasten it vnto the fore front of the myter vpon Aarons fore heade, $\frac{1}{2}$ Aaron maie so beare $\frac{1}{2}$ synne of the holy thinges, which the childre of Israel halowe in all their giftes and Sanctuary. And it shall be allwaye vpon his fore heade, that he maye reconyle them before the LORDE.

Thou shalt make an albe also of whyte sylke, and a myter of whyte sylke, and a gyrdle of nedle worke.

And for Aarons sonnes thou shalt make cotes, gyrdles and bonetes, honorable and glorious, and shalt put them vpon thy brother Aaron and his sonnes, and shalt anoynte them, and fyll their handes, and consecrate them, that they maye be my prestes. And thou shalt make them linnen breches, to couer the flesh of their preuties, from the loynes vnto the thyes. And Aaron and his sonnes shall haue them on, when they go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or go vnto the altare to mynister in the Holy, that they beare not their synne, and dye. This shalbe a perpetual custome for him, and his sede after him.

The xxix. Chapter.

THIS is it also, that thou shalt do vnto them, that they maye be consecrated prestes vnto me. * Take a yonge bullocke, and two rammes without blemish, vneleuened bred, ¶ vneleuened cakes myxte with oyle, and wafers of swete bred tempered with oyle: Of wheate flour shalt thou make them all, and put them in a maunde, ¶ brynge them in the maunde, with the bullocke ¶ two rammes.

And thou shalt brynge Aaron ¶ his sonnes vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, ¶ wash them with water, ¶ take the garmentes, and put vpon Aaron the albe and the tunycle, ¶ the ouer body cote, ¶ the brestlappe to ¶ ouer body cote, ¶ shalt gyrdle him on the out syde vpon the ouer body cote, and set the myter vpon his heade, and the holy crowne vpon the myter: and shalt take the anyoyntinge oyle, and poure it vpon his heade, and anyointe him.

33 Thou shalt brynge forth his sonnes also, ¶ put the albes vpon them, and gyrdle both Aaron ¶ them with gyrdles, ¶ set the bonettes vpon their heades, that they maye haue the presthode for a perpetuall custome.

And thou shalt fyll the hādes of Aaron and his sonnes, and brynge forth the bullocke before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. * And Aaron and his sonnes shall laye their hādes vpon the heade of the bullocke, and thou shalt sleie the bullocke before the LORDE, at the dore of the tabernacle of wytnesse, and shalt take of his bloude, and put it vpon the hornes of the altare with thy fynger, and poure all the other bloude vpon the botome of the altare.

* And thou shalt take all the fat that couereth the bowels and the nett vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fat that is aboute them, and burne them vpon the altare. But the bullockes flesh, skynne and donge, shalt thou burne with fyre without the hoost: for it is a synneofferynge.

The one ramme shalt thou take also, and Aaron with his sonnes shall laye their handes vpon his heade. Then shalt thou sleie him, and take of his bloude, and sprenkle it vpon the altare rounde aboute. But the ramme shalt thou deuyde in peces, and wash his bowels and his legges, and laye them vpon the peces and the heade, and burne the whole ramme vpon the altare: for it is a burnt-offerynge, and a swete sauoure of the sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

34 ¶ Then shalt thou take the fat of the ramme, the rompe, and the fatt that couereth ¶ bowels, the net vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fatt that is aboute them, and the right shulder (for it is a ramme of cōsecracion) and a symnel of bred, and an oyled cake, and a wafer out of the maunde of the vneleuened bred † that stondest before ¶ LORDE, and put all in to the handes of Aaron and of his sonnes, and waue it vnto the LORDE. Thē take it out of their handes, and burne it vpon the altare for a burnt offeringe, to be a swete sauoure vnto ¶ LORDE. For it is the LORDES sacrifice.

35 ¶ And thou shalt take the brest of the ramme of Aarōs consecraciō, ¶ shalt waue it before ¶ LORDE, ¶ shal be his parte. And thus shalt thou halowe ¶ Wauebrest ¶ Heue-shulder (¶ are waued ¶ heaued) of ¶ ramme of the consecracion of Aaron ¶ his sonnes: And it shalbe a perpetuall custome for Aarō and his sonnes of ¶ children of Israel: for it is an Heue offrynge, and the Heue offrynge shalbe the LORDES dewtye of the children of Israel, in their † deade offrynges and Heue offrynges which they do vnto the LORDE.

And the holy garmentes of Aaron shal his sonnes haue after him, that they maie be anoynted therin, ⁊ ⁊ their handes maye be fylled. ^aLoke which of his sonnes shalbe prest in his steade, the same shal put them on seuē dayes, that he maye go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, to mynister in the Sanctuary.

f But the ramme of consecracion shalt thou take, ^band seeth his flesh in an holy place. And Aaron with his sonnes shal eate the flesh of the same ramme with the bred in the maunde, at the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse: for there is an attonement made therewith, to fylle their handes, that they maye be consecrated. A straiger shal not eate therof, for it is holy.

But yf eny of the flesh of the consecracion, and of the bred remaine vntyll the mornyng, thou shalt burne it with fyre, and not let it be eaten, for it is holy. And thus shalt thou do with Aaron and his sonnes all that I haue commaunded ⁊. Seuen dayes shalt thou fylle their handes, and offer a bullocke daylie for a synne offeringe, because of them ⁊ shalbe reconciled. And thou shalt halowe the altare, whan thou reconceylest it: ⁊ shalt anoynte it, that it maye be consecrated. Seuen dayes shalt thou reconceyle the altare, ⁊ consecrate it, that it maye be an altare of the Most holy. Who so wyll touch the altare, must be consecrated.

g And this shalt thou do with the altare: ^cTwo lambes of one yere olde shalt thou offer euery daye vpon it: the one lambe in the mornyng, and the other at euen. And to one lambe a tenth deale of wheate floure, mēgled with ⁊ fourth parte of an Hin of beaten oyle, and ⁊ fourth parte of an Hin of wine for a drynk offeringe. With the other lambe at euen shalt thou do like as with ⁊ meate offeringe and drynk offeringe in the mornyng, for a swete sauoure of sacrifice vnto ⁊ LORDE. This is the daylie burnt-offeringe amonge youre posterities, at the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE, ^dwhere I will proteste vnto you, and talke with the. There wil I proteste vnto the children of Israel, and be sanctified in my glory, and wyl halowe the Tabernacle of wytnes and the altare, and consecrate Aarō and his sonnes, to be my prestes. ^eAnd I wyl dwell amonge the children of Israel, ⁊ wyl be their God: so ⁊ they shal knowe, how that I am the LORDE their God, which brought them out of the londe of Egipte, that I might dwell amonge them, euen I the LORDE their God.

The xxx. Chapter.

THOU shalt make also an incense altare to burne incense, of Fyrre tre, a cubyte longe ⁊ brode, eauen foure squared, and two cubytes hye with his hornes, ⁊ shalt ouerlaye it with pure golde, the rose ⁊ the walles of it rounde aboute, and the hornes therof, ⁊ a crowne of golde shalt thou make rounde aboute it, and two golde rynges on ether syde vnder the crowne, that there maie be staues put therin, to beare it with all.

The staues shalt thou make of Fyrre tre also, and ouerlaye the with golde: and shalt set it before the vayle, that hangeth before the Arke of wytnesse, and before the Mercy seate ⁊ is vpon the wytnesse, from whence I wyl proteste vnto the. And Aaron shal burne swete incense theron euery morninge, whā he dresseth the lampes. In like maner whan he lighteth the lampes at euen, he shall burne soch incense also. This shal be the daylie incense before the LORDE amonge youre posterities.

^fYe shall put no straunge incense therin, ⁊ offer no burnt-offeringe, ner meat-offeringe, nether drynk-offeringe theron. And vpon ⁊ hornes of it shall Aaron reconceyle once in a yere, with ⁊ bloude of the synne-offeringe, which they shall offer that are reconceyled. This shal be done amonge youre posterities for this is the most holy vnto the LORDE.

^gAnd the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Whan thou nombrest the heades of the children of Israel, then shal euery one geue vnto the LORDE the reconcinge of his soule, ⁊ there happē not a plage vnto them, whan they are nombred. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: "Thou shalt make a brasen lauer also with a fote of brasse to wash, and shalt set it betwixte the Tabernacle of wytnesse and ſy altare, and put water therin, that Aarō and his sonnes maye wash their handes and fete therout, when they go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or to the altare, to mynistrer vnto the LORDE with offerynge incense, ſy they dye not. Thou shalt anoynte Aaron also, and his sonnes, and consecrate them to be my prestes.

And thou shalt speake vnto the childrē of Israel, and saye: This oyle shalbe an holy oyntment vnto me amonge youre posterities: It shal not be poured vpon mans body, nether shalt thou make eny such like it, for it is holy: therefore shal it be holy vnto you. The xxxi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, & A said: "I haue called by name Bezaleel the sonne of Vri ſy sonne of Hur, of ſy trybe of Iuda, *and haue fylled him with ſy sprete of God, with wysdome and vnderstōdyng and knowlege, and to worke with all maner of connyng worke, in golde, syluer, brasse, to graue stones connyngly, and to set them, to carue well in tymbre, and to make all maner worke. And beholde, I haue geuen him Ahaliab the sonne of Ahisamach of the trybe of Dan, to be his companyon, and haue geuen wysdome in to the hertes of all that are wyse, that they shall make all that I haue commaunded the: the Tabernacle of wytnesse, ^a the Arke of wytnesse, the Mercyseate theron, and all the ornamentes of ſy Tabernacle: the table and his apparell, the candilstickes and all his apparell, the altare of incense, the altare of burntofferings with all his apparell, the lauer with his fote, the mynistrynge vestimentes of Aaron ſy prest, and the garmentes of his sonnes to serue like prestes, the anoyntinge oyle, and the incēse of spyces for ſy Sactuary. And the LORDE talked vnto Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: "Kepe my Sabbath, for it is a token betwene me and you, and youre posterities, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE which haloweth you: therefore kepe my Sabbath, for it shalbe holy vnto you. ^b Who so vnhaloweth it, shal dye the death: For who so doth eny worke therin, shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

Therefore shal the children of Israel kepe the Sabbath, that they maye kepe it also amonge their posterities for an euerlastyng couenaunt. An euerlastyng token is it betwixte me and the children of Israel. For in sixe dayes made the LORDE heauē & earth, but vpon y^e seuenth daye he rested, and was refreshed.

And whan the LORDE had made an ende of talkinge with Moses vpon the mount Sinai, he gaue him two tables of witness, which were of stone, and wrytten with the fynger of God.

The xxxij. Chapter.

BUT whan the people sawe that Moses made lōge taryenge to come downe frō the mount, they gathered the together agaynst Aaron, & sayde vnto him: ^a Vp, and make vs goddesses, to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this man Moses, that brought vs out of Egipte. Aaron sayde vnto them: ^b Plucke of the golden earynges from the eares of youre wyues, of youre sonnes, & of youre daughters, & bryng them vnto me. Then all the people pluckte of their golden earynges from their eares, & brought them vnto Aaron. And he toke them of their handes, & fashioned it with a grauer. ^c And they made a molten calfe, and sayde: These are thy goddesses (O Israel) that brought the out of the londe of Egipte.

^d Whan Aaron sawe that, he buylded an altare before him, and caused it be proclaimed, and sayde: Tomorrow is the LORDES feast. And they arose vp early in the mornyng, and offred burntofferings, and brought dead-offerynges also: ^e Then the people sat them downe to eate and drynke, & rose vp to playe.

^f But the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go get the downe, for thy people whom thou broughtest out of the londe of Egipte, haue marred all: they are soone gone out of the waie, which I commaunded them. They haue made them a molten calfe, and haue worshipped it, & offred vnto it, & sayde: ^g These are thy goddesses (O Israel) that brought the out of the lande of Egipte.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I se, ^h that it is a styffnecked people, and now suffre me, that my wrath maye waxe whote ouer them, & that I maye consume them, so wil I make a greates people of the.

But Moses besought the LORDE his God, & sayde: Oh LORDE, wherfore wil thy wrath waxe whote ouer thy people, whom thou hast brought out of the lōde of Egipte with greates power & a mightie hāde? ⁱ Wherfore shulde the Egipcians speake, & saye: He hath brought the for their myschefe, to slaye them in the mountaynes, and to destroye the vtterly from the earth? O turne the from the fearenesse of thy wrath, & be gracious ouer the wickednesse of thy people. Remembre thy seruantes Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, vnto who ^j thou swarest by thyne owne self, and saydest: I wil multiplie youre sede as the starres of heauen, and all the londe that I haue promysed you, wil I geue vnto youre sede, & they shall inheret it for euer. Thus the LORDE repented of the euell, which he sayde he wolde do vnto his people.

Moses turned him, & wente downe from the mount, and in his hande he had the two tables of wytnesse, which were wryttē vpon both the sydes, and were Gods worke, & the wrytinge was the wrytinge of God therein. Now whan Iosua herde the noyse of y^e people, as they shouted, he sayde vnto Moses: This is a noyse of warre in the hoost. He answered: It is not a noyse of them that haue the victory, and of them that haue the worse, but I heare a noyse of synginge at a daunce.

Whan he came nye vnto the hoost, and sawe the calfe, and the daunsyng, ^k he was moued with wrath, and cast the tables out of his hande, and brake them beneth the mount. ^l And he toke the calfe that they had made, and brent it with fyre, and stamped it vnto powder, and strowed it in the water, & gaue it vnto the children of Israel to drynke, & sayde vnto Aaron: What dyd this people vnto the, that thou hast brought so greates synne vpon them?

Aaron sayde: Let not the wrath of my lorde waxe feare: thou knowest, that this is a wicked people. They sayde vnto me: Make vs goddesses to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this man Moses, þ brought vs out of the lande of Egypte. I sayde vnto them: Who so hath golde, let him plucke it of, and geue it me: and I cast it in the fyre, therof came this calfe.

f Now whan Moses sawe, that the people were naked (for Aaron, whan he set them vp, made them naked to their shame) he wete in to the gate of the hoost, and sayde: who so belongeth vnto the LORDE, let him come hither vnto me. Then all the children of Leui gathered them selues vnto him, and he sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: Euery man put his swerde by his syde, and go thorow in and out from one gate to another in the hoost, and slaye euery man his brother, frende, & neighbour.

The children of Leui dyd, as Moses sayde vnto them. And there fell of the people the same daye thre thousande men. Thē sayde Moses: Cōsecrate youre handes this daie vnto the LORDE, euery man vpon his sonne and brother, that the prayse maye be geuen ouer you this daye.

o On the morow Moses sayde vnto the people: Ye haue done a greate synne. Now I wil go vp vnto the LORDE, yf peradventure I maye make an attouement for youre synnes.

Now whā Moses came agayne vnto þ LORDE, he saide: Oh this people haue done a greate synne, & haue made them goddesses of golde. * Now for geue them their synne: yf not, thē wype me out of thy boke, that thou hast written. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: What? Him that synneth against me, wil I wype out of my boke. Go thou thy waye therefore, and brynge þ people thither as I haue sayde vnto the, Beholde, myne angell shall go before the. But in the daye of my visitacion I will vyset their synnes vpon them. So the LORDE played the people, because they made þ calfe which Aaron made.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

z THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go, departe hence, thou and the people, whom thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypte, vnto þ lande that I sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, and sayde: vnto thy sede wil I geue it, & I wil sende an angell before the (and cast out the Cananites, Amorites, Hethites, Pheresites, Heuites and Iebusites) in to the lande that floweth with mylke and hony, for I wyll not go vp with the: þ for thou art an hardnecked people, I might consume the by the waye. Whan the people herde this euell tydinges, they sorowed, and no man put on his best rayment.

And þ LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Speake vnto the children of Israel: Ye are a styf-necked people, I must once come sodenly vpon the, and make an ende of the. And now put of thy goodly aray from the, þ I maie knowe what to do vnto the. So the children of Israel laied their goodly aray from thē, euen before the mount Horeb.

Moses toke the Tabernacle, & pitched it without afarre of from þ hoost, and called it the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And who so euer wolde axe eny question at the LORDE, wente out vnto the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the hoost. And whan Moses wente out vnto the Tabernacle, all the people rose vp, and stode euery one in his tent dore, and looked after Moses, tyll he was gone in to the Tabernacle. And whan Moses entred in to the Tabernacle, the cloudy pyler came downe, and stode in the dore of the Tabernacle, and he talked with Moses. And all the people sawe the cloudy piler stonde in the dore of the Tabernacle, and rose vp, and worshiped, euery one in his tent dore.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh vnto his frende. And whan he turned agayne to the hoost, þ yonge mā Iosua þ sonne of Nun his minister, departed not out of þ Tabernacle. And Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: Beholde, thou saydest vnto me: Brynge þ people vp, and letttest me not knowe, whom thou wilt sende with me, & yet hast thou sayde: I knowe the by name, and thou hast founde grace in my sight. Let me knowe thy waye therefore, wherby I maye be certified, þ I fynde grace in thy sight: And consydre yet, that this people is thy people.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Hew the two tables of stone,^a like as ŷ first were, that I maye wryte in them the wordes, ŷ were in the first tables, which thou brakest: and be ready in the mornynge, that thou mayest come vp early vnto moũt Sinai, and stonde me vpon the toppē of the mount. "And se that no man appeare before me emptye.

* Sixe dayes shalt thou labour, vpon ȝ seuēth daye shalt thou rest both from plowing and reapyng. The feast of wekes shalt thou kepe with the firstlinges of the wheate haruest: and the feast of yngaderynge at ȝ yeares ende. Thryse in a yere shal all youre men children appeare before the Gouernoure, euen the LORDE and God of Israel.

Whan I shal cast out the Heithen before the, ¶ enlarge thy borders, there shal no man desyre thy lode: for so much as thou goest vp thre tymes in the yere, to appeare before ȝ LORDE thy God. Thou shalt not offer the bloude of my sacrifice with leuēded bred. And the offerynge of the Easterfeast shal not remaine ouer night vntill the mornyng. The firstlinges^a of ȝ first frutes of thy lode shalt thou bryng in to the house of the LORDE thy God. † Thou shalt not seith a kydd, whyle it is yet in his mothers mylke.

D And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: wryte these wordes, for because of these wordes haue I made a couenaunt with the ¶ with Israel. And 'he was there with the LORDE fortye dayes and fortye nightes, and ate no bred, and dranke no water. And † he wrote in the tables the wordes of the couenaunt, euen ten verses.

Now whā Moses came downe fro moūt Sinai, he had the two tables of wytnesse in his hande, ¶ wist not ȝ the skynne of his face shyned, because he had talked with him. And whā Aaron ¶ all the childre of Israel sawe ȝ the skynne of his face shyned, they were afraied to come nye him. Thē Moses called them. And they returned vnto him, both Aaron ¶ all the chefest of the cōgregacion. And he talked with them. Afterwarde came all the children of Israel vnto him. And he cōmaunded thē, all ȝ the LORDE had sayde vnto him vpon the mount Sinai. Now whan he had made an ende of talkyng with thē,^b he put a couerynge vpō his face. And whan he wēte in before ȝ LORDE to talke with him, he toke ȝ couerynge of, till he wēte out agayne. And whan he came forth ¶ spake with the childre of Israel what was cōmaunded him, thē the childre of Israel sawe his face, how ȝ the skynne of his face shyned: so he put the couerynge vpō his face agayne, tyll he wente in agayne to talke with him.

The xxxv. Chapter.

AND Moses gathered all the cōgregacion^a of ȝ childre of Israel together, and sayde vnto them: This is it, ȝ the LORDE hath cōmaunded you to do: "Sixe dayes shall ye worke, but the seuenth daye shall ye kepe holy: a Sabbath of the LORDES rest. Who so euer doeth eny worke therin, shall dye. Ye shal kyndle no fyre vpon the Sabbath daye in all youre dwellynges.

And Moses sayde vnto ȝ whole congregacion of the children of Israel: This is it, that the LORDE hath cōmaunded: "Geue from amonge you Heue offerynges vnto ȝ LORDE, so that euery one bryng the LORDES Heue offerynge with a fre hert: golde, syluer, brasse, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte sylke, and goates hayre, reed skynnes of rammes, doo skynnes, and Fyre tre, oyle for the lampes, and spyes for the anoyntyng oyle and for swete incense. Onix stones, and stones to be set in ȝ ouerbody cote, and for the brestlappe.

B And who so is wyse of hert amonge you, let him come, ¶ make what the LORDE hath cōmaunded: namely, the Habitacion with the tent ¶ couerynge therof, the rynges, bordes, barres, pilers ¶ sokettes: The Arke with the stauēs therof, the Mercyseate ¶ the vayle: the table with his stauēs ¶ all his apparell: ¶ the shewbred: The cādilstick of light and his apparell, and his lampes, ¶ the oyle for the lightes: The altare of incense with his stauēs: The anoyntyng oyle and spyes for incense: The hangyng before ȝ Tabernacle dore: The alter of burntofferynges with his brasen gredyron, stauēs and all his apparell: The lauer with his fote: The hangynges of the courte, with the pilers and sokettes therof, ¶ the hangyng of the courte dore: The nales of the habitacion and of ȝ courte with their coardes: The mynistring garmentes for the seruyce in the Holy, ȝ holy vestimentes of Aaron the prest with the vestimentes of his sonnes for ȝ prestes office.

C Then wente all the congregacion of the childre of Israel out fro Moses, ¶ euery one brought the gift of his hert: ¶ all that they wolde of fire will, the same brought they for an Heue offeringe vnto the LORDE for y^e worke of the Tabernacle of witnesse, & for all the seruyce therof, & for the holy vestimētes. Both men & women that were of a wyllinge hert, brought bracelettes, earynges, rynges & gyrdels, and all maner Jewels of golde: Euery man also brought golde for Waue offeringes vnto the LORDE.

And who so euer fōude by him yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte sylke, goates hayre, reed skynnes of rāmes, and Doo skynnes, brought it. And who so euer houe up syluer & brasse, brought it for y^e Heue offeringe vnto the LORDE. And who so euer founde Fyrre tre by him, brought it for all maner of worke of the Gods seruyce. And soch women as were wyse herted, spanne with their hādes, and brought their sponne worke of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte sylke. And soch women as had hye vnderstandinge in wyszdome, spanne goates hayre.

As for y^e prynces, they brought Onix stones, and set stones, for y^e ouerbody coate, and for the brestlappe, and spyes, and oyle for y^e lightes, and for the anoyntinge oyle, and for swete incense. Thus the children of Israel brought fre wyllinge offeringes, both man and wemē, for all maner of worke, that the LORDE had commaunded by Moses, to be made.

And Moses saide vnto the childrē of Israel: "Beholde, y^e LORDE hath called by name Bezaleel y^e sonne of Vri, y^e sonne of Hur of the trybe of Iuda, & hath fylled him with the sprete of God, that he maye haue wyszdome, vnderdōdinge, & knowlege for all maner of worke, to worke connyngly in golde, syluer & brasse, to graue precious stones & to set them, to carue in wodd, to make all maner of connyng worke, and hath geuē instructiō in his hert, both him and Ahaliab the sonne of Ahisamach of y^e trybe of Dan. These hath he fylled with wyszdome of hert, to make all maner of worke, to carue, to broder, to worke with nedle worke, with yalow sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte sylke, and with weeuynge to make all maner of worke, and to deuyse connyng worke.

The lxxvi. Chapter.

THEN wrought Bezaleel & Ahaliab & all the wyse herted men, vnto whom the LORDE had geuen wyszdome & vnderdōdinge to knowe, how they shulde make all maner worke for the seruyce of the Sanctuary, acoordinge vnto all y^e the LORDE commaunded. And Moses called for Bezaleel & Ahaliab, & all the wyse herted men, vnto whom the LORDE had geuen wyszdome in their hertes, namely, all soch as wyllingly offred them selues there, & came to labour in the worke. And they receaued of Moses all the Heue offeringes, that the children of Israel had brought for the worke of the seruyce of the Sanctuary, that it might be made: & euery morninge brought they their willinge offeringes vnto him.

Then came all the wyse men y^e wrought in the worke of the Sanctuary, euery one frō his worke that he made, & sayde vnto Moses: The people bryngeth to moch, more thē nede is for the worke of this seruice, which the LORDE hath cōmaunded to make. Thē commaunded Moses, that it shulde be proclaimed thorow out the hoost: No man brynge more to the Heue offeringe of the Sanctuary. Then were the people forbydden to brynge: for there was stuff ynough for all maner of worke, that was to be made, and to moch.

So all y^e wyse herted men amonge thē y^e wrought in y^e worke of the Habitation, made ten curtaynes of whyte twyned sylke, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, with Cherubyns of broderd worke. The lēgth of one curtayne was eight and twētye cubites, and the bredth foure cubites, & were all of one measure: & he coupled the curtaynes fyue & fyue together one to the other.

And made yalow loupes a longe by y^e edge of euery curtayne, where they shulde be coupled together: fiftie loupes vpō euery curtayne, wherby one might be coupled to another. And made fiftie buttons of golde, and with the buttons he coupled the curtaynes together one to the other, that it might be one couerynge.

And he made xj. curtaynes of goates hayre (for the tent ouer the habitacion) of thirtie cubytes longe, & foure cubytes brode, all of one measure, & coupled fyue together by them selues, and sixe by them selues, & made fiftie loupes a longe by y^e edge of euery curtayne, wherby they might be coupled together, & made fiftie buttons of brasse, to couple y^e tent together withall. And made ouer y^e tent a couerynge of reed skynnes of rāmmes, and ouer that a couerynge of Doo skynnes

D And made standinge bordes for the Habitation, of Fyrre tre, euery one ten cubytes longe, and a cubyte and a half brode, τ two fete vnto euery one, wherby one might be ioyned to another: that on the south syde there stode twentye of the same bordes: and made fourtye syluer sokettes there vnder, vnder euery borde two sokettes for his two fete. In like maner for the other syde of the Habitation towarde the north, he made twentye bordes also with fourtye syluer sokettes, vnder euery borde two sokettes: But behynde the Habitation vpon the west syde, he made sixe bordes, and two other for the corners of the Habitation behynde, that either of them both might be ioyned with his corner borde from vnder vp, and aboue vpon the heade to come together with a clampe: so that there were eight bordes, and sixtene sokettes of syluer, vnder euery one two sokettes.

E And he made barres of Fyrre tre, fyue for the bordes vpon the one syde of the Habitation, and fyue vpon the other syde, and fyue behynde towarde the west: and made the barres to shute throw the bordes, from the one ende to the other, and ouerlayde the bordes with golde. But their rynges made he of golde for the barres, and ouerlayde \mathfrak{f} barres with golde.

And made Cherubyns vpon the hangynge with broderd worke, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, τ whyte twyned sylke. And made for the same, foure pilers of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed them with golde, and their knoppes of golde, and cast foure sokettes of syluer for them.

And made an hanginge in the Tabernacle dore, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke, of nedle worke, and fyue pilers therto with their knoppes (τ ouerlayed their knoppes and whopes with golde) and fyue sokettes of brasse there to.

The xxxij. Chapter.

AND Bezaleel made the Arke of Fyrre tre, ^atwo cubites and a half lōge, a cubyte and a half brode, and a cubyte τ a half hie, and ouerlayed it with fyne golde within and without, and made a crowne of golde vnto it rounde aboute, and cast for it foure rynges of golde to the foure corners of it, vpon euery syde two. And made staues of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed thē with golde, and put them in the rynges a longe by \mathfrak{f} sydes of the Arke, to beare it withall.

And he made \mathfrak{f} Mercyseate of pure golde two cubytes and a half longe, and a cubyte and a half brode, τ made two Cherubyns of fyne beaten golde vpon the two endes of the Mercyseate: One Cherub vpon the one ende, and the other Cherub vpon the other ende: and the Cherubyns spredde out their wynges aboue an hie, and couered \mathfrak{f} Mercyseate ther with: and their faces stode one ouer agaynst the other, and loked vnto the Mercyseate.

And he made \mathfrak{f} table, of Fyrre tre, two cubytes longe, ^ba cubyte brode, and a cubyte τ a half hie, and ouerlayed it with fyne golde, and made therto a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and made vnto it an whoope of an hande bredth hie, and made a crowne of golde rounde aboute the whoope. And for it he cast foure golde rynges, τ put them in the foure corners by the fete harde by the whoope, that the staues might be therin, to beare the table withall: τ made the staues of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed thē with golde, to beare the staues withall. And the vessels vpon the table made he also of fyne golde: the disshes, spones, flat peces and pottes, to poure in and out withall.

And he made the candilstick of fyne beaten golde, ^cwhere vpon was the shaft with braunches, cuppes, knoppes, τ floures. Sixe braunches proceeded out of \mathfrak{f} sydes therof, vpon either syde thre braunches: vpō euery braunch were thre cuppes like allmōdes, with knoppes and floures. Vpon the candilstick self were foure cuppes with knoppes and floures, vnder euery two braunches a knoppe. The knoppes τ braunches therof proceeded out of it, and were all one pece of fyne beaten golde. And he made the seuen lampes with their snoffers τ outquenchers of pure golde. Of an hūdreth weight of golde made he it, and all the apparell thereof.

He made also the altare of incense, of Fyrre tre, a cubyte longe and brode, eauen foure squared, and two cubytes hie with the hornes of it, and ouerlayed it with fyne golde, the toppe and the sydes of it rounde aboute, and the hornes therof, and made a crowne vnto it rounde aboute of pure golde, τ two golde rynges vnder the crowne on both the sydes, to put the staues therin, and to beare it withall: but the staues made he of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed them with golde.

The xxxviiiij. Chapter.

AND the altare of burntoffrynges made he of Fyre tre, ^a fyue cubytes lōge & brode, eauen foure squared, & thre cubytes hye. And made foure hornes, which proceeded out of the foure corners therof, and ouerlaid it with brasse. And he made all maner of vessels for the altare, cauldrons, shouels, basens, fleshokes, and colepannes all of brasse. And vnto the altare he made a brasen gredyron of net worke rounde aboute, from vnder vp vnto the myddest of the altare, & cast foure rynges in the foure corners of the brasen gredyron, for the staues: which he made of Fyre tre, and ouerlaid them with brasse, and put them in the rynges by the sydes of the altare, to beare it withall, and made it holowe with bordes.

And he made the Lauer of brasse, & his fote also of brasse vpon the place of ſ hoost, that laye before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

B And he made the courte on ſ south syde: hangynges an hundreth cubytes longe, of whyte twyned sylke, with the twētye pilers therof, and twentye sokettes of brasse: but the knoppes and whoopes of syluer. In like maner vpon the north syde an hundreth cubytes with twentye pilers, and twentye sokettes of brasse, but their knoppes & whoopes of syluer. Vpon the west syde fiftie cubytes with ten pilers and tē sokettes, but their knoppes and whoopes of syluer. Vpon the East syde fiftie cubytes. Fiftene cubytes vpon either syde of the courte dore, with thre pilers and thre sokettes: So that all the hanginges of the courte were of whyte twyned sylke, and the sokettes of the pilers were of brasse, & their knoppes and whoopes of syluer: their heades were ouerlaid with syluer, & all the pilers of the courte were whooped aboute with syluer.

C And the hangynge in ſ courte gate made he with nedle worke, of yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke, twentye cubytes longe, & fyue cubytes hye, after the measure of the hanginges of the courte: foure pilers also therto, & foure sokettes of brasse, and their knoppes of syluer, and their heades ouerlaid, and their whoopes of syluer. And all the nales of the Habitation and of the courte rounde aboute, were of brasse.

This is now the summe of the Habitation of wytnesse (which was counted at the cōmaundemēt of Moses to ſ Gods seruice of the Leuites vnder the hāde of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest) which Bezaleel the sonne of Uri, the sonne of Hur of the trybe of Iuda made, all as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And with him Abihail ſ sonne of Ahisamach of the trybe of Dan, a connyngre grauer, to worke nedle worke, with yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte sylke.

All the golde ſ was wrought in all this worke of the Sanctuary (which was geuen to the Waue offerynge) is nyne & twenty hundreth weight, seuen hundreth & thirtie Sycles, after ſ Sycle of ſ Sanctuary. * The syluer ſ came of the congregacion, was fyue score hundreth weight, a thousande, seuen hundreth, fyue and seuentye Sycles, after ſ Sycle of the Sanctuary: so many heades so many half Sycles, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary, of all that were nombred from twentye yeare olde and aboue, euen sixe hundreth thousande, thre thousande, fyue hundreth and fiftye.

Of the fyue score hundreth weight of syluer, were cast the sokettes of the Sanctuary, and the sokettes of the vayle, an hundreth sokettes of the fyue score hundreth weight, an hundreth weight to euery sokett. Of the thousande, seuen hundreth and fyue and seuentye Sycles were made the knoppes of the pilers (and their heades ouerlaid) and their whoopes.

As for the Waue offerynge of brasse, it was seuentye hundreth weight, two thousande and foure hundreth Sycles: Wherof were made the sokettes in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the brasen altare, and the brasen gredyron therto, and all the vessels of the altare, and the sokettes of ſ courte rounde aboute, and the sokettes of ſ courte gate, all ſ nales of the Habitation, & all ſ nales of ſ courte rounde aboute.

The xxxij. Chapter.

OF the yalowe sylke, scarlet, & purple, they ^a made Aarons mynistringe vestimentes, to do seruycce in the Sanctuary, as ſ LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

And he made the ouer body cote, of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke, and bett the golde in to thinne plates, and cut it in to wyres, that it might be wrought amonge the yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte sylke, & made it so, that ȝ ouerbody cote came together by the edges on both the sydes. And his gyrdel was after the same craft & worke: euē of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte twyned sylke, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And they wrought two Onix stones, set rounde aboute with golde, grauen by the stone grauer with the names of the childrē of Israel: and fastened them vpo the shulders of the ouerbody cote, that they might be stones of remembraunce vnto the children of Israel, as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

33 And they made the brestlappe after the craft & worke of the ouerbody cote: of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke, so that it was foure square & dubble, an hande bredth longe and brode, and fylled it with foure rowes of stones. The first rowe was: a Sardis, a Topas, and a Smaragde. The secōde: a Ruby, a Saphyre, and a Dya-monde. The thirde: a Liguriōs, an Achat, and an Amatist. The fourth: a Turcas, an Onix & a Iaspis: closed rounde aboute with golde in all the rowes. And the stones stode after the twolue names of the children of Israel, grauen by the stone grauer, euery one with his name, acordinge to the twolue trybes.

And vpon the brestlappe they made wrythen cheynes of pure golde, and two hokes of golde, & two golde rynges, and fastened the two rynges vpon the two edges of the brestlappe: and ȝ two wrythen cheynes put they in the two rynges vpon the corners of the brestlappe. But the two endes of ȝ wrethen cheynes put they to the two hokes, & fastened them vpon the corners of the ouer body cote, one ouer agaynst another.

C And they made two other rynges of golde, & fastened them to the other two corners of the brestlappe by the edge of it, that it might hange vpon the out syde of the ouerbody cote. And they made yet two other golde rynges, which they put beneth vpon the two corners of the ouerbody cote, one ouer agaynst another, where the ouerbody cote ioyneth together, that the brestlappe might be festened by his rynges vnto ȝ rynges of the ouerbody cote with a yalowe lace, that it might lye close vpon ȝ ouerbody cote, and not be lowsed from ȝ ouerbody cote, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And he made the tuncyle vnto the ouerbody cote, wrought all of yalow sylke, & the hole therof aboute in the myddest, & a bonde foldē together rounde aboute the hole, that it shulde not rente. And beneth vpon ȝ hemme of it, they made pomgranates of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke: & they made belles of pure golde, which they put betwixte ȝ pomgranates rounde aboute vpon the hemme of the tuncyle, a bell & a pomgranate, a bell & a pomgranate rounde aboute, to do seruyce in, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And they made albes also wrought of whyte sylke for Aaron & his sonnes, & ȝ myter of whyte sylke, and the goodly bonettes of whyte sylke, and breches of twyned whyte linnen, and the girdle of nedle worke euen of whyte twyned sylke, yalow sylke, scarlet, and purple, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

They made the fore heade plate also to ȝ holy crowne, of pure golde, and wrote therein with grauen worke: the holynes of the LORDE, and festened a yalowe lace thereon, to tye it vnto the myter aboute, as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

Thus the whole worke of ȝ Habitation of ȝ Tabernacle of wytnesse, was fynished. And the childrē of Israel dyd all that the LORDE cōmaunded Moses, & brought the Habitation vnto Moses: the Tabernacle & all the apparell therof, the buttons, bordes, barres, pilers, sokettes, ȝ couerynge of reed skynnes of rammes, the couerynge of doo skynnes, & the vayle, ȝ Arke of wytnesse with the staues therof, the Mercyseate, the table & all his apparell, & the shewbred, the candlesticke, with the lampes prepared, and all his apparell, & oyle for the lightes, the golden altare, the anyntinge oyle & incense, the hanginge in the Tabernacle dore, the brasen altare, & his brasen gredyron with his staues, & all his apparell, ȝ lauer with his foote, the hangynges of ȝ courte with the pilers & sokettes therof, ȝ hanginge in the courte gate with his pilers & nales, & all the ordynance for the seruyce of the Habitation of ȝ Tabernacle of wytnesse, ȝ mynistringe vestimētes of Aarō ȝ prest, to do seruyce in ȝ Sanctuary, & the garmētes of his sonnes, ȝ they might execute ȝ prestes office. Acordinge to all that ȝ LORDE cōmaunded Moses, euē so dyd the childrē of Israel in all this seruyce. And Moses sawe all ȝ worke, ȝ they dyd it euē as ȝ LORDE had commaunded, and he blessed them.

The xl. Chapter.

AND f LORDE spake vnto Moses, g sayde: In the fyrst daye of the first moneth shalt thou set vp f Habitaciō of f Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shal put the Arke of wytnes therin, and hange the vayle before f Arke. And thou shalt bringe in the table, and garnish it, and brynge in the cādilstickē, and put the lampes theron. And f goldē altare of incense shalt thou set before f Arke of wytnesse, g hange vp the hanginge in the dore of the Habitaciō. But the altare of burntofferings shalt thou set before the dore of the Habitacion of the Tabernacle of wytnesse: g the lauer betwixte the Tabernacle of wytnesse and the altare, and put water therin, g set the courte rounde aboute, and hange vp the hanginge in the courte gate.

And thou shalt take the anyoyntynge oyle, and anyointe the Habitacion and all that is there in, *and shalt consecrate it, and all f apparell therof, that it maye be holy. And thou shalt anyointe the altare of burntofferings and all his vessels, and consecrate it, that it maye be most holy. The lauer also g his fote shalt thou anyointe g consecrate.

And thou shalt brynge Aaron g his sonnes vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and wash them with water, g put the holy vestimentes vpon Aaron, and anyointe him, and consecrate him, that he maye be my prest. And thou shalt brynge his sonnes also, and put the albes vpon them, and anyointe them, as thou hast anyoynted their father, f they maye be my prestes. And this anyoyntinge shall they haue for an euerlastinge presthode amonge their posterities. †And Moses dyd all as the LORDE cōmaunded him.

Thus was the Tabernacle set vp in the seconde yeaue vpon the first daye of the first moneth. And whan Moses reared it vp, he fastened f sokettes and the bordes, and barres, and set vp the pilers, and spred out the tent ouer the Habitacion, and put the couerynge of the tent aboute an hye, as the LORDE commaunded him. And he toke the wytnesse, and layed it in the Arke, and put f stauēs in the Arke, and set the Mercyseate aboute vpon the Arke, and brought the Arke in to the Habitacion, and hanged the vayle before the Arke of wytnesse, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set the table in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, in the corner of the Habitacion vpon the north syde without the vayle, and prepared bred theron before f LORDE †as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set in the candilstickē also, euen ouer agaynst the table, in the corner of the Habitacion vpon the south syde, and put the lampes theron before f LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded him. And the golden altare set he in also before the vayle, and brent swete incense theron, as the LORDE commaunded him. And hanged vp the hanginge in the Tabernacle dore. As for the altare of burntofferings, he set it before the dore of the Habitacion of f Tabernacle of wytnesse, and offred burntofferings and meate offerings theron, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And the Lauer set he betwixte the Tabernacle of wytnesse and f altare, and put water therin to wash withall. And Moses, Aaron and his sonnes washed their hādes and fete ther at: for they ought to wash thē, whan they wente in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or whan they wente vnto the altare, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set vp the courte rounde aboute the Habitacion and the altare, and hanged vp f hanginge in f courte gate. Thus Moses fynished the whole worke.

Then a cloude couered f Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the glory of the LORDE fylled the Habitacion. And Moses coulde not go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, whyle the cloude abode theron, and the glory of f LORDE fylled the Habitacion.

And whan the cloude remoued from the Habitacion, then wente the children of Israel forth, as oft as they toke their iourney. But yf the cloude remoued not, then toke not they their iourney, tyll the daie that it remoued: for in the daye tyme was the cloude of the LORDE vpon the Habitacion, g in the night season was fyre therin, in f sight of all f house of Israel, in all their iourneis.

The first Chapter.

AND the LORDE called Moses,* and spake vnto him out of y^e Tabernacle of wytnesse, and sayde: Speake vnto y^e childrē of Israel, ¶ saie vnto them: Who so euer amōge you wyl bryng an offeryng vnto the LORDE, let him bryng it of y^e catell, euen of the oxen, ¶ of the shepe.

Yf he wyl bryng a burntofferiſſe of y^e oxen (or greate catell) thē let him offre a male without blemish, before y^e dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, to reconcyle him self before the LORDE,† let him laye his hande vpon the heade of the burntofferiſſe, then shal he be reconcyled, so y^e God shalbe mercifull vnto him.

B And he shall kyll the yonge oxe before y^e LORDE: and y^e prestes Aarons sonnes shal bryng the bloude, and sprenkle it rounde aboute vpon the altare, that is before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the skynne shalbe flayne from of the burntofferiſſe, and it shalbe hewen in peces. And the sonnes of Aaron the prest shal make a fyre vpon the altare, and laye wod aboute thereon: and y^e peces, the heade, and the fatt shal they laye vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon y^e fyre on the altare. But y^e bowels ¶ legges shal be waszshen with water, and the prest shal burne altogether vpon the altare for a burnt sacrifice:

this is an offeryng of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

Yf he wyl offre a burnt sacrifice of the small catell, that is, of the lambes or goates, then let him offre a male without a blemish. And he shall kyll it before the LORDE, euen at the corner of the altare on the north syde before y^e LORDE. And (the prestes) Aarons sonnes shal sprenkle his bloude rounde aboute vpon y^e altare, and it shal be hewen in peces. And the prest shall laye them with the heade and the fatt, vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre on the altare. But the bowels and y^e legges shal be waszshen with water. And y^e prest shal offre it altogether, and burne it vpon y^e altare for a burnt sacrifice. This is an offeryng of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

But yf he wil offre a burnt sacrifice of y^e foules vnto the LORDE, then let him offre it of the turtill dones or of y^e yonge pigeons. And the prest shal bryng it vnto the altare, and wrynge the neck of it a sunder, that it maye be burnt vpon the altare, and let the bloude of it runne out vpon the sydes of the altare, and the croppe of it with the fethers shalbe cast vpon the heape of aszshes besyde the altare towarde the east, and he shall deuyde the wynges of it, but not breake thē cleane of. And thus shall the prest burne it vpon the altare, euen vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre, for a burnt sacrifice. This is an offeryng of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

The ij. Chapter.

A WHAN a soule wyl offre a meatofferynge vnto the LORDE,* then shal it be of fyne floure, and he shal poure oyle vpon it, and put frankencense thereon, & so brynge it vnto Aarons sonnes the prestes. Then shal one of them take his handfull of the same floure, and oyle with all the frankencense, and burne it for a remembraunce vpon the altare. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. *As for þ̄ remnaunt of the meatofferynge, it shalbe Aarons and his sonnes. This shalbe þ̄ most holy of the offeringes of the LORDE.

But yf he wyl brynge a meatofferynge of that which is baken in the oven, then let him take swete cakes of wheate, mixte with oyle, and vnuendued wafers anyoynted with oyle. Neuertheles yf thy meatofferynge be eny thinge of that which is fryed in the panne, then shal it be of fyne swete floure myxte with oyle: And thou shalt cut it in peces, & poure oyle thereon: so is it a meatofferynge. But yf thy meatofferynge be ought broyled on the gredyron, then shalt thou make it of fyne floure with oyle. And the meatofferynge that thou wilt make of such thinges for the LORDE, shalt thou brynge vnto þ̄ prest, which shal brynge it vnto the altare, & shal Heue vp the same meatofferynge for a remembraunce, and burne it vpon the altare. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. As for the remnaunt, it shal be Aarons and his sonnes. This shal be the most holy of the offeringes of the LORDE.

All the meatofferynges that ye wil offre vnto the LORDE, shal ye make without leuē. For there shal no leuē nor hony be burnt for an offeringe vnto the LORDE. But for the offeringe of the firstlings shal ye offer thē vnto the LORDE. Neuertheles they shal come vpon no altare for a swete sauoure.

All thy meatofferynges shalt thou + salt. And thy meatofferynge shal neuer be without þ̄ salt of the couenaunt of thy God: for in all thy offeringes shalt thou offre salt.

But yf thou wilt offre a meatofferynge of the first frutes vnto þ̄ LORDE, then shalt thou drye that which is grene, by the fyre, & beate it small, and so offre the meatofferynge of thy first frutes. And thou shalt put oyle vpon it, and laye frankencense thereon, so is it a meatofferynge. And then shall the prest beate it, and burne of the oyle with all the frankencense for a remembraunce. This is an offeringe vnto the LORDE.

The iij. Chapter.

BUT yf his offeringe be a deedofferynge of greate catell (whether it be ox or cowe) then shal he offre such as is without blemish before the LORDE, & shal laie his hande vpon the heade of it, and kyll it before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prestes Aarons sonnes, shall sprenkle the bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, and shal offre of þ̄ deedofferynge vnto the LORDE: namely, all the fat that is within, and the two kydneyes with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, and the nett on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also. And Aarons sonnes shal burne it vpon the altare for a burntofferynge, euen vpon the wod that lyeth on the fyre. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

Yf his deedofferynge be of small catell, whether it be male or female, it shal be without blemish: Yf it be a lambe, then shall he brynge it before the LORDE, & shal laye his hande vpon the heade of it, and sleye it before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aarons sonnes shal sprenkle his bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, and so offre of the deedofferynge vnto the LORDE: namely, the fat of it, all the rompe with the backe, and the fat that couereth the bowels, with all þ̄ fat that is within, and the two kydneyes with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, & the nett on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also. And the prest shal burne it vpon the altare, for þ̄ meate of the offeringe vnto þ̄ LORDE.

But yf his offeringe be a goate, and bringeth it before the LORDE, he shal laye his hande vpon the heade of it, and kyll it before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aarons sonnes shal sprinkle the bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, & shal offer therof a sacrifice vnto the LORDE: namely, the fat þ̄ couereth the bowels, and all the fat þ̄ is within, the two kydneyes with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, & the net on the leuer vpon the kydneyes. And the prest shal burne it vpon the altare, for the meate of the sacrifice to a swete sauoure.

*All the fatt is the LORDES. Let this be a perpetuall lawe amonge youre posterities in all youre dwellynges, that ye eate no fatt, *ner bloude.

The iij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ^a sayde: Speake vnto the childrē of Israel, and saye: Whan a soule synneth thorow ignorance in any commaundemēt of the LORDE, which he ought not to do: As namely, yf a prest which is anoynted, synne, that he make the people do amysse, he shall brynge for ^b \hat{y} synne that he hath done, a yonge bullocke without blemysh vnto the LORDE for a synofferynge. ^c And the bullocke shal he brynge to the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE, ^d τ laie his hāde vpō his heade, τ kyll him before ^e \hat{y} LORDE. And ^f \hat{y} prest \hat{y} is anoynted, shal take of his bloude, τ brynge it in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And he shall dyppe his fynger in to the bloude, τ sprenkle therwith seuen tymes before the LORDE, towarde the vayle of ^g \hat{y} Holy. And he shal put of the same bloude vpon the hornes of the altare of incense, \hat{y} stondesth before ^h \hat{y} LORDE in the Tabernacle of wytnesse: τ all the bloude of the bullocke shal he poure vpon the botome of the altare of burntofferings, \hat{y} stondesth at the entringe in of ⁱ \hat{y} Tabernacle of wytnesse. And all the fat of the synofferynge shal he Heue vp: namely, the fat ^j \hat{y} couereth the bowels, τ all the fat ^k \hat{y} is within, \hat{y} two kydneyes with the fatt that is theron vpon the loynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also (like as he Heueth it from the oxe in the dead-offerynge) and shall burne it vpon the altare of burntofferings. But the skynne of the bullocke, ^l and all the flesh, with the heade τ legges, τ the bowels and the donge, shal he cary alltogether out of the hoost, in to a cleane place, where ^m \hat{y} aszhes are poured out, τ shal burne it vpon wodd with fyre.

Whan the whole cōgregation of Israel synneth thorow ignorance, τ the dede be hyd from their eyes, so ⁿ \hat{y} they do ought agaynst eny of the cōmaundementes of the LORDE, which they shulde not do, τ come afterwarde to the knowledge of the synne that they haue done, they shal bringe a yonge bullocke for a synofferynge, and set him before ^o \hat{y} dore of ^p \hat{y} Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the Elders of the cōgregation shall laye their handes vpon his heade before the LORDE, τ kyll ^q \hat{y} bullocke before the LORDE. And ^r \hat{y} prest \hat{y} is anoynted shal brynge of ^s \hat{y} bullockes bloude in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, τ dyppeth in with his fynger, and sprenkle therwith seuen tymes before the LORDE, eue before the vayle of the Holy. And shall put of the bloude vpon the hornes of the altare, \hat{y} stondesth before the LORDE in the Tabernacle of wytnesse: τ all ^t \hat{y} other bloude shal he poure vpō the botome of ^u \hat{y} altare of burntofferings, \hat{y} stondesth before the dore of ^v \hat{y} Tabernacle of wytnesse. But all his fatt shal he Heue vp, τ burne it vpō the altare: τ shal do with this bullocke, as he dyd with ^w \hat{y} bullocke of the synofferynge: Thus the prest shal make an attonement for them, τ it shall be forgeuen them. And the bullocke shall he brynge without the hoost, and burne him, as he brent ^x \hat{y} first bullocke. This shalbe ^y \hat{y} synofferynge of the cōgregation.

Whan a pryncce synneth, τ doth agaynst the cōmaundement of the LORDE his God, ^z \hat{y} he ought not to do, τ offendeth ignorantly, τ commeth to the knowlege of his synne ^{aa} \hat{y} he hath done, he shal bringe for his offeringe an he goate without blemysh, τ laye his hande vpō the goates heade, τ slaye him in ^{ab} \hat{y} place where ^{ac} \hat{y} burntofferings are slayne before ^{ad} \hat{y} LORDE. The shal ^{ae} \hat{y} prest take of ^{af} \hat{y} bloude of ^{ag} \hat{y} synofferynge with his fynger, and put it vpon the altare of burntofferings, τ poure the other bloude vpon the botome of the altare of burntofferings. But all the fat of it shal he burne vpō the altare, like as the fat of the healthofferynge. And so the prest shal make an attonement for his synne, and it shal be forgeuen him.

Whā a soule of ^{ah} \hat{y} comon people synneth ignorantly, doinge eny thinge agaynst the cōmaundement of the LORDE, ^{ai} \hat{y} he ought not to do, τ so offendeth, τ cōmeth to ^{aj} \hat{y} knowlege of the synne ^{ak} \hat{y} he hath done, he shal bringe for his offeringe a she goate without blemysh, for the synne ^{al} \hat{y} he hath done, and shal laye his hande vpon the heade of the synofferynge, τ slaye it in the place of the burntofferings. And the prest shall take of the bloude with his fynger, ⁊ put it vpon the hornes of ⁊ altare of burntofferynge, ⁊ poure all the bloude vpon the botome of the altare. But all the fat of it shal he take awaye, like as he taketh awaye the fat of the dead-offerynge, and shal burne it vpon the altare for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. And so shal the prest make an attonemēt for him, and it shal be forgeuen him.

But yf he brynge a lambe for a synofferynge, then let him brynge a female without blemysh, and laye his hande vpon the heade of the synofferynge, ⁊ kyll it for a synofferynge, in the place where the burntofferynge are slayne. And the prest shal take of ⁊ bloude with his fynger, ⁊ put it vpon the hornes of the altare of burntofferynge, ⁊ poure all the bloude vpon the botome of the altare. But all ⁊ fatt therof shal he take fro it, like as he dyd the fat of the lambe of the healthofferynge, ⁊ shal burne it vpon ⁊ altare for the LORDES sacrifice. And so ⁊ prest shal make an attonement for the synne that he hath done, and it shalbe forgeuen him.

The b. Chapter.

WHAN a soule synneth, ⁊ he heare a cursyng, and is wytnesse therof, or hath sene it, or knowne it, ⁊ telleth it not, he is giltye of a trespass. Or whan a soule toucheth eny vnclane thinge, whether it be ⁊ carion of an vnclane beast, or catell, or worne, ⁊ was not awarre of it, he is vnclane, and hath offended. Or whan he toucheth an vnclane man (what vn clenness so euer a man is defyled withall) ⁊ was not awarre of it, ⁊ afterwarde cometh to ⁊ knowlege therof, ⁊ same hath offended. Or whan a soule sweareth, so ⁊ he pronounceth with his mouth to do euell or good (what so euer it be that a man pronounceth with an ooth) ⁊ was not awarre of it, ⁊ afterwarde cometh to the knowlege therof, he hath offended in one of these.

Now whan it so is, ⁊ he hath offended in one of these, ⁊ is enformed therof, what he hath synned, he shal bringe vnto ⁊ LORDE for his trespass of this his synne ⁊ he hath done, a female from the flocke, either a yewe or a she goate for a synofferynge: so shal the prest make an attonement for him concernynge his synne. But yf he be not able to brynge a shepe, then let him brynge vnto ⁊ LORDE for his offence that he hath done, two turtill doues or two yonge pigeons: one for a synofferynge, the other for a burntofferynge, and brynge them to the prest: Which shall make the first a synofferynge, and fyrst wringe the neck of it, so that he plucke it not cleane of, and sprenkle with the bloude vpon the sydes of the altare, and let the resydue of the bloude blede out vpon the botome of the altare: This is the synofferynge. As for the other, he shal make it a burntofferynge, after the maner therof. And thus shall the prest make an attonement for him concernynge the synne that he hath done, ⁊ it shalbe forgeuen him. But yf he be not able to brynge two turtill doues or two yonge pigeons, then let him brynge his offerynge for his synne, a tenth deale of an Ephā of fyne floure for a synofferynge. But he shall put no oyle theron, ner laye frankēcense vpon it, for it is a synofferynge. And he shal brynge it vnto the prest, ⁊ ⁊ prest shal take his hād full of it for a remembrance, and burne it vpon the altare for an offerynge vnto the LORDE. This is a synofferynge. And so shal the prest make an attonement for him, concernynge his synne that he hath done, ⁊ it shalbe forgeuen him. And the remnaunt shall be the prestes, like a meatofferynge.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ sayde: Yf a soule trespass, so ⁊ thorow ignoraunce he offendeth in any thinge ⁊ is halowed vnto the LORDE, he shal brynge his trespassofferynge vnto the LORDE, euen a ramme from ⁊ flocke without blemysh, worth two Sycles of syluer, after the Sytle of the Sanctuary, for a trespass offerynge: and loke what he hath offended in the halowed thinge, he shall make restitution, ⁊ geue the fifth parte more therto. And he shal delyuer it vnto ⁊ prest, which shall make an attonement for him with the ramme of the trespass-offerynge, ⁊ it shalbe forgeuen him.

Whan a soule synneth, and doth ought agaynst eny comāndement of the LORDE, ⁊ he shulde not do, ⁊ is informed therof, he hath trespassed, ⁊ is giltye of the synne. And he shal brynge from the flocke a ramme with out blemysh (that is worth a trespassofferynge) vnto the prest, which shal make an attonement for him concernynge his ignoraunce which he dyd, and was not awarre, and it shalbe forgeuen him. This is the trespac-offerynge, because he trespaced agaynst the LORDE.

¶ And ¶ LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Whan a soule synneth, & trespaceth agaynst the LORDE, so that he denyeth vnto his neghboure that which he gaue him to kepe, or that was put vnder his hande, or that he hath violently taken awaye, or gotten vnrighteously, or founde that was lost, and denyeth it with a false ooth, what so euer it be, wherin a man synneth agaynst his neghboure. Now whan it commeth so to passe, that he synneth after this maner, & trespaceth, he shal restore agayne that he toke violently awaye, or gat wrongeously, or that was geuen him to kepe, or that he hath founde, or what so euer it be aboute ¶ which he hath sworne falsely, he shal restore it againe whole altogether, and geue the fifth parte more therto, euen to him that it belonged vnto, the same daye that he geueth his trespac-offerynge. But for his trespac he shall brynge for the LORDE (euen vnto the prest) a ramme from the flocke without blemyshe, that is worth a trespac-offerynge. Then shall the prest make an attonement for him before the LORDE, and all that he hath synned in, shalbe forgeuen him.

The vi. Chaptr.

¶ AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commaunde Aaron and his sonnes, and saye: This is the lawe of the burnt-offerynge. The burnt-offerynge shall burne vpon the altare all night vntyll the mornynge. But the fyre of the altare onely shal burne theron. ¶ And ¶ prest shal put on his lynen albe, and his lynen breches vpon his flesh, and shal take vp the aszshes, that the fyre of the burnt-offerynge vpon the altare hath made, and shall poure them besyde the altare. Then shall he put of his rayment, and put on other rayment, and cary out the aszshes without the hoost, in to a cleane place.

The fyre vpon the altare shal burne, and neuer go out. The prest shal kyndle wode theron euery mornynge, and dresse the burnt-offerynge vpon it, and burne the far of the deed-offerynges theron. The fyre shall euer burne vpon the altare, and neuer go out.

¶ And this is the lawe of the meat-offerynge, which Aarons sonnes shall offre before the LORDE vpon the altare. One of them shall Heue his handfull of fyne floure of ¶ meat-offerynge, and of the oyle, and all the frankensce that lyeth vpon the meat-offerynge, and shall burne it vpon the altare for a swete sauoure a remembrance vnto the LORDE. As for the remnaunt, Aaron and his sonnes shal eate it, and vnleued shal they eate it in the holy place, namely, in the courte of the Tabernacle of witnessse. With leuē shal they not bake their porcion, which I haue geuen them of my offerynges. It shalbe vnto them most holy, as the synofferynge and trespac-offerynge. All the males amonge the children of Aaron shal eate of it. Let this be a perpetuall lawe for youre posterities in the sacrifices of the LORDE. No man shall touch it, excepte he be consecrated.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: This shalbe the offerynge of Aaron and of his sonnes, which they shall offre vnto the LORDE in the daie of their anyntinge. The tenth parte of an Ephā of fyne floure for a meat-offerynge daylie, the one half parte in the mornynge, the other half parte at euen. In the panne with oyle shall thou make it, and brynge it fryed, and in peces shalt thou offer it for the swete sauoure of the LORDE. And the prest which amonge his sonnes shalbe anyoynted in his steade, shall do this. This is a perpetuall dewtye vnto the LORDE. It shal be burnt altogether: for all the meat-offerynges of the prest shalbe consumed with the fyre, and not be eaten.

¶ And ¶ LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes, and saye: This is the lawe of the synofferynge: In the place where thou slayest ¶ burnt-offerynge, shalt thou slaye the synofferynge also before the LORDE. This is most holy. * The prest that offereth the synofferynge, shal eate it in the holy place, in the courte of ¶ Tabernacle of witnessse. No man shal touch ¶ flesh therof, excepte he be halowed. And yf eny garment be sprenkled with the bloude of it, it shalbe washē in the holy place. And † the earthē pot that it is sodden in, shalbe broken. But yf it be a brasen pot, it shalbe scoured, and rēsed with water. All ¶ males amonge the prestes shall eate therof, for it is most holy. Notwithstandinge all ¶ synofferynge whose bloude is brought in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse to make an attone-ment, shall not be eaten, but burnt with fyre.

The vij. Chapter.

AND this is the lawe of the trespac-offerynge, and it shal be most holy. In the place where the burntofferynge is slayne, shall the trespacofferynge be slayne also, & there shall of his bloude be sprenkled rounde aboute vpon the altare. And all his fat shalbe offered: the rompe and the fat \hat{y} couereth the bowels, the two kydneys with the fat \hat{y} is theron vpon the loynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also. And the prest shal burne it vpon the altare for an offerynge vnto the LORDE. This is a trespac-offerynge.

All the males amonge the prestes shal eate it in the holy place, for it is most holy: euen as the synofferynge, so shall the trespac-offerynge be also, they shall both haue one lawe: and it shal be the prestes, that recon-cyleth ther with. Loke which prest offereth eny mans burntofferynge, the skynne of the same burntoffrynge that he hath offered, shalbe his. And euery meatofferynge that is baken in the ouen, roasted vpon the gredyron, or fried in the panne, shal be the prestes \hat{y} offereth it. And euery meatofferynge \hat{y} is myngled with oyle, or drye, shal belonge vnto all Aaron sonnes, vnto one as well as another.

13 And this is \hat{y} lawe of the healthofferynge, that is offered vnto the LORDE, * Yf they will offre a sacrifice of thankesgeuynge, then shal they offre vneleuded cakes meyled with oyle, and swete wafers straked ouer with oyle, and fried cakes of fyne flour meyled with oyle. This offerynge also shall they brynge vpon a cake of leuended bred, to the thank-offerynge of his healthofferynge: and of them all he shall offre one for an Heueofferynge vnto the LORDE. And it shalbe the prestes, that sprenkleth the bloude of the health-offerynge. And the flesh of the thankofferynge in his healthofferynges, shalbe eaten the same daye that it is offered, and there shall nothinge be left ouer vntyll the mornyng.

And whether it be a vowe or a fre wyl-offerynge, \hat{y} it shalbe eaten the same daye that it is offered: yf ought be left ouer vntyll the mornyng, yet maye it be eaten. But loke what remayneth vnto \hat{y} thirde daye of the flesh that is offered, it shalbe brent with the fyre. And yf eny man vpon the thirde daie eate of \hat{y} offred flesh of his healthofferynge, he shall not be accepted that offred it. Nether shall it be rekened vnto him, but it shalbe refused. And loke which mysde eateth therof, the same is giltye of a mysdele.

And the flesh that toucheth eny vnclane thinge, shal not be eaten, but burnt with the fyre. But who so euer is cleane of body, shal eate of the flesh: and the soule that eateth of \hat{y} flesh of \hat{y} healthofferynge which belongeth vnto the LORDE, his vnclennes be vpon him, and he shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

And whan a soule toucheth eny vnclane thinge, whether it be an vnclane man, catell, or eny other abhominacion that is, and eateth of the flesh of the burntofferynge, that be-longeth vnto the LORDE, the same shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

And the LORDE talketh with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, & saye: "Ye shall eate no fat of oxen, lambes, and goates: neuerthelesse the fat of it that dyeth alone, and of such as is torne of wyld beasts, that maye ye occupye to all maner of vses, but ye shall not eate it.

For who so euer eateth the fat of \hat{y} beest that is geuen vnto the LORDE for an offer-ynge, the same soule shalbe roted out from his people. Morouer, \hat{y} ye shall eate no bloude, nether of catell, ner of foules, where so euer ye dwell. What soule eateth eny bloude, the same shall be roted out from his people.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Who so wyl offre his healthofferynge vnto the LORDE, the same shall also brynge with all, that belongeth vnto \hat{y} healthofferynge for the LORDE. But he shall brynge it with his hande for the offerynge of the LORDE: namely the fat vpon the brest shall he brynge, with the brest, to be a Waueofferynge before the LORDE. And the prest shall burne the fat vpon the altare, and the brest shalbe Aarons and his sonnes.

15 And the right shulder shal they geue vnto the prest for a gift of their healthofferynges. And loke which of Aarons sonnes offreth the bloude of the healthofferynges, and the fat, the same shall haue the right shulder for his parte. * For the Wauebrest and the Heue-shulder haue I taken of the children of Israel, and of their healthofferynges, and haue geuen them vnto Aaron the prest and vnto his sonnes for a perpetuall dewtye.

This is the anoyntinge of Aaron and of his sonnes, of the offerynges of the LORDE, in the daye whā Moses presented them to be prestes vnto the LORDE, what tyme as the LORDE commaunded (in the daye when he anoynted them) to be geuen them of the children of Israel for a perpetuall dewtye, and vnto all their posterities. And this is the lawe of the burntofferynge, of the meatofferynge, of the synofferynge, of the trespass offerynge, of the offerynge of consecracion, and of the healthofferynges, which the LORDE commaunded Moses vpon mount Sinai, in the daye when he gaue him in commaundement vnto the children of Israel, to offere their offerynges vnto ꝑ LORDE in the wyldernesse of Sinai.

The viij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ¶ sayde: Take Aaron and his sonnes with him, ¶ their vestimentes, ¶ the anoyntinge oyle, ¶ and a bullocke for a synofferynge, two rammes, and a maunde with vneuended bred, and call the whole congregacion together, before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. Moses dyd as the LORDE commaunded him, and gathered the congregacion together vnto the dore of ꝑ Tabernacle of wytnesse, and sayde vnto them: This is it, that the LORDE hath commaunded to do.

And he toke Aaron and his sonnes, and waszshed them with water, and put the albe vpō him, and girde him with the girdell, and put vpon him the yalowe tuncyle, and put the ouerbody cote vpon him, and girde him vpon the ouerbody cote, ¶ put the brestlappe theron, and in ꝑ brestlappe light and perfectnesse: And set the myter vpon his heade. And vpon the myter euen aboue his foreheade, put he a plate of golde on the holy crowne: as ꝑ LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

And Moses toke the †anoyntinge oyle, ¶ anoynted the Habitation, and all that was therein, and consecrated it, and sprenkled therewith seue tymes vpon the altare, and anoynted the altare with all his vessels, the lauer with his fote, that it might be consecrated: †and poured the anoyntinge oyle vpon Aarons heade, and anoynted him, ꝑ he might be consecrated.

And he brought Aarons sonnes, and put albes vpon them, and girde them with the girdle, and put bonettes vpon their heades, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he caused bringe a bullocke for a syn offerynge. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, and then was he slayne. And Moses toke of the bloude, ¶ put it vpon the hornes of the altare rounde aboute with his fynger, and purified the altare, and poured the bloude vpon the botome of the altare, and consecrated it, that he might reconcyle it. And toke all the fat vpō the bowels, the nett vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fat theron, and burned it vpon the altare. But the bullocke with his skynne, flesh, ¶ donge, burned he with fyre without the hoost, †as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he brought a ramme for a burnt-offerynge. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, ¶ then was he slayne. And Moses sprenkled of ꝑ bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute, hewed the ramme in peces, and burnt the heade, the peces, and the fatt. And waszshed the bowels and the legges with water, and so burnt ꝑ whole ramme vpō the altare. This was a burnt offerynge for a swete sauoure, euen a sacrifice vnto the LORDE, † as the LORDE commaunded him.

He brought also the other ramme of the offerynge of the consecracion. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their hādes vpon his heade, and then was it slayne. And Moses toke of his bloude, and put it vpon the type of Aarons right eare, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fote.

And he brought Aarons sonnes, and put of the bloude vpon the type of the right eare of them, and vpon ꝑ thombes of their righte handes, and vpon the greate toes of their righte fete, and poured the resydue of the bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute. And he toke the fat and the rompe, ¶ and all the fat vpon the bowels, and the nett vpon the leuer, the two kydneyes with the fat thereon, and the righte shulder. And out of the maunde of vneleueded bred before the LORDE, he toke an vneleueded cake, and a cake of oyled bred, and a wafer, and layed them vpon the fat, and vpon the right shulder, and put altogether vpon the handes of Aaron and of his sonnes, and waued it for a Waueofferynge before the LORDE.

¶ And afterwarde toke he all agayne from their hondes, and burned them on the altare, euen vpon the burnt offeringe: for it is an offeringe of consecracion for a swete sauoure, euen a sacrifice vnto ŷ LORDE. And Moses toke the brest, and *wa*ued it a Waueofferynge before the LORDE, of the ramme of the offeringe of consecracion: the same was Moses parte, as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And Moses toke of ŷ anyoyntinge oyle, α of the bloude vpon the altare, α sprenkled it vpon Aaron α his vestimentes, vpon his sonnes α vpon their vestimentes, and so cōsecrated Aaron α his vestimentes, his sonnes and their vestimentes with him.

¶ And he sayde vnto Aaron α his sonnes: Seeth ŷ flesh before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, α there eate it, α the bred in ŷ maunde of the cōsecracion offeringes, as it is cōmaunded me, α sayde: Aaron α his sonnes shall eate it. As for ŷ which remaineth of the flesh α bred, ye shal burne it with fyre. And in seue dayes shall ye not departe from ŷ dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, vntyll the daye, ŷ the dayes of youre consecracion offeringes be at an ende: for seue dayes must youre handes be consecrated, as it is come to passe this daye: The LORDE hath cōmaunded to do it, that ye might be reconeyled. And ye shal tary before the Tabernacle of wytnesse daye and night seuen dayes longe, α shal kepe ŷ watch of ŷ LORDE, that ye dye not, for thus am I cōmaunded. And Aaron with his sonnes dyd all, that ŷ LORDE commaunded by Moses.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ AND vpon the eight daye Moses called Aaron and his sonnes, and the Elders in Israel, and sayde vnto Aaron: Take vnto the a yonge calfe for a synofferynge, and a ramme for a burnt offeringe, both without blemysh, and bryngethem before the LORDE, and speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Take an he goate for a synofferynge: and a calf, and a shepe, both of a yeare olde, and without blemysh for a burnt offeringe: and an oxe and a ramme for an healthofferynge, that we maye offre before the LORDE: and a meatofferynge myngled with oyle. For to daye shal the LORDE appeare vnto you.

And they toke what Moses commaunded before ŷ dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the whole cōgregacion came nye, and stode before the LORDE. Then sayde Moses: This is it, which the LORDE commaunded that ye shulde do, and then shall the glory of ŷ LORDE appeare vnto you. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Go vnto ŷ altare, and *off*re thy synofferynge and thy burnt offeringe, and make an attonemēt for the and for the people. Then offre the peoples offeringe, and reconyle them also, as the LORDE hath commaunded.

¶ And Aaron wente vnto the altare, and slewe ŷ calfe for his synofferynge, α his sonnes brought the bloude vnto him. And he dypte his fynger in the bloude, and put it vpon the hornes of the altare, and poured ŷ bloude vpon ŷ botome of the altare. As for the fat and the kydneyes α the net vpon the leuer of the synofferynge, he burnt the vpon the altare, as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses. The flesh also and the hyde burnt he with fyre without the hoost.

Afterwarde he slewe the burnt offeringe, and Aarons sonnes brought the bloude vnto him, α he sprenkled it rounde aboute vpon the altare. And they brought him the burnt offeringe in peces, α the heade: α he burnt it vpon the altare. And he washed the bowels and the legges, and burnt them aboute vpon the burnt offeringe on the altare.

¶ Then brought he the offeringe of the people, and toke the goate, that synofferynge of the people, and slewe it, and made a synofferynge therof, as of the fyrst. And brought the burnt offeringe, and dyd as the lawe is: and brought the meatofferynge, and toke his handfull, and burnt it vpon the altare, besyde the burnt offeringe of the mornyng.

Afterwarde slewe he the oxe and the ramme for the healthofferynge of the people. And his sonnes brought him the bloude, which he sprekled vpon the altare rounde aboute. But the fat of the oxe & of the ramme, the rompe, and the fat that couereth the bowels, & the kydneyes, & the net vpon the leuer, all soch fat laied they vpon the brest, and burnt the fat vpon the altare. But the brest and the right shulder waued Aaron for a Waue-offerynge before the LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And Aaron lift vp his hāde ouer the people, and blessed them, and came downe from the worke of the synofferynge, burnt offerynge, and healthofferynge. And Moses and Aaron wente in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And whan they came out agayne, they blessed the people. Then appeared the glory of the LORDE vnto all the people. For there came *a fyre from the LORDE, and vpon the altare it consumed the burnt offerynge and the fat. Whan all the people sawe that, they reioysed, and fell vpon their faces.

The x. Chapter.

AND ¶ sonnes of Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, †toke ether of the his censoure, & put fyre therin, & layed incense vpon it, and brought straunge fyre before the LORDE, † which he commaunded them not. Then wente there out a fyre from ¶ LORDE, and consumed them, so that they dyed before the LORDE. Then sayde Moses vnto Aaron: This is it, that the LORDE sayde: I wil be sanctified vpon them that come nye me, and before all the people wil I be glorified. And Aaron helde his peace.

Moses called Misael and Elzaphan the sonnes of Vsiel Aarons vnclē, and sayde vnto them: Go to, and cary youre brethren out of the Sanctuary, without the hoost. And they wente, and caried them forth in their albes without the hoost, as Moses sayde.

Then sayde Moses vnto Aaron & to his sonnes Eleasar and Ithamar: † Ye shall not vncouer youre heades, ner rente youre clothes, that ye dye not, and the wrath come vpon the whole congregacion: Let youre brethre of the whole house of Israel bewepe this burnyng, which the LORDE hath done. As for you, ye shall not go out from the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, lest ye dye: for the anynt-inge oyle of the LORDE is vpon you. And they dyd as Moses sayde.

The LORDE spake vnto Aaron, & sayde: Thou & thy sonnes with the shal drynke no wyne ner stronge drynke, whan ye go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse: that ye dye not. Let this be a perpetuall lawe vnto all youre posterities: ¶ ye maye haue knowlege to discerne, what is holy and vnholly, what is cleane & vncleane: & that ye maye teach the children of Israel all the lawes, which the LORDE hath spoken vnto you by Moses.

And Moses sayde vnto Aaron, and vnto Eleasar and Ithamar his sonnes that were left: Take the remnaunt of the meatofferynge in the sacrifices of ¶ LORDE, and eate it without leuen besyde the altare, for it is most holy, euen in the holy place shal ye eate it. For it is thy dutye and thy sonnes dutye in the sacrifices of the LORDE: for thus am I commaunded. But the Wauebrest and the Heueshulder shalt thou eate, and thy sonnes and thy daughters with the in a cleane place. For this dutye is geuen vnto the and thy children in the deedofferynges of the children of Israel. For the Heueshulder and the Wauebrest to the offerynges of the fat, shalbe brought in, that they maye be waied for a Waueofferynge before the LORDE. Therefore is it thine and thy childrens for a perpetuall dutye, as the LORDE commaunded.

And Moses sought for the goate of the synofferynge, and founde it burnt. And he was angrie at Eleasar and Ithamar ¶ sonnes of Aaron, which were left alnye, and sayde: Wherefore haue ye not eaten the synofferynge in the holy place? for it is most holy, & he hath geuen it you, that ye might beare ¶ synne of the cōgregacion, to make agrement for them before the LORDE. Beholde, the bloude of it came not in to the Sanctuary: Ye shulde haue eaten it in the Sanctuary, as I was commaunded.

Aaron sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, this daye haue they offred their synofferynge & their burnt offerynge before ¶ LORDE. And it is chaused me after this maner. And shulde I eate of the synofferynge to daye, & be mery before the LORDE? Whan Moses herde that, he was content.

The xi. Chapter.

AND \S LORDE talked with Moses \S Aaron \S sayde: Speake vnto \S childrē of Israel, and saye: "These are the beestes which ye shal eate amōge all \S beestes vpō earth: What so euer hath hōffe, \S deuydeth it in to two clawes, \S cheweth cud amonge the beestes, that shal ye eate. But loke what cheweth cud \S hath hōffe, \S deuydeth it not, as the Camell, the same is vncleane vnto you, \S ye shal not eate it. The Conyes chewe cud, but they deuyde not the hōffe in to two clawes, therefore are they vncleane vnto you. The Hare cheweth cud also, but deuydeth not \S hōffe in to two clawes, therefore is he vncleane vnto you. And the Swyne deuydeth \S hōffe in to two clawes, but cheweth not the cud, therefore is it vncleane vnto you. Of the flesh of these shall ye not eate, ner touch their carcasses, for they are vncleane vnto you.

These shall ye eate of all that are in the waters: What so euer hath fynnes and scales in the waters, sees \S ryuers, that shal ye eate. But what so euer hath not fynnes and scales in the sees and ryuers, amonge all \S moue in the waters, \S of all that lyue in the waters, it shalbe an abhominaciō vnto you, so that ye eate not of their flesh, and that ye abhorre their carcasses. For all that haue not fynnes \S scales in the waters, shall ye abhorre.

And these shal ye abhorre amonge \S foules, so that ye eate them not: The Aegle, the Goshauke, the Cormoraunte, the Vultur, \S Kyte, and all his kynde, and all Rauens with their kynde: the Estrich, \S Nightcrow, the Cocow, the Sparow hauke with his kynde, the litle Oule, the Storke, the greate Oule, \S Backe, the Pellycane, the Swanne, the Pye, the Heron, \S Iaye with his kynde, the Lapyngge, and \S Swalowe. And what so euer crepeth amonge the foules, and goeth vpon foure fete, shalbe an abhominaciō vnto you. Yet these shal ye eate of the foules that crepe and go vpon foure fete: euen those that haue no knyves aboue vpon \S legges, to hoppe withall vpon earth. Of these maye ye eate, as there is the Arbe with his kynde, and the Selam with his kynde, \S the Hargol with his kynde, \S the Hagab with his kynde. But what so euer els hath foure fete amonge the foules, it shalbe an abhominaciō vnto you, and ye shal take it for vncleane. ^a Who so euer toucheth the carcase of soch, shall be vncleane vntill \S euen: and who so euer beareth the carcase of eny of these, shall wash his clothes, and shalbe vncleane vntyll the euen.

Therefore euery beest that hath hōffe, and deuydeth it not in to two clawes, \S cheweth not cud, shalbe vncleane vnto you. Who so euer toucheth soch, shalbe vncleane. And what so euer goeth vpon handes amonge \S beestes that go vpon foure fete, shalbe vncleane vnto you. Who so euer toucheth the carcasses of thē, shalbe vncleane vntyll euen. And he \S beareth their carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be vncleane vntyll the euē: For soch are vncleane vnto you.

These shalbe vncleane vnto you also, amonge the beestes that crepe vpon earth: \S Wesell, the Mouse, the Tode, euery one with his kynde, the Hedgehogge, the Stellio, the Lacerte, the Snale, and the Moule, these are vncleane vnto you amonge all that crepe. Who so euer toucheth the deed carcase of thē, shalbe vncleane vntyll the euen. And what so euer eny soch deed carcase falleth vpon, it shalbe vncleane, what so euer vessell of wodd it be, or rayment, or skynne, or bagge. And euery vessell that eny thinge is occuppyd withall, shalbe put in the water, and is vncleane vntyll the euen, and then shal it be cleane. ^c All maner of earthen vessell that eny soch carcase falleth in to, shal all be vncleane that therin is, \S ye shal breake it. All meate which is eatē, that eny soch water commeth in to, is vncleane: \S all maner of drynke that is drunkē in all maner of soch vessell, is vncleane. And what so euer eny soch carcase falleth vpō, it shalbe vncleane, whether it be ouen or kettell, so shal it be brokē, for it is vncleane, and shalbe vncleane vnto you. Neuertheles the fountaynes, welles, \S poundes of water are cleane. But who so euer toucheth their carcasses, is vncleane.

And though the deed carcase of eny soch fell vpon the sede that is sowne, yet is it cleane. But whan there is water poured vpon the sede, and afterwarde eny soch deed carcase falleth thereon, then shall it be vncleane vnto you.

Whan a beest dyeth that ye maye eate, he that toucheth the deed carcase therof, is vnclane vntyll euen. Who so eateth of eny soch carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. Likewyse he that beareth eny soch carcase, shal wash his clothes, and be vnclane vntyll the euen.

What so euer crepeth vpon earth, shall be an abhominacion vnto you, and shall not be eaten. And what so euer crepeth vpon f bely, or all that goeth vpon foure or mo fete, amoge all that crepeth vpon earth, shall ye not eate, for it shalbe an abhominacion vnto you. Make not youre soules abhominable, and defyle ye not in them, to stayne youre selues: for I am the LORDE youre God. ^a Therefore shal ye sanctifie youre selues, that ye maye be holy, for I am holy. And ye shal not defyle youre selues on eny maner of crepyng beest, that crepeth vpon earth: for I am the LORDE, which brought you out of the londe of Egipte, that I might be youre God: therefore shal ye be holy, for I am holy.

This is the lawe ouer f beestes and foules, a all maner of soules of crepyng beestes in the waters, and all maner of soules f crepe vpon earth: that ye maie knowe to discerne what is vnclane a cleane, and what maner of beestes are to be eaten, and which are not to be eaten.

^a AND the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Whan a woman hath conceived, and beareth a manchild, she shalbe vnclane seven dayes, so longe as she suffreth hir disease, ^{*} and in f eight dayes shal f flesh of his foreskynne be cut awaie. And she shal byde at home thre and thirtie dayes in f bloude of hir purifieng: she shal touch no holy thinge, ner come in to f Sactuary, tyll the daies of hir purifieng be out. But yf she beare a maydechilde, the shal she be vnclane two wekes, so longe as she suffreth hir disease, and sixe and thre score daies shall she byde at home in the bloude of hir purifieng.

^b And whan the dayes of hir purifieng are out, for the sonne or for the daughter, she shal bryng a lambe of one yere olde for a burntofferynge, and a yonge pigeon or a turtill done for a synofferynge to the dore of f Tabernacle of wytnesse vnto f prest, which shal offre it before the LORDE, and make an attonemēt for her, and so shal she be clenched from her bloudysse. This is the lawe for her that beareth a manchild or mayde childe.

^b But yf she be not able to bringe a shepe, then let hir take two turtill doues, or two yonge pigeons, the one for a burntofferynge, the other for a synofferynge, then shall the prest make an attonement for her, so that she shal be cleane.

The xij. Chapter.

^a AND f LORDE spake vnto Moses a Aaron, a sayde: Whan there ryseth vp eny thinge in the skynne of a mans flesh, whether it be a scabbe or a glistryng whyte (as though there wolde be a leprosy in f szkynne of his flesh) he shal be brought vnto Aaron the prest, or to one of his sonnes amonge f prestes. And whan the prest seyth the plage vpon the szkynne of the flesh, that the hayres are turned to whyte, and it seme deper in that place then the other szkynne of his flesh, then is it surely a leprosy, therefore shal the prest loke vpon him, and iudge him vnclane.

But whan there is eny whyte plecte in the szkynne of his flesh, and yet seme no deper then the other szkynne of the flesh, and the hayres be not turned to whyte, the shal the prest shut him vp seven dayes, and on f seuenth daye loke vpon him: yf the plage seme vnto him as afore, a hath frett no deper in the szkynne, then shall the prest shut him vp yet seven dayes mo. And whan he loketh on him agayne vpon the seuenth daye, and fyndeth, that the plage be darkish, and hath frett no deper in the szkynne, the shal he iudge him cleane, for it is but a szkryfe, and he shal wash his clothes, a then is he cleane.

But whan the scabbe fretteth farther in the szkynne (after that he is sene of the prest, and iudged cleane) and he be now sene of the prest agayne: whan the prest seyth the, f the scabbe hath frett farther in the szkynne, he shal iudge him vnclane, for it is surely a leprosy.

Whan a plage of leprosy is vpō a man, he shalbe brought vnto the prest. Whan he seyth and fyndeth, that there is whyte rysen vp in the szkynne, and the hayre turned vnto whyte, and there be rawe flesh in the sore,

And whan the prest loketh vpon him, and fyndeth, that the plage is turned to whyte, he shall iudge him cleane, for he is cleane.

Whan there is a byle in the skynne of eny mans flesh, and healeth agayne, and afterwarde in the same place there aryse vp eny whyte thinge, or a glisterynge whyte somewhat reedish, he shal be sene of the prest. So whan the prest, seyeth, that it appeareth to be lower then the other skynne, and the hayre turned to whyte, then shall he iudge him vncleane, for it is surely a plage of leprosy broken out of the byle. But yf the prest se and fynde, that the hayres are not whyte, and it not lower then the other skynne, and is darkysh, he shal shut him vp seven dayes.

D Yf it hath frett farther in the skynne, then shal he iudge him vncleane, for it is surely a plage of leprosy. But yf the glisterynge whyte abyde styll, and freate no farther, thē is it but a prynte of the byle, and the prest shal iudge him cleane.

Whan the skynne of eny mans flesh is hurt with fyre, and the prynte of the burninge be reedysh or whyte, and the prest loketh vpon him, and fyndeth the hayre turned to whyte vpon the mark of the burnynge, τ it apeare deper then the other skynne, thē is there surely a leprosy brokē out of ſ prynte of ſ burnynge: therefore shal ſ prest iudge hī vncleane, for it is a plage of leprosy. But yf the prest se and fynde, that ſ hayre vpon the prynte of the burninge is not turned vnto whyte, τ is no lower then the other skynne, and is darkish also, he shall shut him vp seven dayes.

And vpon the seuenth daye he shall lōke vpon him: yf it hath frett farther in ſ skynne, then shal he iudge him vncleane, for it is a leprosy. But yf it stōde styll vpō the mark of the burnynge, and frett no farther in the skynne, and is darkysh, then is it a sore in ſ mark of the burnynge, τ the prest shal iudge him cleane, for it is but the prynte of the burnynge.

Whan a man or woman is skyrue vpon the heade or beerd, and the prest seyth the mark, and fyndeth that it appeareth deper then the other skynne, and the hayre be there goldē and thynne, then shal he iudge him vncleane: for it is a skyrfe of leprosy of the heade or of the beerde. But yf the prest se that ſ skyrfe apeare no deper thē the skynne, and that the hayre is not of a pale colour, he shall shut him vp seūē dayes. And vpō the seuenth daye whan he loketh, and fyndeth, that the skyrfe hath frett no farther, and there be no golden hayre there, and that the skyrfe appeare no deper then the other skynne, then let him be shauen: but so that he shauē not of the scabbe, and the prest shall shut him vp yet seven dayes moo. And vpon the seūēth daye whā he loketh, and fyndeth that the skyrfe hath frett no farther in the skynne, and that it apeareth no deper then the other skynne, then shall the prest iudge him cleane. And he shall wash his clothes, for he is cleane. But yf the scabbe freate farther in the skynne (after ſ he is iudged cleane) and the prest loketh, and fyndeth, that ſ scabbe hath frett farther in the skynne, then shal he seke nomore for golden hayres, for he is vncleane. Neuerthelesse yf he se that the scabbe stondeth styll, τ that pale hayres are there rysen vp, then is ſ scabbe hole, and he is cleane, therefore shall ſ prest iudge him to be cleane.

Whā there is eny glisterynge whyte vpō ſ skynne of the flesh of a man or woman, and the prest seyth there that the glisterynge whyte vanysbeth: then is it but a whyte scabbe rysen vp in ſ skynne, τ he is cleane.

Whan the hayres fall out of the heade of a man or a woman, so that he is balde, the same is cleane. Yf they fall out of his fore heade, then is he fore heade balde τ cleane. But yf there be a whyte reedish sore in the balde heade, or balde fore heade, then is there a leprosy rysen vp in the balde heade or balde foreheade: therfore shal þy prest loke vpon him. And whan he fyndeth the whyte reedysh sore rysen vp in his balde heade or balde fore heade, then shal þy skynne of the flesh be as leporous, therfore is he a leporous man and vncleane. And the prest shall iudge him vncleane, because of þy same sore vpō his heade.

Who so now is leporous, his clothes shal be rent, and the heade bare, ⁊ the lippes moffled, and shall in eny wyse be called vncleane. And as longe as the sore is vpon him, he shal be vncleane, dwell alone, and haue his dwellinge without the hoost.

Whan the plague of leprosy is in a cloth, whether it be wollen or lynnyn, in the warpe or weft, whether it be lynnyn or wollen, or in a skynne, or in eny maner thyng that is made of skynne. And whan þy plague is pale or reedish in the cloth or skynne, either in the warpe or weft, or in eny maner thyng that is made of skynne, the same is surely the plague of leprosy, therfore shall the prest loke vpon it. And whan he seyth the plague, he shal shut it vp seuen dayes. And vpon the seuth daye whan he seyth that þy plague hath fretted farther in the cloth, in the warpe or weft, in a skynne or in eny maner thyng that is made of skynne, then is it a frettinge plague of leprosy, and is vncleane. And the cloth shal be burnt, either warpe or weft, whether it be wollen or lynnyn, or eny thyng made of skynne, wherin is eny soch plague. For it is a plague of leprosy, and shal be burnt with fyre.

But yf the prest se that the plague hath fretted no farther in þy cloth, either in the warpe or weft, or eny thyng made of skynne, then shal he commaunde to wash the thyng that the plague is in, and shall shut it vp other seuen dayes. And whan the prest seyth (after that the plague is waszhen) þy the plague is not chaūged before his eyes, and hath fretted no farther also, yet is it vncleane, ⁊ shal be burnt with fyre: for it is depe fretted inwarde, and hath made skyrfes. Neuertheles whan the prest seyth that the pryncle is vanysched after the washinge of it, then shall he rente it out of the clothe, and of the skynne, out of the warpe or weft. But yf it appeare eny more in the clothe (either in the warpe, or in the weft) or eny maner thyng made of skynne, then is it a waxinge plague: and with fyre shal it be burnt that eny soch plague is in. As for the cloth, either warpe or weft, or eny maner thyng made of skynne that is waszhen, and the plague be departed from it, it shalbe waszshen once agayne, ⁊ then is it cleane.

This is the lawe ouer the plague of leprosy in clothes, whether they be wollen or lynnyn (ether in the warpe or in the weft) and in eny maner of thyng made of skynne, to iudge them cleane or vncleane.

The riiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: This is the lawe ouer þy leper, whan he shalbe censed. He shall come vnto þy prest, and the prest shal go out of the hoost, and loke how the plague of leprosy is healed vpon the leper. And he shal commaunde him that is to be censed, to take two luyinge byrdes, which are cleane, and Ceder wodd, and purple woll, and ysop: and shall commaunde the one byrde to be kyiled in an earthen vessell ouer springyng water. And he shall take the luyinge byrde with the Ceder wodd, the purple woll, and ysop, and dyppe them in the bloude of the slaine byrde vpon the springyng water, and sprenkle it seuen tymes vpon him that must be censed from þy leprosy. And so cense him, and let the luyinge byrde flye at libertye in to the felde.

But he that is censed, shal wash his clothes, and shaue of all his hayre, and bathe him self with water, so is he cleane. Afterwarde let him go in to the hoost, yet shall he tarye without his tent seuen dayes. And vpon the seuenth daye shal he shaue of all þy hayre vpon his heade, vpō his beerde, vpon his browes, so that all the hayre be shauen of, and he shall wash his clothes and bathe his flesh in water, then is he cleane.

And vpō the eight daye shal he take two lambes without blemysch, and a shepe of a yere olde without blemysch, and thre tenth deales of fyne floure for a meatofferynge, myngled with oyle, ⁊ a Logg of oyle. The prest presente him that is censed and these thynges before the LORDE, before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shal take þy one lambe, and offere it for trespass offerynge, with the Logg of oyle, ⁊ shall waue them, before þy LORDE, and afterwarde slaye the lambe, where the synofferynge and burntofferynge are slayne, namely, in the holy place. For as the synofferynge, so is the trespace offerynge the prestes also, for it is most holy.

¶ But yf he be poore, and getteth not so moch with his hande, then let him take one lambe for a trespaceofferynge to waue it, to make an attonement for him, and a tenth deale of fyne floure myngled with oyle for a meatofferynge, and a Logg of oyle, and two turtill doues, or two yonge pigeons which he is able to get with his hande, let the one be a synofferynge, the other a burntofferynge: and let him brynge them vpon the eight daye of his clensynge vnto the prest before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE.

Then shall the prest take the lambe for the synofferynge, and the Logg of oyle, and shall waue them all before the LORDE, and sleve the lambe of the trespace offerynge: and take of y bloude of the same trespaceofferynge, and put it vpon the type of the righte eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fote, and poure of the oyle in to his awne lefte hande, and with his right fynger sprenkle the oyle that is in his left hande, seuen tymes before the LORDE.

As for the remnaunt of the oyle in his hande, he shall put it vpon the type of the right eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fote, euen aboue vpon y bloude of y trespaceofferynge. The other oyle in his hāde shal he poure vpon y heade of him y is clensed, to make an attonement for him before the LORDE. And afterwarde of the one of the turtill doues or yonge pigeons (acordinge as his handes are able to get) he shal make a synofferynge, of y other a burnt-offerynge, with the meatofferynge: and so shal the prest make an attonemēt for him that is clensed before the LORDE.

Let this be the lawe for the leper, which is not able with his hande to get, that belongeth vnto his clensynge.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, and sayde: Whan ye are come in to the lande of Canaan, which I geue you to possesse: and yf there happen a plage of leprosy in any house of youre possession, then shal he that owneth the house, come and tell the prest, and saye: Me thynke there is as it were a plage of leprosy in my house. Then shal the prest commaunde to rydde all thyng out of the house or euer the prest go in to se y plage, lest all that is in the house be made vnclane. Afterwarde shall y prest go in, to se the plage.

Now whan he loketh, and fyndeth, y there be holowe strakes yalowe or reedish in the walles of the house, and they seme to be lower then the wall besyde, then shall he go out at the dore of the house, and shut vp the house for seuen dayes. And vpon the seuenth daye whan he commeth, and seyth that the plage hath fretten farther in the walles of the house, thē shal he commaunde to breake out the stones wherin the plage is, and to cast thē in a foule place without the cite, and the house to be scraped within rounde aboute, and the dust y is scraped of, to be poured without y cite in an vnclane place, and to take other stones, and put them in the place of the other, and to take other playster, and playster the house.

house playsterd of the new, the shal the prest go in: and whan he seyth that the plage hath fretten farther in the house, then is there surely a fretting leprosy in the house, and it is vnclane: therefore shal the house be broken downe, both the stones, and y tymber and all the dust of the house, and shal be caried out of the cite in to an vnclane place. And who so goeth in to the house, whyle it is shut vp, is vnclane vntyll y euen. And he y lyeth therein, or eateth therein, shal wash his clothes.

But yf the prest se (whā he goeth in) that this plage hath frett no farther in the house, after that the house is new playsterd, the shal he iudge it to be cleane, for the plage is healed. And to a synofferinge for the house, he shal take two byrdes, Ceder wodd, ⁊ purple woll, and ysope, and slaye the one byrde in an erthen vessell vpon sprynginge water, and shall take the Ceder wodd, the purple woll, the ysope, and the lyuinge byrde, ⁊ dyppe them in the bloude of the slayne byrde vpon the sprynginge water, and sprenkle the house with all seuē tymes: and so shal he purifie the house with the bloude of the byrde, with the springinge water, with the lyuinge byrde, with the Ceder wodd, with the ysope, and with the purple woll. And the lyuinge byrde shall he let flye at libertye out of the towne in to the felde, ⁊ make an attonement for the house, and then is it cleane.

This is the lawe ouer all maner plage of leprosy ⁊ skyrfe, ouer y leprosy of clothes and of houses, ouer sores, scabbes, and glisteringe whyte, that it maye be knowne, whan eny thinge is vnclane or cleane. This is y lawe of leprosy.

The xv. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses and Aaron, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saie vnto him: Whan a man hath a runnyng yssue from out of his flesh, y same is vnclane: but the is he vnclane by the reason of this yssue, whan his flesh is fretten of y yssue or wounde. Euery bed where on he lyeth, ⁊ what so euer he sytteth vpon, shalbe vnclane.

And he that toucheth his bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen.

And he y sytteth where he sat, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euē. Who so toucheth his flesh, shall wash his clothes, ⁊ bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. Whan he spytteth vpon him that is cleane, y same shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, ⁊ be vnclane vntyll the euen.

And the saddell and what so euer he rydeth vpō, shalbe vnclane. And who so euer toucheth eny thinge that hath bene vnder him, shalbe vnclane vntyll the euen. And who so beareth eny soch, shall wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. And whom so euer he toucheth, and washeth not his handes first, the same shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. *Whan he toucheth an erthen vessell, it shal be broken: but the treen vessell shal be rensed with water. And whā he is cleane of his yssue, he shal nombre vij. dayes, after y he is made cleane, ⁊ wash his clothes, ⁊ bathe him self with sprynginge water, the is he cleane. And vpon the eight daye shal he take two turtill doves or two yonge pigeōs, and brynge them before the LORDE before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and geue them vnto the prest. And the prest shal make of the one a synofferinge, of the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for him before the LORDE, as cernynge his yssue.

Whan a mans sede departeth from him in slepe, the same shal bathe all his flesh with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. And all clothes, and euery skynne that is stained with soch sede, shall he wash with water, ⁊ be vnclane vntyll the euen. A woman, y whom soch one lyeth, shall bathe hir self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen.

Whan a woman hath the bloude yssue of hir flesh, she shalbe put a parte vij. daies in to a sundrie place. Who so euer toucheth her, shal be vnclane vntyll the euē. And all that she lyeth vpon (as longe as she is put aparte) shalbe vnclane. And that she sytteth vpō, shalbe vnclane. And who so euer toucheth hir bed, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. And who so euer toucheth eny maner thinge that she hath sytten vpō, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euē.

* Leuit. 6. d. and 11. c.

"And yf a man lye with her (why she is put a parte) he shalbe vncleane seuen dayes, and the bed that he laye vpon, shalbe vncleane.

^b But whan a woman hath hir bloude yssue a longe season, not onely at the tyme of hir naturall course, but also out of the tyme of hir naturall course, then shall she be vncleane so longe as she hath the yssue: euē as she is at the tyme when she is put aparte, so shall she be vncleane here also. What so euer she lyeth vpon all the tyme of hir yssue, shalbe as hir bed, whan she is put aparte. And all that she sytteth vpon, shalbe vncleane, as is hir vncleennesse, whan she is put aparte. Who so euer toucheth eny of them, shal be vncleane, and shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, & be vncleane vntyll the euen.

^c But yf she be cleane of hir yssue, thē shal she nombre seuen dayes, afterwarde shall she be cleane: and vpon the eight daye shall she take two turtill doues, or two yonge pigeons, and brynge them vnto the prest before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prest shall make of the one a synofferynge, of the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for her before the LORDE, as concernynge the yssue of hir vncleennesse.

Thus shal ye se that the childrē of Israel kepe them selues from their vncleennesse, that they dye not in their vncleennesse, whan they defyle my habitacion, which is amōge you.

This is the lawe ouer him that hath a runnyng sore, & him whose sede departeth from him in slepe, so that he is vncleane therof. And ouer her that hath hir bloude yssue, and who so euer hath a runnyng sore, whether it be man or woman, and whan a man lyeth with her that is vncleane.

The xvi. Chapter.

^a AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses (after that Aarons two sonnes were deed, * whan they offered before the LORDE) & sayde: Speake vnto Aaron thy brother, & he go not at all tymes in to the ynnmer Sanctuary, within the vāle before the Mercyseate, which is vpon the Arke, & he dye not: † for I wyll appeare in a cloude vpon & Mercyseate. But herewithall shal he go in, euen with a yonge bullocke for a synofferynge, and with a ramme for a burntofferynge, and shal put on the holy linnen albe, and haue lynnen breches vpon his flesh, and gyrdle him with a lynnē girdell, and haue the linnen myter vpon his heade.

For these are & holy garmentes: & he shal bathe his flesh with water, & put them on: & of the cōgregation of the childrē of Israel he shal take two he goates for a synofferynge, and a ramme for a burntofferynge.

And Aaron shal brynge the bullocke his owne synofferynge, & shal make an attonemēt for himself and his house: and afterwarde shall he take the two goates, and present them before the LORDE, euen before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shall cast lottes ouer the two goates: the lot of the one goate for the LORDE, and the other for the fre goate. And the goate that & LORDES lot fell vpon, shal he offere for a synofferynge. But the goate, that the fre goates lot fell vpon, shal he present alyue before & LORDE, to make an attonement for him, and to let the fre goate go in to & wyldernes. And so shal he brynge the bullocke of his synofferynge, and make an attonement for him and his housholde, and shal kyll him.

And he shall take a censor full of coales from the altare that stondeth before the LORDE, and his handfull of beaten incense, and brynge them in within & vayle, and put the incense vpon the fyre before & LORDE, that the cloude of the incense maye couer the Mercyseate, which is vpon the wytnesse, that he dye not. And he shall take of the bloude of the bullocke, and sprenkle it with his fynger towards the Mercyseate on the foresyde. Seuen tymes shall he sprenkle of the bloude thus with his fynger before the Mercyseate. Thē shal he kyll the goate which is the peoples synofferynge, & brynge in of his bloude within the vayle, & shall do with his bloude, as he dyd with the bloude of the bullocke, and sprenkle therewith also on the foresyde towards the Mercyseate, and so shal he reconyle the Sāctuary from the vncleennesse of the childrē of Israel, and frō their trespases in all their synnes. Thus shal he do vnto the Tabernacle of wytnesse, which is the habitacion with them amōge their vncleenneses.

No man shalbe in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, whan he goeth in to make an attonement

ment in the Sactuary, vntyll he go out: and so shall he make an attonement for him self and his house, and for the whole congregacion of Israel. And whā he goeth forth vnto the altare that stoneth before the LORDE, he shal reconyle it, and shal take of ȝ bullockes bloude, and of the goates bloude, ⁊ put it vpon the hornes of the altare rounde aboute. And with his fynger shal he sprēkle of the bloude theron seuen tymes, and halowe it, and consecrate it from the vnclennesse of the children of Israel.

¶ And whan he hath made an ende of reconcyng the Sanctuary, and the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the altare, he shal bringe the luyngye goate.

Thē shal Aaron laie both his hādes vpō ȝ heade of him, ⁊ confesse ouer him all the myszdedes of ȝ childrē of Israel, ⁊ all their trespasses in their synnes, ⁊ shal laye thē vpō ȝ heade of the goate, ⁊ by some man ȝ is at hande, shal he let him runne in to the wyldernes: ȝ the goate maye so beare all their mysdedes vpon him in to ȝ wyldernes, and he shal leaue him in the wyldernes.

And Aaron shal go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and put of the linnen clothes, which he put on whā he wente in to ȝ Sactuary, and shal leaue them there, and bathe his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his awne rayment.

¶ And he shal go forth, and make his burnt-offeringe, and the burnt offeringe of the people, and make an attonement both for himself and for the people, and burne the fat of the syn-offerynge vpon the altare. But he ȝ caried out the fre goate, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, ⁊ then come in to the hoost.

The bullocke of the synofferynge, and ȝ goate of the synofferynge (whose bloude was brought in to the Sanctuary to make an attonemēt) shalbe caried out of ȝ hoost, ⁊ burnt with fyre, both their skynnes, flesh, and donge. And he that burneth them, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and then come in to the hoost.

¶ And this shalbe a perpetuall lawe vnto you: ^a Vpon the tenth daye of the seuenth moneth shal ye humble youre soules, and do no worke, whether it be one of youre selues, or a straunger amonge you. For in this daye is your attonemēt made, that ye maye be clynsed from all youre synnes before the LORDE: therefore shall it be a fre Sabbath vnto you, and ye shal humble youre soules. Let this be a perpetuall lawe.

But the prest that is anoynted, and whose hande was fylled to be prest in his fathers steade, shal make this attonement, and shal put on the linnen clothes, namely the holy vestimētes, so shal he recōyle the holy Sactuary, and the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the altare, and ȝ prestes, and all the people of the congregacion. * This shal be a perpetuall lawe vnto you, that ye reconyle ȝ children of Israel from all their synnes once a yeaere. And Moses dyd, as the LORDE commaunded him.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND ȝ LORDE talked with Moses, ⁊ ^a sayde: Speake vnto Aaron ⁊ his sonnes, ⁊ to all ȝ childrē of Israel, ⁊ saye vnto them: This is it that ȝ LORDE hath commaunded: What so euer he be of ȝ house of Israel, ȝ killeth an ox, or lābe, or goate in the hoost, or out of the hoost, and bryngeth it not before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, that it maye be brought vnto the LORDE for an offerynge before the Habitacon of ȝ LORDE, the same shal be giltye of bloude, as though he had shed bloude, and soch a man shal be roted out from amonge his people.

¶ Therefore shall the children of Israel bryng their offerynges (that they wyll offre vpon the wyde felde) before the LORDE, euen before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, vnto the prest, ⁊ there offre their health-offerynges vnto the LORDE. And the prest shal sprenkle the bloude vpon the altare of the LORDE before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and burne the fat for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE: and they shall offre their offerynges nomore vnto deuels, with whom they go a whorynge. This shal be a perpetuall lawe vnto them amonge their posterities.

¶ Therefore shalt thou saie vnto thē: What man so euer he be of the house of Israel, or a straunger also that is amonge you, which offereth a burnt offeringe or eny other offerynge, and bringeth it not before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse to offre it vnto the LORDE, he shal be roted out from amonge his people.

"And what man so euer it be (either of the house of Israel, or a straunger amonge you) that eateth eny maner of bloude, agaynst him wyl I set my face, and wil rote him out from amonge his people: for the soule of f body is in the bloude, and I haue geuen it you for the altare, that youre soules maye be reconcyled ther with: For the bloude that is in the soule maketh attonement. Therefore haue I sayde vnto the children of Israel: No soule amonge you shall eate bloude, no ner eny straunger that dwelleth amonge you.

And what man so euer it be amonge you (whether he be of the house of Israel, or a straunger amonge you) that at the huntynge taketh a beest or foule which maye be eaten, he shall poure out the bloude of the same, & couer it with earth: for all flesh lyueth in the bloude.

And I haue sayde vnto the children of Israel: Ye shall eate the bloude of no body: for the life of all flesh is in his bloude. Who so euer eateth it, shalbe roted out. And what so euer soule eateth that which dyed alone, or f was torne of wylde beestes (whether he be one of youre selues or a straunger) the same shal wash his clothes, and bathe himself with water, and be vncleane vntyll the euen, and then is he cleane. But yf he wash not his clothes, nor bathe him self, then shal he beare his synne.

The xliij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, & saide: Speake vnto the childre of Israel, & saye vnto them: I am the LORDE youre God, Ye shall not do after f workes of the lande of Egipte, wherin ye dwelt: nether after the doynges of the lande of Canaan, in to the which I will brynge you. Ye shal not walke after their customes, but after my lawes shall ye do, & my statutes shall ye kepe, that ye maye walke therin: for I am the LORDE youre God. Therefore shal ye kepe my statutes and my lawes. *For the man that doth the same, shal liue therin, for I am the LORDE.

No mā shal come at his nexte kinswomā, to vncouer hir preuytie: for I am f LORDE.

"Thou shalt not vncouer f preuytie of thy father & of thy mother. It is thy mother, therefore shalt thou not vncouer hir preuytie.

"Thou shalt not vncouer f preuytie of thy fathers wife, for it is thy fathers preuytie.

Thou shalt not vncouer the preuytie of thy sister, which is the daughter of thy father or of thy mother, whether she be borne at home or without.

"Thou shalt not vncouer the preuytie of thy sonnes daughter, or of thy daughters daughter, for it is thine awne preuytie.

Thou shalt not vncouer f preuytie of thy fathers wiues daughter, which is borne vnto him, and is thy sister.

Thou shalt not vncouer the preuytie of thy fathers sister, for it is thy fathers nexte kynswoman.

"Thou shalt not vncouer the preuytie of thy mothers sister, for it is thy mothers nexte kynswoman.

Thou shalt not vncouer the preuytie of thy fathers brother, to take his wife, for she is thine awnte.

"Thou shalt not vncouer f preuytie of thy daughter in lawe, for she is thy sonnes wife, therefore shalt thou not vncouer hir preuitie.

"Thou shalt not vncouer the preuytie of thy brothers wife, for it is thy brothers preuytie.

Thou shalt not vncouer the preuytie of thy wife and of hir daughter also, nether shalt thou take hir sonnes daughter or hir daughters daughter, to vncouer their preuyties, for they are hir nexte kynswomen. And it is wickednesse.

"Thou shalt not take a wife and hir sister also, to vncouer hir preuytie, whyle she is yet alyue.

"Thou shalt not go vnto a woman to vncouer hir preuytie, so longe as she hath hir disease in hir vncleennesse.

"Thou shalt not lye with thy neighbours wife to medle with her, for to defyle thy self withall.

"Thou shalt not geue of thy sede also, to be burnt vnto Moloch, lest thou vnhalowe the name of thy God, for I am the LORDE.

"Thou shalt not lye with mankynde as with womankynde, for f is abhominacion.

The xxiij. Chapter.

¶ AND the LORDE talked with Moses, & sayde: Speake vnto Aaron, & his sonnes, y^e they absteyne from y^e halowed thinges of the childrē of Israel, which they haue halowed vnto me, & y^e they vnhalowe not my holy name: for I am y^e LORDE. Saie now vnto them & their posterities: Who so euer he be of youre sede, y^e commeth nye vnto the holy thinges, which the childrē of Israel halowe vnto the LORDE, & so defyleth him self vpon the same, his soule shal perishe before my face: for I am the LORDE.

Who so euer of the sede of Aaron is a leper, or hath a runnyng yssue, shall not eate of the holy thinges, tyll he be clensed. Who so toucheth eny vnclane thinge, or whose sede departeth from him by night, or who so toucheth eny worme that is vnclane vnto him, or a mā y^e is vnclane vnto him, & what so euer defyleth hī, loke what soule toucheth eny soch, is vnclane vntyll the euen, & shall not eate of the holy thinges, but shall first bath his flesh with water. And whā y^e Sonne is gone downe, and he cleane, then maye he eate therof, for it is his foode. Loke what dyeth alone, or is rent of wyld beestes, shall he not eate, y^e he be not vnclane thereon: for I am y^e LORDE. Therefore shal they kepe my lawe, y^e they lade not synne vpon them, & dye therin, when they vnhalowe them selues in it. For I am y^e LORDE, y^e halowe them.

A straunger shal not eate of the holy thinges, ner an housholde gest of the prestes, ner an hyred seruaūt. But yf y^e prest bye a soule for his money, y^e same maye eate therof. And loke who is borne in his house, maye eate of his bred also. Neuertheles yf the prestes daughter be a straungers wife, she shal not eate of the Heueofferings of holynes. But yf she be a wedowe, or deoured, or haue no sede, & commeth agayne to hir fathers house as afore (whan she was yet a mayden in hir fathers house) then shall she eate of hir fathers bred. But no straiger shal eate therof.

Who so els eateh of the halowed thynges, vnwyttlyngly, shal put y^e fith parte there vnto, and geue it vnto the prest with the halowed thinge, that they vnhalowe not y^e halowed thinges of the children of Israel, which they Heue vp vnto the LORDE, lest they lade them selues with myszdoinge and trespase, whā they eate their halowed thynges, for I am y^e LORDE which halowe thē.

And y^e LORDE talked with Moses, & saide: Speake vnto Aaron & his sonnes, & to all y^e childrē of Israel: †What so euer Israelite or straunger in Israel wyll do his offerynge, whether it be their vowe, or of fre wyl, that they wyll offe a burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, to reconcyle them selues, it shal be a male, and without blemysh, of the oxen, or lambes or goates. †What so euer hath eny blemish, shal they not offe, for they shal fynde no fauoure therwith.

And who so wyl offe an healthofferynge vnto the LORDE to separate out a vowe, or of fre wyl, oxen or shepe, it shalbe without blemysh, y^e it maye be accepted. It shal haue no deformite. B And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ sayde: Whā an oxe, or lābe, or goate is brought forth, it shal be seuen dayes with the dame, and vpon the eight daye ⁊ therafter it maie be offered vnto the LORDE, thē is it accepted. Whether it be oxe or lambe, it shall not be slayne with his yonge in one daye.

But whā ye wil offre a thākoffringe vnto the LORDE ⁊ it maye be accepted, ye shal eate it the same daye, ⁊ kepe nothinge ouer vntyll the mornynge: for I am the LORDE. Therefore kepe now my commaundementes, and do them: for I am the LORDE, ⁊ ye vnhalowe not my holy name, ⁊ that I maye be halowed amonge the children of Israel. For I am he that halowe you, euē ⁊ LORDE, which brought you out of ⁊ lōde of Egipte, ⁊ I might be youre God: Euen I ⁊ LORDE.

The xxiij. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE talked with Moses, ⁊ sayde: Speake vnto ⁊ children of Israel, and saye vnto them: These are ⁊ feastes of the LORDE, which ye shal call holy dayes. Sixe dayes shalt thou worke,* but the seuenth daie is the rest of the Sabbath, and shalbe called holy. Ye shal do no worke therin, for it is the Sabbath of the LORDE, where so euer ye dwell.

These are the feastes of the LORDE, ⁊ are called holy, which ye shal call youre feastes: * Vpon ⁊ fourtene daye of ⁊ first moneth at euen, is the LORDES Easter. And vpon ⁊ fiftene daye of the same moneth is the feast of vñleuēded bred of the LORDE. Then shall ye eate vñleuēded bred seuen dayes.

B The first daie shalbe called holy amonge you,† ye shal do no worke of bōdage therin, ⁊ seue daies shal ye offre vnto ⁊ LORDE. The seueñth daie shalbe called holy likewise, wherin ye shal do no worke of bondage also.

And ⁊ LORDE talked with Moses, ⁊ sayde: Speake to the childrē of Israel, ⁊ saye vnto them: When ye come in to the lande ⁊ I shall geue you, and reape downe youre harvest, ye shal brynge a shefe of the first frutes of youre haruest vnto the prest, thē shall the shefe be waued before the LORDE, that ye maye be accepted: but this shal the prest do the nexte daye after the Sabbath. And ⁊ same daie that youre shefe is waued, shal ye offre a burnt-offeringe vnto the LORDE, of a lambe which is without blemish and of one yeaere olde, with the meat-offerynge, two tenth deales of fyne flour mingled with oyle, for an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE: ⁊ the drynk-offerynge also, euē the fourth parte of an Hin of wyne.

And ye shall eate nether bred, nor cakes, ner furmentye (of new corne) tyll the same daye that ye brynge an offerynge vnto youre God. This shalbe a lawe vnto youre posterities, where so euer ye dwell.

Then shal ye nombre (from the nexte daye after the Sabbath, whan ye brought ⁊ Waueshefe) seuen whole wekes, vntyll the nexte daie after ⁊ seueñth weke, namely, fiftie daies, shal ye nombre, and offre new meat-offerynges vnto the LORDE. And out of all youre dwellings shal ye offre, namely, two Waue loaues of two tenth deales of fyne flour leuēded, and baken for the first frutes vnto ⁊ LORDE. And with youre bred ye shal brynge seuen lambes of one yeaere olde without blemish, and a yonge bullocke, and two rammes: this shalbe the LORDES burnt-offerynge, meat-offerynge, and drynk-offerynge. This is a sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

Morouer ye shal offre an he goate for a syn-offerynge, and two lambes of a yeaere olde for an health-offerynge. And ⁊ prest shal waue it vpon the bred of the first frutes before the LORDE with the two lambes. And they shalbe holy vnto the LORDE, and shal be the prestes. And this daye shal ye proclame, for it shalbe called holy amonge you: no seruyll worke shal ye do therin. A perpetuall lawe shall it be amonge youre posterities, where so euer ye dwell.

When ye reape downe ⁊ haruest of youre londe, ye shal not cut it cleane downe vpō the felde, ner gather vp all, but shal leaue it for the poore and straungers. I am the LORDE youre God.

remembrance of blowinge, wherin ye shal do no seruyle worke, and ye shal offre sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: * Vpon the tenth daye in this seuenth moneth is the daye of reconcylinge, which shalbe an holy conuocation with you. Ye shal humble youre soules therin, and offre vnto the LORDE, and shal do no seruyle worke in this daye: for it is the daye of attonement, that ye maye be reconcyled before the LORDE youre God. For what soule so euer humbleth not him self vpon this daye, the same shalbe roted out from amonge his people. And what soule so euer doth eny worke this daye, the same wil I destroye from amonge his people: therfore shall ye do no worke. This shalbe a perpetuall lawe vnto youre posterities, where so euer ye dwell. It is the rest of youre Sabbath, that ye maye humble youre soules. Vpon the nyenth daye of ʒ moneth at euen, shal ye kepe this holy daye from the euen forth vntyll the eue agayne.

¶ And the LORDE talked with Moses, ʒ sayde: † Vpon the fiftene daye of the seuenth moneth, is the feast of Tabernacles seuen dayes vnto the LORDE. The first daye shal be an holy cōuocation: no seruyle worke shal ye do therin. Seuen dayes shal ye offre vnto the LORDE. The eight daye shalbe an holy conuocation vnto you also, and ye shal offre vnto the LORDE: for it is the daye of gatheringe together: No seruyle worke shall ye do therin.

These are the holy daies of the LORDE, which ye shall proclame and holde for holy conuocations, that ye maye offre vnto the LORDE burntofferings, meatofferings, drynkofferings and other offerings, euery one acordinge to his daye, besyde ʒ Sabbathes of ʒ LORDE, and youre gites, and voves, and frewylofferynges, that ye offre vnto the LORDE.

¶ So vpon the fiftene daye of the seuenth moneth, whan ye haue brought in the increase of the londe, ye shall kepe the LORDES feast seuen dayes longe. The first daye shalbe kepte holy daye, and the eight daye shalbe kepte holy daye also. And vpon the first daie ye shal take of ʒ goodly frutefull trees, branches of palme trees, ʒ bowes of thicke trees, and Wyllies of the broke, and seuē dayes shal ye be mery before ʒ LORDE youre God: and thus shal ye kepe the feast vnto the LORDE seuen dayes in the yere. This shalbe a perpetuall lawe amonge youre posterities, that they kepe holy daye thus in ʒ seuenth moneth. Seuen dayes shal ye dwell in bothes. Who so euer is an Israelite borne, shal dwell in bothes, that they which come after you, maye knowe, how that I made ʒ children of Israel to dwell in bothes, whan I brought them out of the lōde of Egipte. I am the LORDE youre God. And Moses tolde the children of Israel these holy daies of the LORDE.

The xliiiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ʒ sayde: † Cōnaunde the children of Israel, that they brynge pure oyle olyue beaten for lightes, that it maye be allwaye put in the lampes, without before the vayne of wytnesse in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aaron shall dresse it allwaye at euen ʒ in ʒ mornynge before the LORDE. Let this be a perpetuall lawe vnto your posterities. The lāpes shal he dresse vpon the pure candilsticke before the LORDE perpetually.

And thou shalt take fyne flour, and bake twolue cakes therof: † two tēth deales shal euery cake haue, ʒ thou shalt laye them sixe on a rowe vpo the pure table before the LORDE. And vpon the same shalt thou laye pure frankencense, that it maye be bred of remembrance for an offeringe vnto ʒ LORDE. Euery Sabbath shal he prepare thē before the LORDE allwaye, and receaue them of the children of Israel for an euerlastinge couenaunt. † And they shalbe Aarons ʒ his sonnes, which shal eate them in the holy place. For this is his most holy of the offerings of the LORDE for a perpetuall dewtye.

And there wente out an Israelitish womans sonne, which was the childe of a man of Egipte (amonge the children of Israel) and stroue in ʒ hoost with a man of Israel, ʒ ʒ named the name of God blasphemously, ʒ cursed. Then brought they him vnto Moses. His mothers name was Selomith, the daughter

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Brynge him that cursed, out of the hoost, and let all the that herde it, laye their handes vpon his heade, and let the whole congregacion stone him. And saue vnto the childre of Israel: † Who so euer blasphemeth his God, shall beare his synne: and he that blasphemeth the name of the LORDE, shal dye the death. The whole congregaciō shal stone him. As the straunger, so shal he of the housholde be also. Yf he blaspheme the name, he shal dye.

¶ He that slayeth a man, shall dye † death, but * he that slayeth a beest, shall paye for it. Soule for soule. And he that maymeth his neyghboure, it shall be done vnto him, euen as he hath done: broke for broke, † eye for eye, tothe for tothe: euen as he hath maymed a man, so shal it be done vnto him agayne, so that, who so slayeth a beest, shall paye for it: But he that slayeth a man, shal dye. The xrb. Chapter.

¶ AND the LORDE talked with Moses vpon mount Sinai, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saue vnto them: † Whan ye come in to the londe, † I shal geue you, the londe shal rest vnto the LORDE, so that thou sowe thy felde sixe yeares, and sixe yeares cut thy vyues, and gather in the frutes. But in the seuenth yeare the lode shal haue his Sabbath of rest for a Sabbath vnto the LORDE, wherin thou shalt not sowe thy felde ner cut thy vyues.

Loke what groweth of it self after thy haruest, thou shalt not reape it. And the grapes that growe without thy labour, shalt thou not gather, for so much as it is the yeare of the londes rest: † But the rest of the londe shalt thou kepe for this intent, that thou mayest eate therof, thy seruauante, thy mayde, thy hyrelinge, thy gest, thy straüger with the, thy catell, and the beestes in thy londe. All the increase shal be meate.

And thou shalt nombre seuen of these yeare Sabbathes, that seuen yeares maye be tolde seuen tymes, and so the tyme of the seuen yeare Sabbathes make nyne and fourty yeares. Then shalt thou let the blast of the horne go thorow all youre londe, vpon the tenth daye of the seuenth moneth, euen in † daye of attonement. And ye shal halowe the fiftieth yeare, and shall call it a fre yeare in † londe, for all them that dwell therein: for it is the yeare of Iubilye. † Then shall euery one amonge you come agayne to his possession and to his kynred: for the fiftieth yeare is † yeare of Iubilye. Ye shal not sowe ner reape it that groweth of it self, ner gather the grapes, that growe without labour. For the yeare of Iubilye shall be holy amonge you. But loke what the felde beareth, that shall ye eate. This is the yeare of Iubilye, wherin ye shal come agayne euery man to his owne.

Now whan thou sellest ought vnto thy neyghboure, or byest eny thinge of him, there shal none of you oppresse his brother: but accordinge to the nombre of the yeare of Iubilye shalt thou bye it of him: and accordinge to the nombre of the yeares of increase shall he sell it vnto the. Accordinge to the multitude of the yeares shalt thou rayse the pryce, and acordinge to the fewnesse of the yeares shalt thou mynish the pryce: for he shall sell it vnto the accordinge to the nombre of the increase. Therefore let no man fraude his neyghboure, but feare thy God. For I am the LORDE youre God. Wherefore do after my statutes, and kepe my lawes, so † ye do them that ye maye dwell safe in the londe. For the londe shal geue you hir frute, so that ye shal haue ynough to eate, and dwell safe therein.

And yf ye wolde saye: What shall we eate in the seuenth yeare, in as much as we shal not sowe, ner gather in oure increase? I wyll sende my blessinge vpon you in the sixte yeare, that it shal brynge forth frute for three yeare: so that ye shal sowe in † eight yeare, and eate of the olde frute vntyll the nyenth yeare, that ye maye eate of the olde tyll new frutes come agayne. sell the londe for euer, *for the lode is myne. And ye are straungers and indwellers before me. And in all youre lande shall ye geue the londe to lowse.

¶ When thy brother waxeth poore, and selleth \hat{y} his possession, and his nexte kynszmā commeth to him, \hat{y} he maye redeme it: then shall he redeme that his brother solde. But whan a man hath none to redeme it, and cā get so moch with his hande as to redeme one parte, then shall it be rekened how many yeares it hath bene solde, and the remnaunt shal be restored vnto him to whom he solde it, \hat{y} he maie come agayne to his possession. But yf his hande can not get so moch, as to haue one parte agayne, thē shal it \hat{y} he solde be styll in the hande of the byer vntyll \hat{y} yeare of Iubilye: In \hat{y} same shal it go out, and returne to his owner agayne.

¶ He that selleth a dwellinge house within the walles of the cite, hath an whole yeare respyte to lowse it out agayne: that shall be the tyme, wherin he maye redeme it. But yf he redeme it not afore the whole yeare be out, then shal he that bought it, and his succours kepe it for euer, and it shall not go out lowse in the yeare of Iubilye. Neuertheles yf it be an house in a vyllage that hath no wall aboute it, it shall be counted like vnto the felde of the cōtre, and maye be redemed and shal go out fre in the yeare of Iubilye.

The cities of the Leuites, and the houses in the cities that their possession is in, maye allwaye be redemed. Who so purchaceth ought of the Leuites, shal leaue it in the yeare of Iubilye, whether it be house or cite that he hath had in possession. For the houses in the cities of the Leuites are their possession amonge the children of Israel. But the felde before their cities shal not be solde, for it is their awne for euer.

¶ When thy brother waxeth poore, and falleth in decaye besyde the, thou shalt receaue him as a straunger, or gestic, that he maye lyeue by the: and thou shalt take no \dagger vsury of him, ner more then thou hast geuē, but shalt feare thy God, that thy brother maye lyeue besydes the. For thou shalt not lende him thy money vpon vsury, ner delyuer him thy meate vpon vantage. For I am the LORDE youre God, which haue brought you out of the lode of Egipte, to geue you the lande of Canaan, and to be youre God.

¶ When thy brother waxeth poore besyde the, and selleth himself vnto the, thou shalt not holde him as a bōde mā: but as an hyred seruaunte and as a sojourner shal he be with the, and serue the vntyll \hat{y} yeare of Iubilye. Then shal he departe lowse from the, τ his childrē with him, τ shal returne to his awne kined, and to his fathers possession: for they are my seruautes, whom I brought out of the londe of Egipte. Therefore shal they not be solde like bondmen. And thou shalt not raigne ouer them with crueltie, but shalt feare thy God. But yf thou wilt haue bōde seruautes and maydens, thou shalt bye them of the Heithen, that are rounde aboute you: of the children of the sojourners and straungers amonge you, and of their generacions with you, and that are borne in youre londe, the same shal ye haue for bonde seruautes, τ shal possesse them, τ youre children after you for an euerlastinge possession, these shalbe youre bondmen. \ddagger But ouer youre brethren the children of Israel, there shal none of you raigne ouer another with crueltie.

¶ When a straunger or sojourner waxeth ryche by the, and thy brother waxeth poore besyde him, τ selleth him self vnto \hat{y} straunger or sojourner by the, or to eny of his kynne, then shall he haue right (after that he is solde) to be redemed agayne. And eny of his brethren maye lowse him out: or his vnclē or his vnclēs sonne, or eny other kynszman of his kynred: Or yf his awne hande getteth so moch, he shal lowse him self out, and shal reken with him that bought him, from \hat{y} yeare that he solde him self, vntyll the yeare of Iubilye. And \hat{y} money shal be counted accordinge to the nombre of the yeares that he was solde, and his wages of the whole tyme shalbe rekened withall.

¶ Yf there be yet many yeares vnto \hat{y} yeare of Iubilye, then shal he (accordinge to the same) geue the more for his delyuerance, thereafter as he is solde. Yf there remaine but few yeares vnto the yeare of Iubilye, then shall he geue agayne thereafter for his redemption. And his wages from yeare to yeare shal he reken withall, and thou shalt not let

The xxi. Chapter.

YF ye wyll walke now in my statutes, *and kepe my commaundementes and do them, thē wyl I geue you rayne in due season, and y londe shal geue hir increase, and the trees of y felde shal brynge forth their frute. And the threszhinge tyme shall reache vnto the wyne haruest, and the wyne haruest shall reache vnto the sowynge tyme. And ye shall eate youre bred in plenteousnes, and shal dwell safe in youre londe. I wil geue peace in youre londe, so that ye shall slepe, and no man shall make you afraied. I wyl ryd euell beestes out of youre londe, and there shall no swerde go thorow youre londe.

Ye shal chace youre enemies, ⁊ they shal fall in to y swerde before you. † Fyue of you shal chace an hundreth: and an hundreth of you shal chace ten thousande. For youre enemies shall fall in to the swerde before you.

And I wyl turne me vnto you, and wyl cause you to growe and increase, and wyl set vp my couenaunt with you. And ye shal eate of the olde stoare, and shall let go the olde for plenteousnesse of the new. † I will haue my dwellynge amonge you, and my soule shall not refuse you. And I wyll walke amonge you, and wyl be youre God, and ye shalbe my people. For I am the LORDE youre God, which brought you out of the londe of Egipte, that ye shulde not be their bondmen. And I haue brokē the cepter of youre yocke, and caused you to go vp right.

⁊ But yf ye wil not harken vnto me, ner do all these commaundementes, and wyl despyse my statutes, and yf youre soules refuse my lawes, y ye wyll not do all my commaunde-mentes, ⁊ shal let my couenaunt stonde, then wyl I do this agayne vnto you. I wyl ryset you shortly with swellynges and feuers, which shal destroye y eyes, ⁊ consume awaie y hert. Ye shal sowe youre sede in vayne, and youre enemies shal eate it vp.

And I wyl set my face agaynst you, and ye shal be slayne before youre enemies. And they that hate you, shal haue dominion ouer you. § And ye shall flye, whā no man chaseth you.

But yf ye wyll not herken vnto me for all this, then wyl I make it yet seuen tymes more, to punysh you for youre synnes, that I maye breake y pryde of youre strength, and wyl make youre heauen lyke yron, and youre earth as brasse: and youre trauaile and labour shal be but lost, so that youre londe shal not geue hir increase, and the trees in the londe shal not brynge forth their frute.

Yf ye walke yet agaynst me, and wyll not harken vnto me, then wyl I make it yet seuen tymes more, to punysh you because of youre synnes: ⁊ wyl sende wyld beestes amōge you, which shal robbe you, and destroye youre catell, and make you fewer, and youre hye waye shal become waite.

But yf ye wyl not yet be reformed here withall, and wyll walke contrary vnto me, then wyl I walke contrary vnto you also, ⁊ wyl punysh you yet seuen tymes for youre synnes. And I wyl brynge vpon you a swerde of vengeance, which shall auenge my Testament. And though ye gather you together in to youre cities, yet wyl I sende the pestilence amonge you, and wyll delyuer you in to the handes of youre enemies. For I wil destroye youre prouysion of bred, so y ten women shall bake youre bred in one ouen, and youre bred shal be delyuered out by weight. ¶ And whan ye eate, ye shall not haue ynough.

Yf ye wyl not yet for all this harken vnto me, ⁊ wyl walke contrary vnto me, then wyl I also walke cōtrary vnto you in wrathfull displeasure, and wyl punysh you seuenfolde because of youre synnes, so that ye shal eate the flesh of youre sonnes and daughters. And I wyl destroye youre hye altares, and rote out youre ymages, and wyl cast youre bodies vpon the bodies of youre Idols, and my soule shall abhorre you. And youre cities wyl I make waist, and brynge youre churches to naught, and wyl not smell youre swete odoures.

Thus wyl I make the londe desolate, so that youre enemies shall dwell therin, and make it waist: but you will I scatter amonge the Heythen, and drawe out the swerde after you, so that youre londe shal be waist, & youre cities desolate.

f Then shall the londe reioyse in hir Sabbathes, as longe as it lyeth wayst, and ye be in the enemies londe. Yee then shal the londe kepe holy daye, and reioyse in hir rest, as longe as it lieth wayst, because it coude not rest in youre Sabbathes, whan ye dwelt therin.

And as for them that remayne of you, I wyl make them faynte harted in the londe of their enemies, so that a shakynge leaf shall chase them. And they shall flye from it, as though a swerde persecuted them, and shal fall noman folowynge vpon them. And they shall fall one vpon another (as it were before the swerde) and noman yet chacynge them. And ye shall not be so bolde, as to withstonde youre enemies, and shal perishe amonge the Heythen, and the londe of youre enemies shal eate you vp.

And they that are left of you, shall pyne awaye in their myszdede, euen in the enemies londe, and in the myszdedes of their fathers shall they consume awaye. Then shall they knowlege their myszdedes, and the myszdedes of their fathers in the trespace, wherwith they haue trespaced agaynst me, and walked contrary vnto me. Therefore wyl I also walke contrary vnto the, and wyl brynge them in to the enemies londe.

25 Then shal their vncircumcysed herte be tamed. And then shall they ende their myszdedes. "And I shal thinke vpō my couenaunt with Iacob, and vpon my couenaunt with Isaac, and vpon my couenaunt with Abraham, and wyl thinke vpon the lode. As for the londe, whan it shalbe left of them, it shal reioyse in hir Sabbathes, euen then, whan it lyeth waist, and they tylle it not. And they shall make attonement for their myszdedes, because they despyed my lawes, & their soules refused my statutes. Morouer I haue not so refused them, that they shulde be in the enemies londe: nether haue I so vtterly abhorred them, that I wolde brynge them to naught, and breake my couenaunt with them:

These are the ordinaunces, statutes and lawes, which ꝑ LORDE made betwixte him and the children of Israel vpon mount Sinai, by the hande of Moses.

The xxvij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, & 21 sayde: Speake to ꝑ children of Israel, & saye vnto them: Yf eny man make a speciaall vowe vnto ꝑ LORDE, so ꝑ he pryse a soule, then shal this be the valucation: A mā of twentye yeare olde vnto the thre score yeare, shalt thou set at fiftie syluer Sycles, after the Sytle of the Sanctuary: but a woman at thirtie Sycles. Yf it be fyue yeare olde vnto twentye yeare, thou shalt set it at twentye Sycles, whan it is a man childe: ^bbut a woman at ten Sycles. Yf it be a moneth olde vnto fyue yeare, thou shalt set it at fyue Sycles of syluer, whan it is a māchilde: but a woman at thre Syluer Sycles. Yf he be thre score yeare olde and aboue, thē shalt thou set him at fiftene Sicles whā it is a mā: a womā at tē Sicles. Yf he be to poore so to be set, thē let him present himself to ꝑ prest, & ꝑ prest shal value him. Neuertheles he shal value him, acordinge as ꝑ hāde of him that vowed, is able to get. But yf it be a beest ꝑ maye 23 be offred vnto ꝑ LORDE, all ꝑ is offred vnto ꝑ LORDE of soch, is holy: it shal not be altered ner chaunged, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good. Yf eny man chaunge it, one beest for another, then shal they both be holy vnto ꝑ LORDE. But yf ꝑ beest be vncleane which maye not be offred vnto ꝑ LORDE, thē shal it be set, before ꝑ prest, and ꝑ prest shal value it, whether it be good or bad, & it shal stonde at the prestes valuyngge. But yf eny man wil bye it out, he shal geue the fifth parte more, to that it was set at.

Whan eny mā sanctifieth his house vnto the LORDE for ꝑ Sanctuary, the prest shal value it, whether it be good or bad. And as the prest valueth it, so shal it stonde. But yf he ꝑ sanctified it, wyl redeme it, he shal geue ꝑ fifth parte of syluer thereto, aboue that it was set at: So shal it be his.

^b Num. 3. g.

C Yf eny man halowe a pece of lode of his heretage vnto the LORDE, it shalbe set acordinge to $\frac{1}{2}$ it beareth. Yf it beare an Homer of barlye, it shalbe valued at fiftye Sycles of syluer. But yf he halowe his londe immediatly from the yeare of Iubilye forth, then shal it be set acordinge to $\frac{1}{2}$ value therof. Yf he haue halowed it after the yeare of Iubilye, then shal the prest rekē it, acordinge to $\frac{1}{2}$ yeares $\frac{1}{2}$ remayne vnto $\frac{1}{2}$ yeare of Iubilye, & thereafter shal he set it the lower.

But yf he $\frac{1}{2}$ sanctified the londe, wil redeme it agayne, then shal he geue the fifth parte of syluer therto, aboue that it was set at: So shal it be his. Yf he wil not lowse it out, but selleth it vnto another, then shal he redeme it nomore: but the same londe whan it goeth out fre in $\frac{1}{2}$ yeare of Iubilye, shal be holy vnto the LORDE, as a dedicated felde, and shalbe the prestes inheritaunce.

D Yf eny man halowe vnto the LORDE a felde, which he hath bought, and is not his inheritaunce, then shal $\frac{1}{2}$ prest reken it, what it is worth vnto the yeare of Iubilye, & the same daye shall he geue the pryce that it is set at, vnto the LORDE for the Sanctuary. But in $\frac{1}{2}$ yeare of Iubilye it shal returne vnto him that bought it, $\frac{1}{2}$ it maye be his inheritaunce in the londe. All maner of prysinge shalbe made acordinge to the Sycle of the Sāctuary.* One Sycle maketh xx. Geras.

* Exo. 30. b. Nu. 3. g. Eze. 45. b.

* The first borne amonge $\frac{1}{2}$ catell (which belongeth vnto the LORDE) shall no man Sanctifie vnto the LORDE, whether it be oxen or shepe, for it is the LORDES all ready. But yf there be eny vnclane thinge vpon the beast, thē shal it be lowsed out thereafter as it is worth, and the fifth parte shalbe geuen more therto. Yf he wil not redeme it, thē let it be solde, as it is worth.

There shall no dedicated thinge be solde 32 ner bought out, $\frac{1}{2}$ eny man dedicateth vnto $\frac{1}{2}$ LORDE, of all $\frac{1}{2}$ is his good, whether it be mē, catell or lode. For euery dedicated thinge, is most holy vnto $\frac{1}{2}$ LORDE. There shal no dedicated thinge of mā be bought out, but shal dye the death. All the tythes in the londe, both of the sede of the londe, & of $\frac{1}{2}$ frutes of the trees, are the LORDES, & shal be holy vnto the LORDE. But yf eny man wil redeme his tithes, he shall geue the fifth parte more therto. And all the tithes of oxen & shepe, & that goeth vnder the rod, the same is an holy tythe vnto the LORDE. It shall not be axed whether it be good or bad, nether shall it be chaunged. But yf eny man change it, then both it & that it was chaunged withall, shal be holy, & not redemed.

These are the cōmaundementes, which $\frac{1}{2}$ LORDE gaue Moses in charge vnto childre of Israel vpon mount Sinai.

The first Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses in ſy wyldernes of Sinai, in the Tabernacle of witnesse, the first daye of the secōde moneth in the seconde yeaue, whā they were gone out of the lāde of Egipte, and sayde:

* Exo. 30. b. Nu. 26. a.

*Take ſy summe of the whole congregacion of the children of Israel, after their kynredes & their fathers houses, with the nombre of the names, all that are males, heade by heade, frō twenty yeaue and aboue, as many as are able to go forth in to ſy warre in Israel. And ye shal nombre them accordinge to their armyes thou and Aaron, and of euery trybe ye shal take vnto you one captayne ouer his fathers house.

These are the names of the captaynes that shal stonde with you. Of Ruben, Elizur the sonne of Sedeur. Of Simeon, Selumiel the sonne of Zuri Sadai. Of Iuda, Nahasson the sonne of Aminadab. Of Isachar, Nathaneel the sonne of Zuar. Of Zabulon, Eliab the sonne of Helon. Amonge the children of Ioseph: Of Ephraim, Elisama ⁊ sonne of Amihud. Of Manasse, Gamaliel the sonne of Pedazur. Of Ben Iamin, Abidam ⁊ sonne of Gedeoni. Of Dan, Ahieser the sonne of Ammi Sadai. Of Asser, Pagiel the sonne of Ochram. Of Gad, Eliasaph ⁊ sonne of Deguel. Of Nephthali, Ahira the sonne of Enan.

These are the awncient men of the congregation, the captaynes amonge the trybes of their fathers, which were heades and prynces in Israel.

And Moses ⁊ Aaron toke them (like as they are there named by name) and gathered the whole cōgregacion together also, ⁊ first daye of the secōde moneth, and rekened the after their byrth, accordinge to their kynreds and fathers houses by their names, frō twētye yeare and aboue, heade by heade, as the LORDE commaunded Moses, and nombred them in the wyldernes of Sinai.

The children of Ruben Israels first sonne, their kynreds ⁊ generacions after their fathers houses, in ⁊ nombre of their names heade by heade, all ⁊ were males, from twētye yeare ⁊ aboue, and were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Ruben, sixe and fourty thousande, and fyue hundreth.

The children of Simeon their kynreds ⁊ generacions after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names heade by heade, all that were males from twētye yeare and aboue, and were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Symeon, nyne and fifty thousande and thre hundreth.

The children of Gad their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses in ⁊ nombre of the names, from twētye yeare and aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Gad, fyue and fourty thousande, sixe hundreth and fiftie.

The children of Iuda their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses in ⁊ nombre of the names, from twētye yeare and aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Iuda, foure and seuentye thousande, ⁊ sixe hundreth.

The children of Isachar their kynreds ⁊ generacions, after their fathers houses in ⁊ nombre of the names from twētye yeare ⁊ aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Isachar, foure and fifty thousande and foure hundreth.

The children of Zabulon their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names from twētye yeare ⁊ aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Zabulon, seuen and fifty thousande and foure hundreth.

Iosephs children of Ephraim, their kynreds ⁊ generacions after their fathers houses in ⁊ nombre of the names, from twētye yeare ⁊ aboue, all ⁊ were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Ephraim, fourty thousande ⁊ fyue hundreth.

The children of Manasse their kynreds ⁊ generacions, after their fathers houses in ⁊ nombre of the names from twētye yeare ⁊ aboue, all ⁊ were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Manasse, two ⁊ thirtie thousande ⁊ two hundreth.

The childrē of Ben Iamin their kynreds and generacions, after their fathers houses, in the nombre of the names from twētye yeare ⁊ aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Ben Iamin, fyue and thirtie thousande and foure hundreth.

The children of Dan their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses, in the nombre of the names, from twētye yeares and aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Dan, two and thre score thousande, and seuen hundreth.

The children of Asser their kynreds ⁊ generacions, after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names, from twētye yeare ⁊ aboue, all ⁊ were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Asser, one ⁊ fourty thousande and fyue hundreth.

The childrē of Nephthali, their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names, from twētye yeare ⁊ aboue, all that were able to go forth vnto the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Nephthali, thre and fiftie thousande and foure hundredreth.

These are they whom Moses and Aaron nombred with ʒ twolue prynces of Israel, wherof euery one was ouer ʒ house of their fathers. * And the summe of the children of Israel after their fathers houses, from twentye yere and aboue (what so euer was able to go forth to the warre in Israel) was sixe C. thousande, thre thousande, fyue C. ʒ fiftie. But the Leuites after the trybe of their fathers, were not nombred amonge them.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and saide: The trybe of Leui shalt thou not nombre, ner take the summe of them amonge ʒ children of Israel: but shalt appoynte them to the Habitacion of wytnesse, and to all ʒ apparell therof, and to all that belongeth therto. † And they shall beare the Tabernacle ʒ all the ordinance therof, and shal wayte vpon it, and shal pitch their tentes rounde aboute it. And whan men shal go on their iourney, the Leuites shal take downe ʒ Tabernacle. And whan the hoost pitch their têtes, they shal set vp the Tabernacle. And yf a straunger preasse nye vnto it, he shall dye. The children of Israel shal pitch their tentes, euery one in his awne armye, and by the baner of his awne companie. But the Leuites shall pitch rounde aboute the Tabernacle of wytnesse, that there come no wrath vpon ʒ congregacion of the children of Israel: therfore shal the Leuites wayte vpon the Habitacion of wytnesse. And the children of Israel dyd all, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The ij. Chapter.

On the East syde shall Iuda pitch with his banner ʒ hoost, their captayne Nahasson the sonne of Aminadab. And his armie in the summe, foure ʒ seuentie thousande and sixe hundredreth. Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Isachar pitch, their captayne Nathaneel the sonne of Zuar: and his armye in the summe, foure and fiftie thousande and foure hundredreth. The trybe of Zabulon also, their captayne Eliab the sonne of Helon: his armye in the summe, seuen and fiftie thousande and foure hundredreth.

So ʒ all they which belōge to ʒ hoost of Iuda, be in the summe an C. sixe and foure score thousande, ʒ foure hundredreth be longinge to their armye, ʒ they shall go before.

On the South side shall lye the paylyons ʒ baner of Ruben with their hoost, their captayne Elizur ʒ sonne of Seducur: ʒ his armie in the summe, sixe ʒ fourtie thousande, ʒ fyue C. Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Simeon pitch, their captayne Selumiēl ʒ sonne of Zuri Sadai: ʒ his armie in ʒ summe, nyne and fiftie thousande, and thre hundredreth. The trybe of Gad also, their captayne Eliasaph ʒ sonne of Deguel: ʒ his armie in the summe, fyue ʒ fourtye thousande, sixe hundredreth ʒ fiftie. So that all they which belonge to the hoost of Ruben, be in the summe, an hundredreth, one ʒ fiftie thousande, foure hundredreth and fiftie, belonginge to their armye. And they shall be the seconde in the iourney.

After that shall the Tabernacle of wytnesse go with the hoost of the Leuites euē in ʒ myddes amōge the hoostes: ʒ as they lye in their tentes, so shal they go forth also, euery one in his place vnder his baner.

On the West syde shall lye ʒ paylyons ʒ baner of Ephraim with their hoost: their captayne shalbe Elisama sonne of Amihud, and his armye in the summe, fourtye thousande and fyue hundredreth. Nexte vnto him shal ʒ trybe of Manasse pitch, their captayne Gamaliel the sonne of Pedazur: his armye in the summe, two and thirtie thousande ʒ two hundredreth. The trybe of Ben Iamin also, their captayne Abidan the sonne of Gedeoni: his armye in the summe, fyue and thirtie thousande ʒ foure hundredreth. So ʒ all they which belonge to the hoost of Ephraim, be in the summe, an hundredreth thousande, eight thousande, ʒ an hundredreth, belonginge to his armie. And they shal be the thirde in the iourney.

On the North syde shal lye ʒ paylyons ʒ baner of Dan with their hoost: their captayne Ahieser ʒ sonne of Ammi Sadai, his armye in the summe, two and sixtye thousande and seuē hundredreth. Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Asser pitche: their captayne Pagiel ʒ sonne of Ochran, his army in the summe, one and fourtie thousande, and fyue hundredreth.

The trybe of Nephthali also, their captayne Ahira the sonne of Enan: his armye in the summe, thre & ffifty thousande & foure hundred. So ¶ all they which belonge to the hoost of Dan, be in the summe, an hundred thousande, seuen & ffifte thousande, & sixe hundred. And they shalbe the last in the iourney with their baners.

This is the summe of the children of Israel, after their fathers houses and armyes with their hoostes: euen sixe hundred thousande, & thre thousande, fyue hundred & ffifte. But ¶ Leuites were not nombred in ¶ summe amonge the childrē of Israel, * as ¶ LORDE comaunded Moses. And ¶ childrē of Israel dyd all as the LORDE comaunded Moses. And so they pitched vnder their baners, & toke their iourney, euery one in his kynred, acordinge to the house of their fathers.

The iij. Chapter.

THESE are the generations of Aaron & Moses, when ¶ LORDE spake vnto Moses at ¶ same tyme vpon mount Sinai. And these are ¶ names of the sonnes of Aron. ¶ The firstborne, Nadab: then Abihu, Eleasar & Ithamar. These are ¶ names of the sonnes of Aaron, † which were anoynted to be prestes, & their handes fylled for ¶ presthode. ¶ But Nadab & Abihu dyed before ¶ LORDE, whā they offred straunge fyre before ¶ LORDE, in ¶ wilderness of Sinai, ‡ had no sonnes. But Eleasar and Ithamar executed ¶ prestes office with their father Aaron.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, & sayde: Bring hither the trybe of Leui, and set them before Aaron the prest, ¶ they maye serue with him, & wayte vpon him & vpō the whole congregacion before ¶ Tabernacle of wytnesse, and execute the seruyce of the habitation, and kepe all the apparell of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and wayte vpon the children of Israel, to mynistrē in the seruyce of the habitation.

3 And thou shalt geue ¶ Leuites vnto Aaron and his sonnes for a gift, vnto euery one his awne, from amonge the children of Israel. As for Aaron & his sonnes, thou shalt appoynte them to wayte on their prestes office. ¶ Yf another preasse therto, he shal dye.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Beholde, I haue takē the Leuites frō amonge the childrē of Israel, for all the first borne that open the Matrix amonge the children of Israel, so that the Leuites shalbe myne. ¶ For the firstborne are myne, sence ¶ tyme that I smote all the first borne in ¶ lande of Egipte, whā I sanctified vnto me all the first borne in Israel, from mē vnto catell, that they shulde be myne. I the LORDE.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, and sayde: Nombre the children of Leui after their fathers houses and kynreds, all that are males of a moneth olde and aboue.

So Moses nombred them acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, as he had comaunded. And these were the children of Leui with their names: ¶ Gerson, Kahath, Merari. The names of the children of Gerson in their kynreds, were: Libni and Semei.

The childrē of Kahath in their kynreds were, Amram, Iezehar, Hebron and Vsiel.

The children of Merari in their kynreds, were Maheli and Musi. These are the kynreds of Leui after their fathers houses.

These are ¶ kynreds of Gerson: The Libnites and Semeites, the summe was founde in nombre, seuen thousande and fyue hundred, of all that were males of a moneth olde and aboue. And the same kynreds of the Gersonites shal pitche behinde the Habitation on the west syde: Let Eliasaph the sonne of Lael be their ruler. And they shal wayte vpon the Tabernacle of wytnesse, of the habitation, and of the tent, and couerynges therof, and the hangynge in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, the hangynge aboute the courte, & the hangynge in ¶ courtedore, which (courte) goeth aboute the habitation and the altare, and the cordes of it, & all that belongeth to the seruyce therof.

These are the kynreds of Kahath: The Amramites, the Iezeharites, the Hebronites, and Vsielites, all that were males of a moneth olde & aboue, in nombre eight thousande and sixe hundred, waytinge vpon the Tabernacle of the Sanctuary, & shal pitch on the south syde of ¶ Habitation: Let Elisaphan the sonne of Vsiel be their ruler. And they shal kepe the Arke, the table, the candlesticke, the altare and all the vessels of the Sanctuary, to do seruyce in, and the vayle, and all that belongeth to the seruice therof. But the chefe of all the rulers of the Leuites, shalbe Eleasar the sonne of Aron the prest, ouer them that are apoynted to kepe the watch of the Sanctuary.

These are fy kynreds of Merari: The Mahelites and Musites, which were in nombre sixe thousande and two hundred, all that were males of a moneth olde and aboue: Let Zuriel fy sonne of Abihail be their ruler, and they shall pitche vpon the north syde of the Habitation. And their office shalbe to kepe the bordes, and barres, and pilers, and sokettes of the Habitation, and all the apparell therof and that serueth therto: fy pilers also aboute fy courte, with the sokettes, and nales, and cordes.

f But before the Habitation and before fy Tabernacle on the East syde shal Moses and Aaron and his sonnes pytche, that they maye wayte vpon the Sanctuary, and the children of Israel. *Yf eny other preasse therto, he shal dye.

¶ All the Leuites in the summe, whom Moses and Aaron nombred after their kynreds, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE, all that were males, of a moneth olde and aboue, were two and twenty thousande.

And fy LORDE saide vnto Moses: Nombre all the first borne, that are males amonge the children of Israel, of a moneth olde and aboue, and take the nombre of their names. ¶ And fy Leuites shalt thou take out vnto me the LORDE, for all fy first borne of fy childre of Israel, and the cattell of the Leuites for all the first borne amonge the cattell of fy children of Israel. And Moses nombred all the first borne amonge the childre of Israel, as the LORDE commaunded him. And in the nombre of the names of all the first borne, that were males of a moneth olde and aboue, in their summe, there were foude two and twenty thousande, two hundred, and thre and seuentye.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Take the Leuites for all fy first borne amonge the childre of Israel, and the cattell of fy Leuites for their cattell, fy Leuites maye be myne the LORDES. ¶ But the redempcion money of the two hundred thre and seuentye fy remayne of the first borne of the children of Israel, aboute the nombre of the Leuites, shalt thou take, euen fyue Sycles of euery heade, after the Sytle of the Sanctuary † (one Sytle is worth twenty Geras) and the money fy remayneth ouer their nombre, shalt thou geue vnto Aaron and his sonnes.

¶ Then toke Moses fy redempcion money (that remayned ouer aboute the nombre of the Leuites) from fy first borne of the childre of Israel, euen a thousande, thre hundred, and fyue and thre score Sycles, after fy Sytle of the Sanctuary, and gaue it vnto Aaron and his sonnes, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The iiii. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, and sayde: Take fy summe of the childre of Kahath from amonge the childre of Leui, after their kynreds and fathers houses, from thirtie yeare and aboue vntill fifty yeare, all that are mete for the warre, that they maye do the worke in the Tabernacle of witnesse. This shal be the office of the children of Kahath in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, which is most holy.

¶ When the hoost breaketh vp, Aaron and his sonnes shall go in, and take downe the vayle, and couer the Arke of wytnesse therewith, and laye the couerynge of doo skynnes vpon it, and sprede a whole yalowe clothe aboue theron, and put his staues therin. And vpon the shewe table they shal sprede a yalowe clothe also, and set theron the disshes, spones, flatpeces and pottes to poure out in, and the daylie bred shal lye vpon it, and they shall sprede a purple clothe therouer, and couer it with a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put the staues of it therin.

¶ And they shal take a yalowe clothe, and couer the cadilstickes of light therewith, and his lampes, with his snuffers and outquenchers, and all the oyle vessels that belonge to the seruyce, and aboute all this shal they put a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put it vpon staues.

¶ So shal they sprede a yalowe clothe ouer the golden altare also, and couer the same with a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put it vpon staues. All the vessels that they occupye in the Sanctuary, shal they take, and put a yalowe clothe ther ouer, ⁊ couer them with a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put them vpon staues. They shal swepe the ashes also from the altare, and sprede a clothe of scarlet ouer it, and set all his vessels thereon, that they occupye vpon it: colepannes, fleshokes, shouels, basens, with all the apparell of the altare, and they shal sprede a couerynge of doo skynnes thereon, and put his staues therto.

Now whan Aaron and his sonnes haue done this, and haue couered the Sanctuary ⁊ all the ornamētes therof, whan the hoost breaketh vp, ⁊ then shal the children of Kahath go in, that they maye beare it, and the Sanctuary shall they not touche, * lest they dye. This is the charge of the childrē of Kahath in the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

¶ And Eleasar the sonne of Aaron ⁊ prest, shal haue the office, to prepare the oyle for the light, and the spyces for the incense, and the daylie meat offeringe, and the anoyntinge oyle, to order the whole habitacion, ⁊ all that therin is, in the Sanctuary and the ornamentes therof.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, ⁊ sayde: Ye shal not destroye the trybe of the kynred of the Kahathites amōge the Leuites, but this shal ye do with them, ⁊ they maye lyue ⁊ not dye, yf they touche the most holy. Aaron and his sonnes shal go in, and appoynte euery one vnto his office ⁊ charge. But they shal not go in, presumptuously to lōke vpō ⁊ Sanctuary, lest they die. And ⁊ LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron ⁊ sayde: Take the summe of the children of Gerson also, ^b after their fathers house ⁊ kynred, from thirte yeare ⁊ aboue, vntyll fiftie yeare, ⁊ appoynte them all ⁊ are mete for the warre, to haue an office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

¶ This shalbe the office of the kynred of the Gersonites, euē to serue ⁊ to beare. They shal beare the curtaynes of the habitacion and of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and his couerynge and the couerynge of doo skynnes, that is aboue thereon, and the hanginge in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the hanginge aboute the courte, which goeth aboute the habitacion and the altare, and their cordes, and all the instrumentes ⁊ serue for the, and all that belongeth to their occupiēge. Acordinge vnto the worde of Aaron and of his sonnes, shal all the office of the children of Gerson be done, what so euer they shal beare and occupye. And ye shal se, that they wayte vpon all their charge. This shal be ⁊ office of ⁊ kinred of ⁊ childrē of ⁊ Gersonites in ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnes. And their waytinge shal be vnder ⁊ hāde of Ithamar, the sonne of Aarō the prest.

The children of Merari after their kynred and fathers house, shalt thou appoynte also, from thirtie yeare and aboue, vnto fiftie yeare, all that are mete for the warre, ⁊ they maye haue an office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. But vpon this charge shall they wayte acordinge to all their office in ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnesse, that they beare the bordes of the Habitacion, and the barres, and pilers, and sokettes: the pilers of the courte also rounde aboute, and the sokettes and nales and cordes, with all their apparell, acordinge to all their seruyce. And vnto euery one shall ye appoynte his porcion of charge to waite vpon the apparell. Let this be the office of the kynred of the children of Merari, all that they shall do in the Tabernacle of wytnesse vnder the hande of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest.

And Moses and Aaron with the captaynes of the congregation, nombred the children of ⁊ Kahathites, acordinge to their kynreds and houses of their fathers, from thirtie yeare and aboue, vntyll fiftie, all that were mete for the warre, to haue offyce in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the summe was, two thousande, seuen hundredth and fyftie. This is the summe of the kynred of the Kahathites (which all had seruyce in the Tabernacle of wytnesse) whom Moses and Aaron nombred, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The children of Gerson were nombred also in their kynreds and fathers houses from thirtie yeare and aboue vntyll fyfte, all that were mete for the warre, to haue office in ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the summe was two thousande, syxe hundredth and thirtie. This is ⁊ summe of the kinred of the childrē of Gerson, which all had to do in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, whom Moses and Aaron nombred, acordinge to ⁊ worde of ⁊ LORDE.

The children of Merari were nombred also acordinge to their kynreds and fathers houses, from thirtie yere and aboue vntyll fyfthe, all that were mete for the warre, to haue office in the Tabernacle of witness, ⁊ the summe was thre thousande, and two hundreth. This is the summe of the kynred of the childrē of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron nombred, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The summe of all the Leuites, whom Moses and Aaron with the captaynes of Israel tolde, after their kinreds and fathers houses, from thirtie yere and aboue vntyll fyfthe, all that wente in to do euery one his office, and to beare the burthen in ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnesse, was eight thousande fyue hundreth and foure score, which were nombred accordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses, euery one to his office ⁊ charge, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The v. Chapter.

AND ⁊ LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commande the children of Israel, ⁊ they put out of the hoost * all ⁊ lepers, and all that haue yssues, and that are defyled vpon the deed, both men and womē shall they putt out of the hoost, that they defyle not their tentes, wherin I dwell amonge them. And ⁊ children of Israel dyd so, and put them out of the hoost, as ⁊ LORDE had sayde vnto Moses.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel ⁊ saye vnto them: Whan a man or woman doth a synne to eny body, and offendeth therwith agaynst the LORDE, then hath that soule a trespase vpon it. † And they shall knowlege their synne, that they haue done, and shall make amendes for their trespase, euen with the whole summe, and put ⁊ fifth parte more therto, and geue it vnto him, agaynst whom they haue trespassed. But yf there be noman to make the amendes vnto for the offence ⁊ he hath trespassed agaynst him, then shal the reconcylynge be made vnto the LORDE for the prest, besydes the ramme of the attonemēt, wherwith he shalbe reconcyled.

Likewyse all the Heueofferynges of all that the children of Israel halowe vnto the LORDE, and offre vnto the prest, shall be his. And who so haloweth eny thinge, it shalbe his. And who so geueth the prest eny thinge, it shal be his also.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan eny mans wife goth asyde, and trespaceth agaynst him, ⁊ eny mā lye with her fleshlye, and the thinge be yf hyd from his eyes, and is not come to light that she is defiled, and he can brynge no witness agaynst her (for she was not takē therin) and the sprete of gelousye kyndleth him, so that he is gelous ouer his wife: whether she be vnclene or not vnclene, then shal he brynge her vnto the prest, and brynge an offeringe for her, euen the tenth parte of an Ephā of barlye meele, and shal poure no oyle theron, ner put frankensence vpon it: for it is an offeringe of gelousy, and an offeringe of remembraunce, that remembreth synne.

Then shall the prest brynge her, and sett her before the LORDE, and take of the † holy water in an earthen vessell, and put of ⁊ dust that is on the floore of the habitacion, in to the water. And he shal set the wife before ⁊ LORDE, and vncover hir heade, and the offeringe of remembraunce which is an offeringe of gelousy, shall he laye vpon hir handes. And the prest shal haue in his hande bytter cursinge water, and shal coniure the wife, ⁊ saye vnto her: Yf no man haue lyē with the, and thou hast not gone asyde from thy huszbande, to defyle thy self, then shall not these bytter cursinge waters hurte the. But yf thou hast gone asyde from thy huszbande, so that thou art defyled, and some other man hath lyen with the besyde thy huszbande, then shall the prest coniure the wife with this curse, and shal saye vnto her: The LORDE sett the to a curse and a coniuration amonge thy people, so that the LORDE make thy thyre rotte, and thy wombe to berst. So go this cursed water in to thy body, that thy wombe berst, and thy thyre rotte. And the wife shal saye: Amen Amen.

So the prest shall wryte this curse in a byll, and wash it out with the water, and shall geue the wife of the bytter cursinge waters to drynke. And whā the cursinge water is gone in her, so ⁊ it is bytter vnto her then shal the prest take the gelousy offeringe out of the wyues hande, and waue it for a meatofferynge before the LORDE, and offre it vpon the altare: namely, he shall take an handfull of the meatofferynge for hir remembraunce, & burne it vpo the altare, & then geue the wife the water to drinke. And whā she hath dronken the water, yf she be defyled and haue trespaced agaynst hir huszbande, then shal the cursinge water go in to her, and be so bytter, that hir wombe shal berst, and hir thye shall rotte, and the wife shal be a curse amonge hir people. But yf the same wife be not defyled, but is cleane, then shall it do her no harme, so that she maye be with childe.

This is the lawe of gelousy, whan a wyfe goeth asyde from hir huszbande, and is defyled: Or whan ſprete of gelously kyndleth a man, so that he is gelous ouer his wyfe, ſhe brynge her before the LORDE, and that ſhe prest do all with her acordinge vnto this lawe. And ſhe man shalbe giltlesse of the synne, but the wife shall beare hir myszdede.

The vi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan a man or woman separateth them selues, to vowe a vowe of abstinence vnto the LORDE, he shal absteyne from wyne and strōge drynke. * Vyneger of wyne & of stronge drynke shal he not drynke, ner that is pressed out of grapes: he shall nether eate fresh ner drye grapes, so longe as his abstinence endureth. Morouer he shall eate nothinge that is made of the vyne tre, from the vyne cornels vnto the hulle.

As longe as the vowe of his abstinence endureth, there shall no rasoure come vpon his heade, tyll the tyme be out which he absteyneth vnto the LORDE, for he is holy.

And he shall let the heer of his heade growe, and stonde bare openly. All the tyme ouer ſhe he absteyneth vnto the LORDE, shal he go to no deed. Nether shal he defyle him self at ſhe death of his father, of his mother, of his brother, or of his sister. For the abstinence of his God is vpon his heade, and ſhe whole tyme of his abstinence shall he be holy vnto the LORDE.

If And yf it chaunce eny man to dye sodenly before him, then shal ſhe heade of his abstinence be defyled. Therefore shal he shaue his heade in the daye of his clensynge, that is vpon the seuenth daye: and vpon ſhe eight daye shal he brynge two turtill dōues, or two yonge pigeons, vnto the prest before ſhe dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prest shall make the one a synofferynge, and the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for him, because he defyled him self vpon ſhe deed, and so shal he halowe his heade the same daye, that he maye holde out the tyme of his abstinence vnto the LORDE, and he shall brynge a lambe of a yere olde for a trespassofferynge. But ſhe daies afore shal be but lost, because his abstinence was defyled.

This is the lawe of the absteyner. Whan the tyme of his abstinence is out, he shal be brought before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And he shal brynge his offeringe vnto the LORDE, euen an he lambe of a yere olde without blemysh for a burntofferynge, & a she lambe of a yere olde without blemysh for a synofferynge, and a ramme with out blemish for an healthofferynge, & a maide with vnueneded cakes of fyne floure myngled with oyle, and swete wafers anoynted with oyle, & their meatofferings & drynkofferings.

And the prest shall brynge it before the LORDE, and shal make his synofferynge and his burntofferynge, and ſhe ramme shal he make an healthofferynge vnto the LORDE, with ſhe maunde of the vnueneded bred. His meatofferynge and drinkofferynge shal he make also. And he shall shaue the heade of the absteyners abstinence before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shall take the heade heer of his abstinence, and cast it vpon the fyre that is vnder ſhe healthofferynge.

And the sodden shulder of the ramme shal he take, and an vnueneded cake out of the maunde, and a swete wafer, and laye them vpon the handes of the absteyner: (after that he hath shauen of his abstinence.) And he shal Waue them before the LORDE. This is holy for the prest with the Waue brest, and Heue shulder. After that, maye the absteyner drynke wyne. This is the lawe of the absteyner, which voweth his offeringe vnto the LORDE for his abstinence, besydes that, which his hande can get. As he hath vowed, so shall he do acordinge to the lawe of his abstinence.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes,

* Iudi. 13. a. Amos 2. c.

and saye : Thus shal ye saye vnto the childre of Israel, whan ye blesse them.

* The LORDE blesse the, and kepe the.

The LORDE make his face to shyne vpo the, and be mercifull vnto the.

The LORDE lyf vp his countenance vpon the, and geue the peace.

For they shal put my name vpo the children of Israel, that I maye blesse them.

The vij. Chapter.

AND whan Moses had set vp the Habitation and anoynted it,^a and sanctified it with all the apparell therof : and had anoynted and halowed the altare also with all his vessels, Then offred the captaynes of Israel, which were the rulers in their fathers houses.

For they were the captaynes amonge f kynreds, and stode ouer the that were nombred. And they brought their offerynges before the LORDE, sixe couered charettes, and twolue oxen, for euery two captaynes a charett, and an oxe for euery one, and brought them before the habitation.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Take it of them, that it maye serue for the mynistracion of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and geue it vnto the Leuites, vnto euery one acordinge to his office. Then toke Moses the charettes and oxen, and gaue them vnto the Leuites.

Two charettes and foure oxen gaue he vnto f children of Gerson acordinge to their office : and foure charettes and eight oxen gaue he vnto the children of Merari acordinge to their office, vnder the hande of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest.

But vnto the children of Kahath he gaue nothyng, because † they had an holy office vpon them, and must beare vpo their shulders. And the captaynes offred to the dedicacion of the altare, in the daye whan it was anoynted, and offred their giftes before the altare.

And f LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Let euery captayne bryng his offeryng vpon his daye to the dedicacion of the altare.

This is the dedicacion of the altare, after that it was anoynted.

¶ And whan Moses wente in to the Tabernacle of wytnes, y^e he might be commoned withall, he herde the voyce speakyng vnto him frō of the Mercy seate, which was vpō the Arke of wytnes betwixte the two Cherubins, from thence was he cōmoned withall.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ AND the LORDE talked with Moses, & sayde: Speake to Aaron, & saye vnto him: *Whan thou settest vp y^e lāpes, thou shalt set thē so, that they maye all seūe geue light aboue vpō y^e candilstick. And Aaron dyd so, & set y^e lampes vpō y^e candilstick, as y^e LORDE cōmanded Moses. The worke of y^e cādilstick was of beatē golde, both y^e shaft & floures therof: Acordyng to y^e visio that the LORDE had shewed Moses, euen so made he the candelstick.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Take the Leuites frō amonge the children of Israel, & clense them. But thus shalt thou do with them, that thou mayest clense them. Thou shalt sprenkle purifieng water vpon them, and lett a rasure go ouer their whole body, and washe their clothes, and then are they cleane. Then shall they take a yonge bullocke, and his meatofferynge of fyne flour mingled with oyle. And another yonge bullocke shalt thou take for a synnofferinge.

And thou shalt bryng the Leuites before the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and gather together the whole congregacion of y^e children of Israel, and bryng the Leuytes before the LORDE. And the children of Israel shall laye their handes vpon the Leuites. And Aaron shal waue y^e Leuites before the LORDE for the children of Israel, that they maye mynistr in the seruyce of the LORDE.

And the Leuites shall laye their handes vpon the heedes of the bullockes, and the one shalbe made a synnofferynge, the other a burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, to make an attonement for the Leuites. And thou shalt set the Leuites before Aaron and his sonnes, and waue them before the LORDE, and so shalt thou separate them from y^e children of Israel, that they maye be myne. Thē shall they go in, that they maye do seruyce in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. Thus shalt thou clense thē, & waue them: for they are my gifte of the children of Israel, & I haue taken them vnto me for all that openeth the Matrix, namely for the first borne of all the children of Israel.

¶ For euery first borne amonge the children of Israel is myne, both of men and of catell,⁴ sens the tyme that I smote all the first borne in the lande of Egipte, and sanctified them vnto myself, and toke the Leuites for all the first borne amonge the childrē of Israel, and gaue them for a gifte vnto Aarō and his sonnes from amonge the children of Israel, y^e they shulde do the seruyce of the children of Israel in the Tabernacle of witnessse, to make attonemēt for the children of Israel, that there be not a plague amonge the children of Israel, yf they wyl come nye ꝑ Sanctuary.

And Moses with Aaron and the whole congregaciō of the childrē of Israel, dyd with the Leuites all as the LORDE had commaūded Moses. And they purified the Leuites, and waszshed their clothes. And Aaron waued them before the LORDE, and made attonement for them, that they might be cleane.

¶ After that wente they in, to do their office in the Tabernacle of witnessse before Aaron and his sonnes: as the LORDE commaūded Moses concernynge the Leuites, euen so dyd they with them.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses & sayde: This is it that belongeth vnto the Leuites: * From fyue and twentye yeare and aboue, shal they go in to the office of the Tabernacle of witnessse. But frō fyftie yeare forth, they shal cease from the waitinge of the seruyce therof, and shal mynister nomore, but shal appoynte their brethren to waite and to serue in the Tabernacle of witnessse: but the office shal not they execute. Thus shalt thou do with the Leuites in their seruyces, that euey one maye wayte vpon his awne charge.

The ix. Chapter.

¶ AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in ꝑ first month of the seconde yeare that they were departed out of the lande of Egipte, & sayde: "Let the children of Israel kepe Easter in his season, euen vpon the fourtene daye of this month at euen, in his season shall they kepe it, acordinge to all the statutes & lawes therof. And Moses spake to ꝑ childrē of Israel, ꝑ they shulde kepe Easter. And they kep Easter vpon the fourtene daye of the first month at euen in the wilderness of Sinai. Acordinge to all that the LORDE cōmaūded Moses, euen so dyd the children of Israel.

Then were there certayne men defyled of a deed man, so that they coulde not kepe Easter vpon that daye: these came before Moses and Aaron the same daye, and sayde vnto him: We are defiled of a deed mā: wherfore shulde we be despyed, that we must not bringe oure giftes in his season amonge the children of Israel? Moses sayde vnto them: Stonde styll, I wil heare what the LORDE commaūdedeth you.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, & saie: Whā eny man is defyled of a deed coarse, or is gone farre from you ouer the felde, ⁴or is amonge youre kynszfolkes, yett shall he kepe Easter, but in the seconde moneth vpon ꝑ fourtene daye at euen, and they shal eate it with vneleuened bred and sowre sawse, and shall leaue none of it vntyll the mornynge, ¹ner breake eny bone therof, and shal kepe it acordinge to all ꝑ maner of ꝑ Easter.

But he that is cleane, and not gone in a iourney, and is negligent to kepe the Easter, the same soule shal be roted out from amōge his people: because he brought not his gifte to the LORDE in his season, he shal beare his synne. And whan there dwelleth a straunger amonge you, he shal kepe Easter also vnto the LORDE, & shal holde it acordinge to ꝑ ordinance and lawe of ꝑ Easter. This statute shal be vnto you alike, to the straunger as to him that is borne in the londe.

And ꝑ same daye ꝑ the Habitation was set vp, ^aa cloude couered it vpon the Tabernacle of witnessse, & at euen there was a similitude of fyre vpon the Habitation vntill the mornynge. So came it to passe allwaye, ꝑ the cloude couered it by daye, & the similitude of fyre by night. And whan the cloude was takē vp from the Habitation, then the children of Israel wente on their iourney. And loke in what place the cloude abode, there the childrē of Israel pitched their tentes. Acordinge to the worde of the LORDE toke the children of Israel their iourney, and acordinge to his worde pitched they their tentes. So longe as the cloude abode vpon the Habitation, they laye styll. And whan the cloude taried many dayes vpon the Habitation, the childrē of Israel wayted vpon the LORDE, & wente not on their iourney.

And whan it chaunced that the cloude abode vpon ꝑ Habitation eny space of dayes, then pitched they acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, & after the worde of the LORDE wente they on their iourney. Whan the cloude was there from the euenynge vntyll the mornynge, and so was taken vp, then wete they

But whan it taried vpon the habitacion two dayes, or a moneth, or a longe season, then laye the children of Israel, and iourneyed not: and so whan it was taken vp, they wente on their iourney. For accordinge to the mouth of the LORDE they laye, and after the mouth of the LORDE they iourneyed, so ŷ they kepte the LORDES watch, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The x. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Make the two trompettes of beaten syluer, that thou mayest vse them, to call the cōgregation together, and whan the hoost shal breake vp. Whan they blowe with both, then shall the whole cōgregation gather them selues together vnto the before the dore of the Tabernacle of witnessse. Whan they blowe but with one, then the captaynes, the rulers ouer the thousandes in Israel shal gather them selues together vnto the. Whan ye trompe, then shal the hoostes that lye on the East syde, breake vp. And whan ye trompe the seconde tyme, the hoostes that lye on the South syde, shal breake vp. For ye shall trompe, whan they shal take their iourneys. *But whan ŷ cōgregation is to be gathered together, ye shal blowe, and not trompe. This blowinge with the trompettes shal the sonnes of Aaron the prest do. And it shall be youre lawe for euer amonge youre posterities.

Whan ye go to a battayll in youre londe agaynst youre enemies ŷ vexe you, ye shall trompe with the trompettes, that ye maye be remembred before the LORDE youre God, and delyuered from youre enemies.

Like wyse whan ye are mery, and in youre feast dayes, ¶ in youre new Monethes, ye shal blowe with the trompettes ouer youre burnt-sacrifices ¶ healthofferings, ŷ it maie be a remembraunce vnto you before youre God. I am the LORDE youre God.

Vpon the twentye daye in the seconde moneth of the seconde yeaere, arose the cloude from the habitacion of witnessse. And the childrē of Israel wente on their iourney out of the wyldernes of Sinai, *and the cloude abode in the wyldernes of Paran, First brake vp (accordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.) Namely, the baner of the hoost of Iuda wente forth first with their armies, †and ouer their hoost was Nahasson the sonne of Aminadab. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Isachar was Nathaneel the sonne of Zuar. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Zabulon was Eliab the sonne of Elon. †And the habitacion was taken downe, and the children of Gerson and Merari bare the habitacion.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of Ruben with their armies, and ouer their hoost was Elizur the sonne of Seducr. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Simeon was Selumiel the sonne of Zuri Sadai. And Eliasaph the sonne of Deguel ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Gad. Then wente the Kahathites forwarde also, and bare the Sanctuary, and caused ŷ habitacion be set vp agaynst they came.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of the children of Ephraim with their armies, and ouer their hoost was Elisama the sonne of Amihud. And Gamaliel the sonne of Pedazur ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Manasse. And Abidan the sonne of Gedeoni ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Ben lamin.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of the children of Dan with their Armyes, (and so were all the hoostes vp) and Ahieser the sonne of Ammi Sadai was ouer their hoost. And Pagiel ŷ sonne of Ochran, ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Asser. And Ahira the sonne of Enan ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Nephthali. Thus the childrē of Israel wēte forth with their armies.

And Moses spake vnto his brother in lawe, Hobab the sonne of Raguel of Madian: We go vnto the place, of the which ŷ LORDE sayde: I wil geue it you: Come now with vs therfore, and we wil do ŷ best with the, for the LORDE hath promysed good vnto Israel. But he answered: I wil not go with you, but wil go in to myne awne londe vnto my kynred. He sayde: Oh nay, leaue vs not: for thou knowest where is best for vs to pytche in the wyldernes, and thou shalt be oure eye. And yf thou goest with vs, loke what good the LORDE doth vnto vs, the same wil we do vnto the. So they departed from the mount of the LORDE thre dayes iourney, ⁊ the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt wente before them those thre dayes iourney, to shewe thē where they shulde rest. And y cloude of the LORDE was ouer them in the daye tyme, whan they wēte out of y tētes.

And whan the Arke wente forth, Moses sayde: *Aryse LORDE, let thine enemies be scatered, and let them that hate the, flye before the. And whan it rested, he sayde: Come agayne O LORDE vnto the multitude of the thousandes of Israel.

The xi. Chapter.

AND whan y people waxed vnpaciēt, "it displeased sore y eares of y LORDE. And whan the LORDE herde it, his wrath waxed whote, ⁊ the fyre of y LORDE burnt amōge them, so y it cōsumed the vttemost of y hoost. Thē cryed the people vnto Moses. And Moses prayed vnto the LORDE. So y fyre quenched. And the place was called Tabera, because the fyre of the LORDE burnt amonge them.

Then the comon sorte of people y was amōge them, fell a lusting, and sat ⁊ wepte with the children of Israel, and sayde: Who wyll geue vs flesh to eate? We remembre the fish, the we ate in Egipte for naught, ⁊ Cucumbers, Melouns, lekes, onyons, ⁊ garleke: But now is oure soule dried awaye, oure eyes se nothinge then the Manna.

13 The Manna was like Coriāder sede, and to loke vpon, like Bedellion. ^b And the people ranne here and there, ⁊ gathered it, ⁊ grounde it in Milles, and beate it in morters, and baked it in pānes, and made cakes of it, and it had a taist like an oyle cake. And whan y dew fell vpon the tētes in the night, y Manna fell therwith.

Now whan Moses herde the people wepe amōge their kynreds, euery one in his tēt dore, then the wrath of the LORDE waxed ex-cceedinge whote. And it greued Moses also. And Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: Why vexest thou thy seruauante? And why fynde C not I fauoure in thy sight, y thou layest y burthen of all this people vpo me? Haue I thē cōceaued all this people, or begotten them, that thou shuldest saye vnto me: Cary them in thine armes (as a nurse beareth a childe) vnto the londe, that thou hast sworne vnto their fathers? Where shal I get flesh, to geue all this people? They wepe before me, and saye: Geue vs flesh, that we maye eate. I am not able to beare all this people alone, for it is to heuy for me. And yf thou wylt deale thus with me: O kyll me then, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, that I se not my wretchednesse.

And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: Gather vnto me ^cseuentye men amonge the Elders of Israel, whom thou knowest y they are the Elders in y people and officers ouer them, and brynge them before the Tabernacle of witnesse, and set them there with the: then wil I come downe, and talke with the euen there, ⁊ take of thy sprete that is vpon the, and putt it vpon them, that they maye beare the burthen of the people with the, y thou beare not all alone.

And vnto y people thou shalt saye: Sāctifye youre selues agaynst tomorrow, ^ey y maye eate flesh: for youre wepyng is come in to the eares of the LORDE, ye that saye: Who shal geue vs flesh to eate? for we were well at ease in Egipte. ^dTherefore shal the LORDE geue you flesh to eate, not one daye, not two, not fyue, not ten, not twentye dayes longe, but a moneth longe, tyll it go out at youre noses, and tyll ye lothe it: euen because ye haue refused the LORDE, which is amonge you, and haue wepte before him, ⁊ sayde: ^fWherfore wente we out of Egipte?

And Moses sayde: Sixe hundreth thousande ^ffote men are there of the people amōge whom I am, and thou sayest: I wyll geue you flesh to eate a moneth lōge. Shal the shepe and oxen be slayne to be ynough for them? Or shal all the fishes of the see be gathered together, to be sufficient for them? The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: ⁱIs the LORDES hande shortened then? But now shalt thou se, whether my wordes shall be fulfilled in dede, or no?

And Moses wēte out, and tolde the people y worde of the LORDE, and gathered the seuentye men amonge the Eldest of the people, ⁊ set them rounde aboute the Tabernacle. Then came the LORDE downe in a cloude, ⁊ spake vnto him, ⁊ toke of the sprete y was vpon him, ⁊ put it vpon the seuentie Elders.

And whan the sprete rested vpon them, they prophecied, and ceased not.

J But in the hoost there remayned yet two men, of whom the one was called Eldad, & other Medad, & the sprete rested vpon them. For they were wrytten vp also, & yet were they not gone out vnto the Tabernacle, and they prophecied in the hoost. Then ran there a lad, & tolde Moses, & sayde: Eldad and Medad prophecie in the hoost. Then answered Iosua & sonne of Nun Moses seruante (whom he had chosen) and sayde: My lorde Moses for hydde them. But Moses sayde vnto him: Art thou gelous for my sake?

* wolde God, & all the people of & LORDE coulde prophecie, and that & LORDE wolde geue them his sprete. So Moses and the Elders of Israel gat them to the hoost.

C Then wente out the wynde from & LORDE, & caused quayles to come from the see, & scatred the ouer the hoost, here a dayes iourney, there a dayes iourney rounde aboute & hoost, two cubytes hye aboute & earth. Then the people stode vp all that daye and all & night, and all the nexte daye, and gathered quayles: and he that gathered the leest, gathered ten Homers, & they kylled them rounde aboute the hoost.

^b But whyle & flesh was yet betwene their tethe, & or euer it was vp, the wrath of the LORDE waxed whote amonge the people, & slewe them with an exceedinge greateslaughter. Therefore is the same place called the graues of lust, because the voluptuous people were buried there. From the lust-graues toke the people their iourney vnto Hazeroth, and abode at Hazeroth.

The xij. Chapter.

AND Miriam & Aaron spake agaynst ^a Moses because of his wife the Morian: which he had taken, because he had take a Morian to wife, and they sayde: Doth the LORDE speake onely thorow Moses? Speaketh he not also by vs? And the LORDE herde it. & But Moses was a very meke man, aboute all men vpon earth. And haistely spake the LORDE vnto Moses, and to Aaron, and to Miriam: Go out ye thre vnto & Tabernacle of wytnesse. And they wente out all thre.

^c Then came the LORDE downe in the cloudy piler, & stode in the dore of the Tabernacle, & called Aaron & Miriam, & they both wete out. And he sayde: Heare my wordes: Yf eny man be a prophet of the LORDE, vnto him wil I shewe my self in a vision, or wil speake vnto him in a dreame. But not so with my seruante Moses, which is faithfull in all my house. || Mouth to mouth speake I vnto him, & he seyth the LORDE in his fashion, not thorow darke wordes or licknesses: Wherefore were ye not afrayed then to speake agaynst my seruante Moses?

^d And & wrath of the LORDE waxed whote ouer them, & he turned him away, and & cloude also departed from the Tabernacle. ^e And beholde, then was Miriam become leporous, as it were snowe. And Aaron turned him vnto Miriam, and sawe that she was leporous, and sayde vnto Moses: Oh my lorde, put not the synne vpon vs, which we haue foolishly committed and synned, that she be not as one that commeth deed out of his mothers wombe: It hath eaten vp half hir flesh already.

But Moses cried vnto the LORDE, & sayde: Oh God, heale her. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Yf hir father had spytte in hir face, shulde she not be ashamed seven dayes? ¶ Let her be shut out of & hoost seuē dayes, after & let her be receaued agayne. So Miriam was shut out of the hoost seuē dayes, & the people wente no farther, tyll Miriam was receaued agayne. Afterwarde departed the people from Hazeroth, ^f and pitched in & wilderness of Paran.

The xij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, & sayde: ^g Sende forth men to spye out & lande of Canaan (which I wil geue vnto & children of Israel) of euery trybe of their fathers a man, and let them all be such as are captaynes amonge them. Moses sent the out of the wildernes of Paran, accordinge to the wordes of the LORDE, such as were all heades amonge the children of Israel, and these are their names:

Samma the sonne of Zacur, of the trybe of Ruben. Saphat the sonne of Hori, of the trybe of Simeon. Caleb ȝ sonne of Iephune, of the trybe of Iuda. Igeal the sonne of Ioseph, of the trybe of Isachar. Hosea the sonne of Nun, of ȝ trybe of Ephraim. Palti the sonne of Raphu, of the trybe of Ben Iamin. Gadiel the sonne of Sodi, of ȝ trybe of Zabulon. Gaddi the sonne of Susi, of the trybe of Ioseph of Manasse. Ammiel the sonne of Gemalli, of the trybe of Dan. Sethur ȝ sonne of Michael, of the trybe of Asser. Nahebi the sonne of Vaphsi, of the trybe of Nephtali. Guel the sonne of Machi, of the trybe of Gad. These are the names of the men, whom Moses sent forth to spye out the lande. As for Hosea the sonne of Nun, Moses called him Iosua.

Now whan Moses sent the forth to spye out the lande of Canaan, he sayde vnto the: Go vp southwarde, and get you vp to the mountaynes, and loke vpon the londe how it is: and the people that dwell therein, whether they be stronge or weake, fewe or many: and what maner of lande it is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad: t what maner of cities they be that they dwell in, whether they be fenced with walles, or not: and what maner of lande it is, whether it be fatt or leane, and whether there be trees therein, or not. Be of a good corage, and bringe of the frutes of the londe. It was euen aboute the tyme, that grapes are first ripe.

They wente vp, t spyed the lande, from ȝ wildernes of Zin, vntyll Rehob, as mē go vnto Hemath. They wente vp also towarde the south, and came vnto Hebron, where Ahiman was, and Sesai and Thalmāi, the children of Enack (Hebron was buylded seven yere before Zoan in Egipte.)

And they came to the ryuer of Escol, and there they cut downe a cluster of grapes, and caused two to beare it vpon a staffe, pomegranates also and fygges. The place is called the ryuer of Escol, because of the cluster of grapes, which the children of Israel cut downe there.

And whan they had spyed out the lande, they turned bake againe after fourtye daies, and wente, and came to Moses and Aaron, t to the whole congregacion of ȝ children of Israel in to ȝ wyldernes of Paran, euē vnto

Cades, and brought them worde agayne, and to the whole congregacion, how it stode, and let them se the frute of the lande, and tolde them, and sayde: We came in to ȝ lande, whither ye sent vs, where it floweth with mylke and hony, and this is the frute therof: sauynge that stronge people dwell therein, and the cities are excedding stronge and greate. And we sawe the children of Enack there also. The Amalechites dwell in the south cowntre, the Hethites, and Iebusites and Amorites dwell vpon the mountaynes, but the Cananites dwell by the see, and aboute Iordane.

Howbeit Caleb stilled ȝ people that was agaynst Moses, and sayde vnto them: Let vs go vp, and conquere the lande, for we are able to ouercome it. But the men that wente vp with him, sayde: w We are not able to go vp agaynst that people, for they are to stronge for vs. And of the lande that they had searched, they brought vp an euell reporte amonge the childrē of Israel, and saide: The lāde that we haue gone thorow to spye out, eateth vp the indwellers therof: and all the people that we sawe therein, are men of greate stature. We sawe giauntes there also, yee giauntes as the children of Enack: and we semed in oure sighte as ȝ greshoppers, and so dyd we in their sighte.

The xiiij. Chapter.

THEN the whole cōgregacion toke on, and cryed, and the people wepte ȝ night. And all the childrē of Israel murmured agaynst Moses and Aaron, and the whole congregacion sayde vnto them: Oh that we had dyed in the lande of Egipte, or that we might dye yet in this wyldernes. Wherefore bryngeth the LORDE vs in to this lande, that oure wyues shulde fall thorow the swerde, and oure children be a praye? Is it not better, that we go agayne in to Egipte? And they sayde one to another: Let vs make a captayne, and go in to Egipte agayne.

But Moses t Aaron fell vpon their faces before ȝ whole cōgregacion of the multitude of the childrē of Israel. w And Iosua ȝ sonne of Nun, t Caleb ȝ sonne of Iephune (which also had spyed out the lande) rente their clothes, t spake to the whole cōgregacion of the children of Israel: The londe ȝ we haue walked thorow to spye it out, is a very good lande. Yf the LORDE haue lust vnto vs, he shal brynge vs in to the same londe, ⁊ geue it vs, which is a lāde that floweth with mylke ⁊ hony. But in anye wyse rebell not ye agaynst the LORDE, ⁊ * feare not ⁊ people of this lande, for we wil eate thē vp as bred. Their defence is departed frō them, † but the LORDE is with vs, be not ye afraied of them.

¶ And all the people, bad stone them with stones. Then appeared the glory of the LORDE in the Tabernacle of witness vnto all the children of Israel, ⁊ the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: How longe shal this people blaspheme me? And how longe wil it be, or they beleue me, for all the tokes that I haue shewed amonge them? I wil smyte them with pestilence ⁊ destroye thē, ⁊ wil make of the a greater ⁊ mightier people then this is.

¶ But Moses sayde vnto ⁊ LORDE: Then shal ⁊ Egipcians heare it (for with thy power hast thou brought this people from amōge thē) so shal it be tolde the inhabitants of this lande also, which haue herde, ⁊ thou O LORDE art amonge this people, ⁊ thou art sene from face to face, ⁊ that thy cloude stondest ouer them, ⁊ that thou goest before them in the cloudy piler on the daye tyme, and in the fyrie piler on the night season. Yf thou shuldest now slaye this people as one man, then the Heythen that haue herde so good reporte of the, shulde saye: ¶ The LORDE was not able to brynge the people in to the londe, that he sware vnto them, therefore hath he slayne them in the wyldernes.

¶ So let the power of the LORDE now be greates, accordinge as thou hast spoken and sayde: The LORDE is of longe sufferance and of greates mercy, and forgeueth synne and trespase, and leaueth no man innocent, ⁊ vysiteth the mysdzede of the fathers vpon the children in to the thirde and fourth generacion. O be gracious now vnto the synne of this people accordinge to thy greates mercy, like as thou hast forborne this people also, euer from Egipte vnto this place. And the LORDE sayde: I haue forgeuē it, as thou hast saide. But as truly as I lye, all ⁊ world shal be full of my glory. ¶ For of all ⁊ men that haue sene my glory ⁊ my tokens, which I dyd in Egipte and in the wilderness, and tempted me now ten tymes, ⁊ haue not herkened vnto my voyce, there shall not one se the londe that I sware vnto their fathers: nether shal eny of them that haue blasphemed me, se it. ¶ But my seruānt Caleb, because there is another maner sprete with him, ⁊ because he hath folowed me, him wil I brynge in to the lande, which he hath gone thorow, ⁊ his sede shal conquere it, and ⁊ Amalechites also and the Cananites, that dwell in the lowe countrees. Tomorrow turne you, and get you to the wyldernes, in the waye towardes the reed see.

¶ And ⁊ LORDE spake vnto Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ sayde: How lōge shal this euell multitude murmur agaynst me? For I haue herde the murmuringe of the childre of Israel, ⁊ they haue murmured agaynst me. Tell them therefore: ¶ As trulye as I lye (sayeth ⁊ LORDE) I wil do vnto you, euen as ye haue spoken in myne eares: Your carcasses shal lye in this wilderness. And all ye that ⁊ were nombred from twentye yeare and aboue, which haue murmured agaynst me, shall not come in to the lande (cōcernynge the which I lift vp my hāde, ⁊ I wolde let you dwell therein) saue Caleb ⁊ sonne of Iephune, and Iosua the sonne of Nun.

Your children, of whom ye sayde: ¶ They shalbe a spoyle, them wyll I brynge in, so ⁊ they shal knowe the lande, which ye haue refused. But ye with youre carcasses shall lye in this wilderness, and youre children shal wander in this wilderness fortye yeares, ⁊ beare youre whordome, tyll youre carcasses be waisted in the wilderness, accordinge to the nombre of ⁊ fortye dayes, wherein ye spyed out the londe. ¶ A daye for a yeare, so ⁊ fortye yeares ye shall beare youre mysdzede, that ye maye knowe what it is, when I withdrawe my hande. Euen I the LORDE haue sayde it, ⁊ wil do it in dede vnto all this euell congregacion, that haue lift vp them selues agaynst me: In this wilderness shal they be consumed, and there shal they dye.

¶ So there dyed and were played before the LORDE all the mē, whom Moses sent to spye out the lāde, ⁊ came agayne, and made the whole cōgregacion to murmur agaynst it, because they brought vp a mysreporthe of the lande, that it was euell. But Iosua the sonne of Nun, and Caleb y sonne of Iephune were left alyue, of the men that wente to spye out the lande. And Moses spake these wordes vnto all the children of Israel. Thē toke the people greate sorowe.

f And they arose early in y mornynge, and wente vp to the toppe of y mountayne, and sayde: "Lo, here are we, and will go vp to the place, wherof the LORDE hath sayde: for we haue synned. But Moses sayde: wherfore go ye on this maner beyonde y worde of the LORDE? It shall not prospere with you: go not vp (for y LORDE is not amōge you) y ye be not slayne before youre enemies. For the Amalechites and Cananites are there before you, ⁊ ye shal fall thorow y swerde, because ye haue turned youre selues from the LORDE, and the LORDE shal not be with you.

But they were blynded to go vp to the toppe of the mountaine: neuertheles the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt ⁊ Moses came not out of the hooste. Then came downe y Amalechites ⁊ Cananites which dwelt vpon that mountayne, and smote them and hewed them, euen vnto Horma.

a AND the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the childrē of Israel, ⁊ saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande of youre dwellinge, which I shal geue you, and wil do sacrifice vnto the LORDE, whether it be a burntofferynge, or an offrynge for a speciall vowe, or a frewyll offerynge, or youre feast offerynges, that ye maye make a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE, of oxen or of shepe.

¹He y wil offre now his gite vnto y LORDE, shal brynge for the meatofferynge a tēth deale of fyne floure myngled with oyle of the fourth parte of an Hin, and wyne for y drynkofferynge the fourth part of an Hin also: to the burnt-offerynge, or eny other offerynge, whan a lambe is offred. But whā there is a ramme offred, thou shalt make the meatofferynge two tēth deales of fyne floure myngled with oyle, of the thirde parte of an Hin, and y thirde parte of an Hin of wyne also for a drynkofferynge: this shalt thou offre for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

But yf thou wilt offre an oxe for a burnt-offerynge, or for a speciall vowe offerynge, or for an healthofferynge vnto the LORDE, thou shalt brynge to the oxe, the meatoffrynge, euen thre tenth deales of fyne floure mingled with half an Hin of oyle, ⁊ half an Hin of wyne for a drynkoffrynge. This is an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. Thus shalt thou do with an oxe, with a ramme, with a lambe, and with a goate. Acordinge as the nombre of the offerynges is, thereafter shal the nombre of the meatofferynges and drynkofferynges be also.

He that is one of youre selues, shall do this, that he maye offre a sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. And yf there dwell a straunger with you, or is amōge youre kynszfolkes, and wil do an offerynge vnto the LORDE for a swete sauoure, the same shal do as ye do. Let there be one statute for the whole cōgregacion, both vnto you and to the straungers. A perpetuall statute shal it be vnto youre posterities, that the straunger be euē as ye before y LORDE. One lawe, and one ordinance shalbe vnto you and to the straunger that dwelleth with you.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, ⁊ sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande, in to y which I shal brynge you, "so that ye eate the bred of the londe, ye shal heue vp an Heueofferynge vnto the LORDE, namely, a cake of the firstlings of youre dowe shall ye geue for an Heueofferynge:* as the Heueofferynge of the barne, euen so shal ye geue the firstlings of youre dowe also vnto the LORDE, for an Heueofferynge amonge youre posterities.

And whan ye thorow ignoraunce ouer se eny of these commaundementes, "which the LORDE hath spoken by Moses, and all y the LORDE hath commaunded you by Moses (from the daye that the LORDE beganne to commaunde for youre posterities) and the cōgregacion do ought ignorauntly, thē shal the whole congregacion offre a yonge bullocke from amonge the greate cattell to a burnt-offerynge, for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE, with his meatofferynge and drynk-offerynge as the maner is, and an hegoate for a synofferynge. And so shal the prest make an atonement for the whole congregacion of the children of Israel, and it shalbe foregeuen them: for it is an ignorance. And they shal brynge these their giftes for an offerynge vnto the LORDE, and their synofferynge before the LORDE for their ignorance, and it shalbe foregeuen the whole congregacion of the childrē of Israel, & the straunger also y dwelleth amonge you, for so much as all the people is in such ignorance.

Yf one soule synne thorow ignorance,* the same shal brynge a she goate of a yere olde for a synofferynge. And the prest shall make an attonement for such an ignoraunt soule with the synofferynge for the ignorance before the LORDE, that he maye reconcyle him, and it shal be foregeuen him. And it shal be one lawe, (that ye shal do for y ignorance) both vnto him that is borne amonge the children of Israel, and to the straunger that dwelleth amonge you.

But yf a soule do ought presumptuously, whether he be one of youre selues or a straunger, he hath despyed the LORDE: y same soule shalbe roted out from amonge his people: because he hath despyed the worde of the LORDE, and hath left his commaundement vndone: that soule shall vtterly perishe, his synne shalbe vpon him.

Now whye the children of Israel were in the wyldernes, they founde a man gatherynge stickes vpon the Sabbath daye. And they that founde him gatherynge stickes, brought him vnto Moses and Aaron, and before the whole congregacion. *And they put him in preson, for it was not declared what shulde be done vnto him. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: The man shall dye the death, the whole congregacion shal stone him without the hoost. Then the whole cōgregacion brought him out of y hoost, and stoned him that he dyed. as y LORDE commaunded Moses.

And y LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Speake to the childrē of Israel, & saye vnto thē, y they make them gardes vpon y quarters of their garmentes amonge all youre posterities, and put yalowe rybandes vpon the gardes in y quarters. And y gardes shal serue you, y ye maye loke vpon thē, and remembre all the cōmaundementes of the LORDE, & do them: that ye order not youre selues after y meanyng of youre awne hert, ner go a whorynge after youre awne eyes. Therfore shal ye remembre and do all my commaundementes, and be holy vnto youre God. I am the LORDE youre God, which brought you out of the lande of Egipte, to be youre God. Euen I the LORDE youre God.

The xvi. Chapter.

AND Corah the sonne of Iezehar the sonne of Kahath, the sonne of Leui, with Dathan and Abiram the sonne of Eliab, and On the sonne of Peleth, y sonnes of Rubē, stode vp agaynst Moses, with certayne men amonge the childrē of Israel, two hundredth & fyfte captaynes of the congregacion, councelers, & famous men. And they gathered them selues agaynst Moses & Aarō & sayde vnto them: Ye make to moch a doo, for all the congregacion is holy euery one, and the LORDE is amonge them: Why lifte ye youre selues vp then aboue the congregacion of the LORDE?

Whan Moses herde y, he fell vpō his face, & saide vnto Corah, & to all his company: Tomorow shal y LORDE shewe who is his, & who is holy to come vnto him. Whō so euer he choseth, y same shal come vnto him. This do: Take y censors, thou Corah & all thy cōpanye, & do fyre therin, & put incense thereon tomorow before the LORDE: then whom so euer the LORDE choseth, the same shal be holy. Ye make to moch a doo, ye children of Leui.

And Moses sayde vnto Corah: Heare ye childrē of Leui, Is it not ynough vnto you, y y God of Israel hath separated you fro y multitude of Israel, y ye shulde come nye him, to do the seruyce of the dwellynge place of the LORDE, and stonde before the people to mynister vnto them? He hath caused the and all thy brethren the childrē of Leui with the, to come nye vnto him: and now ye seke the presthode also. Thou and all thy cōpany conspyre agaynst the LORDE. What is Aaron, that ye shulde murmur against him?

And Moses sent to call Dathā & Abirā y sonnes of Eliab. But they saide: We wil not come vp. Is it to litle y thou hast brought vs out of y lande of Egipte (y floweth with mylke & hony) to kyll vs in y wildernes: but thou must raigne ouer vs also? How goodly well hast thou brought vs in to a londe, that floweth with milke and hony, ⁊ geuē vs feldeſ and vniardes in poſſeſſion? Wilt thou put out theſe mens eyes? We will not come vp.

Then waſ Moſes very wroth, ⁊ ſaide vnto ꝑ LORDE: Turne ꝑ not vnto their meatofferings. I haue not takē ſo much as an Aſſe frō thē, nether haue I hurte eny of thē. And Moſes ſaide vnto Corah: Tomorow be thou ⁊ all thy companie before ꝑ LORDE, thou, and they, ⁊ Aaron. And take euery one his cenſer, and put incenſe therein, and come before the LORDE, euery one with his cenſer (that is two hundreth and fiftye cenſers) and both thou and Aaron take either his cenſer.

And euery one toke his cenſer, and put fyre therin, and layed incenſe thereon, and came before the dore of the Tabernacle of witneſ, and Moſes and Aaron alſo. And Corah gathered ꝑ whole congregaciō agaynſt thē before the dore of the Tabernacle of witneſ.

But ꝑ glory of the LORDE appeared before ꝑ whole congregacion. And ꝑ LORDE ſpake vnto Moſes ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ ſaide: Separate your ſelues frō this congregaciō, ꝑ I maye ſhortly conſume them. And they fell vpon their faces, ⁊ ſaide: O God, thou God of the ſpretes of all fleſh, yf one man haue ſynned, wilt thou therefore be wroth ouer the whole congregacion? And the LORDE ſpake vnto Moſes, ⁊ ſaide: Speake to the congregaciō, and ſaye: Come vp from ꝑ dwellynge of Corah, and Dathan, and Abiram.

And Moſes ſtoode vp, ⁊ wente vnto Dathan ⁊ Abiram, ⁊ the Elders of Iſrael folowed him, ⁊ he ſpake to ꝑ cōgregaciō, ⁊ ſaide: Departe frō ꝑ tentes of theſe vngodly mē ⁊ touche nothinge ꝑ is theirs, ꝑ ye periſhe not in eny of their ſinnes. And they gat them vp from the dwellynge of Corah, Dathan, ⁊ Abiram. But Dathan and Abirā came out, and ſtoode in the dore of their tentes, with their wyues, and ſonnes and children.

And Moſes ſaide: Hereby ſhal ye knowe that the LORDE hath ſent me, to do all theſe workes, and that I haue not done them of myne awne hert. Yf theſe men dye the comon death of all men, or be vſyſted as all men are vſyſted, then hath not the LORDE ſent me. But yf the LORDE make a new thinge, and the earth open hir mouth, and ſwalowe them with all that they haue, ſo ꝑ they go downe quicke in to hell, thē ſhal ye knowe, that theſe men haue blaſphemed the LORDE.

And whā he had spokē out all theſe wordes, ꝑ grōude cloude aſunder vnder thē, ⁊ the earth opened hir mouth, ⁊ ſwalowed thē, with their houſes, ⁊ all the mē ꝑ were with Corah, ⁊ all their ſubſtāce, and they wente downe quicke in to the hell, with all that they had.

And the earth closed vpō them, ⁊ ſo they periſhed from amonge ꝑ congregaciō. And all Iſrael ꝑ were aboute thē, fled at ꝑ crye of thē, for they ſaide: That ꝑ earth ſwalowe not vs alſo. Morouer the fyre came out frō the LORDE, and conſumed the two hundreth and fiftye men, that offered the incenſe.

And the LORDE ſpake vnto Moſes, ⁊ ſaide: Speake to Eleaſar ꝑ ſonne of Aaron ꝑ preſt, ꝑ he take vp ꝑ cenſers out of ꝑ burninge, ⁊ ſcater ꝑ fyre here ⁊ there (For the cenſers of theſe ſynners are halowed thorow their ſoules) ꝑ they maye be beatē in to thinne plates, ⁊ faſtened vpon ꝑ altare. For they are offered before ꝑ LORDE, ⁊ halowed: and they ſhalbe a token vnto ꝑ childrē of Iſrael.

And Eleaſar the preſt toke ꝑ braſen cenſers which they ꝑ were burnt, had offered, ⁊ bet thē to plates, to faſten thē vpon ꝑ altare for a remēbraunce vnto ꝑ children of Iſrael ꝑ no ſtraunger (and he that is not of ꝑ ſede of Aaron) come nye to offre incenſe before the LORDE, ꝑ it happē not vnto him as vnto Corah and his companie, acordynge as the LORDE ſaide vnto him by Moſes.

On the nexte morow murmured ꝑ whole congregacion of ꝑ childrē of Iſrael agaynſt Moſes ⁊ Aarō, ⁊ ſaide: Ye haue ſlayne ꝑ people of ꝑ LORDE. And whan the cōgregaciō waſ gathered agaynſt Moſes ⁊ Aarō, they turned thē towarde ꝑ Tabernacle of witneſ. And beholde, thē ꝑ cloude couered ꝑ Tabernacle, ⁊ ꝑ glory of ꝑ LORDE appeared. And Moſes ⁊ Aarō wēte in before ꝑ Tabernacle of witneſ. And ꝑ LORDE ſpake vnto Moſes ⁊ ſaide: Get you out of this cōgregacion, I wil ſhortly conſume thē. And they fell vpon their faces. And Moſes ſaide vnto Aaron: Take the cēſer ⁊ put fyre therein frō of the altare, ⁊ lay incēſe thereon, ⁊ go ſome to the cōgregacion, ⁊ make an attonement for them. For the wrath is gone out from the LORDE, and the plague is begōne amonge the people.

And Aaron came agayne vnto Moses before the dore of the Tabernacle of witness. And the plage ceased.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND ſ LORDE spake vnto Moses, & sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, & take of the twolue staues, of euery captayne of his fathers house one, and wryte euery mans name vpon his staffe. But Aarons name shalt thou wryte vpon the staffe of Leui. For euery heade of their fathers house shal haue a staffe. And laye the in the Tabernacle of witness, before the witness where I testifie vnto you. And loke whom I shall chose, his staffe shal florish, ſ I maye styлле the grudgings of the children of Israel, which they grudge agaynst you.

And Moses spake vnto the childrē of Israel, & all their captaynes gaue him twolue staues, euery captayne a staffe, after ſ house of their fathers. And Aarons staffe was amonge their staues also. And Moses layed the staues before the LORDE in the Tabernacle of witness.

33 On the morow whā Moses wēte in to ſ Tabernacle of witness, he fōude ſ + Aarōs rodde of the house of Leui florished, and brought forth blossoms, & bare allmondes. And Moses brought forth all ſ staues frō ſ LORDE before all ſ childrē of Israel, that they might se it. And they toke euery mā his staffe.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Bringe Aarōs staffe againe before the wytnesse, ſ it maye be kepte for a tokē to the children of rebellion, that their murmurings maye cease from me, lest they dye.

Moses dyd as ſ LORDE cōmaunded him. And ſ childrē of Israel sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, we cōsume awaie, we are destroyed, & perishe. Who so cōmeth nye ſ dwellyng place of ſ LORDE, he dyeth. Shal we the vtterly cōsume awaie?

The xviij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Aaron: A Thou & thy sonnes, & thy fathers house with the shal beare the myszdede of ſ Sāctuary: & thou & thy sonnes with the, shal beare the myszdede of youre presthode. †But thy brethren of the trybe of Leui thy father, shal come nye the, & be ioyned vnto the, that they maye mynistrer vnto ſ. But thou & thy sonnes with the, shal mynistrer before ſ Tabernacle of witness. And they shal wayte vpō thy seruyce & vpon ſ seruyce of the whole Tabernacle. But nye vnto the vessels of ſ Sāctuary & to the altare, shall they not come, ſ both they & ye dye not: howbeit they shal be ioyned vnto the, to wayte vpō the mynistracion in the Tabernacle of witness, in all the seruice of the Tabernacle. And there shal no straunger come nye vnto you.

Therefore wayte now vpon the seruyce of the Sanctuary, and vpon the seruyce of the altare, that there come no more wrath vpon the children of Israel. For lo, I haue takē youre brethrē the Leuites frō amonge the children of Israel, to be youre gifte, for a presente vnto ſ LORDE, to do ſ seruyce in ſ Tabernacle of witness. As for ſ, and thy sonnes with the, ye shal waite vpon youre prestes office, that ye maye ministrer in all maner busynes of the altare, and within the vayle: for youre prestes office geue I vnto you for a gifte to do seruyce. Yf a straunger come nye, he shall dye.

33 And the LORDE sayde vnto Aaron: beholde, I haue geuen the my Heueofferynges: And all that the children of Israel halowe, haue I geuen vnto the, and to thy sonnes for a perpetuall dewtye. This shalt thou haue of the most holy thinges that they offer. All their giftes with all their meatofferings, and with all their synofferynges, and with all their trespase offerynges, that they geue me, the same shal be most holy vnto the and thy sonnes. In the most holy place shalt thou eate it. All that are males shal eate thereof: For it shal be holy vnto the.

C The Heue offeryng of their giftes in all the Waueofferynges of the children of Israel, haue I geuen vnto the also, and to thy sonnes, and to thy daughters for a perpetuall dewtye. Who so is cleane in thy house, shal eate therof. All the fat of the oyle, and all f fat of the wyne and corne of their firstlings, that they geue vnto the LORDE, haue I geuen vnto f . The first frutes of all that is in their londe, which they bringe vnto the LORDE, shal be thine. Who so euer is cleane in thine house, shal eate therof.

All dedicate thinges in Israel shal be thine. All that breaketh the Matrix amonge all flesh, which they brynge vnto the LORDE, whether it be man or beast, shalbe thine. But so, that thou cause the firstborne of mā to be redemed, and that thou cause the first borne of vnclane beestes to be redemed also (They shal redeme it whan it is a moneth olde, and shall geue it lowse for money, euen for fyue Sycles, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary, * which Sycle is worth twentye Geras.)

But the first frutes of an oxe, or lambe, or goate shalt thou not cause to be redemed for they are holy. Their bloude shalt thou sprenkle vpon the altare, and their fat shalt thou burne for an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto f LORDE. Their flesh shalbe thine, like as f Wauebrest and f right shulder is thine also. All the Heueofferings that f childrē of Israel halowe vnto f LORDE, haue I geuen vnto the, t to thy sonnes, t to thy daughters with the for a perpetuall dewtie. This shalbe a salted couenaūt for euer before f LORDE, vnto the and thy sede with the.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Aarō: Thou shalt inheret nothinge in their londe,^c ner haue eny porciō amonge them: for I am thy porcion, and thine enheritaunce amōge the children of Israel. Vnto the children of Leui haue I geuen all the tithes in Israel to inheritance, for f seruyce which they do vnto me in the Tabernacle of witnessse, that from hēce forth the children of Israel come not nye the Tabernacle of witnes, to lade them selues with synne, and to dye: But the Leuites shal do the seruyce in the Tabernacle of witnes, t shal beare their synne, for a perpetuall lawe amonge youre posterities. † And they shall inheret none inheritance amonge the children of Israel. For f tithes of the childrē of Israel, which they Heue vnto f LORDE, haue I geuen vnto the Leuites for an heretage. Therefore haue I sayde vnto them, that they shall inheret no inheritance amonge the children of Israel.

And the same youre Heueofferynge shall ye reken, as though ye gaue corne out of the barne, and fullnesse out of the wynepresse.

Thus shal ye geue an Heueofferynge vnto the LORDE of all youre tithes, which ye take of the children of Israel, f ye maie geue the same Heueofferynge of f LORDE, vnto Aarō f prest. And all f ye geue of f tythes, t halowe vnto f LORDE for a gifte, f same shall be his of the best. And saye thou vnto them: Whan ye thus Heue vp f fat therof, it shal be rekened vnto the Leuites as the increase of the barne, and as the increase of the wine presse. And ye maye eate it in all places, ye t youre children: for it is youre rewarde for youre seruyce in the Tabernacle of witnessse: and ye shal not lade synne vpon you in the same, whan ye Heue the fat therof, and vnhalowe not the halowed thinges of the children of Israel, and ye shal not dye.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses t Aarō t sayde: This custome shall be a lawe, which the LORDE hath cōmaunded, t sayde: Speake vnto f children of Israel, f they brynge vnto f a reed cow without spot, wherin is no blemish, t vpon whō there came neuer yock: and ye shal geue her vnto Eleasar the prest,[†] which shal brynge her without the hooste, and cause her to be slayne there before him.

And Eleasar f prest shal take of hir bloude with his fynger, and sprenkle it seuen tymes straight towarde the dore of the Tabernacle of witnessse, and ^cause the cow to be burnt before him, both hir szkynne and hir flesh, and hir bloude also with hir donge. And the prest shal take Cedar wodd and ysope, and purple woll, and cast it vpō the cow as she burneth, t he shal washe his clothes, and bathe his body with water, and the go in to the hoost, and be vnclane vntyll f eue.

also with water, and bathe his body in water, ⁊ be vncleane vntyll ⁊ euen. And one ⁊ is cleane, shal gather vp the *aszshes of ⁊ cow, and poure them without the hoost in a cleane place, that they maye be kepte there, for sprenklinge water to the congregacion of the childrē of Israel, for it is a synofferinge. And he that gathered vp the aszshes of the cow, shall wash his clothes, and be vncleane vntyll the euen. This shalbe a perpetuall lawe vnto ⁊ children of Israel, and to the straungers that dwell amonge you.

*Who so now toucheth a deed mā, shal be vncleane seuen dayes: the same shall purifie himself here with, on the thirde daye and on the seuenth daie, and then shall he be cleane. And yf he purifye not himself on the thirde daye, ⁊ on the seuenth daye, thē shall he not be cleane. But whā eny mā toucheth a deed persone, and wil not purifie himself, he defyleth the dwellinge of the LORDE, and the same soule shal be roted out of Israel, because the sprenklinge water is not sprenkled vpon him: and he is vncleane, as long as he letteth not himself be poured therof.

C This is the lawe. Whan a mā dyeth in ⁊ tente, who so euer goeth in to the tente, and all ⁊ is in the tente, shal be vncleane seū daies. And euery open vessel that hath no lydd nor couerynge, is vncleane. And who so euer toucheth one ⁊ is slayne with the swerde vpon ⁊ felde, or eny other deed, or a deed mans bone, or a graue, ⁊ same is vncleane seū daies.

So now for the vncleane persone, they shal take of ⁊ aszshes of this burnt synofferinge, ⁊ put springinge water theron in to a vessell, and a cleane man shall take ⁊ ysopo, ⁊ dyppe it in the water, and sprenkle it vpon the tente, and vpon all the vessels, and all the soules that are therin. Likewise also vpon him, ⁊ hath touched a deed mans bone, or a slayne persone, or a deed body, or a graue.

And he that is cleane, shal sprenkle vpon the vncleane, ⁊ thirde daye, ⁊ the seūth daie, ⁊ purifye him on ⁊ seūth daie. And he shal washe his clothes, ⁊ bathe him self with water, and so at euen he shalbe cleane.

D But he ⁊ is vncleane, and wil not purifye him self, ⁊ same soule shal be roted out of ⁊ cōgregacion. For he hath defyled the Sanctuary of the LORDE, ⁊ is not sprekled with spreklinge water, therfore is he vn cleane. And this shalbe a perpetuall lawe vnto thē. And he ⁊ sprenkled with the spreklinge water, shall wash his clothes also. And who so euer toucheth the spreklinge water, shal be vn cleane vntill the euen. †And what so euer he toucheth, shalbe vn cleane: ⁊ loke what soule he toucheth, shalbe vn cleane vntill the euen.

The xx. Chapter.

A ND the childrē of Israel came with the whole cōgregacion in to the wilderness of Zin in the first moneth, § ⁊ the people abode at Cades. And there dyed Miriam, ⁊ was buried there. And the congregacion had no water, ⁊ they gathered them selues together agaynst Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ the people chode with Moses, ⁊ sayde: Wolde God ⁊ we had perished, ¶ whan oure brethrē perished before the LORDE. Wherefore haue ye brought the congregacion of the LORDE in to this wilderness, ⁊ we shulde dye here with oure catell? And wherfore haue ye brought vs out of Egypte in to this place, where men can not sow, where are nether fygges, ner vynes, ner pomgranates, ⁊ where there is no water to drynke?

And Moses ⁊ Aaron wēte frō the congregacion vnto ⁊ dore of ⁊ Tabernacle of witness, ⁊ fell vpon their faces. And the glory of the LORDE appeared vnto them. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: ¶ Take the staffe, ⁊ gather the cōgregacion together, thou ⁊ thy brother Aaron, ⁊ speake vnto the rocke before their eyes, ⁊ it shall geue his water. And thus shalt thou prouyde thē water out of the rocke, ⁊ geue the congregacion drynke, and their catell also.

B Thē toke Moses the staffe before ⁊ LORDE, as he commaunded him, ⁊ Moses ⁊ Aaron gathered the congregacion together before the rocke, ⁊ sayde vnto thē: Heare ye rebellions: Shal we prouyde you water out of this rocke? And Moses lift vp his hande, ⁊ smote ⁊ rocke with the staffe two tymes. ¶ Then came ⁊ water out abundantly, so ⁊ the cōgregacion dranke, and their catell also.

But the LORDE sayde vnto Moses ⁊ Aaron: ¶ Because ye beleued me not, to sanctifye me before þy childre of Israel, ye shal not bringe this congregacion in to the londe that I shal geue the. This is þy water of strife, where the children of Israel stroue with the LORDE and he was sanctified vpon them.

¶ And Moses sent messaugers frō Cades vnto þy kynge of þy Edomites: This worde sendeth the thy *brother Israel: Thou knowest all þy trauayle that happened vnto vs, how that oure fathers wente downe in to Egipte, & how we haue dwelt in Egipte a longe tyme, & how the Egipcians deale euell with vs & oure fathers. And we cryed vnto þy LORDE which herde oure voyce, and sent his angell, & hath brought vs out of Egipte: And beholde, we are at Cades in þy cite without the borders of thy londe. † O let vs go thorow thy londe, we wyl not go thorow þy feldes ner vynyardes, ner drynke the water out of the fountaynes. We wyl go the hye strete, and turne nether to þy right hande ner to þy lefte, tyll we be come past þy borders of thy coundre.

But the Edomite answered him: Thou shal not go by me, † or I wyl come agaynst þy with þy swerde. The children of Israel saide vnto him: We wil go þy comō hye waye, & yf we or oure catell drynke of thy water, we wil paye for it: we wil do nothinge, but passe thorow on fote only. But he sayde: Thou shalt not go thorow, And the Edomites came out against them with a mightie people & a strōge hande. Thus þy Edomites denied to graunte Israel passage thorow the borders of the lande. And Israel turned awaye from them.

¶ And the children of Israel brake vp frō Cades, and came with the whole congregacion vnto mount Hor. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses & Aaron at mount Hor harde vpon the coastes of þy lande of þy Edomites, & sayde: Let Aarō be gathered vnto his people: for he shal not come in to þy lande þy I haue geuen vnto þy children of Israel, because ye were disobedient vnto my mouth at the water of strife. Take Aaron and Eleasar and his sonne, and brynge them vp vnto mount Hor, and strype Aaron out of his vestimentes, and put the vpon Eleasar his sonne and there shall Aaron be gathered (vnto his people) and dye.

Then dyd Moses as the LORDE cōmaunded him, and they wente vp vnto Mount Hor in þy sight of the whole congregacion. And Moses toke Aarons clothes, & put the vpon Eleasar his sonne. ¶ And Aaron dyed there, euen aboue vpon the mount. And Moses & Eleasar came downe from the mount. And when the whole congregacion sawe that Aaron was awaye, they mourned for him thirtie daies thorow out the whole house of Israel.

The xxi. Chapter.

¶ AND whan Arad / the kynge of the Cananites (which dwelt towarde the south) herde, that Israel came in by þy waie þy the spies had founde out, he fought agaynst Israel, and toke some of them presoners. Then vowed Israel a vowe vnto þy LORDE, and sayde: Yf thou wylt geue this people vnder my hande, I wyll vtterly destroye their cities. And the LORDE herde þy voyce of Israel, and delyuered them the Cananites, and they vtterly destroyed them with their cities also. ¶ And he called the place Horma.

¶ Then departed they fro mount Hor on þy waye towarde the reed see, that they might go aboute the lande of the Edomites. And the soules of the people faynted by the waie † and they spake agaynst God and agaynst Moses: Wherefore hast thou brought vs out of the lande of Egipte, to slaye vs in the wilderness? For here is nether bred ner water, and oure soule lotheth this lighte meate.

Than sent the LORDE fyrrie serpentes amonge the people, which bote the peple, so that there dyed moch people in Israel. Thē came they vnto Moses, and sayde: We haue synned, because we haue spoken agaynst the LORDE and agaynst the. † Praye thou vnto the LORDE, that he take awaye the serpentes from vs. And Moses prayed for the people.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: Make a brasen serpente, and set it vp for a token. Who so euer is bytten, and loketh vpon it, shal lyue. ¶ Then made Moses a serpent of brasse, and set it vp for a token: and whan a serpent had bytten eny man, he behelde the brasen serpente, and recovered.

And the children of Israel departed, and pitched in Oboth. And from Oboth they wente on, and pitched in Igrim by Abarim in the wyldernesse ouer agaynst Moab, on the Eastsyde. From thence departed they, & pitched by the ryuer of Sared. From thence departed they, and pitched on this syde Arnon, which is in the wyldernesse, and commeth out of the coastes of the Amorites. For Arnon is the border betwixte Moab and \S Amorites. Wherefore it is spoken in the boke of the warres of the LORDE: And go with violence both on the ryuer of Arnon, & on the founteyne of the riuier, which boweth downe-ward to dwell at Ar, & leaneth thereon, to be the border of Moab.

And from thence they came to the well. This is the well, wherof the LORDE spake vnto Moses: gather the people together, I wil geue them water. Then sange Israel this songe, and they sange one after another ouer the well: This is the well, that the prynces dygged: the nobles amonge the people haue digged it thorow \S teacher and their staues.

And from this wildernes they wente vnto Mathana, & from Mathana vnto Nahaliel, and from Nahaliel to Bamoth, and fro Bamoth vnto the valley that lieth in \S felde of Moab at the toppe of Pisga, and turneth toward the wyldernesse.

And Israel sent messangers vnto Sihō the kynge of the Amorrites, & caused to saye vnto him: Let me go thorow thy lande, we wyl not turne in to \S felde ner in to the vynyardes: nether will we drynke the water of the welles, \S hie strete wil we go, till we be past the borders of thy countre.

Howbeit Sihon wolde not geue the children of Israel licence to go thorow the coastes of his londe, but gathered all his people together, and wente out agaynst Israel in the wyldernesse. And whan he came to Iaheza, he fought agaynst Israel. Neuerthelesse Israel smote him with the edge of the swerde, and conquered his lande from Arnon vnto Iabock, and vnto the children of Ammon. For the borders of the children of Ammon were strōge. So Israel toke all these cities, and dwelt in all the cities of \S Amorites, namely at Heszbōn, and in the townes belonginge therto. For Heszbōn the cite was Sihon the kynge of the Amorites, and he had foughten before with the kynge of the Moabites, and conquered all his londe from him vntyll Arnon.

Wherefore it is sayde in the prouerbe: Come vnto Heszbōn, let vs buylde and prepare \S cite of Sihon. For there is a fyre gone out of Heszbōn, and a flamme from the cite of Sihon, which hath consumed Ar of \S Moabites, and the citisens of \S toppe of Arnon. Wo vnto the Moab, thou people of Camos art vndone. His sonnes are put to flighte, & his daughters brought captiue vnto Sihon the kynge of the Amorites. Their glory is come to naught from Heszbōn vnto Dibon: waisted are they vnto Nopha, which reacheth vnto Mediba. Thus dwelt Israel in the lande of the Amorites.

And Moses sent out spyes vnto Iahesar, & they toke the townes belongynge therto, & cōquered the Amorites \S were therein. And they turned, & wente vp the waye toward Basan. Then Og the kynge of Basan wete out agaynst them with all his people, to fight in Edrei. And \S LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Feare him not, for I haue geuen him with his lande & people in to thy hande, & thou shalt do with him, as thou dyddest with Sihon the kynge of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heszbōn. And they smote him, & his sonnes, & all his people (so \S there remayned none) & cōquered the londe. Afterwarde wete \S children of Israel, & pitched in \S felde of Moab beyonde Iordane by Iericho.

The xxij. Chapter.

AND whan Balac \S sonne of Ziphor sawe all that Israel had done vnto the Amorites, and that the Moabites were sore afrayed of the people (\S was so greate) and that the Moabites stode in feare of the children of Israel, he sayde vnto \S Elders of the Madianites: Now shal this heape licke vp all that is aboute vs, euē as an oxe licketh vp the grasse in the felde. (And Balac \S sonne of Ziphor was kynge of the Moabites at that tyme.)

And he sent out messangers vnto *Balaam the sonne of Beor, which was an interpreter. (The same dwelt by the water of the lande of \S children of his people) that they shulde call him, and he caused to saye vnto him: Beholde, there is come out of Egipte, a people, which couereth \S face of \S earth, and lyeth ouer agaynst me. Come now therfore, and curse me this people, for they are to mightie for me, yf peradventure I might be able to smyte them, and to dryue them out of the lande. For I wote, that whom thou blessest, he is blessed : and whom thou cursest, he is cursed.

B And the Elders of the Moabites wente on with \hat{y} Elders of the Madianites, and had the rewarde of \hat{y} soyth sayenge in their handes, and they came vnto Balaam, τ tolde him the wordes of Balaac. And he saide vnto the : Tary here all night, τ I will bringe you worde agayne, euen as the LORDE shal saye vnto me. So \hat{y} prynces of \hat{y} Moabites abode with Balaam.

And God came vnto Balaam, τ sayde : What men are these, which are with \hat{y} ? Balaam sayde vnto God: Balac \hat{y} sonne of Ziphor the kynge of the Moabites hath sent vnto me: Beholde, there is a people come out of Egipte, and couereth the face of the earth, come now therfore, τ curse me the, yf peradventure I maye be able to fighte with them, τ to dryue the out. But God sayde vnto Balaam: Go not with them, τ curse not that people, for they are blessed.

C Then rose Balaam vp in the mornynge, τ sayde vnto the prynces of Balac: Get you vnto youre londe, for the LORDE wyll not suffer me to go with you.

And the prynces of \hat{y} Moabites gat the vp, came to Balac, τ saide: Balaam refuseth to come with vs. Then sent Balac yet a greater cōpany of prynces, τ more honorable the they. When they came to Balaam, they tolde him: Balac \hat{y} sonne of Ziphor sendeth \hat{y} this worde: Oh refuse not to come vnto me, for I wyll promote the vnto hye honour, τ wil do what so euer thou sayest vnto me. Come I praye the, curse me this people.

Balaam answered, τ sayde vnto \hat{y} seruantes of Balac: * Yf Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer τ golde, yet coulde I not go beyonde \hat{y} worde of the LORDE my God, to do litle or greate. Neuertheles tary ye here this night, \hat{y} I maye wete, what the LORDE wil saye more vnto me. Then came God to Balaam by night, τ saide vnto him: Yf the men are come to call the, get the vp then, and go with the: but what I shal saye vnto the, that shalt thou do.

D Then rose Balaam vp in the mornynge, τ saddled his Asse, τ wente with the prynces of \hat{y} Moabites. But the wrath of God waxed whote, because he wēte. And the angell of \hat{y} LORDE stode in the waye, to withstōde him. But he rode vpō his Asse, τ two seruantes with him. And \hat{y} Asse sawe \hat{y} angell of \hat{y} LORDE stōdinge in \hat{y} waye, τ his swerde drawn in his hāde. And \hat{y} Asse turned a syde out of \hat{y} waye, τ wēte in to the felde. But Balaam smote her, \hat{y} she shulde go in the waye.

Then stode the angell of the LORDE in \hat{y} pathe by the vynyardes, where there were walles on both the sydes. And whan \hat{y} Asse sawe the angell of the LORDE, she wrenshed vnto the wall, τ thrust Balaams fote vnto the wall. And he smote her agayne. The wēte the angell of the LORDE farther, τ stode in a narrow place, where there was no waye to turne, nether to the righte hāde ner to \hat{y} left. And whan the Asse sawe the angell of the LORDE, she fell downe vnder Balaam. Then was Balaams wrath furious, τ smote the Asse with a staffe.

Then opened the LORDE the mouth of \hat{y} Asse, and she sayde vnto Balaam: What haue I done vnto the, that thou hast smytten me now thre tymes? Balaam sayde vnto \hat{y} Asse: Because thou hast mocked me. Oh \hat{y} I had a swerde now in my hande, I wolde kyll the. The Asse sayde vnto Balaam: Am not I thine Asse, which thou hast rydden vpon in thy tyme vnto this daye? Was I euer wonte to do so vnto the? He sayde: No.

Then opened the LORDE the eyes of Balaam, \hat{y} he sawe \hat{y} angell of the LORDE stondinge in \hat{y} waye, τ a drawē swerde in his hāde. And he enclyned him selfe, τ bowed downe with his face. And the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherefore hast thou smyttē thine Asse now thre tymes? Beholde, I am come out to resistē \hat{y} , for thy waye is frowarde, τ cōtrary vnto me. And \hat{y} Asse sawe me, τ auoyded fro me thre tymes: or els yf she had not turned asyde fro me, I had slayne the, τ saued the Asse alyue.

Then sayde Balaam vnto \hat{y} angell of \hat{y} LORDE: I haue synned, for I wyst not, that thou stodest in the waye agaynst me. And now yf it displease \hat{y} , I wil turne agayne. The angell of \hat{y} LORDE saide vnto him: Go with the mē: but thou shalt speake nothinge els, then \hat{y} I shal saye vnto \hat{y} . So Balaam wente forth with the prynces of Balac. Whan Balaam herde f Balaam came, he wente out to mete him (in the cite of the Moabites f lieth on the coaste of Arnon, which is on f vttemost border) t sayde vnto him: Dyd not I sende for f to call the? Wherefore camest thou not then vnto me? Thinkest thou f I am not able to promote f vnto honoure? Balaam answered him: Lo, I am come vnto f . *But how can I saye eny thinge els, the f God putteth in my mouth? f I must speake.

So Balaam wente with Balac, and they came vnto the cite on the vttemost border of his lande. And Balac slewe oxen and shepe, and sent for Balaam, and for the prynces that were with him.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND in the mornynge, Balac toke Balaam, and they wete vp to the hye place of Baal, that from thece he might se vnto the vttemost parte of f people. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: Buylde me here seuen altares, and prouyde me here seuen bullockes, and seue rammes. Balac dyd as Balaam sayde. And both Balac and Balaam offred, on euery altare a bullocke t a ramme. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: Stonde thou by thy burntofferynge, I wil go, yf happily the LORDE wil mete me, t call me, f I maye tell the, what so euer he sheweth me. And he wente his waye, as he sayde.

And f LORDE mett Balaam. And Balaam saide vnto him: Seuen altares haue I prepared, and offred on euery altare a bullocke and a ramme. The LORDE put f worde in Balaams mouth, and sayde: Go agayne vnto Balac, and saye on this wise. And whan he came agayne vnto him, beholde, he stode by his burntofferynge, with all f prynces of the Moabites.

13 Then toke he vp his parable, t sayde: Balac the kynge of the Moabites hath caused to fet me out of Syria from the mountaynes towarde the East, (t sayde:) Come, curse me Iacob: come, defye me Israel. How shall I curse, whom God curseth not? How shal I defye, whom f LORDE defyeth not? For fro f toppe of f stonye rockes I se him, t from the hilles I beholde him. Beholde, f people shal dwell by the selues, t shal not be rekened amoge the Heithē. Who can tell the dust of Iacob, t the nombre of the fourth parte of Israel? My soule die f death of f righteous, and my ende be as the ende of these.

The saide Balac vnto Balaam: What doest thou vnto me? I caused to fet f for to curse myne enemies, t beholde, thou blessest the. He answered t saide: *Must I not kepe t speake f , which the LORDE putteth in to me mouth? Balac saide vnto him: Come with me yet vnto another place, fro whence thou mayest se f vttemost parte of them, t not se them all, and curse me them there.

And he toke him vp to a fre place, euē vnto the toppe of Pisga, t buylded seuen altares, and offered on euery altare a bullocke t a ramme. And he sayde vnto Balac: Stonde so by thy burntoffrynge, whyle I go yonder. And the LORDE mett Balaam, t put the worde in his mouth, t sayde: Go agayne vnto Balac, t saye on this wyse. And whan he came to him agayne, beholde, he stode by his burntofferynge with the prynces of the Moabites. And Balac sayde vnto him: What hath the LORDE sayde?

And he toke vp his parable, t sayde: Ryse vp Balac t heare, marke my testimony with thine eares thou sonne of Ziphor. *God is not a man f he shulde lye, ner a mans child f eny thinge shulde repent him. Shulde he saye and not do? Shulde he speake t not make it good? Beholde, I am brought hither to blesse, I blesse, t can not go back there fro. There is no weerynesse sene in Iacob, nether eny labour in Israel. The LORDE his God is with him, t the kynges trompet is amoge the. *God hath brought the out of Egipte, his strēth is as of an Vnicorne. For there is no Sorcerye in Iacob, t no Soyth sayer in Israel. Whan the tyme cometh, it shal be saide vnto Iacob, t to Israel, what God doth. Beholde, the people shall ryse vp as a Lyonesse, t heue vp him self as a Lyon. He shal not lye downe, tyll he eate of the pray, and drynke the bloude of the slayne.

Then sayde Balac vnto Balaam: Thou shalt nether curse him ner blesse him. Balaam answered, t sayde vnto Balac: Haue I not tolde the: All f the LORDE speaketh, f must I do? Balac saide vnto him: Oh come, I wil brynge f to another place, yf it maye happily please God, f thou mayest curse the there. And he brought him vp to the toppe of mount Peor, f boweth towarde the NOW whan Balaam sawe \hat{y} it pleased the LORDE, that he shulde blesse Israel, he wente not (as he dyd before) to seke witches, but set his face straight towarde the wyldernesse, lifte vp his eyes, and sawe Israel, \hat{y} how they laye accordinge to their trybes, and the sprete of God came vpon him, and he toke vp his parable, and sayde: "Thus sayeth Balaam the sonne of Beor: Thus sayeth the man whose eyes are opened: Thus sayeth he which heareth the wordes of God, which sawe the vision of \hat{y} Allmightie: which fell downe, and his eyes were opened.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

How goodly are thy tētes O Iacob, and thy habitacions O Israel? Euen as the brode valleys, as the gardens by the waters syde, as \hat{y} tentes which the LORDE hath plāted, τ as the Cedar trees vpon \hat{y} water. The water shal flowe out of his boket, and his sede shalbe a greute water. His kyngde shal be hyer then Agag, τ his kyngdome shalbe exalted. God hath broughte hi out of Egipte, \hat{y} his strength is as of an vnicorne. He shal eate vp the Heithen his enemies, and grynde their bones to poulder, and shute thorow them with his arowes. \dagger He hath layed him downe as a Lyon and as a Lyonesse. Who wyll rayse him vp? Blessed be he, \hat{y} blesseth the: and cursed, that curseth the.

Thē was Balac furious $\bar{\imath}$ wrath against Balaam, τ smote his hādes together, τ sayde vnto him: I haue called the, \hat{y} thou shuldest curse myne enemies, and beholde, thou hast blessed thē now thre tymes: τ now get the hēce to thy place. I thoughte \hat{y} I wolde promote the vnto honoure, but the LORDE hath kepte the backe from that worshippe.

Balaam answered him: Tolde not I thy messaungers (whom thou sendest vnto me) τ sayde: \ddagger Yf Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer and golde, yet coulde I not go beyonde the wordes of the LORDE, to do either euell or good after myne awne hert: but what \hat{y} LORDE speaketh, that must I speake also. And now beholde, for so moch as I go to my people, come therefore, I wyll shewe the what this people shall do vnto thy people after this tyme.

And he toke vp his parable, and sayde: "Thus sayeth Balaam the sonne of Beor: Thus sayeth \hat{y} man, whose eyes are opened: Thus sayeth he which heareth the wordes of God, τ \hat{y} hath the knowlege of \hat{y} hiest, eue he \hat{y} sawe \hat{y} visiō of \hat{y} Allmightie, τ fell downe, τ his eyes were opened: I shal se him, but not now: I shal beholde him, but not nie at hāde. "There shal a starre come out of Iacob, τ a cepter shall come vp out of Israel, \S and shal smyte \hat{y} rulers of the Moabites, and ouercome all the children of Seth.

¶ Edom shalbe his possession, and Seir shalbe his enemies possessio, but Israel shal do manfully. Out of Iacob shal come he \hat{y} hath dominion, and shall destroye the remnant of the cities.

And whā he sawe \hat{y} Amalechites, he toke vp his parable, τ sayde: "Amalec the first amōge the Heithē, \hat{y} but at \hat{y} last thou shalt perishe vtterly. And whan he sawe the Kenites, he toke vp his parable, τ sayde: Strōge is thy dwellinge, and on a rocke hast thou put thy nest, neuertheles thou shalt be a burninge vnto Kain, tyll Assur take \hat{y} presoner.

And he toke vp his parable agayne, τ sayde: Alas, who shal lyeue, whā God doth this? And shippes out of Citim shall subdue Assur and Eber. He him self also shal perishe vtterly. And Balaam gat him vp, and departed, and came agayne vnto his place, and Balac wente his waye also.

The xxv. Chapter.

AND Israel dwelt in Sittim, \hat{y} and the people beganne to commytte whordome with the daughters of the Moabites, which called the people vnto the sacrifice of their goddes. And the people ate and worshipped their goddes, τ and Israel submytted him self vnto Baal Peor. Then the wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vpon Israel, and he sayde vnto Moses: Take all the rulers of the people, and hange them vp vnto the LORDE, agaynst \hat{y} Sonne, that the terriblye wrath of the LORDE maye be turned awaye from Israel. Accordinge to \hat{y} names of the trybes of their fathers shal they enheret it: for after the lott shalt thou deuoyde their enheritaunce, both betwixte many and fewe.

And this is the summe of the Leuites in their kynreds. Gerson: of whom cometh the kynred of the Gersonites. Kahath: of whō cometh the kynred of the Kahathites. Merari: of whom cometh \hat{y} kynred of \hat{y} Merarites. These are \hat{y} kynreds of Leui, the kynred of \hat{y} Libnites, \hat{y} kynred of \hat{y} Hebronites, \hat{y} kynred of the Mahelites, \hat{y} kynred of the Musites, the kynred of the Corahites.

☉ Kahath begat Amram. " And Amrams wife was called Iochebed a daughter of Leui, which was borne him in Egypte: And vnto Amram she bare Aaron \hat{q} Moses, \hat{q} Miriam their sister. And vnto Aaron were borne Nadab, Abihu,^b Eleasar \hat{q} Ithamar. As for Nadab \hat{q} Abihu, they dyed, when they offred straunge fyre before \hat{y} LORDE. " And the summe of the^e was thre \hat{q} twentye thousande, all males frō fyue monethes \hat{q} aboue. For they were not nombred amōge the childrē of Israel, for there was no enheritaunce geuen the^e amonge the children of Israel.

This is \hat{y} summe of \hat{y} childrē of Israel, whō Moses \hat{q} Eleasar the prest nombred in the felde of the Moabites besyde Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho: Amonge whom there was not one of the summe of those children of Israel,* whom Moses \hat{q} Aaron the prest nombred in the wilderness of Sinai. For \hat{y} LORDE sayde vnto the^e,[†] \hat{y} they shulde dye in the wilderness. And there was not one of them lefte, saue Caleb the sonne of Iephune and Iosua the sonne of Nun.

The xxvij. Chapter.

☿ AND the daughters of \hat{y} Zelaphead \hat{y} sonne of Hephher \hat{y} sonne of Gilead, the sonne of Machir, the sonne of Manasse, amonge the kynreds of Manasse the sonne Ioseph (whose names were, Mahela, Noa, Hagla, Milca, \hat{q} Thirza) came \hat{q} stode before Moses \hat{q} Eleasar the prest, \hat{q} before the rulers \hat{q} the whole congregacion, euen before the dore of \hat{y} Tabernacle of witness, \hat{q} sayde:

Oure father is deed in the wilderness, \hat{q} was not in the company of them \hat{y} rose vp agaynst \hat{y} LORDE^d in the cōgregacion of Corah: but dyed in his awne synne, and had no sonnes. Wherefore shulde oure fathers name perishe then amonge his kynred, though he haue no sonne? Geue vs a possession also amonge oure fathers brethren.

Moses broughte their cause before \hat{y} 33
LORDE. And the LORDE sayde vnto him: The daughters of Zelaphead haue spokē righte. Thou shalt geue the^e a possession to inheret amonge their fathers brethren, \hat{q} shalt turne their fathers enheritaunce vnto them. And saye vnto the childrē of Israel: Whan a mā dyeth \hat{q} hath no sonne, ye shall turne his enheritaunce vnto his daughter. Yf he haue no daughter, ye shal geue it vnto his brethrē. Yf he haue no brethren, ye shal geue it vnto his fathers brethren. Yf he haue no fathers brethrē, ye shal geue it vnto his nexte kynszfolke which belōge vnto him in his kynred, \hat{y} they maye possesse it. This shalbe an ordynance and a perpetuall lawe vnto the children of Israel, as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Get ①

The xxiiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ sayde: Cōmaunde y childrē of Israel, ⁊ saye vnto thē: The offerynge of my bred which is my offerynge of the swete sauoure, shal ye kepe in his due season, that ye maie offe vnto me. And saye vnto thē: "These are the offerynges that ye shal offe vnto the LORDE: Lambes of a yere olde which are without blemysch, euery daye two for a daylie burnt-offerynge: the one lambe in the mornynge, the other at euen. And therto a tenth deale^c of an Ephā of fyne flour for a meat-offerynge, myngled with beatē oyle of the fourth parte of an Hin, this is a daylie burnt-offerynge, which ye offred vpon moūt Sinai, for a swete sauoure of a sacrifice vnto the LORDE: And the drynkofferynge of the same, y fourth parte of an Hin to a lambe, and this shalbe poured in the Sanctuary for a gifte vnto the LORDE. The other lambe shalt thou prepare at eue (like as the meat-offerynge in the mornynge) ⁊ the drynk-offerynge therof, for a sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

33 On the Sabbath daye, two lambes of a yere olde without blemysch, ⁊ two tēth deales of fyne flour myngled with oyle, ⁊ the drynk-offerynge therof. This is the burnt-offerynge of euery Sabbath, besyde the daylie burnt-offerynge, with his drynkofferynge.

And on the first daye of youre monethes ye shal offe a burnt-offerynge vnto y LORDE: two yonge bullockes, a ramme, seuē lambes of a yere olde without blemysch, and allwaye thre tenth deales of fyne flour for a meat-offerynge myngled with oyle vnto euery bullocke: two tenth deales of fyne flour for a

And their drynkofferynges shalbe, half an C Hin of wyne vnto euery bullocke, the thirde parte of an Hin to the ramme, y fourth parte of an Hin to euery lambe. This is the burnt-offerynge of euery moneth in the yere. There shalbe offered an he goate also for a synofferynge vnto the LORDE, to the daylie burnt-offerynge with his drynkofferynge.

And on the fourtene daye of the first moneth is the Easter vnto the LORDE, and on the fyftene daye of the same moneth is the feast. Seuē dayes shal vnuenced bred be eaten. The first daye shalbe an holy conuocation: No serulle worke shal ye do therin, and ye shal offe a burnt-offerynge vnto the LORDE: "two yonge bullockes, one ramme, seuē lābes of a yere olde without blemysch, with their meatofferynge: thre tenth deales of fyne flour myngled with oyle to either bullocke, and two tenth deales to the ramme, and one tenth deale to euery lambe amonge the seuē lambes. And an he goate for a synofferynge, to make an attonement for you. And these shal ye offe in the mornynge, besydes the burnt-offerynge, which is a daylie burnt-offerynge. After this maner shal ye offe y bred euery daye seuē dayes longe for an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE, to the daylie burnt-offerynge, and drynkofferynge also. And the seuenth daye shal be called an holy conuocation with you: no serulle worke shal ye do therin.

And the daye of the fyrst frutes (whā ye offe the meatofferynge of the moneth vnto y LORDE in youre wekes) shal be an holy cōuocation also: No worke of bondage shal ye do therin. And ye shal offe a burnt-offerynge for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE: "two yonge bullockes, a ramme, seuē lambes of a yere olde, with their meatofferynges: thre tenth deales of fyne flour myngled with oyle to euery bullocke, two tenth deales to the ramme, and one tent deale to euery lambe of the seuē lambes. ^c Leu. 23. f.

And ye shall offe a burntofferynge for a sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto \hat{y} LORDE. A bullocke, a ramme, seue lambes of a yeaere olde without blemyshe, with their meatoffer- ynges and drynkoffer ynges to \hat{y} bullocke to the ramme, and to the lambes in their nobre accordinge to the maner. And an he goate for a synofferynge, besyde the daylie burnt- offerynge with his meatofferynge τ his drink- offerynge.

These thinges shal ye do vnto \hat{y} LORDE in youre feastes, besyde that ye vowe and geue of a frewyll for burntofferings, meat- offer ynges, drynkoffer ynges and healthoffer- ynges. And Moses tolde the children of Israel all that the LORDE commaunded him.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND Moses spake vnto the rulers of the trybes of the children of Israel, and saide: This is it that the LORDE hath commaunded: "Yf eny man make a vowe vnto the LORDE, or sweare an oath, so that he binde his soule, he shal not breake his worde, but do all that is proceeded out of his mouth.

Yf a damsell make a vowe vnto \hat{y} LORDE, and bynde herself, whyle she is in hir fathers house, and vnmariied, and hir vowe or bonde that she maketh ouer hir soule, commeth to hir fathers eares, τ he holde his peace therto, the all hir voves τ bondes \hat{y} she hath bouide hir self withall ouer hir soule, shal stode in effecte. But yf her father forbyd her \hat{y} same daye that he heareth it, the shal no vowe ner bonde that she hath bounde hir self withall ouer hir soule, be of vayne. And the LORDE shalbe mercifull vnto her, for so moch as hir father forbad her.

Yf she haue an huszbande, τ hath a vowe vpon her, or yf she haue letten go out of hir lippes a bode ouer hir soule, τ hir huszbande heare it, τ holdeth his peace therat, the same daye that he heareth it, then hir vowe τ bonde wherwith she hath bouide hir self ouer hir soule, shal stonde in effecte. But yf hir huszbande forbyd her the same daye that he heareth it, the is the vowe lowse \hat{y} she hath vpo hir, τ the bonde also that she hath letten go out of hir lippes ouer hir soule, and the LORDE shalbe gracious vnto her.

The vowe of a wyddowe, τ of her \hat{y} is deuorced, all \hat{y} she byndeth hir self with-all ouer hir soule, shal stonde in effecte vpo her

Yf she vowe in hir huszbandes house, or binde hir self with an oath ouer hir soule, τ hir huszbande heare it, τ holde his peace therto, and for byddeth it not, the shal all \hat{y} same vowe, τ all \hat{y} she hath bouide hir self with all ouer hir soule, stode i effecte. But yf hir huszbande disanulle it, \hat{y} same daye \hat{y} he heareth it, the is it of no value \hat{y} is proceeded out of hir lippes, which she hath vowed or bouide ouer hir soule: for hir husz- bande hath made it lowse, τ the LORDE shalbe gracious vnto her. And all voves τ othes \hat{y} bynde to humble \hat{y} soule, maie hir huszbande stablish or breake, thus: Yf he holde his peace therto fro one daie to another, then stablisheth he all hir voves τ bondes, \hat{y} she hath vpon her, because he helde his peace, the same daye \hat{y} he herde the. But yf he disanulle the after \hat{y} he hath herde the, then shal he take awaie hir miszdede.

These are the statutes \hat{y} the LORDE com- maunded Moses betwene a man τ his wife, τ betwene the father τ his daughter, whyle she is yet a damsell in hir fathers house.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, τ sayde: "Auenge the childre of Israel of the Madianites, \hat{y} thou mayest afterwarde be gathered vnto thy people. The spake Moses vnto the people, τ sayde: Harness some men amonge you to the warre agaynst the Ma- dianites (\hat{y} they maye auenge \hat{y} LORDE vpon the Madianites) out of euery trybe a thousande, \hat{y} out of euery trybe of Israel ye maye sende some to the battayll. And from amonge the thousandes of Israel they toke one thousande out of euery tribe, euen twolue thousande prepared vnto the battayll. And Moses sent them with Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest in to the battayll, and the holy vessels and \hat{y} trompettes to blowe in his hande.

And they fought agaynst \hat{y} Madianites as \hat{y} LORDE comaunded Moses, τ slew all \hat{y} males, τ the kynge of the Madianites slew they also amonge the other that were slaine namely, Eui, Rekem, Zur, Hur and Reba, the fyue kynges of the Madianites. And þ̃ children of Israel toke the wemen of the Madianites presoners, ⁊ their childrē: all their catell, all their substaunce, and all their goodes spoiled they, and all their cities of their dwellynges ⁊ castels burnt they with fyre. And they toke all þ̃ spoyles, ⁊ all þ̃ they coulde catche men ⁊ catell, and brought thē vnto Moses ⁊ to Eleasar the prest, and to þ̃ congregacion of the children of Israel (namely þ̃ presoners, and the catell þ̃ were takē, and the good that was spoyled) in to the hoost in the felde of the Moabites, which lyeth besyde Iordane ouer against Iericho.

And Moses and Eleasar the prest and all the captaynes of þ̃ congregacion, * wēte out of the hoost to mete thē. And Moses was angrie at the officers of the hoost, which were captaynes ouer thousandes and hūdreth, þ̃ came from the battayll, and sayde vnto thē: Hauē ye saued all þ̃ wemen alyue? Beholde, † haue not they (thorow Balaams busynes) turned away þ̃ childrē of Israel to synne agaynst the LORDE vpō Peor, ⁊ there came a plage ouer the whole cōgregacion of þ̃ LORDE? "Now therefore slaie all the males amōge þ̃ childrē, ⁊ kyll all þ̃ wemen þ̃ haue knowne men ⁊ lyen with them. And all the clothes, and all stuffe that is made of skynnes, and all maner furies, and all vessels of wod shal ye purifie.

And Eleasar the prest sayde vnto þ̃ captaynes of the hoost, þ̃ wente out to the battayll: This is the statute of the lawe, which the LORDE cōmaunded Moses: Golde, siluer, brasse, yron, tynne and leed, and all that suffreth the fyre, shal ye cause to go thorow the fyre, and clense it, that it maye be purified with þ̃ sprencklyngē water. As for all such as suffreth not the fyre, ye shal cause it to go thorow þ̃ water, and shal washe youre clothes vpon the seuenth daie, and thē shal ye be cleane. After that shall ye come in to the hooste.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: † Take the summe of the spoyles of those that are taken, both of wemen and of catell, thou and Eleasar the prest, and the chefe fathers of the congregacion, and geue þ̃ halfe vnto those that toke the warre vpon them, and wente out to the battayll, and þ̃ other halfe to the congregacion. And of the men of warre that wente out to þ̃ battayll, thou shalt heue vnto the LORDE one soule of fyue hundreth, both of the wemen, oxen, Asses and shepe: Of their halfe parte shalt thou take it, and geue it vnto Eleasar the prest for an Heueofferynge vnto the LORDE. But of the children of Israels halfe parte, thou shalt take one heade of fyfte, both of the wemen, oxen, Asses and shepe, and of all the catell, and shalt geue them vnto the Leuites, that wayte vpon the habitaciō of the LORDE.

And Moses and Eleasar the prest dyd as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And the spoyles and praye which þ̃ men of warre had spoyled, was sixe hundreth thousande and fyue and seuentye thousande shepe, two and seuentye thousande oxen, one ⁊ thre score thousande Asses: and the wemen þ̃ had knowne no men ner lyen with them, were two and thirtie thousande soules.

And the halfe parte which belonged vnto them that wente to the warre, was in nōbre thre hundreth thousande, and seuen and thirtie thousande, and fyue hundreth shepe: of the which the LORDE had sixe hundreth, ⁊ fyue and seuentye shepe. Item sixe and thirtie thousande oxen: wherof the LORDE had two ⁊ seuentye. Item thirtie thousande ⁊ fyue hundreth Asses: wherof the LORDE had one ⁊ thre score. Item sixtene thousande soules of wemen: wherof the LORDE had two ⁊ thirtie. And Moses gaue this heueofferynge of the LORDE vnto Eleasar the prest, as the LORDE commaunded him.

As for the other halfe which Moses deuyded vnto the children of Israel frō þ̃ men of warre (namely þ̃ halfe that fell to the congregacion) it was also thre hundreth thousande, and seuen and thirtie thousande, ⁊ fyue hundreth shepe, sixe and thirtie thousande oxen, thirtie thousande ⁊ fyue hundreth Asses, and sixtene thousande wemen soules. vpon the habitaciō of the LORDE, as ¶ LORDE cōmaūded Moses.

And the captaynes ouer ¶ thousandes of the hoost, namely they that were ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, came forth vnto Moses, and sayde vnto him: Thy seruauentes haue taken ¶ summe of ¶ men of warre, that were vnder oure hande, and there lacked not one: therfore brynge we a present vnto the LORDE, what euery one hath foude of Jewels of golde, cheynes, bracelettes, rynges, earinges, and taches, that oure soules maye be reconcyled before the LORDE.

And Moses and Eleasar ¶ prest toke of them ¶ golde of all maner ornamentes. And all the golde of the Heueofferynge that they Heued vnto the LORDE, was sixtene thousande and seuen hundredth and fyfye Sycles, of the captaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes. For loke what euery one had spoyled, that was his awne. And Moses with Eleasar the prest toke the golde of the captaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes, and broughte it in to the Tabernacle of witnessse for a remembrance of the children of Israel before the LORDE.

The xxxij. Chapter.

THE children of Ruben and the children of Gad had an excedinge greates multitude of catell, and sawe the londe of Iaesar and Gilead ¶ it was a mete place for catell, and came ¶ spake vnto Moses and to Eleasar the prest, and to the captaynes of the congregacion: The londe of Atroth, Dibon, Iaesar, Nimra, Heszbō, Eleale, Seban, Nebo, ¶ Beon, which the LORDE smote before ¶ congregacion of Israel, is a mete londe for catell, and thy seruauentes haue many catell. And they sayde morouer: Yf we haue founde fauoure before the, thē geue thy seruauentes this londe in possession, and we wyl not go ouer Iordane.

Moses sayde vnto them: Your brethren shall go to the warre, and wyl ye tary here? Wherefore turne ye ¶ herthes of the children of Israel, that they shulde not go ouer in to the londe that the LORDE shall geue them?

* Thus dyd youre fathers also, whan I sent them out from Cades Bernea, to spye out ¶ londe. And whan they were come vp to ¶ ryuer of Escol, and sawe ¶ londe, they turned the herthes of the children of Israel, so ¶ they wolde not in to the londe which ¶ LORDE wolde haue geuen them.

And the LORDE was wroth at the same tyme, ¶ sware, ¶ sayde: "These men ¶ are come out of Egipte, from twētye yeare olde ¶ aboue, shall not se the lande which I sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, because they haue not wholly folowed me: saue Caleb ¶ sonne of Iephune ¶ Kenisite, ¶ Iosua ¶ sonne of Nun: for they haue wholly folowed ¶ LORDE. So the LORDE was wroth with Israel, ¶ let thē wander in the wilderness fourtye yeares, tyll all ¶ generacion ¶ had done euell before the LORDE, was consumed.

And beholde, ye are rysen vp in youre fathers steade, to increase the nombre of synfull men, ¶ to augmente yet the wrath ¶ indignacion of the LORDE agaynst Israel. For yf ye turne you backe from folowinge him, he shal yet leaue them more in the wilderness, ¶ so shal ye destroye all this people.

Then stepte they to him, ¶ sayde: we wyl but buylde shepefoldes here for oure shepe ¶ catell, ¶ cities for oure children: As for oure selues, we will go ready armed before the children of Israel, tyll we haue broughte them vnto their place: Oure childrē shal remayne in the fenced cities, because of ¶ indwellers of the londe. We will not turne home agayne, tyll the children of Israel haue taken euery one his inheritance in possession: for we wyl not inheret with them beyonde Iordane: for oure inheritance shal fall vnto vs vpon this syde Iordane Eastwarde.

Moses sayde vnto them: ¶ Yf ye wil do this, that ye wil harness youre selues to the warre before the LORDE, then go ouer Iordane before the LORDE, who so euer is harnesssed amonge you, tyll he haue dryuen out his enemies before his face, and vntyll the londe be subdued before the LORDE, then shal ye returne, ¶ be vngiltye before the LORDE, and before Israel, ¶ so shal ye haue this londe in possession before the LORDE. But yf ye will not do so, beholde, ye shal offende agaynst the LORDE, and be sure, that youre synne shal fynde you out. Buylde cities now therfore for youre children, and shepefoldes and stalles for youre shepe and catell, and do as ye haue spoken.

sayde vnto Moses: Thy seruantes shal do as my lorde hath cōmāunded. Oure children, wyues, substance, ⁊ all oure catell, shal be in ⁊ cities of Gilead. But we thy seruantes will go all harnesssed for the warre vnto battail before ⁊ LORDE, as my lorde hath saide.

Thē Moses cōmāunded Eleasar ⁊ prest ⁊ Iosua the sonne of Nun, ⁊ the chefe fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, and saide vnto them: Yf the children of Gad ⁊ the children of Ruben go ouer Iordane with you, all prepared to fight before the LORDE, ⁊ whan the londe is subdued vnto you, thē geue them the londe of Gilead in possessiō. But yf they go not ouer with you in harnes, then shal they inheret with you in ⁊ lōde of Canaā.

The children of Gad and the children of Rubē answered, ⁊ sayde: As ⁊ LORDE hath spoken vnto thy seruantes, so wyl we do: we wil go harnesssed before the LORDE in to ⁊ lāde of Canaan, and possesse oure enheritance on this syde Iordane.

So Moses gaue vnto ⁊ children of Gad and to the children of Ruben, ⁊ and to the halfe trybe of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph, ⁊ kyngdome of Sihon kyng of the Amorites and the kyngdome of Og the kyng of Basan, the londe with the cities therof in all ⁊ coastes of ⁊ cōuntre rounde aboute. Thē ⁊ children of Gad buylded Dibon, Ataroth, Aroer, Atroth, Sophan, Iaeser, ⁊ Iegabeha, Bethnimra, ⁊ Betharan, stronge fenced cities, ⁊ shepe foldes. The children of Ruben buylded Heszbō, Eleale, Kiriathaim, Nebo, Baal Meon, ⁊ turned ⁊ names, ⁊ Sibamas ⁊ gaue names vnto ⁊ cities which they buylded. And ⁊ children of Machir the sonne of Manasse wente in to Gilead, ⁊ conquered it, and droue out the Amorites ⁊ were therin. Then Moses gaue Gilead vnto Machir ⁊ sonne of Manasse, ⁊ he dwelt therin. Iair ⁊ sonne of Manasse wente and conquered the vyllages therof, and called them Hauoth Iair. Nobah wente, and cōquered Kenath, with the townes belonginge therto, and called it Nobah, after his awne name.

The xxxij. Chapter.

THESE are ⁊ iourneys of the childrē of Israel, which wēte out of ⁊ lande of Egypte accordinge to their armies, by Moses ⁊ Aarō. And Moses wrote their goiuge out as they iourneyed, after ⁊ cōmāndement of ⁊ LORDE. And these (namely) are the iourneyes of their outgoiuge. *They departed frō Raemes vpon ⁊ fiftene daye of the first moneth (euen the morow after the Easter) thorow an hye hande, so that all the Egipcians sawe, and buried then their firstborne, whom the LORDE had slayne amonge them: for the LORDE executed iudgment also vpon their goddes. When they were departed from Raemes, they pitched in Sucoth. And frō Sucoth they departed, ⁊ pitched their tentes in Ethā, which lyeth in ⁊ edge of ⁊ wildernes. †Frō Etham they departed, and abode in the valley of Hiroth^d (which lyeth towarde Baal Zephon) ⁊ pitched ouer agaynst Migdol. From Hyroth they departed, ⁊ wente in thorow ⁊ middes of the see in to ⁊ wylldernes, and wente thre dayes iourney in the wildernes of Etham, ⁊ pitched in Marah. From Marah they departed, and came vnto Elim, where there were twolue wellles of water, and seuentye palme trees, ⁊ there they pitched. From Elim they departed, and pitched by the reed see. From ⁊ reed see they departed, and pitched in the wilderness of Sin. From the wildernes of Sin they departed, and pitched in Daphka. Frō Daphka they departed, and pitched in Alus. †From Alus they departed, and pitched in Raphidim, where the people had no water to drynke. †From Raphidim they departed and pitched in the wildernes of Sinai.

From Iathbatha they departed, and pitched in Abrona. From Abrona they departed, and pitched in Ezeon gaber. From Ezeon gaber they departed, and pitched in y wilderness of Zin, which is Cades.

From Cades they departed, and pitched at mount Hor, ^oon the border of the londe of Edom. Then Aaron the prest wente vp vnto mount Hor (acordynge to the commaundement of the LORDE) and died there in the fortyeth yere, after y the children of Israel departed out of the londe of Egipte, in the first daie of the fiftē moneth, whā he was an hundreth and thre and twenty yere olde. C And Moses commaunded the children of Israel, and sayde: This is youre londe that ye shal deuyde out amonge you by lott, which the LORDE hath commaunded to geue vnto the nyne trybes, and to the halfe trybe. *For the trybe of the children of Ruben after their fathers house, and the trybe of the children of Gad accordinge to their fathers house, and the half trybe of Manasse haue receaued their porcion. Thus the two trybes and the halfe trybe haue their enheritaunce allready, on this syde Iordane, ouer agaynst Iericho, Eastwarde.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: "These are \hat{y} names of the men, which shal deuyde the londe amonge you. Eleasar the prest, and Iosua the sonne of Nun. And the captayne of euery trybe shal ye take, to deuyde the londe.

D And these are the names of the men: Caleb the sonne of Iephune of the trybe of Iuda. Semuel the sonne of Ammihud of the trybe of Simeon. Elidad \hat{y} sonne of Cision of the trybe of Ben Iamin. Buki the sonne of Iagli of the trybe of the childrē of Dan. Hamuel the sonne of Ephod, of the trybe of the children of Manasse amonge the children of Ioseph. Kemuel the sonne of Siphthan, of the trybe of the children of Ephraim. Elizaphan the sonne of Parnach, of the trybe of the childrē of Zabulon. Palthiel the sonne of Asan, of the trybe of the childrē of Isachar. Abihud the sonne of Selomi, of \hat{y} trybe of the children of Asser. Pedahel the sonne of Ammihud, of the trybe of the children of Nephtali. These are they whom \hat{y} LORDE commaunded, that they shulde deuyde the inheritance vnto the children of Israel in the londe of Canaan.

The xxxv. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the felde of the Moabites by Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho, τ sayde: Commaunde the childrē of Israel, \hat{y} that they geue vnto \hat{y} Leuites of the inheritance of their possession, cities to dwell in. The suburbes also aboute the cities shal ye geue vnto the Leuites, that they maye dwell in the cities, and in the suburbes to haue their catell, and substaunce, and all their beestes.

The suburbes which ye geue vnto \hat{y} Leuites, shal reache fro the wall of \hat{y} cite outwarde, a

M. cubites rounde aboute. Thus ye shal measure without the cite on \hat{y} East syde, two thousande cubites: τ on \hat{y} South syde, two thousande cubites: τ on \hat{y} West syde, two thousande cubites: τ on \hat{y} North syde, two thousande cubites, so \hat{y} the cite be in the myddes. This shal be their suburbes.

And amōge the cities which ye shal geue vnto the Leuites, ye shall geue the sixe fre cities, that he which comitteth a slaughter, maie flye thither. Besydes the same ye shal geue the yet two τ fourtie cities: so \hat{y} all \hat{y} cities which ye geue vnto \hat{y} Leuites, be eight τ fourtye with their suburbes. And of \hat{y} same ye shal geue the more, from the \hat{y} haue moch in possession amonge the children of Israel: τ the lesse from them, that haue litle in possession. Euery one (accordinge to his enheritaunce that is deuyded vnto him) shall geue of his cities vnto the Leuites.

And the LORDE talked with Moses τ sayde: Speake to the childrē of Israel, τ saye vnto the: "Whan ye come ouer Iordane in to \hat{y} londe of Canaan, ye shall chose out cities to be fre cities, \hat{y} who so comytteth slaughter vnwarres, maye flye thither. And soch fre cities shalbe amonge you because of the auenger of bloude, that he which hath comytted slaughter, dye not, tyll he stonde in iudgment before the congregacion. And of these cities which ye shall geue, there shalbe sixe fre cites. Thre shal ye geue on this side Iordane, and thre in the londe of Canaan.

These are the sixe fre cities, both for \hat{y} childrē of Israel τ for the straungers, τ for soch as dwell amōge you, \hat{y} who so euer hath slaine eny soule vnwarres, maye flye thither.

Yf he smyte him with an hand-weapō of wodd (wherwith eny man maie be slayne) that he dye, then is he a murthurer, and shal dye the death. The auenger of bloude shal bringe \hat{y} murthurer to death. Whan he fyndeth him, he shal slaye him. Yf he thrust at him of hate, or cast ought at him with laienge of wayte, or smyte him of envye with his hande, that he dye, then shal he that hath slayne him, dye the death: for he is a murthurer. The auenger of bloude shal brynge him to death, as soone as he fyndeth him.

D * But yf he thrust him by chaunce, ⁊ not of envye, or hurle ought at him without eny layenge of wayte, or cast at him with a stone (wherof a man maye dye, ⁊ sawe it not) so yf he dye, ⁊ is not his enemye, nether thought him eny euell, the shal the cōgregacion iudge betwene him yf hath cōmytted yf slaughter, and the auenger of bloude, in soch cases. And the cōgregacion shal delyuer the deed slayer from the hande of yf auenger of bloude, ⁊ shal let him come agayne to the fre cite, whither he was fled: ⁊ there shall he abyde vnto yf death of the hye prest, which was anoynted with yf holy oyle. But yf the deed slayer go out of the borders of his fre cite, that he was fled vnto, and the auenger of bloude fynde him without yf borders of his fre cite, and kyll him, he shal not be gyltye of bloude. For he shulde haue bydden in his fre cite vntyll yf death of the hye prest, ⁊ after yf hye prestes death to come agayne vnto the londe of his enheritaunce. This shalbe a statute of the lawe vnto you amōge youre posterities in all youre dwellinges.

32 The deed slayer shal be slayne at yf mouth of witnesses. *One witness shal not answere ouer a soule to death. And ye shal receaue none attonement ouer the soule of the deed-slayer (for he is gyltye of death) but he shal dye the death. And ye shal receaue none attonement of him, which is fled to the fre cite, yf he shulde come agayne to dwell in the londe, tyll the hye prest dye. And defyle not ye yf londe wherin ye dwell. For who so is gyltye of bloude, defyleth the londe: and the londe can not be reconcyled from the bloude that is shed therein, but onely thorow the bloude of him that shed it. Defyle not ye the londe that ye dwell in, wherin I dwell also. For I am the LORDE, which dwell amōge yf children of Israel.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

AND yf chefe fathers of the kynred of the childrē of Gilead yf sonne of Machir (which was the sonne of Manasse of the kynred of the children of Ioseph) came forth, and spake before Moses, and before the captaines amonge the chefe fathers of the children of Israel, and saide: Syr, the LORDE hath ⁊ commaunded, that ye shulde geue the londe by lott vnto the childrē of Israel to inheret. And thou my lorde hast commaunded thorow the LORDE, ⁊ that the enheritaunce of oure brother Zelaphead shulde be geuē vnto his daughters. Now yf eny men out of the trybes of Israel take them to wyues, then shal oure fathers enheritaunce be lesse: and as moch as they haue, shal come to yf enheritaunce of the trybe that they come vnto. Thus shal the lott of oure inheritaunce be mynished. So whan the yeaere of Iubilye commeth vnto the childrē of Israel, then shal their enheritaunce come to yf enheritaunce of the trybe, where they are. Thus shal oure fathers enheritaunce be mynished, as moch as they haue.

C Moses charged the childrē of Israel (accordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE) and sayde: The trybe of the children of Ioseph hath sayde righte. This is it that yf LORDE commaundeth the daughters of Zelaphead, and sayeth: ⁊ Let them mary as they like best, onely that they mary in yf kynred of the trybe of their father, that the enheritaunce of the children of Israel fall not frō one trybe to another. For euery one amonge the children of Israel shall cleue to the enheritaunce of the trybe of his father: ⁊ euery daughter that possesseth eny enheritaunce amonge the trybes of the children of Israel, shal be maryed vnto one of the kynred of the trybe of hir father: ⁊ yf euery one amonge the children of Israel maye enioye his fathers enheritaunce, and that the enheritaunce fall not from one trybe to another: but that euery one maye cleue to his awne enheritaunce amonge the trybes of the children of Israel.

D As the LORDE cōmaunded Moses, euē so dyd yf daughters of Zelaphead, Mahela, Thirza, Hagla, Milca ⁊ Noa ⁊ were maried vnto their fathers brothers sonnes, of yf kynred of the children of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph. So their enheritaunce remayned in the trybe of the kynred of their father.

These are the commaudemētes ⁊ lawes, which yf LORDE commaunded by Moses vnto the childrē of Israel, in the felde of the Moabites by Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. I.

Moses putteth the childrē of Israel in remembrance of the greates benefites that they haue receaued of God, and rebuketh them for their vnthankfulnesse and mysbeleue.

Chap. II.

They are commaunded not to fight agaynst Seir, the Moabites and Ammonites. But Sihon the kynge of the Amorrites is delyuered vnto them.

Chap. III.

Og the kynge of Basan is slayne, the londe taken in, and destroyed. Ruben, Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasse haue their enheritaunce on this syde Iordane. Iosua is ordeyned in Moses steade.

Chap. IIII.

After he hath rehearsed vnto them the benefites of God, he exorteth them to kepe his commaundementes, that they forget them not. Fredome for soch as committe slaughter vnawarres.

Chap. V.

He rehearseth the commaundementes of God vnto them agayne, & exorteth them earnestly to kepe them.

Chap. VI.

He telleth them of the statutes & ordinaūces of God, exortinge them to kepe them, and to teache their children the same.

Chap. VII.

They are commaunded (whan they come in the lode of Canaan) to make no frendshipe ner to kepe company with the people therof, but vterly to rote them out, and not to be afrayed of them.

Chap. VIII.

He exorteth them, not to forget the commaundementes of God, but to remembre what singuler kindnes God hath shewed them, & from what troubles he hath delyuered them. And geueth the londe that they are to go vnto, a good reporte.

Chap. IX.

He warneth them that they ascrybe not the goodnes that God hath done for them, to their awne power: for yf he had serued them after their awne deseruinge, he had destroyed them euerychone.

Chap. X.

He proceadeth forth in tellinge them their wickednes, & how they departed from Beroth.

Chap. XI.

Consyderinge the multitude of the benefites of God that they had receaued and the pleasaunt londe that they were to receaue, he exorteth them againe to kepe Gods commaundementes.

Chap. XII.

He descrybeth vnto them againe the statutes & ordinaūces of the LORDE.

Chap. XIII.

How men shal knowe false prophetes and how they ought to be punished.

Chap. XIII.

For so much as they are a cleane people of God, they are commaunded to aveyde the customes of the Heythen, as in shauynge their heades, in eatinge certayne meates, &c.

The b. boke of Moses.

Chap. XXXIIII.

Moses goeth vp to the mount, where he dyeth. The children of Israel make lamentacion for him.

The first Chapter.

A THESE are the wordes that Moses spake vnto all Israel on the other syde Iordane in the wilderness, in the playne felde toward the reed see, betwene Paran, Thophel, Laban, Hazeroth, and Disahab, eleuen daies iourney from Horeb, by the waye of mount Seir vnto Cades Bernea. And it fortuneth the first daye of the eleuenth moneth in the fortieth yeaere, that Moses spake vnto the children of Israel according vnto all as the LORDE commaunded him, *after he had smytten Sihon the kynge of the Amorites which dwelt at Heszboun: and Og the kynge of Basan, that dwelt at Asteroth, and at Edrei.

On the other syde Iordane in the lande of the Moabites, beganne Moses to declare this lawe, and sayde: The LORDE oure God spake vnto vs vpon mount Horeb, and sayde: Ye haue bene longe ynough vpon this mountayne, turne you, and departe hence, that ye maye come to the mountaynes of the Amorites, and to all their neighbours in the felde, vpon mountaynes, and in the valleys toward the South and toward the see syde, of the lande of Canaan: and to mount Libanus, euen vnto the greete water Euphrates. Beholde, I haue deliuered you the lande, go in, and take it in possession, which the LORDE sware vnto youre fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Iacob,† that he wolde geue it vnto the, and their seide after them.

Then saide I vnto you at the same tyme: "I am not able to beare you my self alone, for the LORDE youre God hath increased you, so that this daye ye are as the starres of heauen in multitude. (The LORDE God of youre fathers make you yet many thousande tymes mo, and blesse you, as he hath promysed you.) How can I alone beare soche cōbraunce, and charge, and stryfe amōge you? Prouyde here men of wysdome and vnderstondinge, such as are knowne amonge youe trybes, the wil I set to be heades vnto you.

Then answered ye me, and sayde: It is a good thinge, that thou sayest thou wilt do. Then toke I the heades of youre trybes, wyse and famous men, and set them ouer you to be heades, ouer thousandes, ouer hundreds, ouer fyfte and ouer ten: and officers amonge youe trybes.

And I charged youre iudges at the same tyme, and sayde: Heare youre brethre, and iudge righteously betwene euery man and his brother, and the straunger. Ye shall knowe no personne in iudgment, but shall heare the small as well as the greate, and be afraied of no man: for the Iudgment is Gods. But yf eny cause be to harde for you, let it be broughte vnto me, and I maye heare it. Thus commaunded I you at the same tyme, all ye shulde doo.

Then departed we from Horeb, and walked thorow the whole wilderness (which is greate and terriblye as ye haue sene) by the waye to the mountaynes of the Amorites, as the LORDE oure God commaunded vs, and came vnto Cades Bernea. Then sayde I vnto you: Ye are come to the mountaynes of the Amorites, which the LORDE oure God shal geue vs. Beholde, there the lande before the, which the LORDE thy God hath geue vnto the: Go vp, and conquire it, as the LORDE God of thy fathers hath sayde vnto the: feare not, and be not discouraged.

Then came ye all vnto me, and sayde: Let vs sende men before vs, to spye vs out the lande, and to bryng vs worde agayne, by what waye we shal go vp, and to what cities we shal come. That pleased me well, and I toke twelue men from amonge you, of euery trybe one. Which whan they were departed, and wente vp to hye countre, and came to the ryuer Escol, they spied it out, and toke of the frute of the lande with the, and broughte it downe vnto vs, and broughte vs worde agayne, and sayde: It is a good lande, that the LORDE oure God hath geuen vs.

But ye wolde not go vp, and were disobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE youre God, and murmured in youre tentes, and sayde: Because the LORDE hateth vs, therefore hath he broughte vs out of the lande of Egypte, to deliuer vs in to the handes of the Amorites, to destroye vs. Whither shal we go vp? Oure brethren haue discouraged oure hertes, and saide: The people is greater than hyer stature the we, the cities are greate, and walled euen vp to heauen. Morouer we haue sene there the children of Enakim.

But I sayde vnto you: Feare not, and be not afraied of them: for the LORDE youre

God goeth before you, and shall fighte for you, like as he dealeth with you in Egipte before youre eyes, and in the wyldernes: where thou sawest, that the LORDE thy God bare the (euen as a man beareth his sonne) thorow out all the waye that ye haue walked, tyll ye came to this place. And yet for all this ye haue not beleued on the LORDE youre God, which wente before you, to searche you out a place, where ye shulde pitch youre tentes: by night in the fyre (to shewe you the waye, wherin ye shulde go) ^a and on the daye tyme in the cloude.

Whan the LORDE herde ^b ye voyce of youre wordes, he was wroth, and swore, and saide: ^c There shall none of this euell generacion se that good lond, which I sware to geue vnto youre fathers, excepte Caleb the sonne of Iephune, he shal se it. ^d And vnto him wyl I geue the lond that he hath troddē vpon, and to his children, because he hath perfectly folowed the LORDE.

^e The LORDE was angrye with me also for youre sakes, and sayde: ^f Thou also shalt not go in thither. But Iosua ^g sonne of Nun, which stondest before the, he shal go in thither: Corage him, for he shal deuyde the inheritaunce out vnto Israel. And youre childrē, ^h of whō ye sayde they shulde be a praye, and youre sonnes which this daie vnderstonde nether good ner bad, they shal go in thither, vnto them wil I geue it, and they shall enioye it. But as for you, turne you, and take youre iourney to the wyldernes, euen the waye to the reed see.

ⁱ Then answered ye, and sayde vnto me: We haue synned agaynst ^j LORDE, we wil go vp, and fighte, acordinge to all that the LORDE hath commaunded vs. Now whan ye had prepared youre selues, euery one in his harnesse, and were at the poynte to go vp to the mountaynes, ^k LORDE sayde vnto me: Speake vnto them, ^l they go not vp, and that they fighte not (for I am not amōge you) that ye be not smytten before youre enemies. Whan I tolde you this, ye wolde not heare, and were disobedient vnto the worde of the LORDE, and were presumptuous, and wente vp to ^m mountaines. Then the Amorites that dwelt vpon the mōutaynes, came out against you, and chaced you, as Bees do, and smote you at Seir, euen vnto Horma. Now whan ye came againe, and wepte before the LORDE, he wolde not heare youre voyce, and enclined not his eares vnto you. ⁿ So ye abode in Cades a longe season.

The ij. Chapter.

THEN turned we vs, and toke oure iourney ^o to the wildernes, ^p euen the waye to the reed see (as the LORDE sayde vnto me) and compassed mount Seir a longe season. And ^q LORDE saide vnto me: Ye haue cōpassed this mountayne now lōge ynough, turne you Northwarde, and commaūde the people, and saye: Ye shal go thorow ^r coastes of youre brethren the children of Esau, which dwell at Seir: and they shal be afraied of you. But take diligente hede to youre selues, that ye prouoke them not: for I wyl not geue you one fote bredth of their lond. ^s For mount Seir haue I geuen to the children of Esau to possesse. Ye shal bye meate of them for moneye, that ye maye eate. And water shal ye bye of them for moneye, that ye maye drynke. For the LORDE thy God hath blessed the in all the workes of thy hondes. He hath considered thy iourneyes thorow this greute wyldernes: and this fortye yeares hath the LORDE thy God bene with the, so that thou hast wanted nothinge.

Now whan we were departed from oure brethren the children of Esau, that dwelt vpon mount Seir, by the waye of the felde from Elath and Ezeon gaber, we turned vs, and wente by the waye of the wyldernes of ^t Moabites. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: ^u Thou shalt not vex the Moabites, ner prouoke thē vnto battayll, for I wil not geue the of their lond to possesse. For Ar haue I geuen vnto the children of Lot in possession. ^v The Emims dwelt there before tyme, which were a greute stronge people, and hie of stature, as the Enakims: and were taken for giantes, like as ^w Enakims. And ^x Moabites called them Emims. ^y The Horites also dwelt in Seir afore tyme, and ^z children of Esau droue them out, and destroyed them before them, and dwelt in their steade: like as Israel dyd in ^{aa} lōde of his possession, that the LORDE gaue them.

And we wente ouer. The tyme that we were goinge frō Cades Barnea, tyll we came ouer the ryuer Sared, was eight ⁊ thirtie yeares: tyll all the men of warre were waysted out of the hoost, *as the LORDE sware vnto them. The hande of the LORDE also was agaynst them, to destroye thē out of the hoost, tyll they were consumed.

And whan all the men of warre were consumed, so † they were deed amonge the people, the LORDE spake vnto me, and sayde: This daie shalt thou go thorow the coast of ‡ Moabites by Ar, ⁊ shalt come nye vnto § children of Ammon, † whom thou shalt not vexe ner prouoke. For I wyll not geue the of the lōde of the childrē of Ammon to possesse, for I haue geuē it vnto the childrē of Lot in possession. It was takē for a lōde of giauntes also, ⁊ giauntes dwelt therein afore tyme. And § Ammonites calle thē Samsumins, which was a people that was greate, many, and of hie stature, as the Enakims.

¶ And these § LORDE destroyed before thē, and let them possesse the same, so that they dwelt in their steade. † Like as he dyd with the childrē of Esau, which dwell vpō mount Seir, whan he destroyed the Horites before them: and let them possesse the same, so that they haue dwelt in their steade vnto this daie. And the Caphthorims came out of Caphthor, and destroyed § Auims (§ dwelt at Hazarim euen vnto Gaza) ⁊ there dwelt they in their steade.

Get you vp now, and departe, and go ouer the ryuer Arnon. Beholde, I haue geuē Sihon § kyng of the Amorites at Heszbon in to thy hande: go to and conquere, and prouoke him vnto battayll. This daie wyll I begynne, so that all naciōs vnder all the heauen, shal feare ⁊ drede §: In so moch § whā they heare of the, they shal tremble and quake for thy commynge.

¶ Then sent I messaugers from § wylder- nesse of the East vnto § Sihon the kyng at Heszbon § with peaceble wordes, and caused to saye vnto him: I wil go but thorow thy lōde, I wil go a longe by the hie waye, I wil nether turne to the righte hāde ner to § leftte. Thou shalt sell me meate for money, that I maye eate: ⁊ water shalt thou sell me for money, that I maye drinke. Onely let me go thorow by fote, †as the children of Esau (which dwell at Seir) dyd vnto me: and the Moabites that dwell at Ar: vntyll I be come ouer Iordane, in to the londe which the LORDE oure God shal geue vnto vs.

But Sihon the kyng at Heszbon wolde not let vs go by him: for the LORDE thy God hardened his mynde, ⁊ made his hert tough that he mighte delyuer him in to thy hādes, as it is come to passe this daie.

And § LORDE sayde vnto me: Beholde, I haue begonne to delyuer Sihon with his londe before the: go to and cōquere, and possesse his lōde. †And Sihō came out with all his people to fight agaynst vs at Iahza. But the LORDE oure God delyuered him in to oure handes, so that we smote him with his children and all his people.

Then toke we all his cities at the same tyme, and destroyed vtterly all the cities, men, wemen, and children, and let none remaine: saue the catell, which we caught to oure selues, ⁊ the spoyle of the cities that we wanne from Aroer, which lyeth vpon the ryuer syde of Arnon, and from the cite on the ryuer vnto Gilead. There was no cite that coulde defende it selfe from vs: the LORDE oure God delyuered vs all before vs. ¶ But vnto the londe of the children of Ammon thou camest not, ner to all that was on the ryuer Iabok, ner to § cities vpō § mountaines, ner vnto what so euer the LORDE oure God forbad vs.

The iij. Chapter.

¶ AND we turned vs, ⁊ wente vp § waie vnto Basan. And Og § kyng of Basan, came out^d with all his people to fight agaynst vs at Edrei. But the LORDE sayde vnto me: Be not afrayed of him, for I haue delyuered him ⁊ all his people with his londe in to thy hande: ⁊ thou shalt do with him, as thou dydst with Sihon kyng of § Amorites, which dwelt at Heszbon.^a Thus § LORDE oure God delyuered Og § kyng of Basan in to oure handes also with all his people: so that we smote him, tyll there was nothinge left ouer vnto him.

Then wanne we at the same tyme all his cities, ⁊ there was not one cite that we toke not from him, euen thre score cities, the whole region of Argob in the kyngdome of Og at Basan. All these cities were ströge, with hye walles, gates, and barres, besyde many other vnwalld townes.

33 And we vtterly destroyed them, as we dyd with Sihon the kyng of Heszbou.* All the cities destroyed we vtterly, and the men, wemen, and children. But all the catell and spoyle of the cities caughte we for oure selues.

Thus toke we at the same tyme the londe out of the honde of the two kynges of the Amorites beyonde Iordane, from the ryuer of Arnon vnto mount Hermon (which the Sidons call Sirion, but the Amorites call it Senir) all the cities vpon the playne, and all Gilead, and all Basan vnto Salcha and Edrei, the cities of the kyngdome of Og at Basan. For onely Og the kyng of Basan remayned ouer of the giautes. Beholde, his yron bed is here at Rabath amonge the children of Ammon, nyne cubites longe, and foure cubites brode, after the cubite of a man.

This londe conquered we at the same tyme, from Aroer that lyeth on ð ryuer of Arnon. And vnto the Rubenites and Gaddites I gaue halfe mount Gilead with the cities therof: but ð remnaunt of Gilead, & all Basan the kyngdome of Og, gaue I vnto the halfe trybe of Manasse. The whole region of Argob with all Basan was called the giautes londe.

C Iair the sonne of Manasse toke all the region of Argob vnto the coastes of Gessuri and Maachati, and Basan called he Hauoth Iair after his awne name, vnto this daye: But vnto Machir I gaue Gilead. And vnto the Rubenites and Gaddites I gaue one parte of Gilead vnto the ryuer of Arnon (at the myddes of the ryuer is ð border) and vnto the ryuer Iabok, which is the border of the children of Ammon: the felde also, and Iordane (which is the coaste) from Cinereth vnto the see in the felde, namely, ð Salt see vnder mount Pisga, Eastwarde.

And I commaunded you at the same tyme, and sayde: The LORDE youre God hath geuen you this londe to take possession of it, Go youre waye forth therfore harnesssed before youre brethren the children of Israel, all ye that be mete for the warre. As for youre wyues, and children and catell (for I knowe that ye haue moch catell) let them remayne in youre cities, which I haue geuen you, vntyl the LORDE youre God haue broughte youre brethren to rest also as well as you, that they also maye take possession of the londe, which ð LORDE youre God shal geue the beyonde Iordane: and then shal ye turne agayne to youre awne possession, which I haue geuen you.

And I warned Iosua at the same tyme, and sayde: Thine eyes haue sene all that the LORDE youre God hath done vnto these two kynges: euē so shal the LORDE do also vnto all ð kyngdomes whither thou goest. Feare them not, for the LORDE youre God shal fighte for you.

And I besoughte the LORDE at the same tyme, & sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thou hast begonne to shewe thy seruauente thy greatnesse and thy mightie hæde. For where is there a God in heauen & earth, that can do after thy workes and after thy power? O let me go & se ð good londe beyonde Iordane, ð goodly hye cowntre, and Libanus.

But the LORDE was angrie with me for youre sakes, and wolde not heare me,^d but sayde vnto me: Be content, speake nomore to me of this matter. Get the vp to the toppe of mount Pisga, and lifte vp thine eyes towarde the west, and towarde the north, and towarde the south, and towarde ð east: and beholde it with thine eies, for thou shalt not go ouer this Iordane. And geue Iosua his charge, and corage him, and bolde him, for he shal go ouer Iordane before the people,^f and shal deuyde vnto them the londe, that thou shalt se.^g And so we abode in the valley ouer agaynst the house of Peor.

The iiii. Chapter.

AND now herken Israel vnto the ordinaūces and lawes, which I teach you that ye do them, ð ye maye lyeue, and come in, & take possession of the londe, which the LORDE God of youre fathers geweth vnto you. LORDE thy God destroyed from amonge you.* But ye that cleue vnto the LORDE youre God, are all alieue this daye. Beholde I haue taughte you ordinaūces and lawes, such as the LORDE my God commaunded me, that ye shulde do euē so in the londe, in to ſ which ye shal come, to possesse it.

Kepe them now therfore and do them: for that is youre wysdome and vnderstandinge in the sight of all nacions, which whā they haue herde all these ordinaūces, shall saye: O what a wyse and vnderstandinge folke is this? and how excellent a people? For where is there so excellent a nacion, that hath goddes so nye him, as the LORDE oure God is nye vnto vs,† as oft as we call vpon him? And where is there so excellent a nacion, that hath so righteous ordinaūces and lawes, as all this lawe which I laye before you this daye.

33 Take hede to thy selfe now, and kepe well thy soule, that thou forget not the thinges which thine eyes haue sene, and that they departe not out of thy hert all the dayes of thy life. †And thou shalt teach them thy children and thy childers children, the daye whā thou stodest before the LORDE thy God by mount Horeb, whan the LORDE sayde vnto me: Gather me the people together, that I maye make them heare my wordes, which they shal lerne, that they maye feare me all the dayes of their life vpon earth,‡ and that they also maye teach their children.

And ye came nye, and stode vnder ſ mount. But the mount burnt euen vnto the myddes of heauen, and there was darknesse, cloudes, and myst. And ſ LORDE spake vnto you out of the myddes of the fyre. The voyce of his wordes ye herde, neuerthelesse ye sawe no ymage,§ but herde the voyce onely. ¶And he declared vnto you his couenaunt, which he cōmaunded you to do, namely, the ten verses, and wrote them vpon two tables of stone. And the LORDE commaūded me at the same time, to teach you ordinaūces and lawes that ye might do thereafter in the londe, in to the which ye go to possesse it.

¶ But you hath the LORDE taken, and broughte you out of the yron furnace, namely, out of Egipte, that ye shulde be the people of his enheritaunce, as it is come to passe this daye. And the LORDE was angrie with me for youre sakes,§ so that he sware, ſ I shulde not go ouer Iordane, ner come in to that good londe, which the LORDE thy God shall geue the to enheritaunce. As for me, I must dye in this londe, and shal not go ouer Iordane: But ye shal go ouer, and shall haue that good lōde in possession.

Take hede therfore vnto youre selues, that ye forget not the couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, and that ye make no ymages of eny maner of faszion†† as the LORDE thy God hath commaūded. For the LORDE thy God is a consumynge fyre‡ and a gelous God.

The b. Chapter.

AND Moses called all Israel, t sayde vnto thē: Heare Israel the ordinaunces t lawes which I speake in youre eares this daye: lerne them, t kepe thē so, that ye do thereafter. f The LORDE our God made a couenaunt with vs at Horeb: he made not this couenaunt with our fathers, but with vs, that are here this daie, and lyue euery one. He talked with vs face to face out of the fyre vpon the mount. I stode at the same tyme betwixte the LORDE and you, that I might shewe you the wordes of the LORDE. For ye were afraied of the fyre, t wente not vp to the mount, and he sayde:

"I am the LORDE thy God, which haue brought the out of the londe of Egipte, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt haue none other goddes in my sighte. t Thou shalt make the no grauen ymage of eny manner of licknesse of the thinges f are aboue in heauen, t beneth vpon earth, t in the water vnder the earth. Thou shalt not honour them, ner serue thē. f For I f LORDE thy God am a gelous God, vvisiting the synne of the fathers vpon the children, vnto the thirde and fourth generacion, of thē f hate me: t shewe mercye vpon many thousands f loue me, and kepe my commaundementes.

The ix. Chapter.

HEARE O Israel, This daie shalt thou A go ouer Iordane, that thou maiest come in to conquire the nacions, which are greater and mightier then thou, /greate cities, walled vp vnto heauen, a greate people and of an hye stature, namely the childrē of Enakim, whom thou hast knowne, and of whom thou hast herde saye: Who is able to stonde agaynst the children of Enakim? Therefore shalt thou knowe this daye, that the LORDE thy God goeth before the, & a cōsumynge fyre. He shal destroye the, and shall subdue them before the, and shal driue them out, & shortly shall he brynge the to naught, as the LORDE hath promysed the.

"Now whan the LORDE thy God hath expelled them out before the, saye not thou the in thine hert: The LORDE hath brought me in to take possession of this lande for myne awne righteousnes sake, where as y LORDE yet dryueth out the Heithen before the, because of their vngodlynes."

For thou comest not in to take their londe in possession, for thine awne righteousnes sake, and because of thy right hert: but the LORDE dryueth out these Heythen, for their awne vngodlynesse sake, and that he maye perfourme the worde, which the LORDE hath sworne vnto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob.

B Vnderstonde now therefore, that the LORDE thy God geueth not the this londe to possesse it, for thine awne righteousnes sake. For thou art a styffnecked people.

Remembre and forget not, how thou displeasedest the LORDE thy God in the wyldernes. Sence y daye that thou departedst out of the londe of Egipte, tyll ye came vnto this place, haue ye bene dishobedient vnto the LORDE.

"For in Horeb ye angred the LORDE, so that of wrath he wolde haue destroyed you, whan I was gone vp to y mount, to receaue the tables of stone, namely the tables of the couenaunt ¶which the LORDE made with you, and I abode fortye dayes & fortye nightes vpon the mount, and ate no bred, & dranke no water: and the LORDE gaue me y two tables of stone, wrytten with the fynger of God, and in them was acordinge to all the wordes, which the LORDE sayde vnto you vpon the mount out of the fyre, "in the daye of the gatheringe together.

C ^bAnd after the fortye dayes and fortye nightes, [†] LORDE gaue me [†] two tables of stone, namely [†] tables of the couenaunt, and sayde vnto me: "vp, [†] get [†] downe quickly from hence, for thy people whom thou broughtest out of Egipte, haue marred the selues, they are soone gone out of the waye, which I commaunded them, and haue made them a molten ymage.

And the LORDE saide vnto me: I se this people, that it is a styffnecked people: let me alone, that I maye destroye them, and put out their name from vnder heauē. I wyl make of the a people mightier and greater thē this is.

^dAnd as I turned me, [†] wente downe fro the mount which brent with fyre, [†] had [†] two tables of the couenaunt in both my hādes, I loked, [†] beholde, [†] ye had synned agaynst [†] LORDE youre God, so [†] ye had made you a molten calfe, [†] were soone turned out of [†] waie which the LORDE had commaunded you. Then toke I the two tables, [†] cast them out of both my handes, [†] brake thē before youre eyes, [†] I fell before the LORDE * (euen as at the first tyme) fortye dayes [†] fortye nightes, [†] nether ate bred, ner drāke water, because of all youre synnes which ye had synned, whan ye dyd soch euell in the sighte of the LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath.

B For I was afraied of the wrath and indignacion, wherwith the LORDE was angrie with you, euen to haue destroyed you. And the LORDE herde me at that tyme also.^f

Morouer the LORDE was very angrie with Aaron, so that he wolde haue destroyed him, but I made intercession for Aaron also at [†] same tyme. As for youre synne (namely, the calfe that ye had made) [†] I toke it, and burnt it with the fyre, and smote it a sunder, [†] grynde it in peces, euen vnto dust, and cast the dust in to the broke that descended from the mount.

Ye displeased the LORDE also, [†] at Tabera, [†] and at Massa, [†] and at the lustgraues, [†] and whā he sent you from Cades Barnea, and sayde: Go vp, and conquere the londe which I haue geuen you. And ye were disobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE youre God, and beleued not on him, and herkened not vnto his voyce: [†] for ye haue bene disobediet vnto the LORDE, as longe as I haue knowne you.

E Thē fell I before [†] LORDE fortye daies and fortye nightes, which I laye there. For [†] LORDE sayde, he wolde destroye you. But I made intercession vnto the LORDE, and sayde: [†] O LORDE LORDE, destroye not thy people and thine enheritaunce, which thou thorow thy greute power hast deliuered, and broughte out of Egipte with a mightie hāde. Remembre thy seruantes Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. Loke not vpon the stubbornnesse, and vngodlynesse and synne of this people (that the londe wherout thou hast broughte vs, saye not: The LORDE was not able to bringe them in to the lande, that he promysed them, and because he hated them, therefore hath he broughte them out, to destroye thē in the wyldernesse:) For they are thy people [†] thine enheritaunce, which thou hast broughte out with thy greute power, and with thy stretched out arme.

The i. Chapter.

A T the same tyme sayde the LORDE [†] vnto me: [†] Hew [†] two tables of stone like vnto the first, and come vp vnto me in to the mount, and make [†] an Arke of wod, and in the tables I wyl wryte the wordes, that were in the first, [†] which thou brakest, and thou shalt laye them in the Arke. So I made an Arke of Fyrre tre, and hewed two tables of stone (like as the first were) [†] wente vp into the mount, and [†] two tables were in my hande.

^dThen wrote he in [†] tables (acordinge as the first wrytinge was) the ten verses, which the LORDE spake vnto you out of the fyre vpon the mountayne, at the tyme of the gatheringe together. And the LORDE gaue thē vnto me. And I turned me, [†] wente downe from the mount, and layed the tables in the Arke which I had made, [†] that they mighte be there, as the LORDE commaunded me.

Beroth & Bne Iaekan vnto Mosera (there dyed Aaron, & there was he buried: & Eleasar his sonne became prest in his steade.) Frō thence they departed from Gadgad. From Gadgad to Iathbath, a londe of ryuers of water. At the same season the LORDE separated out the trybe of Leui, to beare the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, and to stonde before the LORDE, to mynister vnto him, and to prayse his name vnto this daye. ^b Therefore shal the Leuites haue no porcion ner enheritaunce with their brethren: for the LORDE is their enheritaunce, as the LORDE thy God hath promysed them.

^c But I taried vpō the mount (like as afore) euen fortye dayes and fortye nightes, and the LORDE herde me at that tyme also, and wolde not destroye the. But he sayde vnto me: Vp, & get the forth, & thou mayest go before the people, & they maye come in, and cōquere the lōde, which I sware vnto their fathers to geue them.

^c Now Israel, what requyresth the LORDE thy God of the, ^d but & thou feare the LORDE thy God, and that thou walke in all his wayes, & loue him, & serue the LORDE thy God with all thy hert, & with all thy soule: and & thou kepe the cōmaundementes of & LORDE, & his ordinaunces, which I cōmaunde the this daye, & thou mayest prospere? ^e Beholde, the heauen & the heauen of all heauēs and the earth, and all & is therein, is & LORDES thy God. ^f Yet hath he had a pleasure vnto thy fathers, to loue thē: and hath chosen their sede after thē, namely you, aboue all nacions, as it is come to passe this daye.

^g Circumcyse therefore & foreskynne of youre hert, & be nomore styffnecked. ^h For the LORDE youre God is God of all goddes, & LORDE ouer all lordes, a greate God, mightie & terryble, which regardeth no personne, & taketh no giftes, and doeth righte vnto the fatherlesse and wedowe, and loueth the straunger, to geue him fode & rayment. ⁱ Therefore shal ye loue a straūger, for ye youre selues also were straungers in the londe of Egipte.

^j Thou shalt feare the LORDE thy God, him onely shalt thou serue, vnto him shalt thou cleue: & swaere by his name. He is thy prayse & thy God, which hath done for & these greate & terryble thinges, & thine eyes haue sene. ^k Thy fathers wēte downe in to Egipte with seuentye soules, but now hath & LORDE thy God made the &as & starres of heauen in multitude.

The xi. Chapter.

THEREFORE shalt thou loue the LORDE thy God, & kepe his cōmaundemētes, his ordinaunces, his lawes, & his preceptes all thy life lōge. And vnderstōde this daye, that which youre childrē knowe not: Which haue not sene the nurtoure of the LORDE youre God, & his greatnesse, & his mightie hande, & his stretched out arme, & his tokens and actes which he dyd amonge the Egipcians, vnto Pharaο the kynge of Egipte, & to all his londe, & what he dyd to the power of & Egipcians, & vnto their horses & charettes, ^l when he broughte the waters of the reed see vpō them, as they folowed after you, & how & LORDE hath broughte them to naught vnto this daye: & what he dyd vnto you in the wilderness, vntyll ye came vnto this place: ^m what he dyd vnto Dathan and Abiram the children of Eliab the sonne of Ruben, how the earth opened hir mouth and swallowed them with their householdes & tētes all their good that they had in the myddes amonge all Israel.

ⁿ For youre eyes haue sene the greate workes of & LORDE, which he hath done. Therefore shal ye kepe all the commaundementes which I commaunde you this daye, that ye maye be stronge to come in, and to conquere the londe, whither ye go to possesse it, & that ye maye lyue longe in the londe, ^o which the LORDE sware vnto youre fathers, to geue vnto them and to their sede, euē a londe that floweth with mylke and hony: For the londe whither thou comest in, to possesse it, is not as the londe of Egipte, whence ye came out, where thou sowdest thy sede, and waterdest it at thy fote as a garden of herbes: ^p but it hath hilles and valleys, which drynke water of the rayne of heauen, a londe that the LORDE thy God careth for. And the eyes of the LORDE thy God are alwaye therin from the begynnynge of the yere vnto the ende.

with youre handes, because the LORDE thy God hath blessed the. *Ye shall do none of the thynges, y we do here this daye, euery man what semeth him good in his awne eyes. For ye are not yet come to rest, ner to y enheritaunce which the LORDE thy God shal geue the.

But ye shal go ouer Iordane, and dwell in the londe y the LORDE youre God shall deuyde out vnto you, ⁊ he shal geue you rest from all youre enemies rounde aboute, and ye shal dwell safe. Now when the LORDE thy God hath chosen a place, to make his name dwell there, ye shall brynge thither all y I haue commaunded you, namely, youre burnt sacrifices, youre other offerynges, youre tythes, the Heueofferynges of youre handes, ⁊ all youre fre vowes, which ye shall vowe vnto y LORDE: and there shal ye eate, and reioyse before the LORDE youre God, ye and youre sonnes, and youre daughters, and youre seruauantes, and youre maydes, and the Leuites that are within youre gates, † for they haue no porcion ner inheritaunce with you.

Take hede vnto thy selfe, that thou offer not thy burntofferynges in what so euer place thou seyst: in the place which y LORDE shall haue chosen in one of thy trybes, there shalt thou offer thy burntofferynges, and do all that I commaunde the. Not withstandinge thou mayest kyll and eate flesh within all thy gates, after all the desyre of thy soule, accordyng to the blessinge of the LORDE thy God, which he hath geue the: ‡ both the cleane and vncleane maye eate it, as of the Roo and herte, onely the bloude shalt thou not eate, but poure it out as water vpon the earth.

But within thy gates mayest thou not eate of the tythes of thy corne, § of thy wyne, ⁊ of thy oyle, ner of y first borne of thine oxen and of thy shepe, or of any of thy vowes which thou hast vowed, or of thy frewyl-offerynges, or Heueofferynges of thy handes: but before the LORDE thy God shalt thou eate them, in the place which the LORDE thy God choseth, thou ⁊ thy sonne, and thy daughter, thy seruauant, thy mayde, and the Leuite that is within thy gates, ⁊ thou shalt reioyse before y LORDE thy God, ouer all y thou puttest thine hande vnto. § And bewarre, that thou forsake not the Leuite, as longe as thou lyuest vpon the earth.

But when the LORDE thy God shal enlarge thy bordes of thy londe (as he hath promysed the) and thou saye: I wil eate flesh (for so much as thy soule longeth to eate flesh) then eate flesh accordyng to all the desyre of thy soule. But yf the place that the LORDE thy God hath chosen (to let his name be there) be farre from the, then kyll of thy oxen and of thy shepe, which the LORDE hath geuen the, as he hath commaunded the, and eate it within thy gates accordyng to all y desyre of thy soule. ¶ Euen as a Roo or Hert is eaten, maiest thou eate it: both the cleane and vncleane maie eate it indifferently. || Onely beware, that thou eate not the bloude: for the bloude is the life. Therefore shalt thou not eate the life with the flesh, but shalt poure it out like water vpon the earth, y thou mayest prospere, and thy children after the, when thou hast done that which is righte in the sighte of the LORDE.

But when thou halowest oughte that is thine, or makest a vowe, ¶ thou shalt take it, and brynge it vnto the place, that the LORDE hath chosen, and do thy burntofferynges with the flesh and bloude vpon the altare of the LORDE thy God. The bloude of thine offryng shalt thou poure vpon the altare of the LORDE thy God, and eate the flesh. Take hede, and heare all these wordes, which I commaunde the, y it maye go well with the, and thy children after y for euer, when thou hast done y which is righte and acceptable in the sighte of the LORDE thy God.

¶ When the LORDE thy God hath roted out the Heithen before the, whither thou comdest in to conquere them, ⁊ when thou hast cōquered them, ⁊ dwelt in their londe, beware then, y thou fall not in the snare after the, when they are destroyed before the: ⁊ that thou axe not after their goddes, ⁊ saye: Euē as these nacions haue serued their goddes, so wil I do also. ¶ Thou shalt not do so vnto the LORDE thy God. And yf it be founde of a trueth, that it is so C in dede, \S soch abhominacion is wroughte amonge you, then shalt thou smyte the indwellers of the same cite and their catell, with the edge of the swerde, and damne the cite with all that is therein: and all the spoyle therof shalt thou gather together in the myddes of the stretes of it, and burne with fyre, both the cite and all the spoyle therof together vnto the LORDE thy God, that it maye lye vpon a heape for euer, and neuer be buylded eny more. ¶ And let nothinge of the damned thinge cleue vnto thy hande, that the LORDE maye be turned from the indignacion of his wrath, and graunte the mercy, and haue compassion on the, and multiplie the (as he hath sworn vnto thy fathers) because thou hast herkened vnto \S voyce of the LORDE thy God, to kepe all his commaundementes, which I commaunde the this daye, so that thou doest the thinge which is righte in the sighte of the LORDE thy God.

For these nacions whom thou shalt conquere, whom the LORDE thy God hath geuen the, herken to the chosers out of dayes, and to the soyth-sayers: but so shalt not thou do vnto the LORDE thy God.

And this shalbe the cause, that whosoever hath committed a slaughter, maye flye thither, and lyue.

B ¶ Yf eny man smyte his neyghboure vnawarres, and hath not hated him in tyme passed (as whan a man goeth vnto the wod with his neyghboure to hew downe tymber, and he turneth his hande with the axe to hewe downe the wod, and the yron slyppeth from the helue, and hytteth his neyghboure, that he dyeth) the same shal flye in to one of these cities, that he maye lyue, lest the auenger of bloude folowe after the deedsleyer, whyle his hert is whote, and ouertake him, whyle the waye is so farre, and slaye him, where as yet no cause of death is in hi, for so much as he hated him not in tyme passed. B ¶ But yf an vnrighteous wytnesse stonde vp agaynst eny man, to testifie eny trespase vpon him, then shall both the men that stryue together, stonde before the LORDE, before the prestes and Iudges, which shall be at the same tyme. ¶ And the Iudges shall make diligent inquisition: ¶ yf the witness be founde false, and hath geue false witness agaynst his brother, then shall ye do vnto him, euen as he thoughte to do vnto his brother: that thou mayest put awaye the euell from the y that other maye heare and feare, and take nomore vpon them to do soch wicked poyntes amonge you. Thus shalt thou do vnto all the cities, that are very farre from the, and are not of the cities of these nacions.

¶ But in the cities of these nacions, which the LORDE thy God shall * geue the to enheritaunce, thou shalt leaue nothinge alyue that hath breth, but shalt vtterly destroye the, namely: the Hethites, Amoriges, Cananites, Pheresites, Heuites, & Iebusites, as the LORDE thy God hath commaunded the, þy they teache you not to do all þy abhominacions, which they do vnto their goddes, & so ye to synne agaynst the LORDE youre God.

Whan thou must lye a longe season before a cite, against the which thou makest warre to take it, thou shalt not destroye þy trees therof that thou woldest hew them downe with the axe, for thou mayest eate therof: and therefore shalt thou not hew them downe. For it is but wodd vpon the felde, and no man, and can not come & be bullworkes agaynst the. But the trees which thou knowest þy me eate not of, those shalt thou destroye, and rote out, and make bullworkes therof, agaynst the cite that warreth with the, tyll thou haue ouercome it.

which is the enheritaunce of the congregacion of Iacob. And he was in the fulnesse of the kyngde, & helde y rulers of y people together, with the trybes of Israel.

Let Ruben lyue, and not dye, and his people be fewe in nombre.

This is the blessinge of Iuda. And he sayde: LORDE heare the voyce of Iuda, and brynge him vnto his people: Let his hādes multiplie him, and let him be helped frō his enemies.

13 And vnto Leui he sayde: Thy perfectnes and thy lighte be acordinge vnto the man of thy mercy, *whō thou hast tempted at Massa, when ye stroue by the water of stryfe. †He that sayeth vnto his father and to his mother: I se him not: and to his brother, I knowe him not: and to his sonne, I wote not of him, those haue obserued thy wordes, and kepte thy couenaunt: they shal teach Iacob thy iudgmentes, and Israel thy lawe: they shal laie incense before thy nose, & burnt offeringes vpon thine altare. LORDE, blesse thou his power & accepte the workes of his handes: smyte the loynes of them y ryse vp agaynst him, & of them that hate him, that they lifte not vp them selues.

And to Ben Iamin he saide: The beloued of the LORDE shal dwell in hope on him: All the daye longe shal he wayte vpon him, and shal dwell betwene his shulders.

14 And to Ioseph he sayde: †His londe lieth in the blessinge of the LORDE, there are noble frutes of heauen, of the dew, and of the depe that lyeth beneth: There are noble frutes of the increase of the Sonne, and noble rype frutes of y monethes: And of y toppes of the mountaynes of olde, and of the hilles allwaye, and of the noble frutes of y earth, and of the fulnesse therof. The good will of him †that dwelleth in the buszshe, come vpon the heade of Ioseph, and †vpon y toppe of his heade that was separated frō amonge his brethren.

His bewtie is as a firstborne oxe, and his hornes are as y hornes of an Vnicorne: with the same shal he puszshe the nacions together, euen vnto the endes of the worlde. These are the thousandes of Ephraim, and the thousandes of Manasse.

15 And vnto Zabulon he sayde: Reioyse Zabulon of thy outgoynge: but reioyse thou

Isachar of thy tentes. They shall call the people vnto y hyll, and there shal they offe y offeringes of righteousnes. For they shal sucke the abundaunce of the see, and the treasures hyd in the deade.

And to Gad he sayde: Blessynge haue Gad, which maketh rowme. He dwelleth as a lyon, and spoyleth the arme and the toppe of the heade. And he sawe his begynnyng, that y heape of the teachers laye hydd there, and came with the rulers of the people, and executed the righteousnesse of the LORDE, and his iudgment on Israel.

And to Dan he sayde: Dan a yonge lyon, he shal flowe from Basan.

And to Nephtali he saide: Nephtali shal haue abundaunce of pleasure, & shalbe full of the blessinge of the LORDE: his possession shalbe towarde the west and south. And to 32 Asser he sayde: Asser be blessed with sonnes, accepted be he with his brethren, and dyppe his fote in oyle. Yron and brasse be on thy shues. Thyne age be as thy youth.

There is no God as the God of the iust. He that sytteth vpon heauen, be thy helpe. And his glory is in the cloudes, that is the dwellynge of God from the begynnyng, and vnder the armes of the worlde. And he shal dryue out thyn enemye before the, and saye: Be destroyed. †And Israel shall dwell safe alone. The eye of Iacob shalbe vpon y londe where corne and wine is, heauen also shal droppe with dewe. Happye art thou Israel, who is lyke vnto the? O thou people y art saued by the LORDE, which is thy helpe, shyld, and the swerde of thy glorye. Thyne enemies shal pyne awaye, and thou shalt treade vpon the height of them.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

1 A ND Moses wente from the felde of y Moabites vp vnto mount Nebo, †vpo y toppe of moit Pisga ouer agaynst Iericho. And the LORDE shewed him all the londe of Gilead vnto Dan, and all Nephtali, and the londe of Ephraim and Manasse, and all the londe of Iuda, vnto y vttemost see, and towarde the south, and the region of the playne of Iericho the cite of the palme trees euen vnto Zoar. And he buried him in a valley, in the londe of the Moabites ouer agaynst the house of Peor. And noman knewe of his graue vnto this daye. The first Chapter.

AFTER the death of Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE, spake the LORDE vnto Iosua & sonne of Nun Moses mynister: My seruaunt Moses is deed, vp now, and go ouer this Iordane, thou and all this people in to the londe that I haue geuen the children of Israel. * All the places that the soles of youre fete shal treade vpon, haue I geuen vnto you, as I sayde vnto Moses: From the wyldernes and this Libanus vnto the greete water Euphrates: all the londe of the Hethites vnto the greate see toward the west, shal be youre border. There shall noman be able to withstonde & all thy life longe. † And like as I was with Moses, so wil I be with the also. ‡ I will not fayle the nether forsake the. Be stronge and bolde: for vnto this people shalt thou deuyde & londe, which I sware vnto their fathers, to geue it them.

§ Be ströge therfore and very bolde, that thou mayest kepe and do euery thyng accordinge to the lawe, that Moses my seruaunt commaunded the. Turne not asyde from it, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte, ¶ thou mayest deale wysely whither so euer thou goest. § And let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exercyse thy selfe therin daie and nighte, that thou mayest kepe and do euery thinge accordinge to it that is wryttē therein: Then shalt thou prospere in thy waies, and deale wysely. Lo, I haue commaunded the to be stronge and bolde. Feare not, and be not afrayed: for the LORDE thy God is with &, whither so euer thou goest.

Then commaunded Iosua the officers of the people, and sayde: Go thorow the hoost, and charge & people, and saye: Prepare you vytayles, for ouer thre dayes shal ye go ouer this Iordane, that ye maye come in and take possession of the londe, which the LORDE youre God shal geue you.

And to the Rubenites, Gaddites, and to the halfe trybe of Manasse, sayde Iosua: Thynke vpon the worde, ¶ that Moses the seruaunt of & LORDE spake vnto you, and sayde: The LORDE youre God hath brought you to rest, and geuen you this londe. Let youre wyues and children and catell remayne in & londe, that Moses gaue you on this syde Iordane: But ye youre selues (as many as be fightinge men) shal go forth before youre brethern in harnesse, and helpe them, tyll the LORDE haue broughte youre brethren to rest also as well as you: that they also maye take possession of the londe, which the LORDE youre God shal geue them: Then shal ye turne agayne in to the londe of youre possession, that ye maye enioye it, which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE hath geuen you on this syde Iordane toward & Easte. And they answered Iosua and sayde: ¶ All that thou hast commaunded vs, wyll we do: and whither so euer thou sendest vs, we wyl go thither. Like as we haue obeyed Moses, so wyl we be obedient also vnto the: Onely that the LORDE thy God be with &, like as he was with Moses. Who so euer disobeyeth thy mouth, and herkeneth not vnto thy wordes in all that thou hast commaunded vs, shal dye: Onely be thou stronge and bolde.

them : Go youre waye, loke vpon the londe and Iericho. They wente forth, *and came in to y house of an harlot, called Rahab, and laye there. Then was it tolde the kynge of Iericho: Lo, there are men come in this nighte from the childre of Israel, to spy the londe. Then sent the kynge of Iericho vnto Rahab, saynge: Delyuer the men forth that are come vnto the in to thy house, for they are come to spye out the whole londe. Now as for the two men, the woman had hyd them, and sayde: There came men in vnto me in dede, but I knewe not whence they were. And at the shutting in of the gate whan it was darcke, they wente out, so y I can not tell whither they be gone: folowe soone after them, for ye shal ouertake them. But she had caused them to clymme vp vnto the house toppe, and hyd them vnder the stalkes of flaxe, that she had prepared her vpō the toppe of the house. Howbeit the men folowed after them in y waye toward Iordane, euen vnto the ferye: and whan they that folowed vpon them were gone forth, the gate was shut.

B And or euer the men layed them downe to slepe, she wente vp to them vnto the house toppe, and sayde vnto the: I knowe that the LORDE shal delyuer you the londe, †for the feare of you is fallen vpon vs, and all the inhabitors of the londe are discouraged at youre commynge. For we haue herde, how the LORDE †dried vp the water in the reed see before you, whā ye departed out of Egipte: †and what ye dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amorites, Sihon and Og beyonde Iordane, how ye roted them out, and destroyed them. And sence we herde therof, oure hert hath failed vs, nether is there a good stomacke more in eny man, by the reason of youre commynge. For the LORDE youre God is both the God aboue in heauē and beneth vpon earth.

C Swear now then vnto me § euen by the LORDE (for so much as I haue dealte mercifully with you) that ye wyl also shewe mercy vpon my fathers house: and geue me a true token, that ye wyl let my father lyue, and my mother, my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they haue, and delyuer oure soules from death. The men sayde vnto her: || Yf we shewe not mercy and faithfulnessse vpon the, whan the LORDE geueth vs the londe, then let oure soule dye for you, so farre as thou betrayest not oure deuyce. Then let she them downe thorow the wyndowe by a coarde: for hir house was in the wall of the cite, and in the wall was hir dwellynge. And she sayde vnto them: Go youre waye vp to the mountaynes, lest they mete you that folowe vpon you: and hyde youre selues there thre dayes, tyll they be come againe y folowe after you: and then get you youre waye.

But the men sayde vnto her: As for this ooth that thou hast taken of vs, we wyl be discharged of it whan we come in to y londe, excepte thou knytttest in the wyndowe y lyne of this rosecoloured rope (y thou hast lettē vs downe with all) ¶ gatherest vnto y in to the house, thy father, thy mother, thy brethren ¶ all thy fathers house. And loke who so euer goeth out at the dore of thy house, his bloude be vpon his owne heade, and we giltlesse. But of all those y are in thy house, yf a hande be layed vpon the, their bloude shalbe vpō oure heade. And yf thou bewrayest eny of this deuyce of ours, the wil we be discharged of the ooth y thou hast takē of vs. She sayde: Let it be so as ye saye, and she let the go. And they wente their waye. And she knyt the rose coloured lyne in the wyndowe.

They wente on their waye, and came to the mountaynes, and remayned there thre dayes, tyll they that folowed vpon them were come agayne: for they soughte them thorow euery strete, ¶ yet they founde them not. So the two men turned agayne, and departed from the mountaynes, and passed ouer (Iordane) and came to Iosua the sonne of Nun, and tolde him euery thinge, as they had founde it, ¶ they sayde vnto Iosua: The LORDE hath geuē vs all the londe in to oure handes, and all they that dwell in the londe, are sore afraied of vs.

The iij. Chapter.

AND Iosua rose vp early, and they departed from Setim, ¶ came vnto Iordane, he and all the children of Israel, and remayned there all night, afore they wete ouer. But after thre dayes wente the officers thorow y hoost, and commaunded the people, and sayde: Whan ye se the Arke of y couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, and the prestes from amōge the Leuites bearinge it, departe ye then out of youre place, and folowe after (but so, that there be rowme betwene you and it by two thousande cubites, & that ye come not nye it) [¶] ye maye knowe what waye ye shulde go: for ye neuer wente that waye afore.

[¶] And Iosua sayde vnto the people: Halowe youre selues, for tomorow shal thy LORDE bringe wonderous thinges to passe amōge you. And vnto the prestes he sayde: Beare ye the Arke of [¶] couenaūt, and go before the people. Then ^{*}bare they the Arke, and wente before the people. And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: This daye wyl I begynne to make the greate in the sighte of all Israel, that they maie knowe, how that like as I was with Moses, so am I with the also. And commaunde thou the prestes that beare the Arke, and saye: Whan ye come before in the water of Iordane, stonde styll.

[¶] And Iosua sayde vnto the children of Israel: Come hither, & heare the worde of the LORDE youre God. He sayde morouer: By this shal ye perceaue, that the Iuyngge God is amōge you, and that he shall dryue out before you [¶] Cananites, Hethites, Heuites, Pheresites, Girgosites, Amorites and Iebusites. Beholde, the Arke of the couenaunt of him [¶] hath domynion ouer all londes, shall go before you in Iordane. Take now therfore twolue men out of [¶] trybes of Israel, out of euery trybe one. And whan the soles of the fete of the prestes that beare [¶] Arke of the LORDE the gouernoure of all londes, are set in the water of Iordane, then shal [¶] water of Iordane withdrawe it selfe from the water that floweth from aboue, that it maye stonde on a heape.

[¶] Now whan the people departed out of their tentes, to go ouer Iordane, & the prestes bare the Arke of the couenaunt before the people, and came in to Iordane, & dypte their fete before in the water (as for Iordane on all his bankes it was full of all maner waters [†] of the londe) then the water that came downe frō aboue, stode straight vp vpon one heape, very farre from the cite of Adom, that lyeth on the syde of Zartban: But the water that ranne downe to the see (euen to the salt see) fell awaye, and decreased.

[¶] So [¶] people wente thorow ouer agaynst Iericho. And the prestes that bare the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, stode drye in [¶] myddes of Iordane, readye prepared: & all Israel wēte thorow drye shod, vntyll [¶] whole people were all come ouer Iordane.

The iiii. Chapter.

[¶] AND [¶] LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Take you twolue men, out of euery trybe one, & comaunde them, & saye: [¶] Take vp twolue stones out of Iordane, from the place where the fete of the prestes stode in their araye: & cary them with you, [¶] ye maie leaue them in [¶] lodginge, where ye shal lodge this night. The Iosua called twolue mē which were prepared of the children of Israel, out of euery trybe one, & sayde vnto thē: Go your waye ouer before the Arke of the LORDE youre God in the myddes of Iordane, & take euery man a stone vpon his shulder, after the nombre of the trybes of [¶] children of Israel, [¶] they maye be a token amōge you. And whan youre children axe their fathers here after, and saye: What do these stones there? That ye maye then saye vnto them, how that the water of Iordane clauē in sunder before the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, whan it wente thorow Iordane, & that these stones are set for a perpetuall remembraunce vnto the children of Israel.

Then dyd the children of Israel as Iosua [¶] commaunded them, and bare twolue stones out of the myddes of Iordane (as the LORDE had sayde vnto Iosua) [¶] accordinge to the nombre of the trybes of the children of Israel, and broughte the same with them in to the lodginge, and lefte them there. And Iosua set vp twolue stones in [¶] myddes of Iordane, where [¶] fete of the prestes stode, that bare [¶] Arke of the couenaunt: and there they be yet vnto this daye. As for [¶] prestes that bare [¶] Arke, they stode in the myddes of Iordane, vntyll all was performed that the LORDE charged Iosua to saye vnto [¶] people [¶] accordinge as Moses gaue Iosua in commaudemēt. The people also made haist, and wente ouer. Now whan all the people was gone ouer, the Arke of the LORDE wente ouer also, and the prestes wente before the people.

[¶] And the Rubenites, & Gaddites, and [¶] halfe trybe of Manasse wente harnesssed before the childrē of Israel, like as Moses had sayde vnto thē: Aboute a fortye thousande men ready harnesssed to the warre, wente before the LORDE to the battayll, vpon ȝ felde of Iericho. * In that daye the LORDE made Iosua greate in the sighte of all Israel: and like as they feared Moses, so stode they in awe of him, all his life longe.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Commaunde the prestes which beare the Arke of witnesse, that they come vp out of Iordane. So Iosua commaunded the prestes, ȝ sayde: Come vp out of Iordane. And whan the prestes ȝ bare the Arke of the couenaüt of ȝ LORDE were come out of Iordane, and trode with the soles of their fete vpon the drye londe, ȝ water of Iordane came agayne in to his place, and flowed (like as afore tyme) vpon all his bankes.

B It was ȝ tenth daye of the first moneth, whan the people came vp out of Iordane: ȝ they pitched their tentes in Gilgall vpon ȝ East syde of ȝ cite of Iericho. And ȝ twolue stones which they had taken out of Iordane, dyd Iosua set vp at Gilgall, ȝ saide vnto the children of Israel: † Whan youre children axe their fathers hereafter, ȝ saie: What meane these stones? Ye shall tell the, ȝ saie: Israel wete drye thorow Iordane, what tyme as ȝ LORDE youre God dried vp ȝ water of Iordane before you, vntyll ye were ouer: like as the LORDE youre God dyd in the reed see, † which he dried vp before vs, ȝ we mighte go thorow: that all the people vpon earth mighte knowe the hæde of the LORDE, how mightie it is, to the intent that ye shulde alwaye feare the LORDE youre God.

The b. Chapter.

A NOW when all the kynges of ȝ Amorites that dwelt beyonde Iordane westwarde, and all the kynges of ȝ Cananites by the see syde herde, how ȝ LORDE had dried vp the water of Iordane before the children of Israel, tyll they were come ouer ȝ their hert fayled them, nether was there eny more corage in them at the presence of the children of Israel.

At the same tyme sayde ȝ LORDE vnto Iosua: Make the knyues ȝ of stone, and circumcise the children of Israel agayne the seconde tyme. Then Iosua made him knyues of stone, and circumcised the childre of Israel vpon the toppe of the foreskyynes. And the cause why Iosua circumcised all the males of the people ȝ were come out of Egipte, is this: for all the men of warre dyed in ȝ wilderness by the waye, after they were departed out of Egipte: for all the people that came forth, were circumcysed.

But all the people that were borne in ȝ wilderness by the waye (after they departed out of Egipte) were not circumcysed: for the children of Israel walked fortye yeares in the wilderness, vntyll all the people of the men of warre that came out of Egipte, were consumed, because they herkened not vnto the voyce of the LORDE, like as the LORDE sware vnto them, ȝ that they shulde not se the londe, which the LORDE sware vnto their fathers to geue vnto vs, euen a londe that floweth with mylke ȝ honye: their children which were come vp in their steade, dyd Iosua circumcise: for they had the foreskyynne, and were not circumcysed by the waye.

And whan all the people were circumcysed, they abode in their place, euē in ȝ tētes, tyll they were whole. And ȝ LORDE saide vnto Iosua: To daie haue I turned ȝ shame of Egipte awaye from you, ȝ the same place was called Gilgall vnto this daye. And whyle the children of Israel laye thus at Gilgall, they kepte Easter  the fourteenth daye of the moneth at euē in the felde of Iericho. And they ate of the corne of the lōde the seconde daye of the Easter: namely, vntenued bred, ȝ fyrmentye of ȝ yeare, euē the same daye. And vpon the morow, the †† Manna fayled, whan they ate of the corne of ȝ londe, so that the children of Israel had nomore Manna, but ate of the corne of the londe of Canaan the same yeare.

And it fortuneth that whā Iosua was by Iericho, he lifte vp his eyes, ȝ was aware, that there stode a mā agaynst him, and had a naked swerde in his hande. And Iosua wete to him, ȝ sayde vnto him: Art thou one of vs. or of oure enemies? He sayde: No, but I am †† the pryncce of the LORDES hoost, and now am I come. Then fell Iosua downe to the earth vpon his face, ȝ worshipped him, and sayde vnto him: What sayeth my LORDE vnto his seruaut? And the pryncce oure LORDES hoost sayde vnto him: §§ Put thy shues of thy fete, for the place wherpō thou stondest, is holy. And Iosua dyd so.

AS for Iericho, it was shut & kepte because of the childre of Israel, so that no man mighte go out ner in. But the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Beholde, I haue geuen Iericho with f kynge and men of warre therof, in to thy hande. Let all the men of warre go once rounde aboute f cite, and do so sixe dayes. But vpon the seuenth daye let the prestes take the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before the Arke, and go the same seuenth daye seuen tymes aboute the cite, and let the prestes blowe the trompettes. And whan the horne of the yere of Iubilye bloweth and maketh a sounde, so that ye heare the trompettes, all the people shal make a greate shoute, then shal the walles of the cite fall downe, and f people shal fall in, euery one straight before him.

J Then Iosua the sonne of Nun called f prestes, and sayde vnto them: Beare ye the Arke of the couenaut, and let seuen prestes take the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before the Arke of the LORDE. But vnto the people he sayde: Get you hence, and go rounde aboute the cite: and let him that is harnesssed, go before the Arke of the LORDE. Whan Iosua had spoken this vnto the people, the seuen prestes bare the seuen trompettes of the yere Iubilye before the Arke of the LORDE, and wente & blew the trompettes, and the Arke of the LORDES couenaut folowed after them: and who so was harnesssed, wente before the prestes that blew the trompettes, and the multitude folowed the Arke. And all was full of f noyse of the trompettes. But Iosua commaunded the people, and sayde: Ye shall make no shoute, ner let youre voyce be herde, nether shall ye geue one worde out of youre mouth, vntyll the daye f I saye vnto you: Make a shoute, then make a shoute.

C So the Arke of the LORDE wente once rounde aboute the cite, and came agayne in to f hooste, & remayned therein: for Iosua vsed to ryse vp early in the mornynge. And the prestes bare the Arke of the LORDE: so dyd the seuen prestes beare the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before f Arke of the LORDE, and wente and blew the trompettes: and who so was harnesssed, wente before the, but f multitude folowed f Arke of the LORDE. And all was full of the noyse of the trompettes.

The seconde daye wente they once aboute the cite also, and came agayne in to the hoost. Thus dyd they sixe dayes. But vpon the seuenth daye whan the mornynge sprynge arose, they gat them vp early, and wente after the same maner seuen tymes aboute f cite, so that vpon the same one seuenth daye they wente seuen tymes aboute the cite.

And at the seuenth tyme whan the prestes blew the trompettes, Iosua sayde vnto the people: Make a shoute, for f LORDE hath deliuered you the cite: Howbeit this cite, & all that is therein, shalbe damned vnto the LORDE: * onely the harlot Rahab shal lyue, & all that are with her in f house, for she hyd the messaungers, whom we sent forth. † Onely beware of it that is damned, lest ye damne youre selues (yf ye take ought of it which is damned) and make the hoost of Israel to be damned, and brynge it in to mysfortune. But all the syluer and golde, with the ornametes of brasse & yron, shalbe sanctified vnto the LORDE, that it maye come to the LORDES treasure.

Then made the people a greate shoute, and the prestes blew the trompettes (for whan the people herde the noyse of the trompettes, they made a greate shoute) ‡ and the walles fell, and the people clymmed vp in to the cite, euery one straight before him. Thus they wanne f cite, and § destroyed all that was in the cite with the edge of the swerde, both man and woman, yonge and olde, oxe, shepe, and Asse.

But Iosua sayde vnto f two men which had spied out the londe: Go in to the house of the harlot, and bringe out the woman fro thence with all that she hath, acordinge as ye haue sworne vnto her. Then f yonge men (the spyes) wente in, and brought forth Rahab with hir father and mother, & brethern, and all that she had, and all hir kynred, and caused her to dwell without the hoost of Israel. As for the cite, they brent it with fyre, & all that was therein: onely the syluer and golde, and the ornaments of brasse and yron put they vnto the treasure in the house of f LORDE: but Iosua let ¶ the harlot Rahab lyue, with hir fathers house, and all that she had: & she dwelt in Israel vnto this daie, because she had hyd the messaungers whō Iosua sent vnto Iericho to spye.

At the same tyme sware Iosua, and sayde: * Cursed be that man before the LORDE, which setteth vp this cite of Iericho & buyldeth it: Whan he laieth f̄ foundaciō therof, let it cost him his first sonne: And whā he setteth vp the gates of it, let it cost him his yōgest sonne. Thus the LORDE was with Iosua, so that he was spoken of in all londes.

The vij. Chapter.

BUT the children of Israel had cōmytted a sinne in the thinge f̄ was damned: for Achan the sonne of Charmi the sonne of Sabdi the sonne of Serah, of f̄ trybe of Iuda, toke some of it f̄ was dāned. Then was the wrath of the LORDE fearce ouer the children of Israel.

Now whan Iosua sent out men from Iericho vnto Hai, which lyeth besyde Bethauē on f̄ east syde of Bethel, he sayde vnto thē: Go vp, and spye the londe. And whan they had gone vp, and spyed out Hai, they came agayne to Iosua, and sayde vnto him: Let not all the people go vp, but vpon a two or thre thousande, that they maye go vp and smyte Hai, lest all the people weerye them selues there, for they are but fewe.

So there wente vp, of the people vpon a thre thousande men, and they fled before the men of Hai, and they of Hai smote vpon a syxe and thyrtye men of them, and chaced them from the porte vnto Sebarim, and smote them downe the waye. Then was the hert of the people discouraged, † and became like water. As for Iosua he rente his clothes, and fell vpon his face vnto the earth before the Arke of the LORDE, vntill the eueninge, with the Elders of Israel, and cast dust vpon their heades.

35 And Iosua sayde: Oh LORDE LORDE, wherfore hast thou broughte this people ouer Iordane, to delyuer vs in to the handes of the Amorites to destroye vs? O that we had taried beionde Iordane, as we begāne. Oh my LORDE, what shal I saye, whyle Israel turneth his backe vpon his enemies? Whā the Cananites heare of this, they shal compasse vs rounde aboute, yee and rote out oure names from of the earth. What wylt thou do then vnto thy greate name?

* 3 Re. 16. d. † Deut. 7. e. Iosu. 6. d. 2 Ma. 12. f.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Iosua: Stōde vp, why lystest thou so vpon thy face? Israel hath offended, and trāsgressed ouer my couenaunt, which I commaunded thē. They haue taken also of the thinge that was damned, and haue stollen, and dyssembled, and layed it amonge their ornementes. The children of Israel are not able to stonde before their aduersaries, but must turne their backes vpon their enemies: for they are acursed. I wyl not more be with you from hēce forth yf ye put not out the damned from amonge you.

Stonde vp, and sanctifie the people, and saye: † Sanctifie youre selues agaynst tomorew for thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: ‡ There is a damned thinge in the O Israel, therfore canst thou not stonde before thine enemies, tyll ye put awaye the damned from amonge you. And ye shall ryse vp early, one trybe after another: and loke which trybe so euer the LORDE taketh, the same shall come forth, one kynred after another: and loke which kynred the LORDE taketh, the same shall come forth, one house after another. And loke what house the LORDE taketh, the same shal come forth, one housholder after another. And who so euer is founde in f̄ curse, the same shalbe burnt in the fyre with all that he hath: because he hath gone beyonde the couenaunt of the LORDE, and committed folye in Israel.

Then Iosua gat him vp by tymes in the mornyng, and brought forth Israel, one trybe after another, and f̄ trybe of Iuda was taken. And whan he had brought forth the kynreds in Iuda, f̄ kinred of the Serahites was taken. And whan he had brought forth the kynred of the Serahites, one housholde after another, Sabdi was taken. And whā he had brought forth his house, one housholder after another, Achan the sonne of Charmi f̄ sonne of Sabdi the sonne of Serah of the trybe of Iuda, was taken.

And Iosua sayde vnto Achan: My sonne, geue the glory vnto the LORDE the God of Israel, and geue him the prayse, and tell me, what thou hast done, and hide nothinge from me.

Then answered Achan vnto Iosua, and sayde: Verely I haue synned agaynst f̄ LORDE God of Israel, thus & thus haue I done: I sawe amōge f̄ spoiles a costly Babylonish garment, and two hūdreth Sycles of syliuer and a tunge of golde, worth fifty Sycles in weight, vnto the which I had a lust, and toke it: and beholde, it is hyd in the grounde in my tente, and the syluer vnder it.

Then Iosua sent messaungers thither, which ranne to the tente, and beholde, it was hyd in his tente, and the syluer vnder it. And they toke it out of the tente, and broughte it vnto Iosua, and to all the children of Israel and poured it before the LORDE. Then Iosua and all Israel with him, toke Achan the sonne of Serah with the siluer, the garment and goldē tunge, his sonnes and daughters, his oxen and asses, and shepe, and all that he had broughte they in to ſ valley of Achor.

And Iosua sayde: For so much as thou hast troubled vs, the LORDE trouble the this daye. And all Israel stoned him, and burned him with fyre with all that he had. And whan they had stoned him, they made ouer him a greate heape of stones, which remaineth vnto this daye. (So the LORDE turned from the rigorounes of his wrath.) Therefore is the same place called ſ valley of Achor vnto this daye.

The liij. Chapter.

AND ſ LORDE saide vnto Iosua: Feare not, and be not afrayed. "Take all the men of warre with the, and ryse, and get the vp vnto Hai. Beholde, I haue geuen in to thy hande, the kynge of Hai with his people in his cite & countre. And thou shalt do with Hai and the kynge of it, *as thou dydest with Iericho and the kynge therof, sauynge that ye shal deale amōge you their spoyle & catell: but set thou a †preuy watch behynde the cite.

Then Iosua arose, and all ſ men of warre, to go vp vnto Hai: and Iosua chose thirtie thousande fightinge men, and sent them out by night, and commaunded them, and sayde: Take hede, ye shal be ſ preuye watch behynde the cite, but go not to farr from the cite, and se that ye be redye altogether. As for me and all the people that is with me, we wyll make vs to the cite. And whan they come forth agaynst vs (†as afore) we wyll flye before them, that they maye folowe out after vs, tyll we haue prouoked them forth of the cite: for they shal thinke that we flye before them, like as at ſ first. And whyle we flye before them, ye shal get you vp out of the preuy watch, and wyne the cite. For ſ LORDE youre God shal delyuer it in to youre handes. But whan ye haue wonne the cite, set fyre vpon it, doinge ſacordinge vnto the worde of the LORDE. Beholde, I haue commaunded you.

So Iosua sent them awaye, & they wente vnto the place of the preuy watch, and laye betwixte Bethel and Hai, on the west syde of Hai. But Iosua abode that night amōge the people. And in the mornynge he arose early, and set the people in order, and wente vp with the Elders of Israel before the people towarde Hai: and all the men of warre that were with him, wente vp, & gat them forth, and came ouer agaynst the cite, and pitched their tentes on the north syde of Hai, so ſ there was but a valley betwene him and Hai.

He had taken aboute a fyue thousande men, and set them in the hynder watch betwene Bethel and Hai, on the west syde of the cite, and they ordred the people of the whole hoost that was on the north syde of the cite, so that the vttemost of the people reached vnto the west ende of the cite. So Iosua wente the same nighte in to the myddes of the valley.

But whan the kynge of Hai sawe that, he made haist, and gat him vp early, and the men out of the cite, to mete Israel to ſ bat-tayll, with all his people, euen righte before the felde: for he wyst not that there was a preuy watch behynde him on the backe syde of the cite. But Iosua and all Israel were feble before them, and fled by the waye to ſ wyldernes. Then cried all the people in the cite, that they shulde folowe vpon them, and they folowed after Iosua and russhed out of the cite, so that there remainyd not one man in Hai and Bethel, which wente not out to folowe vpon Israel, and they lefte the cite standinge open, that they mighte persecute Israel.

Thē sayde ſ LORDE vnto Iosua: Reach out the speare that thou hast in thine hande, towarde Hai: for I wyll delyuer it in to thy hande. And whan Iosua reached out the speare that was in his hande, towarde ſ cite, ſ hinder watch brake vp out of their place, and ranne (whan he had stretched out his hande) and came in to the cite, and wanne it, and made haist, & set fyre vpon it. And the men of Hai turned them, and loked behynde them, and the smoke of the cite wente vp toward heauen, and they had no place to fle vnto, nether hither ner thither: and the people that fled toward the wyldernes turned aboute, to folowe vpon them.

¶ And whan Iosua and all Israel sawe, [†] the hynder watch had wonne the cite (for [†] smoke of the cite ascended) they turned againe, and smote the men of Hai. And they in the cite came forth also agaynst them, so [†] they came in the myddes amonge Israel on both the sydes, and they slewe them, so that there was not one man of them left ouer or escaped: and they toke the kynge of Hai alyue, and broughte him vnto Iosua. And whā Israel had slayne all the inhabitors of Hai, which had folowed vpon them in the felde and in the wilderness: and whan they were all fallen thorow the edge of the swerde, tyll they were destroied, thē turned all Israel vnto Hai, and smote it with the edge of [†] swerde. And of all them which fell that daye fro man vnto womā, there were twolue thousande, all men of Hai.

¶ But Iosua withdrew not his hande (wherwith he reached out the speare) tyll all the inhabitors of Hai were vterly destroyed, ^{*} sayyng the catell and the spoyle of [†] cite, dyd Israel parte amonge them selues, accordyng vnto the worde of the LORDE, which he comaunded Iosua. And Iosua burned vp Hai and made an heape therof for euer, which is there yet vnto this daye. And the kynge of Hai caused he to be hanged on a tre vntyll the euen.

^a But whā the Sonne was gone downe, he comaunded to take his body from the tre, and to cast it vnder the gate of the cite, and made vpon him a greate heape of stones, which is there yet vnto this daye.

¶ Then buylded Iosua an altare vnto the LORDE God of Israel vpon mount Ebal accordyng as Moses the seruauit of [†] LORDE comaunded the children of Israel, as it is wrytten in the boke of the lawe of Moses euen an altare of whole stone, wherupon there was no yron lifted: and he offred burntofferings and healthofferings, and there vpon the stones he wrote the seconde lawe of Moses, which he wrote before the childrē of Israel.

And all Israel with their Elders and officers and iudges, stode on both the sydes of the Arke, right ouer agaynst the prestes [†] bare the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE, the straunger as well as one of them selues, the one halfe besyde mount Grysims, and the other halfe beside mount Ebal, [†] as Moses the seruauit of the LORDE comaunded afore, to blesse the people of Israel. Afterwarde caused he to proclame all the wordes of the lawe of the blessinge and cursyng, as it is wrytten in the boke of the lawe. There was not one worde that Moses comaunded, but Iosua caused it to be proclamed before all the congregacion of Israel, and before the wemē, and children, and straungers which walked amonge them.

The ix. Chapter.

NOW whan all the kynges that were beyonde Iordane vpon the mountaynes, and in the lowe countrees, [†] in all the hauens of the greate see, and besyde mount Libanus, herde this (namely, [†] Hethites, Amorites, Cananites, Pheresites, Heuites, and Iebusytes) they gathered thē selues together with one acorde, to fighte agaynst Iosua, and agaynst Israel.

But whan the inhabitors of Gibeon herde, what Iosua had done with Iericho and Hai, they deale craftely, wēte on their waie, and made a message, and toke olde sakes vpon their asses, and olde rente wyne botels, and olde mended shues vpon their fete, and put on olde and peeced garmentes, and all [†] bred of their vytayles was harde and moulde, and they wente vnto Iosua in to [†] hoost at Gilgall, and sayde vnto him, and to euery man in Israel: We are come out of a farre countree, therfore make now a couenaunt with vs. Then sayde euery man in Israel vnto [†] Heuyte: Peradventure thou dwellest amonge vs, how can I then make a couenaunt with the?

They saide vnto Iosua: We are thy seruātes. Iosua sayde vnto them: What are ye, [†] whence come ye? They sayde: Thy seruantes are come out of a very farre countree, because of the name of the LORDE thy God: for we haue herde the reporte of him, and all that he dyd in Egyp̄te, and all that he dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amorites beyōde Iordane, Sihon the kynge at Heszbō, and Og the kynge of Basan, which dwelt at Astaroth. Therefore sayde oure

Elders and all the inhabitants of oure countre : Take fode with you for youre journey, and go mete them, and saye vnto them : We are youre seruantes, therfore make now a bonde with vs : This oure bred that we toke out of oure houses for oure fode, was new whan we toke oure journey towards you : but now lo, it is harde & moulded. And these bottels fylled we new, and lo, they are rête. And these oure clothes and shues are waxed olde, by ð reason of the sore longe journey.

Then the captaynes toke their vytayles, and axed not the mouth of the LORDE. *And Iosua made peace with them, and set vp a couenaunt with them, that they shulde be saued alyue, and the rulers of the congregacion sware vnto them. But thre dayes after that they had made a couenaunt with them, they herde, that they were their neighbours, and dwelte amonge them : For as the children of Israel wente forth on their journey, they came on the thirde daye vnto their cities, which are called Gibeon, Caphira, Beeroth, and Cirath Iearim, and smote thē not, because that the rulers of the congregacion had sworne vnto them by the name of the LORDE the God of Israel.

But whan all the congregacion murmured agaynst the rulers, all the rulers sayde vnto the whole congregacion : We haue sworne vnto them by the LORDE the God of Israel, therfore maye we not touch them. But this wil we do vnto them : Let them lyue, that there come no wrath vpon vs, because of the ooth that we haue made vnto them.

And the rulers sayde vnto them : Let them lyue, that they maye be hewers of wodd and bearers of water for the whole congregacion, as the rulers haue sayde vnto them. Then Iosua called them, and commened with them, and sayde : Wherefore haue ye disceaued vs, and sayde, that ye were farre from vs, where as ye dwell amonge vs ? Therefore shall ye be cursed, so that of you there shall not cease seruantes to hew wodd and to beare water for the house of my God.

They answered Iosua, & sayde : It was tolde thy seruantes, that the LORDE thy God commaunded Moses his seruant, that he shulde geue you the whole lode, and that he wolde destroye all the inhabitants of the londe before you : therfore were we sore afraied of oure lyues before you, and thus haue we done. But now lo, we are in thy handes : loke what thou thinkest good and righte to do vnto vs, that do.

And he dyd euen so vnto them, and delyuered them from the children of Israels hæde, that they shulde not slaye them. So vpō the same daye Iosua made them hewers of wodd and water bearers for the congregacion, and for the altare of the LORDE vnto this daye, in the place that he shall chose.

The x. Chapter.

WHAN Adonisedech the kynge of Ierusalem herde, that Iosua had wonne Hai, and damned it, and done vnto Hai and ð kynge of it, like as he dyd vnto Iericho and to the kynge therof, and that they of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were come vnder them, they were sore afraied. For Gibeon was a greate cite, like as one of the kynges cities, and greater then Hai, and all the citesyns therof were men of armes. Therfore sent he vnto Hoham the kynge of Hebron, and to Pirea the kynge of Iarmuth, and to Iaphia the kynge of Lachis, and to Debir the kynge of Eglon, and caused to saie vnto them : Come vp vnto me, and helpe me, that we maie smyte Gibeon, for they haue made peace with Iosua and the children of Israel. Then came the fyue kynges of the Amorites together, and wente vp, the kynge of Ierusalem, the kynge of Hebron, ð kynge of Iarmuth, the kynge of Lachis, the kynge of Eglon, with all their armies, & layed sege vnto Gibeon, and foughte agaynst it.

Howbeit they of Gibeon sent vnto Iosua to Gilgall, and caused to saie vnto him : Withdraw not thine hande from thy seruantes, come vp soone vnto vs : delyuer and helpe vs, for all the kynges of the Amorites that dwell vpon the mountaynes, are gathered together agaynst vs. Iosua wente vp from Gilgall, and all the warryers and all the men armes with him. And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua : ð Feare them not, for I haue geuē them in to thy hande. There shall not one of them be able to stonde before the. So Iosua came sodenly vpon them, for all that night wente he vp from Gilgall. And the LORDE discomfyted thē before Israel, and smote them with a greate slaughter at Gibeon :

* 2 Reg. 21. a. † Deu. 29. b.

‡ Iosua. 9. c. § Iosua. 8. a. ¶ Esa. 23. d.

¶ they chased them the waie downe to Beth Horon, and smote them vnto Aseka and Makeda.

C And whan they fled before Israel, the waie downe to Bethoron, the LORDE caused a greate hayle from heauen to fall vpon them, vnto Aseka, so that they dyed: ¶ many mo of them dyed of the hayle, then the children of Israel slewe with the swerde.

Then spake Iosua vnto the LORDE (the same daye that the LORDE gaue ouer the Amorites before the children of Israel) and sayde in the presence of Israel: * Sonne, holde styll at Gibeon, and thou Moone in the valley of Aialon.

Then the Sonne helde styll, and ¶ Moone stode, vntyll the people had auenged the selues on their enemies. Is not this wrytten in the boke of the righteous? Thus the Sonne stode styll in the myddes of heauen, and dyffered to go downe for the space of a whole daye after. And there was no daye like vnto this (nether before ner after) whan the LORDE herkened vnto the voyce of one man: for the LORDE fought for Israel. And Iosua wente agayne to Gilgall in to the têtes, and all Israel with him. As for the fyue kynges, they were fled, and had hyd the selues in the caue at Makeda.

D Then was it tolde Iosua: We haue foude the fyue kynges hyd in the caue at Makeda. Iosua sayde: Rolle greate stones then before the hole of the caue, and set men there to kepe them.

As for you, stonde not ye styll, but folowe after youre enemies, and smyte them behynde, and let them not come in their cities, for the LORDE youre God hath deluyered the in to youre hande. And whan Iosua and ¶ children of Israel had ended the sore greate slaughter vpon them, so ¶ they were brought to naught, the remnaunt of them came in to the stronge cities.

So all the people came agayne to the hoost vnto Iosua to Makeda in peace, and no man durst moue his tunge agaynst the children of Israel. Iosua sayde: Open the mouth of the caue, and brynge the fyue kynges forth vnto me. They dyd so, and broughte the kynges vnto him out of the caue: the kinge of Ierusalem, the kinge of Hebrö, the kinge of Iarmuth, the kinge of Lachis, the kinge of Eglon.

* Eccli. 46. a. † Deut. 21. d.

Whan these fyue kynges were broughte forth vnto him, Iosua called euery man of Israel, and sayde vnto the rulers of the men of warre that wente with him: Come forth and treade vpon the neckes of these kynges with youre fete. And they came forth, and trode vpon their neckes with their fete. And Iosua saide vnto them: Be not afraied, and feare not: be stronge and bolde, for thus shal the LORDE do vnto all youre enemies, agaynst whom ye fighte.

And Iosua smote them afterwarde, and put them to death, and hanged them vpon fyue trees. And they hanged styll vpon the trees vntyll the euenynge. † But whan the Sonne was gone downe, he commaunded to take them of from the trees: and they cast them in the caue, wherin they had hyd them selues, ¶ before the hole of the caue they layed greate stones, which are there yet vnto this daye. The same daye wanne Iosua Makeda also, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and the kynges therof, and ‡ damned it, and all the soules that were therein, and let none remayne escaped: and dyd vnto the kynges of Makeda ¶ as he dyd vnto the kynges of Iericho.

Then Iosua and all Israel with him departed from Makeda vnto Lybna, ¶ foughte agaynst it. (And the LORDE gaue it with ¶ kynges therof in to the hande of Israel) and smote it and all the soules that were therein, with the edge of the swerde, and let not one remayne in it: and dyd vnto the kinge therof as he had done vnto the kynges of Iericho.

F Afterwarde wente Iosua and all Israel with him from Lybna vnto Lachis, and layed sege vnto it, and fought agaynst it. And the LORDE deluyered Lachis also in to the hande of Israel, so that they wanne it vpon the seconde daye, and smote it with ¶ edge of the swerde, and all the soules that were therein, acordinge to all as he had done vnto Lybna. At the same tyme Horam ¶ kynges of Gazer wente vp, to helpe Lachis. But Iosua smote him with all his people, tyll there remainyd not one.

And Iosua wente with all Israel from Lachis, vnto Eglon, and layed sege vnto it, and fought agaynst it, and wanne it the same daye, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and damned all the soules that were therein the same daye, acordynge vnto all as he had done vnto Lachis.

After that wente Iosua with all Israel from Eglon vnto Hebron, and foughte agaynst it, and wanne it, and smote it with þ̃ edge of the swerde, and the kyngye of it, and all the cities therof, and all the soules that were therein, and let not one remaine, acordynge vnto all as he had done vnto Eglon: and damned it, and all the soules that were therein.

Then turned Iosua agayne with all Israel towarde Debir, and fought agaynst it, and wanne it, with the kinge of it, and all þ̃ cities therof, and smote them with the edge of the swerde, and damned all þ̃ soules that were therein, and let not one remaine ouer. Euen as he had done vnto Hebrō and Lybna with their kynges, so dyd he also vnto Debir, and the kyngye therof.

Thus Iosua smote all the londe vpon the mountaynes, and towarde the south, and in the lowe countrees, and by the ryuers, with all their kynges, and let not one remaine ouer and damned all that had breth, *as the LORDE God of Israel had commaunded. And Iosua smote them from Cades Bernea vnto Gaza, and all the londe of Gosen vnto Gibeon, and toke all these kynges with their lōde at one tyme: for the LORDE God of Israel foughte for Israel. And Iosua wente agayne with all Israel to the tentes vnto Gilgal.

The xi. Chapter

WHAN Iabin the kyngye of Asor herde this, he sent vnto Iabob the kyngye of Madon and to the kyngye of Samron, and to the kyngye of Achsaph, and to the kynges that dwelt towarde the north vpon the mountaynes, and in the playne on the southsyde of Cineroth, and in the lowe countrees, and in the lordshippes of Dor by the see syde: and to the Cananites towarde þ̃ east and west, to þ̃ Amorites, Hethites, Pheresites, and Iebusites, vpon the mountaynes and to the Heuites, vnder mount Hermon in the londe of Mispa. These wēte out with all their armies, a greate people, as many as þ̃ sonde of the see, and exceedinge many horses and charettes. All these kinges gathered thē selues, and came, and pitched together by þ̃ water of Meram, to fighte with Israel.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Feare them not, for tomorow aboute this tyme wil I delyuer them all slayne, before the children of Israel: thou shalt lame their horses, and burne their charettes with fire. †And Iosua came sodenly vpon them, and all the men of warre with him by the water of Merom, and fell vpon them. And the LORDE delyuered them in to þ̃ handes of Israel, and they smote them, and chased them vnto greate Sidō and to the warme water, and to the playne of Mispa towarde þ̃ east: and smote them, vntyll there remainyd not one.

Then dealte Iosua with them as þ̃ LORDE had saide vnto him, and lamed their horses, and brent their charettes. And he turned backe at the same tyme, and wanne Hasor, and smote þ̃ kyngye of it with the swerde (for Hasor was afore tyme þ̃ head cite of all these kyngdomes) and smote all the soules that were therein with the edge of the swerde, and damned it, and let nothinge remaine that had breth, and damned Hasor with fyre. All the cities of these kyngdomes wāne Iosua also, and smote thē with the edge of the swerde, and damned them, ‡acordinge as Moses the seruauit of the LORDE commaunded.

Howbeit the cities that stode vpon the hilles, dyd not the children of Israel burne with fyre: but Hasor onely dyd Iosua burne. §And all the spoyles of these cities and the catell, dyd the children of Israel deale amonge them, but smote all the men with the edge of the swerde, tyll they had destroyed them, and let nothinge remaine that had breth. As the LORDE commaunded his seruauit Moses, and as Moses commaunded Iosua, euen so dyd Iosua, so that there was nothinge vndone of all that the LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

So Iosua toke all this lōde vpon þ̃ mōutaynes, and all þ̃ lyeth towarde the south, and all the londe of Gosen, and the lowe countre, and the playne felde, and the mountayne of Israel with the valley therof, from the mountayne that parteth the londe vp towarde Seir, vnto Baalgad, in the playne of moūt Libanus beneth mount Hermon. All their kynges toke he, and smote them, and put thē to death. ¶Howbeit he warred a longe season with these kynges.

Yet was there not one cite, that yelded it selfe peaceably vnto the children of Israel ¶(excepte the Heuites, which dwelt at Gibeon) but they wanne them all with battayll. And this was done so of the LORDE that their hert was so hardened, to come against the children of Israel with battayll, y they mighte be dāned, & no fauoure to be shewed vnto them, but to be destroyed, *as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

At the same tyme came Iosua, and rote out the Enakims from y mountayne, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, from euery mountayne of Iuda, and from euery mountayne of Israel, and damned the with their cities, and let none of the Enakims remayne in the londe of the children of Israel, saue at Gasa, †at Gath, at Asdod, there remayned of them.

Thus Iosua conquered all the londe acordyng vnto all as the LORDE sayde vnto Moses, & gaue it vnto Israel to enheritaunce, ‡ vnto euery trybe his porcion, and y londe rested from warre.

The xij. Chapter.

THESE are y kynges of the londe, whō the childre of Israel smote, & conquered their lōde, beyonde Iordane, eastwarde, frō the water of Arnon, vnto mount Hermon, and vnto all y playne felde towarde the east: § Sihon the kyng of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heszbon, and had dominion from Aroer that lieth by the water syde of Arnon, and vnto the myddes of y water: and ouer halfe Gilead, vnto the water of Iabok, which is the border of the childre of Ammon: and ouer the playne felde, vnto the see of Cynneroth eastwarde, and vnto the see of the playne felde, namely the Salt see towarde the east, the waye vnto Beth Iesimoth: and from the south beneth by the ryuers of mount Pisga.

And the border of Og the kyng of Basan, which remayned yet of Raphaim, † and dwelt at Astaroth and Edrei, and had the dominion ouer mouēt Hermon, ouer Salcha, and ouer all Basan vnto the border of Gessuri & Maachati, & of halfe Gilead, which was the border of Sihon the kyng at Hesbon. Moses the seruauit of the LORDE and the childre of Israel smote them. ¶ And Moses the seruauit of y LORDE gaue it vnto the Rubenites, Gaddites and to the halfe trybe of Manasse in possession.

These are the kynges of the lōde, whom

Iosua & the children of Israel smote on this syde Iordane westwarde, frō Baalgad vpō the playne of mount Libanus, vnto y mouēt that parteth the londe vp towarde Seir, & that Iosua gaue vnto the trybes of Israel in possession, vnto euery one his parte, what so euer was in y mouētaynes, valleyes, playne felde, by the ryuers, in y wyldernesess & towarde the south, the Hethites, Amorites, Cananites, Pheresites, Heuites, and Iebusites.

The kyng of Iericho, † the kyng of Hai, which lyeth besyde Bethel, ‡ the kyng of Ierusalem, the kyng of Hebron, the kyng of Iarmoth, the kyng of Lachis, the kyng of Eglon, the kyng of Geser, the kyng of Debir, the kyng of Geder, the kyng of Horma, the kyng of Arad, § kyng of Libna, the kyng of Adulla, the kyng of Makeda, the kyng of Bethel, the kyng of Tapnah, the kyng of Hopher, the kyng of Aphek, the kyng of Lasaron, the kyng of Madan, the kyng of Hasor, the kyng of Simron Meron, the kyng of Achsaph, the kyng of Tahenah, the kyng of Megido, the kyng of Cades, the kyng of Iakneam by Carmel, the kyng in the lordshippes of Dor, the kyng of the Heithen at Gilgall, the kyng of Thirza. These are one and thirtie kynges.

The xij. Chapter.

NOW when Iosua was olde and wel stricken in age, the LORDE sayde vnto him: Thou art olde & well aged, and there remayneth yet moch of the londe to conquare, namely all Galile of the Philistynes, and all Gessuri, from Sihor which floweth before Egipte, vnto the border of Ekron, northwarde, which is rekened vnto the Cananites: fyue lordes of the Philistynes, namely, the Gasites, the Aszdodites, the Ascalonites, the Gethites, the Ekronites & the Hauites. But from the north it is all y londe of the Cananites, and Maara of the Sidonians vnto Aphek, euen vnto the border of the Amorites. Morouer the londe of the Giblites eastwarde, from Baalgad vnder mount Hermon, tyll a mā come vnto Hamath. B Deuyde thou this lode now to enheritaunce amonge the nyne trybes and y halfe trybe of Manasse. * For the Rubenites & Gaddites with y halfe trybe of Manasse, haue receaued their enheritaunce, which Moses gaue the beyonde Iordane eastwarde, † accordinge as Moses the seruaut of the LORDE gaue them the same, from Aroer which lieth vp by the water syde of Arnon, and the cite in the myddes of the water, ‡ all the coastes of Medba vnto Dibon, and all the cities of Sihon the kyng of the Amorites, which, dwelt at Heszboun, † vnto the border of the children of Ammon: and Gilead and y border of Gessuri and Maachati, and all moit Hermon, and all Basan vnto Salcha: all y kyngdome of Og at Basan, which dwelt at Astaroth and Edrei, that remained yet ouer of Raphaim. But Moses smote them and droue them out.

The children of Israel droue not out the Gessurites & Maachathites, but both Gessur and Maachat dwelt amonge the childre of Israel vnto this daye. § But vnto y trybe of the Leuites he gaue no enheritaunce: for the offeringe of the LORDE God of Israel is their enheritaunce, accordinge as he hath promysed them.

And Balaam the sonne of Beor the prophecier, dyd the children of Israel kyll with the swerde amonge the other that were slayne: and the border of y childre of Ruben was Iordane. This is the enheritaunce of the children of Ruben amonge their kynreds, cities and vyllages.

D Vnto the trybe of the children of Gad amonge their kynreds gaue Moses, so that their border was, Iahesar and all the cities in Gilead, and the halfe londe of the children of Ammon, vnto Aroer, which lyeth before Rabbath: and from Heszboun vnto Ramath Miske & Betomim: and fro Mahanaim vnto the border of Debir. But in the valley, Beth Haram, Beth Nimra, Suchoth and Zaphon (which remayned yet of the realme of Sihon kyng of Heszboun) and was by Iordane, vnto the edge of the see of Cyneroth, on this syde Iordane eastwarde. This is the inheritaunce of the children of Gad in their kynreds, cities & vyllages.

¶ Vnto the halfe trybe of the children of Manasse after their kynreds, gaue Moses, so that their border was fro Mahanaim, all Basan, all the kyngdome of Og kyng of Basan, and all the townes of Iair which lye in Basan, namely thre score cities. And halfe Gilead, Astaroth, Edrei, the cities of the kyngdome of Og at Basan, vnto the children of Machir the sonne of Manasse. This is the halfe porcion of the children of Machir after their kynreds.

This is it that Moses dealete out vpon the felde of Moab beyonde Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho eastwarde. ¶ But vnto y trybe of Leui gaue Moses no enheritaunce: for the LORDE God of Israel is their enheritaunce, as he hath promysed them.

The xv. Chapter.

A THE lot of the trybe of the children of Iuda amonge their kynreds, was † coaste of Edom by the wyldernesse of Zin, which borderth southwarde on the edge of the south cōtrees. Their south borders were from the vttemost syde of the salt see, that is, from the coast that goeth southwarde, and commeth out from thēce towarde † eastsyde of Acrabbim, and goeth forth thorow Zinna, and yet goeth vp from the south towarde Cades Bernea, and goeth thorow Hesron, and goeth vp to Adara, † fetcheth a compase aboute Carcaa, † goeth thorow Asmona, and commeth forth to the ryuer of Egipte, so that the see is the ende of † border. Let this be youre border southwarde.

But the east border is from the salt see to the vttemost parte of Iordane.

The border northwarde, is from the see coast which is on † edge of Iordane, and goeth vp vnto Beth Hagla, and stretcheth out from the north vnto Betharaba, and commeth vp vnto the stone of Bohem the sonne of Ruben, and goeth vp vnto Debir from † valley of Achor, and from the north coaste that is towarde Gilgall, which lyeth ouer agaynst Adumim vpwarde, which is on the north syde of the water. Then goeth it vnto † water of Ensemes, and commeth out vnto the  well of Rogell. Then commeth it from the toppe of the same mount vnto the water well of Nephtoah, and commeth out vnto the cities of mount Ephron, and boweth towarde Baala, that is Kiriath Iarim, and fetcheth a cōpasse aboute from Baala westwarde vnto mount Seir, and goeth by the north syde of the mount Iarim, that is Chessalon: and cōmeth downe to Bethsemes, and goeth thorow Thimna, and breaketh out on the north syde of Acron, and stretcheth forth towarde Sicron, and goeth ouer mount Baala, and commeth out vnto Iabueel: so that their vttemost border is the see.

Then Athniel the sonne of Kenas the brother of Caleb wanne it: and he gaue him his daughter Achsa to wife.

And it fortuneth when they wente in, that she was counceled of hir houszbande, to axe a peece of londe of hir father. And she fell downe from the asse. Then sayde Caleb vnto her: What ayleth the? She sayde: Geue me a blessinge, for thou hast geuē me a south (and drye) londe: geue me welles of water also. Then gaue he her welles aboue and beneth.

‡ This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of Iuda amonge their kynreds. And the cities of the trybe of the children of Iuda, from one to another by the coastes of the Edomites towarde the south, were these: Cabzeel, Eder, Iagur, Kina, Dimona, Adada, Kedes, Hazor, Iethnam, Siph, Telem, Bealot, Hazor Hadatha, Kiriath Hezron that is Hasor: Amā, Sema, Molada, Hazor Gadda, Hesmon, Beth palet, Hazer Sual, Beer Seba, Bisziothia, Baala, Iim, Azem, Eltholad, Chesil, Harna, Ziklag, Madmanna, San Sana, Lebaoth, Silhim, Ain, Rimō. § These are nyne and twentye cities ¶ their villages.

But in the lowe countrees was Esthaol, Zaren, Asna, Saroah, Engannim, Thapua, Enam, Iarmoth, Adullam, Socho, Aseka, Saaraim, Adithaim, Gadera, Giderothim. These are fourtene cities ¶ their villages.

¶ Zenā Hadasa, Migdal Gad, Dilean, Mispā, Iakthiel, Lachis, Bazekath, Eglō, Chabon, Lachmā, Chithlis, Gedoroth, Beth Dagon, Naama, Makeda. These are sixtene cities and their villages.

Libna, Ether, Asen, Iepthah, Asua, Nezib, Keila, Achsib, Maresa. These are nyne cities and their villages. Ekron with hir daughters and villages. From Ekron vnto the see, all that reacheth vnto Asdod and the villages therof. Asdod with the daughters and villages therof. Gasa with hir daughters and villages vnto the water of Egipte. And the greates see is his border.

But vpon the mount was Samir, Iatir, Socho, Danna, Kiriath Sanna, that is Debir: Anab, Esthemo, Annim, Gosen, Holon, Gilo. These are eleuen cities and their villages. Maon, Carmel, Siph, Iuta, Iesrael, Iakdea, Sanoah, Kain, Gibeā, Thimna. These are ten cities and their villages. Halhul, Bethzur, Gedor, Maarath, Beth Anoth, Elthekon. These are sixe cities and their villages. Kiriath Baal (that is Kiriath Iearim) Harabba, two cities ¶ their villages. And in the wyldernes was Betharaba, Middin, Sechacha, Nibsan, and the Salt cite, and Engaddi. These are sixe cities and their villages. ¶ But the Iebusites dwelt at Ierusalem, and the children of Iuda coude not dryue them awaye. So the Iebusites remayne with the children of Iuda at Ierusalem vnto this daye.

amonge the enheritaunce of the children of Manasse. And they droue not out \S Cananites, which dwelt at Gaser. So \S Cananites remayned amōge Ephraim vnto this daye, and became tributaries.

The xvij. Chapter.

AND the lot fell vpon the trybe of Manasse (for * he is Iosephs first sonne) and it fell vpon Machir the first sonne of Manasse \S father of Gilead: for he was a mā of armes, therefore had he Gilead and Basan. It fell also vnto the other children of Manasse, namely vnto \S childrē of Abieser, the children of Helek, the children of Asriel, the children of Sechem, the children of Hephher, and the children of Semida: These are the childrē of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph, males, amonge their kynreds.

But Zelaphead the sonne of Hephher the sonne of Gilead, the sonne of Machir, the sonne of Manasse, had no sonnes, but daughters, and their names are these: Mahala, Noa, Hagla, Milca, Tirza, and they came before Eleasar the prest, and before Iosua the sonne of Nun, and before the rulers, and sayde: The LORDE commaunded Moses, to geue vs enheritaunce amonge oure brethren. And so they had enheritaunce geuen them amonge their fathers brethren, accordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE.

There fell vpon Manasse ten meetlynes without the londe of Gilead and Basan, which lyeth beyōde Iordane. For \S daughters of Manasse receaued enheritaunce amonge his sonnes: but the other children of Manasse had the londe of Gilead. And the border of Manasse was fro Asser forth vnto Michmethath, that lyeth before Sichem, and reacheth vnto the righte syde of them of En Tapuah: for the londe of Tapuah fell vnto Manasse, and the border of Manasse is vnto the childrē of Ephraim. Then commeth it downe to Nahelkana towards the south syde of the ryuer cities, which are Ephraims amonge the cities of Manasse. But from the north is the border of Manasse by the ryuer, and goeth forth by the see syde, south warde vnto Ephraim, and to Manasse northwarde, and the see is his coaste. And it shal border on Aser from the north, and on Isachar from the easte.

* Gen. 48. c.

So (amōge Isachar and Asser) Manasses had Beth Sean and the townes therof, and Ieblaam and the townes therof, and them of Dor and their townes, and them of En Dor and their townes, \S them of Taanach and their townes, and them of Mageddo and their townes, and the thirde parte of (the cite) Nophet. And the children of Manasse coude not dryue awaye the inhabitants of these cities, but the Cananites beganne to dwell in the same londe. Howbeit whan the children of Israel were able, they made the Cananites tributaries, and droue them not out.

Then spake the children of Ioseph vnto Iosua, and sayde: Wherefore hast thou geue me but one porcion and one meetlyne of enheritaunce, and I am yet a greate people, as the LORDE hath blessed me so largely? Then sayde Iosua vnto them: For so much as thou art a greate people, go vp therfore in to \S wodd, and make thy selfe rowme there in the londe of the Pheresties and Raphaim, seynge mouit Ephraim is to narowe for the.

Then sayde the children of Ioseph: We shal not be able to attayne vnto the mountaynes, for there are yron charettes amonge all the Cananites, that dwell in the londe of Emek, by whom lyeth Beth Sean and the vyllages therof, and Iesrael in Emek. Iosua sayde vnto the house of Ioseph, euen to Ephraim and Manasses: Thou art a greate people, \S for so much as thou art so greate, thou must not haue one lot, but the mountayne where \S wod is, shal be thine: rote \S out for \S , so shall it be the outgoinge of thy porcion, whan thou dryuest out the Cananites, which haue yron charettes, \S are mightie.

AND all the multitude of the children of Israel gathered them selues together vnto Silo, and they set vp \S Tabernacle of witness, and the londe was subdued vnto them. But there were yet seuen trybes of the childrē of Israel, vnto whom they had not deuyded their enheritaunce. Iudas shal remayne vpon his borders of the south syde, and the house of Ioseph shal remayne vpon his borders of the north parte: but descrybe ye the londe in seuen partes, and brynge them vnto me, then shal I cast y lot for you before the LORDE oure God. * For the Leuites haue no porcion amonge you, but the presthode of the LORDE is their enheritaunce. † As for Gad & Ruben and y halfe trybe of Manasse, they haue receaued their enheritaunce beyonde Iordane eastwarde, which Moses the seruauant of the LORDE gaue them.

Then the men gat vp, to go their waye. And when they were aboute to go for to descrybe the londe, Iosua commaunded them, and sayde: Go youre waye, and walke thorow the londe, and descrybe it, and come agayne vnto me, that I maye cast y lot for you before the LORDE at Silo. So the men departed, and wente thorow the londe, and descrybed it in seuen partes vpon a letter accordinge to the cities, and came to Iosua in to the hoost at Silo. Then Iosua cast the lot ouer them at Silo before the LORDE, and there distributed the londe amonge the children of Israel, vnto euery one his parte.

And the lot of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin fell accordinge to their kynreds, and the border of their lot wente out betwene the children of Iuda & the children of Ioseph. And their border was on y north quarter of Iordane, and goeth vp from the north syde of Iericho, and commeth vp to the mountayne westwarde, and goeth out by the wyldernesse of Bethauen, and goeth from thence towarde Lus, euen by the south syde of Lus (that is Bethel) and commeth downe vnto Ataroth Adar by the mountayne which lyeth on y south syde of the lower Bethoron. Then boweth it downe, and fetcheth a compasse vnto the south west quarter from the mount that lyeth ouer agaynst Bethoron towarde the south, and goeth out vnto Kiriath Baal, y Kiriath Iearim, a cite of the children of Iuda. This is the west border.

But the south border is from Kiriath-Iearim forth, and goeth out towarde the west, and commeth forth vnto y water well of Nepthoah:

* Iosu. 13. d. and 14. a.

and goeth downe by the edge of the mount, that lyeth before the valley of the sonne of Hinnam: and goeth downe thorow the valley of Hinnam on y south syde of the Iebusites, and commeth downe to the well of Rogell, and stretcheth from the northwarde, and commeth out vnto En Semes, and commeth forth to the heapes that lye vp towarde Adummim, and cometh downe vnto the stone of Bohen the sonne of Ruben, and goeth a longe besyde y playne felde which lyeth north warde, and commeth downe vnto y playne felde, and goeth besyde Beth Hagla that lyeth towarde the north, and his ende is at the north border of the Salt see, vnto y edge of Iordane south warde. This is the south border.

But Iordane shal be the ende of the east quarter. This is the enheritaunce of y children of Ben Iamin in their borders rounde aboute, amonge their kynreds.

The cities of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin amonge their kynreds are these: Iericho, Beth Hagla, Emek Kezitz, Betharaba, Zemaraim, Bethel, Auim, Haphar, Aphra, Caphar Amonai, Aphni, Gaba: these are twolue cities and their villages.

Gibeon, Rama, Beeroth, Mispá, Caphira, Moza, Rekem, Ieerpeel, Thareala, Zela, Eleph, and the Iebusites, that is Ierusalem, Gibeath, Kiriath: these are fourtene cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the children of Ben Iamin in their kynreds.

The xix. Chapter.

THEN fell the seconde lot of the trybe of the children of Simeon accordinge to their kynreds, and their enheritaunce was amonge the enheritaunce of y children of Iuda. † And to their enheritaunce they had Beer Seba, Molada, Hazar Sual, Baala, Azem, El Tholad, Bethul, Harma, Ziklag, Betha Markaboth, Hazar Sussa, Beth Lebaoth, and Saruhen: these are thirtene cities & their villages. Ain, Rimón, Ether, Asan: these are foure cities and their villages. And all y villages that lye aboute the cities vnto Balath Beer Ramath towarde the south. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Simeon in their kynreds: for the enheritaunce of the children of Simeon is vnder the porcion of the children of Iuda. For so much as the enheritaunce of the children of Iuda was to greate for them, therfore inhereted the children of Simeon amonge their enheritaunce.

* Iosu. 12. b. † 1 Par. 5. a.

The thirde lot fell vpon the childrē of Zabulon after their kynreds. And the border of their enheritaunce was vnto Sarid, ⁊ goeth vp westwarde to Mareala, ⁊ bordreth vpon Dabaseth, and reacheth vnto the ryuer that floweth ouer agaynst Iakneam: ⁊ turneth from Sarid eastwarde vnto the border of Cisloth Thabor, and cōmeth out vnto Dabraph, and reacheth vp to Iapia, and from thēce goeth it westwarde thorow Githa Hephher, and Itha Kazim, and commeth out towarde Rimon, Hamthoar Hanea, ⁊ fetcheth a compasse aboute from the north vnto Nathon, ⁊ the goynge out of it is in ⁊ valley Iephtha El, Katath, Nahalal, Simron, Iedeala, ⁊ Bethlehem: These are twoluē cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the childrē of Zabulon in their kynreds: these are their cities and villages.

The fourth lot fell vpō the childrē of Isachar after their kynreds, ⁊ their border was Iesraela, Chessulloth, Sunem, Hapharaim, Sion, Anaharath, Raabith, Kision, Abez, Kemeth, En Gānim, Enhada, Beth Pazez, ⁊ bordreth vpon Thabor, Sahazima, Beth Semes, and ⁊ outgoinge of it was at Iordane. These are sixtene cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Isachar in their kynreds, cities and villages.

The fifth lot fell vpon the trybe of the children of Asser, after their kynreds. And their border was Helkath, Hali, Beten, Achsaph, Alamelech, Ameid, Miseal, and borderth on Carmel vnto the see, and on Sihor, and Libnath, and turneth towarde the east vnto Beth Dagon, and bordreth on Zabulon, and on the valley of Iephtael, and towarde the north syde of Beth Emek and Negiel: ⁊ commeth out vnto Cabul on the left syde of Ebron, Rehob, Hamon and Cana, vnto greate Sidon. And turneth towarde Rama, vnto the stronge cite of Zor, and turneth towarde Hossa, and goeth out vnto the see, after ⁊ meetlyne towarde Achsib, Vma, Aphek, Rehob.

These are two and twenty cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Asser in their kinreds cities and villages.

Nephtali in their kynreds. And their border was frō Heleph Elon thorow Zaanaim, Adai Nekeb, Iabne El vnto Lakum, and goeth out vnto Iordane, and turneth westwarde to Asnoth Thabor, and cōmeth out from thence vnto Hukok, and bordreth on Zabulon towarde the south, and on Asser towarde the west, and on Iuda by Iordane towarde the east: and hath stronge cities, Zidimzer, Hamath Rakath, Chinnaret, Adama, Rama, Hazor, Kedes, Edrei, En Hazor, Iereon, Migdal Elharē, Beth Anath, Beth Sames. These are nyentene cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of ⁊ trybe of the children of Nephtali in their kynreds, cities, and villages.

The seuenth lot fell vpon the trybe of the children of Dan after their kynreds. And the border of their enheritaunce was Zarea, Esthaol, Irsames, Saalabin, Aialon, Iethla, Elon, Thimnata, Ekron, Eltheke, Gibethō Baalath, Iehud, Bnerbarak, Gat Rimon, Me larkon, Rakon with the border by Iapho, and on the same goeth the border of the children of Dan out. And the children of Dā wente vp, and foughte agaynst Lesem, and wanne it, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and toke it in possession, ⁊ dwelt therin, and *called it Dan, after ⁊ name of their father. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Dan in their kynreds, cities, and villages.

And whā ⁊ lōde was all parted out with the borders therof, the children of Israel gaue Iosua the sonne of Nun, an enheritaunce amonge them, and (acordynge to the commaundement of the LORDE) they gaue him ⁊ cite that he requyred, namely, † Thimnath Serah, vpon moūt Ephraim: there buylded he the cite, and dwelt therin.

These are the enheritaunces which Eleasar the prest and Iosua ⁊ sonne of Nun, and the chefest of the fathers amonge ⁊ tribes, deuided out by lot vnto the childrē of Israel at Silo before the LORDE, euen before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnes, and so they ended the denydinge out of the londe.

The xx. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Iosua, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel: Geue amonge you fre cities, † wherof I spake vnto you by Moses, that a deedsleyer which sleyeth a soule vnewarres and vnwittingly, maye flye thither, y they maye be fre amoge you from the auenger of bloude. And he that flyeth to one of those cities, shal stonde without before the porte of the cite, and shewe his cause before the Elders of the cite, then shall they take him to them in to the cite, and geue him place to dwell with them.

And yf the auenger of bloude folowe vpon him, they shall not deliyuer the deed-slayer in to his handes, for so moch as he hath slayne his neighbour vnewarres, and was not his enemy afore: but he shall dwell in y cite, tyll he stonde before the congregacion in iudgment, vntyll the hye prest dye, which shall be at that tyme. Then shall the deed-slayer returne, and go vnto his awne cite, and vnto his house to the cite, from whence he was fled.

Then appoynted they Kedes in Galile vpon mount Nepthali, and Sechem vpon mount Ephraim, and Kiriatharba, that is Hebron vpon moit Iuda. And beyode Iordane on the east syde of Jericho, they gaue Beser in the wilderness vpon the playne out of the trybe of Ruben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the trybe of Gad, and Golan in Basan out of the trybe of Manasse.

These were the cities appoynted for all y children of Israel, and for the straungers which dwelt amonge them, that whosoer had slayne a soule vnewarres, might flye thither, that he shulde not be put to death by the auenger of bloude, tyll he had stonde before the congregacion.

The xxi. Chapter.

THEN the chefe fathers amonge the Leuites came forth vnto Eleasar the prest and to Iosua the sonne of Nun, and to y awncient fathers amoge the trybes of the children of Israel, and spake vnto them at Silo in the londe of Canaan, and sayde: *The LORDE commaunded by Moses, that we shulde haue cities geuen vs to dwell in, and the suburbes of the same for oure catell. Then the children of Israel gaue of their enheritaunce these cities and the suburbes therof, vnto the Leuites, acordynge to the commaundement of the LORDE.

And the lott fell vpon the kynred of the Kahathites, and the children of Aaron the prest amonge the Leuites, had by the lott thyrtyne cities of the trybe of Iuda, of the trybe of Simeon, and of the trybe of Ben Iamin. The other childre of Kahath of the same kynred, had by the lott ten cities, of the trybe of Ephraim, of the trybe of Dan, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse.

But the children of Gerson of the same kynred had by the lott thyrtyne cities, of the trybe of Isachar, of the trybe of Asser, of y trybe of Nepthali, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse at Basan.

The children of Merari of their kynred had twolue cities, of the trybe of Ruben, of the trybe of Gad, and of the trybe of Zabulon. So the children of Israel gaue these cities and their suburbes vnto the Leuites by lott, as the LORDE commaunded by Moses.

Of the trybe of the children of Iuda, and of the trybe of the children of Simeon, they gaue these cities (which they named by name) vnto the children of Aaron of the kynred of the Kahathites amonge the children of Leui: for the first lott was theirs.

So they gaue them Kiriatharba, which was the fathers of Enak, that is Hebron vpon the mount Iuda, and the suburbes therof rounde aboute. † But the felde of the cite and the villages therof, gaue they vnto Caleb the sonne of Iephune for his possession.

Thus gaue they vnto the children of Aaron the prest, the fre cite of the deed sleyers, Hebron and the suburbes therof, Libna and the suburbes therof, Iathir and the suburbes therof, Esthuma and the suburbes therof, Holon and the suburbes therof, Debir and the suburbes therof, Ain and the suburbes therof, Iuta and the suburbes therof, Beth Semes and the suburbes therof, euen nyne cities of these two trybes.

But of the trybe of Ben Iamin they gaue foure cities, Gibeon and y suburbes therof, Gaba, and the suburbes therof, Anathot and the suburbes therof, Almon and the suburbes therof: so that all the cities of the children of Aaron the prest were thirtene with their suburbes.

The kynreds of the other children of Kahath the Leuites, had by their lott foure cities, of the trybe of Ephraim, and they gaue the fre cite of the deedsleiers, Sechē and the suburbes therof vpon mount Ephraim Gaser and the suburbes therof, Kibzaim and the suburbes therof, Bethron and the suburbes therof.

* Num. 35. a.

D Of the trybe of Dan foure cities, Eltheke and y suburbes therof, Gibthon and the suburbes therof, Aialon and the suburbes therof, Gath Rimon and the suburbes therof. Of the halfe trybe of Manasses two cities, Thaanach and the suburbes therof, Gath Rimon and the suburbes therof: so that all the cities of the other children of y kynred of Kahath, were ten with their suburbes.

But vnto the children of Gerson amonge the kynreds of the Leuites were geuen, Of the halfe trybe of Manasse two cities, the fre cite for the deedslayer, Gola in Basan and the suburbes therof, Beasthra, and the suburbes therof. Of the trybe of Isachar foure cities, Kision and the suburbes therof, Dabrach and the suburbes therof, Iarmuth and the suburbes therof, Engannim and the suburbes therof. Of the trybe of Asser foure cities, Miscal, Abdon, Helkath and Rehob with the suburbes therof. Of the trybe of Nephtali thre cities, the fre cite Kedes (for the deedslayer) in Galile, Hamoth, Dor, and Karthan with the suburbes therof: so that all the cities of the kynred of the Gersonites were thirtene with their suburbes.

E Vnto the kynreds of Merari the other Leuites were geuen, Of the trybe of Zabulon foure cities, Iakneam, Kartha, Dimna and Nahalal with y suburbes therof. Of the trybe of Ruben foure cities, Bezer, Iahza, Kedemoth and Mephaat with their suburbes. Of the trybe of Gad foure cities, the fre cite for the deedslayer, Ramoth in Gilead, Mahanaim, Heszbou and Iaeser with their suburbes: so that all the cities of the children of Merari amonge their kynreds of y other Leuites, were twolue. Thus all the cities of the Leuites amonge y possession of the children of Israel, were eight and fortye with their suburbes. And these cities were so dealete out, that euery one had their suburbes rounde aboute, the one as the other.

Thus the LORDE gaue the children of Israel all the londe, which he had sworne vnto their fathers to geue: ⁊ they toke possession of it, and dwelt therein. And the LORDE gaue the rest before all those y were aboute them *like as he sware vnto their fathers, ⁊ none of their enemies stode agaynst the, but all their enemies delyuered he in to their hande. And their myssed nothinge of all the good that the LORDE had promysed vnto the house of Israel, it came euery whyt.

The xiiij. Chapter.

THEN Iosua called y Rubenites and Gaddites, and y halfe trybe of Manasse, and sayde vnto them: Ye haue kepte all, ⁊ that Moses the seruauent of the LORDE commaunded you, and haue herkened vnto my voyce in all y I haue commaunded you. Ye haue not forsaken youre brethre a longe season, vnto this daye, and haue wayted vpon the commaundement of the LORDE youre God. For so moch now as the LORDE youre God hath broughte youre brethre to rest, as he promysed them, turne you now, and go youre waye to youre tentes in to the londe of youre possession, which Moses the seruauent of the LORDE gaue you beyode Iordane.

But take diligent hede now, that ye do accordinge to the commaundement and lawe which Moses the seruauent of the LORDE hath commaunded: ⁊ That ye loue the LORDE youre God, and walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, and cleue vnto him, and serue him with all youre hert and with all youre soule. So Iosua blessed them, and let them go. And they wente vnto their tentes.

Vnto the halfe trybe of Manasse had Moses geuen possession at Basan: vnto the other halfe gaue Iosua amonge their brethren on this syde Iordane westwarde. And whan he let them go to their tentes and blessed them, he sayde vnto them: Ye come home agayne with greate good vnto youre tētes, with excedyng moch catell, syluer, golde, brasse, yron and rayment, ⁊ distribute therfore the spoyle of youre enemyes amonge youre brethren.

So the Rubenites, Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasse returned, and wente from the children of Israel out of Silo (which lyeth in the londe of Canaan) to go in to the countre of Gilead to the londe of their possession, that they mighte possesse it, acordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE by Moses.

And whan they came vnto the heapes by Iordane, which lye in the londe of Canaan, the same Rubenites, Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasses buylded there besyde Iordane, a fayre greate altare. But whan the children of Israel herde saye: Beholde, the children of Ruben, the children of Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasse haue buylded an altare ouer agaynst the londe of Canaan vpon the heapes by Iordane on this syde the children of Israel, they gathered them selues together with the whole congregacion at Silo, to go vp agaynst the with an armye. And (in the meane season) they sent to them in to the londe of Gilead, Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest, and with him ten chefe prynces amonge the houses of their fathers, out of euery tribe in Israel one. And they came to the children of Ruben, to the children of Gad, and to the halfe trybe of Manasse in the londe of Gilead, and sayde:

¶ Thus sayeth the whole congregacion of the LORDE vnto you: *What trespass is this, y^e haue trespased agaynst the God of Israel, that ye shulde turne backe from y^e LORDE this daye, to builde you an altare, for to fall awaye from the LORDE?

† Haue we not ynowgh of the wickednesse of Peor? from the which we are not yet clensted this daye, and there came a plage amonge the congregacion of the LORDE: and ye turne you backe this daye from the LORDE, and this daye are ye fallen awaye from the LORDE, that he maye be wroth to daye or tomorow at the whole congregacion of the LORDE.

Yf the londe of youre possession be vncleane, then come ouer in to the londe that the LORDE possesseth, where the dwellynge of the LORDE is, and take possessions amonge vs, and fall not awaye from the LORDE and from vs, to builde you an altare without the altare of the LORDE oure God. ‡ Did not Achan the sonne of Serah trespass in the thinge that was damned, and the wrath came ouer y^e whole congregacion of Israel and he wente not downe alone for his mysdede?

¶ Then answered the children of Ruben, and the children of Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasse, and sayde vnto the heades and prynces of Israel: The mightie God y^e LORDE, the mightie God the LORDE knoweth, and Israel knoweth also, yf this be a trangressyng or trespassyng agaynst the LORDE, then let it not helpe vs this daye: Yf we haue buylded the altare, because we wolde turne awaye backe from the LORDE, to offre burnt-offerings or meatofferings thereon, or to make eny deedofferings vpon it, then let the LORDE requyre it: And yf we haue not done it rather for very feare of this thinge, and sayde: To daye or tomorow mighte youre children saye vnto oure children:

What haue ye to do with the LORDE the God of Israel? The LORDE hath set Iordane for a border betwene vs and you ye children of Ruben and Gad, ye haue no porcion in the LORDE: By this shulde youre children make oure children to turne awaye from the feare of the LORDE.

Therefore sayde we: Let vs make oure children an altare, not for sacrifice, ner for burntofferings, †but that it maye be a tokē betwene vs and you, and oure posterities, that we maye serue the LORDE in his sighte with oure burntofferings, deedofferings, and other offerings: and y^e youre children to daye or tomorow neade not to saye vnto oure children: Ye haue no parte in the LORDE.

And we sayde: But yf they shulde speake so vnto vs, or to oure posterities to daye or tomorow, then maye we saye: Beholde the similitude of y^e altare of the LORDE, which oure fathers made, not for sacrifice, ner for burnt-offerynge, but for a wytnesse betwene vs and you.

God forbydde, that we shulde fall awaye from the LORDE, to turne backe from him this daye, and to buylde an altare for sacrifice, for burntofferings and for eny presente, without y^e altare of the LORDE oure God, that stondeth before his Habitation.

But whan Phineas the prest, and the chefe of the congregacion, the prynces of Israel which were with him, herde these wordes, that the children of Ruben, Gad, and Manasse had spoken, they pleased them well. And Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest sayde vnto the children of Rubē, Gad and Manasse: This daye we knowe, that y^e LORDE is amonge vs, in that ye haue not trespased agaynst the LORDE in this dede. Now haue ye delyuered the children of Israel out of the hande of the LORDE.

Then Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest, and the rulers returned out of the londe of Gilead, from the children of Ruben and Gad vnto y^e londe of Canaā to the children of Israel, and brought them worde agayne of the matter.

Then were the children of Israel well cōtente with the thinge. And they praysed the God of Israel, and sayde nomore that they wolde go vp agaynst them with an armye, to destroye the londe that the childrē of Ruben and Gad dwelt in. And y^e childrē of Ruben and Gad called the name of the altare: This altare be witnessse betwene vs, that the LORDE is God.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND after a longe season, when the LORDE had broughte Israel to rest from all their enemies rounde aboute: and Iosua was now olde and well stricken in age, he called all Israel and their Elders, heades, iudges, and officers, and sayde vnto them: I am olde and well aged, and ye haue sene all that the LORDE youre God hath done vnto all these nacions in youre sighte. For the LORDE youre God himself hath foughte for you. Beholde, I haue parted amonge you y^e rēnaunt of the nacions by lot, vnto euery trybe his enheritaunce from Iordane forth, and all the nacions whom I haue rote out vnto the greate see westwarde.

33 And the LORDE youre God shal thrust them out before you, and dryue them awaye from you, that ye maye haue their londe in possession, as the LORDE youre God hath promysed you. Be strōge now therfore, that ye maye obserue and do all that is wrytten in the boke of the lawe of Moses: *so that ye turne not asyde from it, nether to the righte hande ner to the left: that ye come not amonge y^e remnaunt of these naciōs, which are with you: And se that ye make no mencion ner sweare by the names of their goddes, nether serue them, ner bowe youre selues vnto them: But cleue vnto the LORDE youre God, as ye haue done vnto this daye: thē shal the LORDE dryue awaye greate and mightie nacions before you, like as there hath no man bene able to stonde before you vnto this daye. †One of you shall chace a thousande: for the LORDE youre God fighteth for you, accordinge as he promysed you. Take diligent hede therfore vnto youre soules, that ye loue the LORDE youre God.

¶ But yf ye turne backe, and cleue vnto these other nacions, and make mariages with them, so that ye come amōge them, and they amonge you, be ye sure then, that the LORDE youre God shal nomore dryue out all these nacions before you, ‡ but they shall be vnto you a snare and net, and prickes in youre sydes, and thornes in youre eyes, vntyll he haue destroyed you from the good lōde, which the LORDE youre God hath geuen you.

Beholde, ¶ this daye do I go the waye of all the worlde, and ye shal knowe euen from all youre hert and from all youre soule, that there hath not fayled one worde of all the good that the LORDE youre God promysed you. Now like as all the good is come that the LORDE youre God promised you: ¶ euen so shal the LORDE cause all euell to come vpon you, tyll he haue destroyed you from this good londe, which the LORDE youre God hath geuen you: yf ye transgresse y^e couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, which he hath commaunded you. And yf ye go youre waye and serue other goddes, and worships thē, then shall the wrath of the LORDE waxe whote ouer you, ¶ shal shortly destroye you out of the good londe, y^e he hath geuen you.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IOSUA gathered all the trybes of Israel together vnto Sichem, and called the Elders of Israel, the heades, iudges and officers. And whā they were come before God, he sayde vnto all the people: Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: Your fathers dwelt afore time beyōde y^e water, Abrahā ¶ Nahor with Tarah their father ¶ serued other goddes. †† Then toke I youre father Abraham beyonde the water, ¶ caused him to walke in the londe of Canaan, ¶ multiplied his sede, and gaue him Isaac, ‡ and vnto Isaac I gaue Iacob and Esau, and gaue Esau moūt Seir to possesse. ‡‡ As for Iacob, ¶ his childrē, they wente downe in to Egipte.

Then sent I Moses and Aaron, and plagued 33 Egipte ¶ as I haue done amonge thē. After y^e ¶ brought I you and youre fathers out of Egipte. And whan ye came to y^e see, and the Egipcians folowed vpon youre fathers with charrettes and horse men vnto the reed see, then cryed they vnto the LORDE, which put a darcknesse betwene you and the Egipcians, and broughte the see vpon them, and ouerwhelmed them. And youre eyes haue sene what I dyd to þ̄ Egipcians, ⁊ ye dwelt in þ̄ wildernes a lōge season. * And I broughte you in to þ̄ londe of the Amorites, which dwelt beionde Iordane: ⁊ whā they fought agaynst you, I delyuered them in to youre hande, that ye mighte haue their cōuntre in possession, and I destroyed them before you. † Then Balac the sonne of Ziphor the kyng of the Moabites gat him vp, and foughte agaynst Israel: and he sente and bad call Balaam the sonne of Beor, to curse you, neuertheles I wolde not heare him, but I blessed you, and delyuered you out of his hande.

¶ And whan ye wente ouer Iordane, and came vnto Iericho, the citeysyns of Iericho foughte agaynst you, the Amorites, Pheresites, Cananites, Hethites, Girgosites, Heuites, ⁊ Iebusites: howbeit I delyuered the in to youre hande. ‡ And I sent hornettes before you, which droue them out before you, namely the two kynges of þ̄ Amorites: not thorow thy swerde, ner thorow thy bowe. ¶ And I haue geuen you a londe wherupon ye bestowed no labour, and cities which ye haue not buylded, that ye might dwell therin, and that ye might eate of the vynyards and olyue trees which ye haue not planted. Feare the LORDE now therefore,⁴ and serue him perfectly and in the trueth, and let go the goddes, whom youre fathers serued beyonde the water and in Egipte, and serue ye þ̄ LORDE.

¶ But yf ye like not to serue the LORDE, thē chose you this daye whom ye wyll serue: the God whom youre fathers serued beionde þ̄ water, or þ̄ goddes of the Amorites, in whose lōde ye dwell. As for me and my house, we wyll serue the LORDE. Then answered the people, and saide: God forbidde, that we shulde forsake the LORDE, ⁊ serue other goddes. For the LORDE oure God brought vs and oure fathers out of the londe of Egipte frō the house of bondage, and did soch greate tokens before oure eyes, and preserued vs all þ̄ waye that we wente, and amonge all the nations, whom we traauayled by. And the LORDE thrust out before vs all the people of the Amorites that dwell in the londe. Therefore wyll we also serue the LORDE, for he is oure God.

serue the LORDE: for he is an holy God, mightie, and gelous, which spareth not youre transgressions and synnes. But yf ye forsake the LORDE, and serue a straunge god, then shall the LORDE turne him, and do you euell, and consume you, after that he hath done you good. The people sayde vnto Josua: Not so, but we will serue the LORDE. Then sayde Josua vnto the people: Ye are witnessnes ouer youre selues, that ye haue chosen you the LORDE, to serue him. And they sayde: Yee. Then put awaye from you (sayde he) the straunge goddes þ̄ are amonge you, and encline youre hert vnto the LORDE the God of Israel. And the people sayde vnto Josua: We wyll serue the LORDE oure God, and be obedient vnto his voyce. § So Josua made a couenaunt with the people þ̄ same daye, and laied statutes ⁊ lawes before them at Sichem.

¶ And Josua wrote this acte in the boke of the lawe of God,⁴ and toke a greate stone, ⁊ set it vp there vnder an oke, which was in þ̄ Sanctuary of þ̄ LORDE, and sayde vnto all the people: Beholde, this stone shall be witness ouer you: For it hath herde all the wordes of the LORDE, which he hath spoken vnto vs, and shall be a witness ouer you, that ye denye not youre God. So Josua let the people go euery one to his enheritaunce.

¶ And it fortunated after these actes,⁵ þ̄ Josua the sonne of Nun þ̄ seruauit of the LORDE dyed, whan he was an hundreth and ten yere olde, and was buried in the border ⁊ of his enheritaunce at Thimnath Serah, which lyeth on the mount Ephraim, on the north side of mount Gaas. And the children of Israel serued the LORDE as longe as Josua lyued, and the Elders (that lyued longe after Josua) which knewe all the workes of þ̄ LORDE, that he had done vnto Israel. ¶ The bones of Ioseph, which the children of Israel had broughte out of Egipte, buried they at Sichem, in the pece of the londe,  þ̄ Iacob boughte of the children of Hemor þ̄ father of Sichem for an hundreth pens, and was the enheritaunce of the children of Ioseph. Eleasar the sonne of Aaron died also, and they buried him at Gibeath, which was Phineas his sonnes, that was geuen him vpon mount Ephraim.

The first Chapter.

AFTER the death of Iosua the children of Israel axed the LORDE, and sayde: Who shall go vp & be oure capayne of warre against \S Cananites? The LORDE sayde: Iuda shall go vp. *Beholde, I haue deliuered the londe in to his hande. Then sayde Iuda vnto his brother Simeon: Go vp with me in to my lot, and let vs fighte against the Cananites, then wyl I go agayne with the in to thy lot: So Simeon wente with him.

Now whan Iuda wente vp the LORDE deliuered the Cananites and Pheresites in to their hædes, & they slewe tē thousande mē at Besek: & they foude Adoni Besek at Besek, & foughte agaynst him, and slewe the Cananites and Pheresites. But Adoni Besek fled, and they folowed after him: and whan they had ouertaken him, they cut of the thōbes of his handes and fete.

33 Then sayde Adoni Besek: Thre score and ten kynges with the thombes of their hædes & fete cut of, gathered vp the meate \S was lefte vnder my table. †Now as I haue done, so hath God rewarded me agayne. And he was broughte vnto Ierusalem, where he dyed.

But \S childrē of Iuda foughte agaynst Ierusalem, and wāne it, †and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and set fyre vpon the cite. Then wente the children of Israel downe, to fighte agaynst \S Cananites, \S dwelt vpon the mount, and towarde the south, and in the valleys. †And Iuda wente agaynst the Cananites, which dwelt at Hebron. (As for Hebron, it was called Kiriatharba afore tyme) and they smote Sesai, & Achiman, and Thalmi.

C And from thence he wente agaynst \S inhabitants of Debir (but Debir was called Kiriath Sepher aforetyme.) And Caleb sayde: †He \S smyteth Kiriath Sepher, & wynneth it, I wyl geue him my daughter Achsa to wife. Then Athiel the sonne of Kenas, Calebs yongest brother wāne it. And he gaue him his daughter Achsa to wife. And it fortunēd \S whan they wēte in, she was couceled of hir housbande, to axe a peece of londe of hir father. And she fell from the asse. Thē sayde Caleb vnto her: What ayleth \S ? She sayde: Geue me a blessinge, for thou hast geuen me a south & drye londe, geue me also a watery londe. Then gaue he her a londe that was watery a boue and beneth.

And the childrē of \S Kenye Moses brother in lawe, wente vp out of the \S palme cite, with the children of Iuda in to the wyldernes of Iuda, that lyeth on \S south syde of the cite Arad: and wente their waye, & dwelt amonge the people. And Iuda wente with his brother Simeon, & they smote the Cananites at Zephath, & damned them, & called the name of the cite Horma. †Iuda also wanne Gasa with the borders therof, & Ascalon with hir borders, & Accaron with the coastes therof. And the LORDE was with Iuda, so that he conquered the mountaynes: but them that dwelt in the valley coulede he not conquare, because they had yron charettes. And acordinge as Moses had sayde, they gaue Hebron vnto Caleb, which droue out the thre sonnes of Enak. †Howbeit \S children of Ben Iamin droue not out \S Iebusites which dwelt at Ierusalem, but \S Iebusites dwelt amonge the children of Ben Iamin at Ierusalem vnto this daye.

32 Likewyse the children of Ioseph wēte vp also vnto Bethel, & the LORDE was with thē. And the house of Ioseph spied out Bethel (which afore tyme was called Lus) and the watch men sawe a man goinge out of the cite, and saide vnto him: Shewe vs where we maye come in to the cite, \S we wyl shewe mercy vpon the. And whan he had shewed them where they mighte come in to the cite, they smote \S cite with the edge of the swerde: but they let the man go & all his frendes.

31 Then wēte the same man vp in to \S countre of the Hethites, & buyded a cite, and called it Lus, & so is the name of it yet vnto this daye. And Manasses †droue not out Beth Sean with the vyllages therof, ner Thaenah with the vyllages therof, ner the inhabitants of Dor with the vyllages therof: ner the inhabitants of Iebleam with the vyllages therof, ner the inhabitants of Mageddo with the vyllages therof, and \S Cananites beganne to dwell in the same londe. But whan Israel was mightie, he made the Cananites tributaries, and droue them not out.

e Asser droue not out y inhabitants of Aco, t y inhabitants of Sidon, of Ahelab, of Achsib, of Helba, of Aphik t of Rehob, but y Asserites dwelt amonge the Cananites that dwelt in the lode, for they droue the not out.

Nephtali droue not out y inhabitants of Beth Semes, ner of Beth Anath, but dwelt amonge the Cananites which dwelt in the londe: howbeit they of Beth Semes and of Beth Anath were tributaries.

And the Amorites subdued the childrē of Dan vpon the mountaine, and suffred them not to come downe in to the valley. And the Amorites beganne to dwell vpo mount Heres at Aiolon and at Saalvim. Howbeit y hande of y house of Ioseph was to sore for them, and they became tributaries. And the border of the Amorites was, as a mā goeth vp towarde Acrabim. and from the rocke, t from the toppes.

The ij. Chapter.

a BUT there came vp a messaūger of y LORDE from Gilgall vnto Bochim, and sayde: I haue caried you vp hither out of Egipte, and broughte you in to the londe that I sware vnto youre fathers, t saide: * I wyl neuer breake my couenaunt with you, that ye shulde make no couenaunt with the indwellers of this londe, but breake downe their altares: Neuertheles ye haue not herkened vnto my voyce. Wherefore haue ye done this? Then saide I morouer: I wil not dryue them out before you, that they maye be a fall vnto you, and their goddes a snare. And whan y messaūger of the LORDE had spoken these wordes vnto all the children of Israel, the people lifte vp their voyce, t wepte, and called y name of the place Bochim, and offred there vnto the LORDE.

For whan Iosua had sente awaye y people, and the childrē of Israel were gone, euery one to his enheritaunce, for to take possession of the londe, t the people serued the LORDE as longe as Iosua lyued and y Elders, which lyued longe after Iosua, and y sawe all the greate workes of the LORDE, which he dyd for Israel.

Now whan Iosua the sonne of Nun, the seruauent of the LORDE, a was deed (whan he was an hūdreth and ten yeaere olde) they buried him in y border of his inheritance at Timnath Heres vpon mount Ephraim on the north syde of mount Gaas. And whan all the same generacion was gathered vnto their fathers, there came vp after them another generacion, which knew not the LORDE, ner the workes that he had done for Israel.

c Then wroughte the children of Israel euell before the LORDE, and serued Baalim, and forsoke y LORDE the God of their fathers (which broughte them out of the londe of Egipte) and folowed other goddes t the goddes of the nacions that dwelt rounde aboute them, t worshipped them, t displeased the LORDE: for they forsoke y LORDE euer more and more, and serued Baal and Astaroth.

c Then y wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vpo Israel, t he delyuered thē in to y handes of those y spoyled thē, that they mighte spoyle them, t solde thē in to the handes of their enemies rōude aboute, t they were not able to withstonde their enemies eny more, but what waye so euer they wolde out, y hāde of the LORDE was agaynst thē to their hurte (euen as the LORDE d sayde and sware vnto them) and they were sore oppressed.

Now whan the LORDE rayssed them vp iudges, which helped them out of the hande of soch as spoyled thē, they folowed not the iudges nether, but wente a whoringe after other goddes, t worshipped them, and were soone gone out of y waye y their fathers walked in, to heare the cōmaundementes of the LORDE, t dyd not as they dyd.

But whan y LORDE rayssed vp iudges vnto them, the LORDE was with y iudge, and helped them out of the hande of their enemies, as longe as the iudge lyued. t For the LORDE had pitie of their complaynte, which they made ouer those y subdued thē and oppressed them.

d Neuertheles whan the iudge dyed, they turned backe, t and marred all more thē their fathers, so that they folowed other goddes to serue them and to bowe them selues vnto them: they wolde not fall from their purposes, ner from their obstinate waye.

Therefore waxed the wrath of the LORDE allwaie so whote ouer Israel, that he sayde: For so much as the people haue transgressed my couenaunt, which I commaunded their fathers, & folowe not my voyce, I wil from hence forth dryue out none of the Heythen, whō Iosua lefte behynde him, whā he dyed, * that by them I maye proue Israel, whether they wil kepe the waye of the LORDE, to walke therin, as their fathers dyd, or not. Thus the LORDE suffred all these nations, so that in a shorte tyme he droue them not out, whom he had not geuen ouer in to Iosuas hande.

The iij. Chapter.

THESE are the nations, whom the LORDE suffred to remayne, & by them he mighte proue Israel, which had no vnderstandinge in the warres of Canaan: onely because & the trybes of the childrē of Israel might knowe & lerne to warre, which afore had no knowlege therof, namely: The fyue lordes of & Philistynes, & all the Cananites, & Sidonians, & the Hethites & dwelt vpon mount Libanus, fro mount Baal Hermon, vntyll a man come vnto Hemath. The same remayned, that Israel mighte be proued by them, that it mighte be knowne whether they wolde herken to the commaundementes of the LORDE, which he commaunded their fathers by Moses.

Now whan the children of Israel dwelt thus amōge the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuites & Iebusites, + they toke their daughters to wyues, and gaue their daughters vnto their sonnes, & serued their goddes, and wroughte wickednes before the LORDE, & forgat the LORDE their God, & serued Baalim & Astaroth. Then & wrath of & LORDE waxed whote ouer Israel, & he solde thē vnder the hāde of Cusan Risathaim kyng of Mesopotamia, & so & childrē of Israel serued Cusan Risathaim viij. yeare.

The cried the childrē of Israel vnto the LORDE, & the LORDE rayshed thē vp a sauioure which deluyered thē, namely, + Athniel & sonne of Kenas, Calebys yongest brother. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpon him, & he was iudge in Israel, & wente out a warre fare. And & LORDE deluyered Cusan Risathaim the kyng of Syria in to his hāde, so & his hande was to strōge for him. & Then was the londe in rest fortye yeares. And Athniel the sonne of Kenas dyed.

But the children of Israel dyd yet more euell before the LORDE. Then the LORDE strenghted Eglon the kyng of & Moabites agaynst & childrē of Israel, because they wrought wickednesse before & LORDE. And he gathered vnto him & childrē of Ammon, & the Amalechites, & wete and smote Israel, and conquered the ll cite of the palme trees. And the children of Israel serued Eglon & kyng of & Moabites eightene yeare. Thē cried they vnto the LORDE. And the LORDE rayshed thē vp a sauioure, namely Ehud the sonne of Gera & sonne of Iemini, which was a man that mighte do nothinge with his righte hande.

And whā the childrē of Israel sent a present by him vnto Eglon the kyng of the Moabites, Ehud made him a two edged dagger of a spanne longe, & gyrded it vnder his garment vpō his righte thye, & broughte & present vnto Eglon the kyng of & Moabites. As for Eglon, he was a very fat man.

And whan he had deluyered the presente, he let the people go that had caried the present, and he himselfe turned backe from the Idols at Gilgall, & caused to saye thus (vnto the kyng): I haue a secrete thinge to tell the O kyng. And he commaunded to kepe sylence, & all they that stode aboute him, wente out from him.

And Ehud came in vnto him. He sat in a sylled Sommer perler, which was for him selfe alone. And Ehud saide: I haue somwhat to saye vnto the of God. Thē rose he vp frō his seate. But Ehud put forth his lefte hande, & toke the dagger from his righte thye, & thrust it in to his bely, so & the hefte wente in also after the blade, & the fatt closed the hefte: for he drue not & dagger out of his bely, & & fylthines departed frō him. But Ehud gat him out at the backe dore, & put to & dore after him, and lockte it.

Now whan he was gone, his seruantes came in, and sawe that the dore of the Sommer perler was lockte, and they sayde: peradventure he is gone to the preuye in the sylled Sommer perler.

But whan they had wayted so lōge tyll they were ashamed (for no man opened the perler dore) they toke the keye, and opened it. Beholde, then laye their lorde deed vpon the earth. As for Ehud, he was gotten awaye, whyle they made so longe tariēge, & he wente ouer by the Idols, and ranne his waye vnto Seirath.

And whan he came in * he blewē & trompet vpō mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel wente with him from the mount, and he before them, and he saide vnto them: Folowe me, for the LORDE hath delyuered the Moabites youre enemies in to youre hande. And they folowed him, & wanne & ferye of Iordane, & goeth towarde Moab, & suffred no man to go ouer, and at & same tyme they smote of the Moabites vpō a ten thousande men, all nobles and men of armes, so that there escaped not one. Thus were the Moabites broughte vnder the hande of the children of Israel at that tyme, and the londe was in rest foure score yeaes.

Afterwarde was † Samgar & sonne of Anath, which slewe sixe hundreth Philistynes with an oxes gadd, and delyuered Israel also.

The iiii. Chapter.

BUT the children of Israel dyd yet more beuell before & LORDE, whan Ehud was deed. And the LORDE solde thē in to the hande of Iabin the kynge of the Cananites, which dwelt at Hazor, & the chefe captayne of his hooste was Sissera, and he dwelt at Haroseth of the Heythen. And the childrē of Israel cried vnto the LORDE: for he had nyne hūdreth yron charettes, and subdued the children of Israel by violence twentye yeaer.

At & same tyme was Iudgesse in Israel the prophetisse Debbora, the wyfe of Lapidoth, and she dwelt vnder & palme of Debbora betwene Rama & Bethel, vpon mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel came vp vnto her to the lawe. She sent forth, & & called for Barak the sonne of Abi Noam of Kedes Nephtali, and sayde vnto him: Hath not & LORDE the God of Israel cōmaunded the: Go thy waye, and get the vp vnto mount Thabor, & take with the ten thousande men of the children of Nephtali & Zabulon? For I wil make Sissera the chefe captayne of Iabins hoost to come to the vnto & & water of Cyson, with his charettes and with his multitude, and I wyll delyuer him in to thy hande. Barak sayde vnto her: Yf thou wilt come with me, I wil go: but yf thou wilt not come with me, I wil not go.

She sayde: I wyll go with the: neuerthelesse the prayse shal not be thine in this iourney that thou goest, but & LORDE shal delyuer Sissera in to a womā hande. So Debbora gat hir vp, and wente with Barak vnto Kedes. Then Barak called Zabulon and Nephtali vnto Kedes, and wēte on fote with ten thousande men. And Debbora wente with him also. As for Heber the Kenyte he was departed from the Kenytes from the children of † Hobab Moses brother in lawe, and had pitched his tent by & Oke of Zaanaim besyde Kedes.

Then was it tolde Sissera, & Barak the sonne of Abi Noā, was gone vp vnto moũt Thabor: & he gathered all his charettes together, nyne C. yron charettes, & all the people & was with him from Haroseth of the Heythē, vnto the water Cyson. Debbora sayde vnto Barak: Vp, this is the daie wherin the LORDE hath delyuered Sissera in to thy hande: for & LORDE shal go forth before &. So Barak wente fro mount Thabor, and & ten thousande men after him.

But the LORDE discomfited Sissera with all his charettes & hoost, & made thē afrayed of the edge of the swerde before Barak, so & Sissera leapt of his charet, & fled on fote. Neuerthelesse Barak folowed vpon the charettes & the hoost vnto Haroseth of the Heythen, & all Sisseras hoost fell thorow & edge of the swerde, so & not one escaped. As for Sissera, he fled on fote vnto the tente of Iael, & wife of Heber & Kenite. For there was peace betwene kynge Iabin at Hasor, & the house of Heber the Kenite.

Iael wēte forth to mete Sissera, & sayde vnto him: Turne in my lorde, turne in to me, & be not afrayed. And he turned in vnto her in to the tente, & she couered him with a garment. He sayde vnto her: I praye & geue me a litle water to drynke, for I am a thyrst. ¶ Thē opened she a mylke pot, & gaue him to drynke, and couered him. And he sayde vnto her: Stōde in the tente dore, & yf one come & axe, is there eny man here? saye Noman.

B Then Iael the wife of Heber toke a nale of the tente, and an hammer in hir hande, & wente in preuely vnto him, & smote the nale in thorow the temples of his heade, so y he sancke to y earth. As for him, he was fallen on a slomber, and weery, and so he dyed.

But whā Barak folowed after Sissera, Iael wente for to mete him, and sayde vnto him: Come hither, I wil shewe the man, whom thou sekest. And whan he came in vnto her, he sawe Sissera deed, & the nale stickinge in his temples. Thus God broughte downe Iabin the kyng of the Cananites before the children of Israel at that tyme, & the hande of the children of Israel wente & subdued Iabin y kyng of the Cananites, tyll they had roted him out. Then Debbora and Barac the sonne of Abi Noam, sange at the same tyme, and sayde:

God hath chosen a new thinge. He hath ouercome y portes in battayll: and yet was there sene nether shyld ner speare amonge fortye thousande in Israel.

Then had the desolate the rule with the mightie of the people. The LORDE had y dominion thorow the giauntes.

¶ Out of Ephraim was their rote against Amalek, and after him Ben Iamin in thy people.

Out of Machir haue teachers ruled, and out of Zabulō are there become gouernours thorow the wrytinge penne.

Why abodest thou betwixte the borders, ¶ whan thou herdest the noyse of the flockes? because Ruben stode hye in his awne cōsayte, and separated him selfe from vs.

Gilead abode beyonde Iordane, and why dwelt Dan amonge the shippes? Asser sat in the hauen of the see, and taried in his porcions.

But Zabulons people ioperde their life vnto death: Nephtali also in the toppe of y felde of Merom.

The kynges came & foughte, then foughte y kynges of the Cananites at Thaanaah by the water of Megiddo, but spoyle of money broughte they not there from.

Then made the horse fete a ruszshinge together, for the greате violence of their mightie horse men.

Curse the cite of Meros (sayde y angell of the LORDE) curse the citiesyns therof, because they come not to helpe y LORDE, to helpe the LORDE to the giauntes.

Blessynge amonge women haue Iael the wife of Heber the Kenite: blessinge haue she in the tente amonge the women.

His mother loked out at the wyndowe, & cried piteously thorow the trallace: Why tarieth his charet out so lōge, that he cōmeth not? Wherefore do the wheles of his charet make so longe tarienge?

The wysest amōge his ladies answered, & sayde vnto her: Shulde they not finde & deuide the spoyle, vnto euery man a fayre mayde or two for a pray, & partye coloured garmētes of nedle worke to Sissera for a spoyle, partye coloured garments of nedle worke aboute the necke for a pray?

Thus all thine enemies must perishe O LORDE: but they that loue the, shal be euen as the Sonne rysinge vp in his mighte.

And the londe had peace fortye yeares.

The vi. Chapter.

AND when the children of Israel dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, the LORDE delyuered them vnder the hande of the Madianites vij. yeares. And whā the hande of the Madianites was to mightie ouer the children of Israel, the children of Israel made them clyffes in ſ mountaynes, and caues and holdes, to defende them selues from ſ Madianites. And whan Israel sowed eny thinge, ſ Madianites and Amalechites, and the children towarde the south came vp vpon them, and pitched their tētes agaynst them, and destroyed the increase of the londe downe vnto Gasa, & let nothinge remayne ouer of the beestes in Israel, nether shepe, ner oxen, ner asses. For they came vp with their catell and tentes, as it had bene a greate multitude of greshoppers (so that nether they ner their camels mighte be nombred) and fell in to the londe, that they mighte destroye it. Thus was Israel exceedinge small before the Madianites. Then cried the children of Israel vnto the LORDE.

But when they cried vnto the LORDE because of ſ Madianites, ſ LORDE sent thē a prophet, which sayde vnto thē: Thus saieth the LORDE the God of Israel: I caried you out of Egipte, & broughte you out of ſ house of bondage, & delyuered you from the hande of the Egiptians, & from the hāde of all them that oppressed you, and I haue thrust them out before you, & geuen you their lōde and sayde vnto you: I am the LORDE youre God. * Feare not ye the goddesses of the Amorites, in whose londe ye dwell: neuertheles ye haue not herkened vnto my voyce.

And there came an angell of the LORDE, & sat him downe vnder an Oke at Aphra, which belonged vnto loas the father of ſ Esrites, and his sonne Gedeon was throsshinge wheate in the barne, that he mighte flye awaye before the Madianites.

Then appeared vnto him the angell of ſ LORDE, and sayde vnto him: The LORDE with ſ thou mightie giaunte. But Gedeon sayde vnto him: Syr, yf the LORDE be with vs, wherfore is all this then happened vnto vs? And where are all the wonders, which oure fathers tolde vs, & sayde: The LORDE brought vs out of Egipte? But now hath the LORDE forsaken vs, and delyuered vs in to the hande of the Madianites.

The LORDE turned him vnto him, & sayde: Go thy waye in this thy strength, thou shalt delyuere Israel out of the hande of ſ Madianites. I haue sent the. But he sayde: My LORDE, wherewithal shal I delyuere Israel? Beholde, my kynred is the smallest in Manasse, & I am the leest in my fathers house? The LORDE sayde vnto him: I will be with the, so ſ thou shalt smyte the Madianites, euen as though they were but one man.

He sayde vnto him: Yf I haue fōūde grace in thy sighte, then make me a token, that it is thou, which speakest with me: go not awaye, tyll I come to ſ, and brynge a meat-offerynge, to set before the. He sayde: I wyll tary, tyll thou cōmest agayne. And Gedeon wēte, and made ready a kydd, and an Ephā of vñleuended floure, and layed the flesh in a maunde, and put the broth in a pot, and broughte it forth vnto him vnder the Oke, and came nye. But the angell of God sayde vnto him: † Take the flesh and the vñleuended bred, & set it vpon the stonye rocke that is here, and poure the broth thereon. And he dyd so. Then the angell of the LORDE stretched out the staffe that he had in his hande, and with the ende of it he touched the flesh and the vleuened floure: * and the fyre came out of the rocke, and consumed the flesh and the vleuened floure. And the angell of the LORDE vanysshed out of his sighte.

¶ Now whā Gedeon sawe that it was an angell of † LORDE, he sayde: "O LORDE LORDE, haue I thus sene an angell of † LORDE face to face? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Peace be with the, feare not, thou shalt not dye. Thē Gedeon buylded an altare there vnto † LORDE, & called it: The LORDE of peace. The same stondesth yet vnto this daye at Apra, † belogeth vnto the father of † Esrites.

And in † same night sayde † LORDE vnto him: Take a fedd bullocke frō amōge thy fathers oxen, & another bullocke of seuen yeare olde, and breake downe the altare of Baall which is thy fathers, and cut downe the groue that stondesth by it, and buylde thou an altare vnto the LORDE thy God aboue vpon the toppe of this rocke, and make it ready, and take the other bullocke, and offre a burnt-offerynge with the wodd of the groue that thou hast hewen downe. Then toke Gedeon ten men of his seruauntes, and dyd as † LORDE sayde vnto him: but he was afraied to do this by daye tyme, for his fathers house and the people in † cite, and so he dyd it by nighte.

¶ Now whan the people in the cite rose vp early in the mornynge, beholde, Baals altare was broken, and the groue hewen downe by it, and the other bullocke a burnt-offerynge vpon the altare that was buylded, & one sayde vnto another: Who hath done this? And whan they soughte & made searche, it was sayde: Gedeon the sonne of Ioas hath done it. Thē sayde the people of † cite vnto Ioas: Brynge forth thy sonne, He must dye, because he hath broken Baals altare, and hewen downe the groue therby. But Ioas sayde vnto all them that stode by him: Wyl ye stryue for Baal? Wyl ye delyuer him? He † stryueth for him, shal dye this mornynge. Yf he be God, let him auēge him selfe, because his altare is broken downe. From † daye forth was he called Ierubaal, because it was sayde:

Let Baal auenge him selfe, that his altare is broken downe.

Whan † Madianites now & † Amalechites, & the childrē towardes the south had gathered thē selues together, & were passed thorow (Iordane) & had pitched their tentes in the valley of Iesrael, the sprete of the LORDE endued Gedeon, & he caused the trompet to be blowne, & called (the house of) † Abieser, that they shulde folowe him: & he sent messaungers vnto all Manasse, & called them, † they shulde folowe him also: and he sent messaungers likewise vnto Asser & Zabulon & Nephtali, which came vp to mete him.

And Gedeon sayde vnto God: Yf thou wilt delyuer Israel thorow my hande, as thou hast saide, thē wil I laye a flese of woll in the courte: yf † dew be onely vpon † flese, & drye vpon all the grounde, then wyl I perceaue, that thou shalt delyuer Israel thorow my hande, as thou hast sayde. And it came so to passe. And whan he rose vp early on the morow, he wrāge † dew out of the flese, and fylled a dyszshe full of water. And Gedeon sayde vnto God: † Be not wroth at me, that I speake yet this one tyme, I wyl proue yet but once with the flese, let it be drye onely vpon the flese, and dew vpon all the grounde. And God dyd so the same night: so that it was drye onely vpon the flese, and dew vpon all the grounde.

The vij. Chapter.

¶ THEN Ierubaal (that is Gedeon) gat him vp early, * and all the people that was with him, and pitched their tentes besyde the well of Harod, so that he had the hoost of the Madianites on the north side behynde the hyll of More in the valley. But the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: The people that be with † are to many for me to delyuer Madian in to their hande, lest Israel boost them selues agaynst me, and saye: My hande hath delyuered me. Cause a proclamacion now to be made in the eares of the people, and saye: † He that feareth, and is afraied, let him turne backe, and get him soone fro mount Gilead. Then returned there of the people aboute a two and twenty thousande so that there was left but ten thousande.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon. ¶

The people are yet to many: brynge them downe to the water, there wyl I proue them for \hat{y} : and of whom I saye that he shal go with the, the same shal go with the: but of whō I saie that he shal not go with the, the same shall not go. And he broughte the people vnto \hat{y} water. And the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: Whosoever licketh of the water with his tūge, as a dogg licketh, make him stonde asyde and lykewyse who soeuer falleth downe vpō his knees to drynke. Then was the nombre of them that had licked out of the hande to the mouth, thre hundreth men. And the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: Thorow the thre hūdreth which haue licked, wyl I deluyuer you, and geue ouer the Madiānites in to thy hāde: As for the other people, let them go euery one vnto his place.

C And they toke vytyales with them for \hat{y} people, and their trompettes: but the other Israelites let he go, euery one vnto his tente. And he strengthened himselfe with the thre hundreth men, and the Madiānites hoost laye before him beneth in the valley. And the same night sayde the LORDE vnto him: Vp, and go downe in to the hoost, for I haue geuen them ouer in to thy hande. But yf thou be afrayed to go downe, then let thy seruauunt Pura go downe with the vnto the hoost, \hat{y} thou maiest heare what they saie: after that shalt thou be bolde, and thy honde stronge, that thou mayest go downe in to the hoost.

D Than wente Gedeon downe with his seruauunt vnto \hat{y} vttemost parte of \hat{y} watchmē of armes \hat{y} were in \hat{y} hoost. And \hat{y} Madiānites and Amalechites, and all the children of the south, had layed them selues beneth in the valley, as a multitude of greshoppers, and their Camels were not to be nombred for multitude, euē as the sonde on \hat{y} see shore. Now whan Gedeon came, beholde, one tolde another his dreame, & sayde: Beholde, I haue dreamed a dreame: Me thoughte a bakē barleye lofe came rollinge downe to \hat{y} hoost of \hat{y} Madiānites: and whan it came to the tente, it smote it, and ouerthrew it, and turned it vpsyde downe, so that the tente fell. Then answered the other: That is nothinge els then \hat{y} swerde of Gedeon the sonne of Ioas \hat{y} Israelite: God hath geuē ouer the Madiānites with all the hoost in to his hande.

E Whan Gedeon herde this dreame tolde, &

the interpretacion of it, he worshipped, and came agayne in to the hoost of Israel, and sayde: Vp, for the LORDE hath deluyered \hat{y} hoost of the Madiānites in to youre hāde. And he deuyded the thre hundreth men in to thre partes, and gaue euery one a trompet in his hande, and emptye pytchers, and lampes therin, and sayde vnto them: "Loke vnto me, and do ye euē so, and beholde, whā I come to the vttemost parte of the hoost, euen as I do, so do ye also. Whan I blowe \hat{y} trompet, and all that are with me, then shal ye blowe \hat{y} trōpettes also rounde aboute all the hoost, and saye: Here the LORDE & Gedeon. Thus came Gedeon and the thre hundreth men with him vnto the vttemost parte of \hat{y} hoost (aboute the tyme whan the mydwatch begyneth) and waked vp the watchmē, and blew with the trompettes, and smote asunder the pitchers in their handes.

F So all the thre companies blew with \hat{y} trompettes, and brake the pitchers. But the lampes helde they in their lefte hande, and the trompettes in their righte hāde, so that they blew, and cried: Here the swerde of the LORDE and Gedeon. And euery one stode in his place aboute the hoost. Then ranne all the hoost, and cried and fled. And whyle the thre hundreth men blew the trompettes, \hat{y} LORDE broughte it so to passe, that *euery mans swerde in all \hat{y} hoost was agaynst another, and the hoost fled vnto Bethsitha Zereratha, and vnto the border of the playne of Mehohab besyde Tabath. And \hat{y} men of Israel of Nephtali, of Asser, & of Manasse cried, and folowed vpon the Madiānites.

And Gedeon sent messaugers vp vnto all mount Ephraim, sayenge: Come downe against the Madiānites, and stoppe the water from them vnto Beth Bara and Iordane. And then cryed all they that were of Ephraim, and stopped the water from them vnto Bethbara and Iordane, and toke two prynces of the Madiānites Oreb and Zeb, and slewe Oreb vpon the rocke of Oreb, and Zeb in the wynepresse of Zeb, and folowed vpon the Madiānites, and broughte the heades of Oreb and Zeb, vnto Gideon ouer Iordane.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A ND the men of Ephraim sayde vnto him: Wherefore hast thou done this vnto vs, that thou hast not called vs, whā thou wentest forth to fight agaynst þ̄ Madianites? and they chode sore with him. But he sayde vnto them: What haue I done now that is like youre acte? Is not the aftergadderynge of Ephraim better then the whole haruest of Abieser? * God hath deluyered þ̄ prynces of the Madianites Oreb and Zeb in to youre hande, how coulde I do that ye haue done? Whā he had sayde this, their blast was swaged from him.

Now whan Gedeon came vnto Iordane, he wente ouer with the thre hundreth mē that were with him, and they were weery, and folowed vpon their chace. And he sayde vnto the men of Sucoth: I praye you geue the people that are with me, some loaues of bred (for they are weery) that I maye folowe vpon Zebea and Salmana the kinges of the Madianites.

But the rulers of Sucoth sayde: Are the handes of Zebea and Salmana in thy handes already, that we must geue bred vnto thy men of warre? Gedeon sayde: Well, whan the LORDE deluyereth Zebea and Salmana in to my hāde, I wyll threshē youre flesh with thornes of the wyldernesse and with breares. And from thence he wente vp vnto Penuel, and spake euen so vnto them. And the mē of Penuel gaue him like answers as they of Sucoth. And he sayde also vnto the men of Penuel: Yf I come peaceably agayne, I wil breake downe this tower.

As for Zebea and Salmana, they were at Karkar, and their hoost with them vpon a fyftene thousande, which were all that were left of the whole hoost of the children of the East: for there were fallen an hundreth and twentye thousande, that coulde drawe the swerde.

And Gedeon wente vp by the waye, where they dwell in the tentes on the east side of Nobah and Iakbeha, & smote the hoost, for the hoost was carelesse, and mystrusted nothinge. And Zebea and Salmana fled, but he folowed after them, and toke þ̄ two kynges of the Madianites Zebea and Salmana, and put all the hoost in feare.

Now whan Gedeon þ̄ sonne of Ioas came agayne frō the battayll out of þ̄ east, he toke a lad of the men of Sucoth, & examyned him, which wrote him vp the names of the rulers of Sucoth, and their Elders, euē thre score and seuentene men.

And he came to the men of Sucoth, & sayde: Beholde, here is Zebea & Salmana, cōcernyng whō ye laughed me to scorne, & sayde: Are the handes of Zebea and Salmana in thy hādes all ready, that we must geue bred vnto thy men which are weery? And he toke the Elders of the cite, and thornes out of the wildernes, and breares, and caused þ̄ men of Sucoth to be torne therewith. * And the tower of Penuel brake he downe, and slewe the men of the cite.

And he saide vnto Zebea and Salmana: What maner of mē were they whō ye slewe at Thabor? They sayde: They were euen like the, & goodly men, as yf they had bene a kynges childrē. He sayde: They were my brethren, euen my mother sonnes: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, yf ye had lettē them lyue, I wolde not slaye you.

And he saide vnto his first borne sonne Iether: Stonde vp, & slaye them. Howbeit the lad drue not out his swerde, for he was afrayed, for so moch as he was yet but a lad. Zebea & Salmana sayde: Stonde thou vp, & slaye vs, for as the man is, soch is also his strēgh. So Gedeon arose, and slewe Zebea and Salmana, and toke the ornaments that were aboute their Camels neckes.

Then sayde certayne in Israel vnto Gedeon: Be thou lorde ouer vs, thou and thy sonne, and thy sonnes sonne, for so moch as thou hast deluyered vs from þ̄ hande of þ̄ Madianites. Neuertheles Gedeon saide vnto them: I wil not be lorde ouer you, nether shal my sonne be lorde ouer you, but the LORDE shalbe lorde ouer you.

Gedeon sayde vnto them: One thinge I desyre of you, Euery man geue me the earinge that he hath spoyled. (For in so moch as þ̄ men were Ismaelites, they had earinges.) They sayde: Them wyll we geue the. And they spred out a cloth, and euery man cast the earinge theron that he had spoyled. And the golden earinges which he requyred, had in weight, a thousande and seuen hundreth Sycles of Golde, besyde the spanges and cheynes, and scarlet rayment which the kynges of the Madianites dyd weere, and besyde the neckbandes of their Camels. And Gideon made a cote armoure therof, and set it in his cite at Aphra. And all Israel wente there a whoringe after it, and it turned to an occasion of fallinge vnto Gedeon and his house.

Thus were $\hat{\gamma}$ Madianites brought downe before the children of Israel, and lifte vp their heade nomore: and the londe was in rest fortye yeares, as lōge as Gedeon lyued.

And Ierubaal the sonne of Ioas wētē γ dwelt in his house. "And Gedeon Had thre score γ ten sonnes, which were come out of his thye: for he had many wyues. And his concubyne which he had at Sichē, bare him a sonne also, whom he called Abimelech. And Gideon the sonne of Ioas dyed in a good age, γ was buried at Aphra in $\hat{\gamma}$ sepulchre of his father Ioas the father of the Esrites.

But whan Gedeon was deed, the childrē of Israel turned backe, and wente awhoringe after Baalim, and made a couenaunt with Baal Berith, $\hat{\gamma}$ he shulde be their God. And $\hat{\gamma}$ childrē of Israel thoughte not on $\hat{\gamma}$ LORDē their God, which had delyuered them frō the hande of their enemies rounde aboute: and they shewed not mercy vnto the house of Ierubaal Gedeon, accordinge to all the good that he had done vnto Israel.

ABIMELECH the sonne of Ierubaal, wente vnto Sichē to his mothers brethren, γ spake vnto them, γ to all the kynred of his mothers fathers house, and sayde: I praye you speake in the eares of all the men at Sichem: What is better for you, that thre score and ten men all children of Ierubaal shulde be lordes ouer you, or that one man shulde be lordē ouer you? Remembre also that I am youre bone and youre flesh.

Then spake his mothers brethrē all these wordes for him, in $\hat{\gamma}$ eares of all $\hat{\gamma}$ men at Sichem. And their hert enclyned to Abimelech, for they thoughte: He is oure brother: and gaue him thre score and ten syluerlinges out of $\hat{\gamma}$ house of Baal Berith. And with them Abimelech hyred men that were vagabundes and of light condicions, which folowed him. And he came to his fathers house vnto Aphra, and slew his brethren the children of Ierubaal,^a euen thre score men and tē vpon one stone. But Iotham the yongest sonne of Ierubaal remayned ouer, for he was hydd. And all the men of Sichem, and all the house of Millo gathered them selues together, and wente and made Abimelech kyng by the Oke that stondeth at Sichem.

Whan this was tolde Iotham, he wente, and stode vpon the toppe of mount Grisin, and lifte vp his voyce, cried, and sayde: Heare me ye men of Sichem, that God maye heare you also. *The trees wente to anointe a kinge ouer them, and sayde vnto the Olyue tre: Be thou oure kyng. But the Olyue tre answered them: Shall I go and leaue my fatnesse (which both God and men commende in me) and go to be puft vp aboute the trees?

Then sayde the trees vnto the fygge tre: Come thou and be kyngē ouer vs. But the fygge tre sayde vnto thē: Shal I leaue my swetnes and my good frute, and go to be puft vp aboute the trees? Then sayde the trees vnto the vyne: Come thou and be oure kyng. But the vyne sayde vnto them: Shal I leaue my swete wyne, which reiōyseth God and men, and go to be puft vp aboute the trees? Thē sayde all the trees vnto the thorne buszshe: Come thou, and be kyngē ouer vs. And the thorne buszshe sayde vnto the trees: Yf it be true, $\hat{\gamma}$ ye anyōnte me to be kyngē ouer you, thē come, and put youre trust vnder my shadowe. Yf no, then go fyre out of the thorne buszshe, γ cōsume $\hat{\gamma}$ Cedar trees of Libanō.

Yf ye haue done right now and iustly, $\hat{\gamma}$ ye haue made Abimelech to be kyngē: and yf ye haue done well vnto Ierubaal and to his house, and haue done vnto him as he deserued vnto you. Which (euen my father) foughte for youre sakes, and ioperde his lyfe, to delyuer out of the Madianites hāde, euē you, which are rysen vp this daye agaynst my fathers house, γ haue slaine his childrē, thre score personnes γ ten vpon one stone, and haue made you a kyngē (euen Abimelech the sonne of his handmaide) ouer the men at Sichem, for so moch as he is youre brother.

Yf ye haue done right now and iustly vnto Ierubaal and his house this daye, then reiōyse ouer Abimelech, and let him reiōyse ouer you. Yf no, then go fyre out from Abimelech, and cōsume the men of Sichem and the house of Millo: And fyre go out also frō the men of Sichem, and from the house of Millo, and consume Abimelech. And Iothā (whan he had spoken this out) fled, and gat him out of the waye, and wente vnto Ber, and dwelt there because of his brother Abimelech.

D Now when Abimelech had reigned thre yeare ouer Israel, *God sent an euell mynde betwene Abimelech and the men of Sichem (for the men of Sichem despyed Abimelech), and rehearsed the wronge done to the sonnes of Ierubaal, and their bloude, and layed it vpon Abimelech their brother which slewe them, and vpon the men of Sichem that strenghted his hande therto, that he mighte slaye his brethren.

And the men of Sichem set an hynder watch vpon the toppes of the mountaynes, and spoyled all them that walked nye them by the waye, and it was tolde Abimelech. But there came Gaal the sonne of Ebed and his brethren, and entred in to Sichem, and the men of Sichem put their trust in him, and wete out in to the felde, and gathered their vynyards, and pressed them, and made a daunce, and wente in to their gods house, and ate and dranke, and cursed Abimelech.

E And Gaal ſonne of Ebed sayde: Who is Abimelech? and what is Sichem, that we shulde serue him? Is he not the sonne of Ierubaal, and hath set Sebul his seruauit ouer the men of †Hemor the father of Sichem? Wherefore shulde we serue him? Wolde God the people were vnder my hæde, † I mighte put downe Abimelech.

And it was tolde Abimelech: Increace thine hooste, and departe. For Sebul the chefe ruler of the cite, whan he herde the wordes of Gaal ſonne of Ebed, he was wroth fully displeased, and sente message secretly to Abimelech, and caused to saye vnto him: Beholde, Gaal the sonne of Ebed and his brethren are come to Sichem, and make the cite to be agaynst the.

Arise therefore by nyght, thou and thy people that is with the, and laye wayte for thē in the felde: and tomorrow whan the Sonne aryseth, get the vp soone, and fall vpon the cite: and yf he and the people that is with him come out vnto the, thē deale with him, as thyne hande fyndeth.

F Abimelech stode vp by night, and all the people that was with him, and layed wayte for Sichem with foure companies of men of warre. And Gaal the sonne of Ebed wete out and stode at the dore of the gate of the cite.

But Abimelech gat him vp out of the hinder watch, and the people that was with him. Now whan Gaal sawe the people, he sayde vnto Sebul: Beholde, there commeth a people downe from the toppe of † mount. Sebul saide vnto him: Thou seist † shadowe of the mountaines as though they were mē. Gaal spake yet more and sayde: Beholde, there commeth a people downe from † myddes of the londe, † one bonde of men cometh by the waye to † witch Oke. Thē sayde Sebul: Where is now thy mouth † sayde: Who is Abimelech, that we shulde serue him? Is not this † people, whom thou hast refused? Go forth now, and fighte with him.

Gaal wente forth before the citesyns of Sichem, and foughte with Abimelech. But Abimelech chaced him, so that he fled, and there fell many slayne euen vnto the gate of the cite. And Abimelech abode at Aruma. But Sebul droue awaye Gaal and his brethren, so that they must not remayne at Sichem. Vpon the morowe wente the people forth in to † felde. Whā this was tolde Abimelech, he toke the people, and parted them in to thre bōdes of men, and wayted for thē in the felde. Now whan he sawe † the people wete out of the cite, he rose agaynst thē, and smote them.

Abimelech and † company of men that was with him, fell vpon them, and stepte vnto the dore of the porte: but the other two companies fell vpon all them that were in the felde, and slewe them. Thē foughte Abimelech agaynst the cite all † same daye, and wanne it, and slewe the people that was there in, and brake downe † cite, and sowed salt thereon.

Whan all the men of the tower of Sichem herde this, they wente in to a stronge holde of † house of their God Berith. But whan Abimelech herde, that all the men of the tower of Sichem had gathered thē selues together, he wente vp vnto mount Zelmon, and all the people that was with him, and toke an axe in his hæde, and hewed downe a branch of a tre, and toke it vp, † layed it vpon his shulder, and sayde vnto all the people that was with him: † As ye haue sene me do, make ye haist, and do euen so as I. Then all the people hewed downe euery one a brāuch, and folowed Abimelech: and they layed them to the holde, and set fyre vpon them agaynst them and the holde: and all the men of the tower of Sichem dyled thorow the smoke and fyre, vpon a thousande men and women.

¶ As for Abimelech, he wēte vnto Thebetz, and layed sege vnto it, and wanne it. But in the myddes of the cite, there was a stronge tower, vnto the which all the men and women, and all the citesyns of the cite fled, and shutt it after them, and clymmed vp to the toppē of the tower. Then came Abimelech vnto the tower, and foughte agaynst it, and came nye vnto the dore of the tower, that he might burne it with fyre. * But a woman cast a pece of a mylstone vpon Abimelechs heade, and brake his brane panne. Then Abimelech in all the haist, called the seruauant that bare his wapen, and sayde vnto him: Drawe out thy swerde, and kyll me, that it be not sayde of me: A woman hath slayne him. Then his seruauant thrust him thorow, and he dyed. Whan the Israelites which were with him, sawe, y Abimelech was deed, they gatt them awaye euery one vnto his awne place.

Thus God recompenced Abimelech the euell that he had done vnto his father, whā he slewe his thre score and ten brethren: like wyse all the euell of the men of Sichem, dyd God rewarde them vpon their heade: and so the curse of Iotham y sonne of Ierubaal came vpon them.

The x. Chapter.

¶ AFTER Abimelech there rose vp another sauioure in Israel, Thola a man of Isachar, and the sonne of Pua, the sonne of Dodo. And he dwelt at Samir vpon the mount Ephraim, and iudged Israel thre and twentye yeare, and died, and was buried at Samir.

After him stode vp one Iair a Gileadite, and iudged Israel two and twentye yeare, and had thirtie sonnes,† rydinge vpon thirtie asses foales: and had thirtie cities, whose names are Hauoth Iair (that is, the cities of Iair) vnto this daye, and lye in Gilead. And Iair dyed, and was buried at Camon.

¶ But the children of Israel wrought wickednes in the sighte of the LORDE, and serued Baalim and Astaroth, and the goddes of Siria, and the goddes of Sidon, and the goddes of Moab, and the goddes of y children of Ammon, and the goddes of the Philistines, and forsoke y LORDE, and serued him not. Then was y wrath of y LORDE fearce vpon Israel, and he gaue the ouer vnder the hāde of the Philistynes, and of the children of Ammō. And they vexed and oppressed y children of Israel eightene yeare longe, all the children of Israel that were beyonde Iordane in the londe of the Moabites, which lyeth in Gilead. The children of Ammon also wente ouer Iordane, and fought agaynst Iuda, Ben Iamin, and agaynst the house of Ephraim, so that Israel was very sore troubled.

Then cryed the children of Israel vnto the LORDE, and sayde: We haue synned agaynst the, for we haue forsaken oure God, † serued Baalim. But the LORDE sayde vnto the childrē of Israel: Did not the Egipcias, the Amorites, the children of Ammon, y Philistines, the Sidonians, the Amalechites and Maonites oppresse you, and I helpe you out of their hande, whan ye cryed vnto me? Yet haue ye forsaken me, and serued other goddes? Therefore wyll I helpe you nomore. ‡ Go youre waye, and crye vpon the goddes whom ye haue chosen, let them helpe you in the tyme of youre trouble.

But the childrē of Israel sayde vnto the LORDE: We haue synned, do thou vnto vs what pleaseth the, onely deluyuer vs at this tyme. And they put the straunge goddes frō them, and serued the LORDE, And his soule had pytie on the mysery of Israel.

And the children of Ammon called them selues together, and pitched in Gilead: But the children of Israel gathered them selues together also, and pitched at Mispā. And y people of the chefest of Gilead sayde amōge them selues: Who so ēuer begynneth to fight agaynst the children of Ammon, shalbe heade ouer all them that dwell in Gilead.

The xi. Chapter.

¶ IEPHTHAE a Gileadite was a valeaūt † a man of armes, but an harlottes childe. Gilead begat Iephtae. But whan the wyfe had borne children vnto Gilead, and the same wyues childrē were waxē greate, they thrust out Iephtae, and sayde vnto him: Thou shalt not be heire in oure fathers house, for thou art another womāns sonne. Thē fled he from his brethrē, and dwelt in the londe of Tob. And there resorted vnto him vagabūdes, and wēte out with him. And after a certayne tyrne foughte the children of Ammon with Israel.

Now whā the childrē of Ammon foughte thus with Israel, the Elders wente from Gilead to fetch Iephthae out of the londe of Tob, and sayde vnto him: Come, and be oure captayne, and fight agaynst the children of Ammon. But Iephthae sayde vnto the Elders of Gilead: Are not ye they that hate me and haue thrust me out of my fathers house, and now come ye to me when ye are in trouble?

B The Elders of Gilead sayde: Therefore come we now agayne vnto the, that thou mayest go with vs, and fighte agaynst the children of Ammon, and be oure captayne ouer all that dwell in Gilead. Iephthae sayde vnto the Elders of Gilead: Yf ye fetch me agayne to fighte agaynst the childrē of Ammon, and the LORDE deluyere them before me shal I then be youre heade? The Elders of Gilead saide vnto Iephthae: The LORDE be hearer betwene vs, yf we do not as thou hast sayde. So Iephthae wēte with the Elders of Gilead. And the people made him heade and duke ouer them. And Iephthae spake all this before the LORDE at Mispā.

Then sente Iephthae messauungers to the kynge of the children of Ammon, and caused to saye vnto him: What hast thou to do with me, that thou comest vnto me to fight agaynst my londe? The kynge of the childrē of Ammō answered Iephthae messauungers Because that Israel toke awaye my londe (whan they departed out of Egipte) from Arnon vnto Iabock, and vnto Iordane: geue it me agayne now therefore peaceably.

C But Iephthae sent yet mo messauungers to ſ kynge of the children of Ammon, which sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth Iephthae: * Israel hath taken no londe, nether from the Moabites ner from the children of Ammon: for when they departed out of Egipte, Israel walked thorow the wyldernes vnto the reed see, and came to Cades, and † sent messauungers to the kynge of the Edomites, and sayde: Let me go thorow thy londe. But the kynge of ſ Edomites wolde not heare thē. They sent lykewyse vnto the kynge of the Moabites, which wolde not also. Thus Israel abode in Cades, and compased the lōde of the Edomites and Moabites, and came on the eastsyde of the londe of the Moabites and pitched beyonde Arnon, and came not within the coaste of the Moabites. ‡ For Arnon is the border of the Moabites.

And Israel sent messauungers vnto Sihon the kynge of the Amorites at Heszbōn, † and caused to saye vnto him: Let me go thorow thy londe vnto my place. Neuertheles Sihon wolde not trust Israel to go thorow the border of his londe, but gathered all his people, and pitched at Iahza, and foughte with Israel. Howbeit the LORDE God of Israel gaue Sihon with all his people in to Israels hāde, so that they slewe them. Thus Israel conquered all the londe of the Amorites that dwelt in ſ same countre. And they toke possessiō of all the borders of the Amorites, from Arnon vnto Iabok, ¶ from ſ wyldernes vnto Iordane. So ſ LORDE God of Israel droue awaye the Amorites before his people of Israel, and wilt thou cōquere them? Is it not so, yf thy God Camos gaue the oughte to possesse, woldest thou not possesse it? What so euer the LORDE oure God hath geuē vs before vs to possesse, that shal we conquire and take in possession.

Hast thou better right (thinkest thou) thē § Balac the sonne of Ziphor, the kynge of ſ Moabites? Dyd he euer go to lawe or fighte agaynst Israel? Though Israel haue dwelt now vpō a thre hūdreth yere in Hesbon, and in the vyllages therof, in Aröer and in the vyllages therof, and in all the cities that lye by Arnon. Why dyd not ye rescue it at the same tyme? I haue not offended the, ¶ thou doest me euell to fighte agaynst me. The LORDE geue sentence this daie betwene Israel and the children of Ammon.

Neuertheles the kynge of the children of Ammon wolde not heare ſ wordes of Iephthae, which he sent vnto him. Then came ſ sprete of the LORDE vpon Iephthae, and he wente thorow Gilead and Manasse, and thorow Mispā which lieth in Gilead, and fro Mispā that lieth in Gilead, vnto ſ children of Ammon.

And Iephthae vowed a vowe vnto the LORDE, and sayde: ¶ Yf thou wilt deluyere the childrē of Ammon in to my hande, what so euer commeth (first) out at the dore of my house in my waye, whan I returne agayne peaceably from the childrē of Ammon, that same shalbe the LORDES, and I wyl offre it for a burntofferynge.

So Iephthae wente vpon the children of Ammon, to fighte against them. And ¶ LORDE gaue them in to his hande, and he smote the from Aroer tyll thou comest vnto Minnith, euen twentye cities, and vnto the playne of ¶ vynyardes a very greate slaughter, and thus were the children of Ammon subdued before the children of Israel.

And whan he sawe her, he rente his clothes, ¶ sayde: Alas my daughter, thou makest my hert sorowfull, and discomfortest me: for I haue opened my mouth vnto the LORDE, and can not call it agayne.

She sayde: My father, yf thou hast opened thy mouth vnto the LORDE, then do vnto me as it is proceeded out of thy mouth, accordinge as the LORDE hath auēged the of thyne enemies the children of Ammon. And she sayde vnto hir father: Do this for me, geue me leue to go downe vpo the mountaynes two monethes, that I may bewepe my virginite with my playfeeres. He sayde: Go thy waye. And he let her go two monethes. Then wente she with her playfeeres, and bewayled hir mayden heade vpon the mountaynes. And after two monethes she came agayne vnto hir father. And he dyd vnto her accordinge as he had vowed. And she had neuer bene in daunger of eny man. And it was a custome in Israel, that the daughters of Israel shulde go euery year, and mourne for the daughter of Iephthae the Gileadite, foure dayes in the year.

The xij. Chapter.

AND they of Ephraim made insurrection, ¶ wente northwarde, ¶ sayde vnto Iephthae: * Wherefore wētest thou to the battayll agaynst the children of Ammon, ¶ hast not called vs, that we mighte go with the? We wil burne thy house and the with fyre. Iephthae sayde vnto the: I and my people had a greate matter with ¶ children of Ammon, and I cried vpon you, but ye helped me not out of their hands. After him iudged Israel one Elon a Zabulonite, ¶ he iudged Israel ten yeare, ¶ was buried at Aialon in the londe of Zabulon.

After him iudged Israel one Abdō a sonne of Hillel, a Pirgathonite, which had fortye sonnes, ¶ thirtie neuies († which rode vpo seuentye Asses foales) and he iudged Israel eighte yeare, and dyed, ¶ was buried at Pirgathon in the londe of Ephraim vpon the mount of the Amalechites.

shalt conceaue, and beare a sonne, *vpō whose heade there shal come no rasoure: for ſy childe shal be a Nazaree of God, euen from his mother wombe, and shall begynne to de-lyuer Israel out of the hande of the Philistynes.

33 Then came ſy woman and tolde hir husbände, ⁊ sayde: There came a mā of God vnto me, ⁊ his proporcion was to lōke vpon as an angell of God, very terrible, so ſy I axed him not whence he came, ⁊ whither he wolde: nether tolde he me his name. But he sayde vnto me: beholde, thou shalt conceaue ⁊ beare a sonne: drynke no wyne therefore ner strōge drynke, ⁊ eate no vnclene thinge: † for the childe shal be called a Nazaree of God, euen frō his mother wombe vnto his death.

Then Manoah prayed the LORDE, ⁊ sayde: Oh LORDE, let ſy man of God whom thou hast sent, come to vs agayne, ſy he maye enforme vs what we shall do vnto the childe which shalbe borne. And God herde the voyce of Manoah, ⁊ the angell of God came to his wife agayne. But she sat in ſy felde, and hir husbāde Manoah was not with her. Thē ranne she in all the haist, ⁊ tolde hir husbāde, ⁊ saide vnto him: beholde, ſy man hath appeared vnto me, ſy came to me to daye.

Ⓢ Manoah gat him vp, ⁊ wente after his wife, and came to the man, and sayde vnto him: Art thou ſy man that spake to the woman? He sayde: Yee. And Manoah sayde: whā it commeth to passe that thou hast sayde, what shal be the maner and worke of ſy childe? The angell of the LORDE sayde vnto Manoah: He shal kepe him from all that I tolde the woman: he shal not eate that which commeth of the vyne, and shal drynke no wyne ner stronge drynke, and eate no vnclene thinge: ⁊ all that I haue cōmaunded her, shal he kepe.

Manoah sayde vnto ſy angell of the LORDE: let vs holde the here (I praye the) we will prepare a kydd for the. Neuertheles ſy angell of the LORDE answered Manoah: ‡ Though thou kepest me here, yet wyl I not eate of thy bred. But yf thou wilt make a burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, thou mayest offre it. (For Manoah wist not that it was an angell of the LORDE.) And Manoah sayde vnto the angell of the LORDE: What is thy name, that we maye prayse ſy, whan it commeth now to passe, that thou hast sayde? But the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto him: § Why axest thou after my name, which is wonderfull?

34 Then toke Manoah a kyd and a meatofferynge, ⁊ layed it vpō a rocke vnto the LORDE, ¶ which doth ſy wonders him selfe. But Manoah and his wife behelde it. And whā the flamme wente vp from ſy altare towarde heauen, the angell of the LORDE ascēded vp in the flamme of the altare. Whan Manoah ⁊ his wife sawe ſy, they fell downe to ſy earth vpō their faces. And the angell of ſy LORDE appeared nomore vnto Manoah ⁊ his wife. Thē knewe Manoah, that it was an angell of the LORDE, and he sayde vnto his wife: ¶ We must dye the death, because we haue sene God. But his wife answered him: Yf the LORDE wolde haue slaine vs, he had not receaued the burntofferynge and meat-offerynge of oure handes: nether had he shewed vs all these thinges, ner letten vs heare soch as is now come to passe.

And the woman broughte forth a sonne, and called his name Samson. And the childe grew, and the LORDE blessed him. And the sprete of the LORDE begāne to be with him in the tentes of Dan, betwene Zarga and Esthaol.

The xiiij. Chapter.

Ⓐ SAMSON wente downe vnto Thimnath, ⁊ there he sawe a woman amōge the daughters of ſy Philistynes. And whan he came vp, he tolde his father ⁊ his mother, ⁊ sayde: I haue sene a woman amōge the daughters of the Philistynes, I praye you geue me the same to wife. His father ⁊ his mother sayde vnto him: Is there not a woman amonge the daughters of thy brethren, ⁊ in all thy people, but thou must go ⁊ take a wife amōge the Philistynes, which are vncircumcised?

Samson sayde vnto his father: Geue me this womā, for she pleaseth myne eyes. But his father ⁊ his mother knewe not ſy it came of the LORDE, ⁊ that he soughte an occasion agaynst the Philistynes. For the Philistynes reigned ouer Israel at ſy same tyme. So Samson wente downe with his father and with his mother vnto Thimnath.

B And when they came to the vynyardes of Thimnath, beholde, there came a yonge roaring lyon against him. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpon him, and he rente him in peces, euen as a kydd is parted a sunder, and yet had he nothinge at all in his hāde, and he tolde it not vnto his father & his mother.

Now whan he came downe, he spake with the woman, and she pleased Samsons eyes. And after certayne dayes he came agayne, to receaue her, & wente out of ſ waye, that he mighte se ſ deed carcas of the lyon : and beholde, in ſ lyons carcas there was a swarme of beyes, and hony : and he toke of it in his hande, and ate therof by the waye : and wete vnto his father and to his mother, and gaue them to eate also. But he tolde them not, that he had taken the hony out of the lyons carcas.

C And whan his father came downe to the woman, Samson made a feast there, as the yonge men vsed to do. And whan they sawe him, they gaue him thirtie companys to be with him. Samson sayde vnto them : I wil expresse a darke sentence vnto you, yf ye expounde me the same with in these seuen dayes of the feast, I wyl geue you thirtie shertes, and thirtie change of raymente. But yf ye can not expounde it, then shall ye geue me thirtie shertes, & thirtie change of rayment. And they sayde vnto him : Shewe forth thy ryddle, let vs heare it. He sayde vnto them : Meate wente out from the deuourer, and swetenesse from the mightie. And in three dayes they coule not expounde the ryddle.

Vpon the seuenth daye they sayde vnto Samsons wife : Persuade thy huszbāde, that he tell vs what the ryddle meaneth, or els we shal burne the and thy fathers house with fyre. Haue ye called vs hither, to brynge vs to pouerte ? Then wepte Samsons wife before him, and sayde : Thou art displeased at me, and louest me not : thou hast expressed a darke sentence vnto the children of my people, and hast not tolde it me.

D But he sayde vnto her : Beholde, * I haue not tolde it vnto my father and mother, and shulde I tell it the ? And she wepte before him those seuen dayes, whyle they had ſ feast. But on the seuth daye he tolde it her, for she was so importune vpon him. And she expounded the darke sentence vnto the children of her people. Then sayde the men of the cite vnto him vpon the seuenth daye or euer the Sonne wente downe : What is sweter then hony ? What is stronger then the lyon ? But he sayde vnto thē : Yf ye had not plowed with my calfe, ye shulde not haue founde out my ryddle. And the sprete of ſ LORDE came vpon him, and he wente downe vnto Ascalon, and slewe thirtie men of them, & toke their spoyles, and gaue change of rayment vnto thē, ſ had expounded the ryddle. And he was wrothfully displeased, & wente vp vnto his fathers house. As for Samsons wife, she was geuen vnto one of his companys, which belonged vnto him.

The xv. Chapter.

IT fortunē after certaine daies aboute the wheate haruest tyme, ſ Samson visited his wife with a kydd. And whā he thoughte, I wyl go to my wife in to the chamber, hir father wolde not let him in, and sayde : I thoughte thou wast displeased at her, and I gaue her vnto thy frende. But she hath a yonger sister which is more beutyfull then she, let ſ same be thine for her. Thē sayde Samson vnto thē : I haue once gottē a righte occasion agaynst the Philistynes, I wyl do you displeasure.

And Samson wete and caught thre hundred foxes, and toke fyre brandes, and festened one tayle to another, and put euer a fyre brande betwene two tayles, and kynled the same with fyre, and let them go amonge the Philistynes corne, and thus he brent ſ stoukes and the stondinge corne, and ſ vynyardes, and the olyue trees.

Then sayde the Philistynes : Who hath done this ? And they sayde : Samson the husbāde of the Thimnites doughter, because he toke awaye his wife from him, and gaue hir vnto his frende. Then wente the Philistynes vp, and brent her and hir father also with fyre.

But Samson sayde vnto them : I can suffre you to do this, neuertheles I wyl be auēged vpon you my selfe, and then wyl I leaue of. And he smote them sore both vpo the shulders & loynes : and wete downe, & dwelt in the stone clyffe at Etam. Then wente the Philistynes vp, and layed sege vnto Iuda, & pitched at Lechi. But they of Iuda sayde : Wherefore are ye come vp against vs? They answered: we are come vp to bynde Samson, & we maye do vnto him, as he hath done vnto vs.

Then wete there three M. men of Iuda downe to the stone clyffe of Etam, & sayde vnto Samson: Knowest thou not that the Philistynes raigne ouer vs? Wherefore hast thou done this then vnto vs? He sayde: As they dyd vnto me, so haue I done vnto the agayne. They sayde vnto him: We are come downe to bynde the, & to deluyuer & in to the hãde of the Philistynes. Samson sayde vnto thẽ: Then sweare & promyse me, & ye will not slaye me. They answered him: We will not kyll the, we wil but bynde the, & deluyuer the in to their hande, & wyl not slaye &. And they bounde him with two new coardes & caried him from the stone. And when he came vnto Lechi, the Philistynes shouted, and rãne vnto him. But & sprete of & LORDE came vpon him, & the coardes aboute his armes were like thredes burnt in the fyre, so & the bondes were lowsed from his hondes.

And he founde the cheke bone of a deed asse: then put he forth his hande, and toke it, & slewe a thousande men therewith: And Samson sayde: With an olde asses cheke bone, yee euẽ with the cheke bone of an asse haue I slayne a thousande men. And when he had sayde &, he cast & cheke bone out of his hande, & called the place Ramath Lechi. But whã he was sore a thyrst, he called vpõ the LORDE, & saide: Soch greate health hast thou geuẽ by the hãde of thy seruaunt, but now must I dye a thyrst, & fall in to & hande of & vncircũcised. Thẽ God opened a gome tothe in & chekebone, so & water wete out: & when he dranke, his sprete came agayne, & he was refresshed. Therefore vnto this daye it is yet called & well of & cheke bone of him & made intercession. And he iudged Israel in the tyme of the Philistynes twẽtye yeaer.

The xvi. Chapter.

SAMSON wente vnto Gasa, & there he sawe an harlot, & laye with her. Thẽ was it saide vnto the Gasites: Samson is come hither. And they compased him aboute, & caused to laye wayte for him preuely, & watched all the nighte in the gate of & cite, & all that nighte they helde them styll, & sayde: Abyde, tomorow when it is lighte, we will slaye him. But Samson laye vnto mydnighte, then rose he at mydnighte, & toke holde on both & syde portes of & gate of the cite, with both the postes, & lifte them out with the barres, & layed them vpon his shuldres, & bare them vp to & toppe of & mount ouer agaynst Hebron.

After this he fell in to the loue of a woman by & broke of Sorek, whose name was Dalila, vnto whom the prynces of the Philistynes came vp, and sayde vnto her: Persuade him, and loke wherin he hath soch greate strẽghth, & how we maye ouercome him, & we mighte bynde him & subdue him, so wyl we geue the euery man a M. and an C. syluerlinges. And Dalila sayde vnto Samson: I praye the tell me, wherin thy greate strẽghth is, & how thou mightest be bounde to be subdued. Samson sayde vnto her: Yf I were bounde with seuẽ roapes of fresh senowes, which are not yet dried vp, I shulde be weake, and as another man. Thẽ the prynces of the Philistynes broughte vp vnto her seuen new roapes, which were not yet dried vp. And she bounde him therewith. (But there was wayte layed for him besyde her in the chamber) and she sayde vnto him: The Philistynes vpon the Samson. Neuertheles he brake the roapes in sunder, euẽ as a twyned threde breaketh, when it hath catched the heate of the fyre. And it was not knowne wherin his strength was.

Then sayde Dalila vnto Samson: beholde, thou hast begyled me & dyssembled with me: tell me yet, wherewithall mayest thou be bounde? He answered her: Yf they bounde me with new coardes, wherewith no labour hath bene done, I shulde be feble, & as another man. Then toke Dalila new coardes, & bounde him withall, and sayde: The Philistynes vpõ the Samson (but there was wayte layed for him in the chamber.) And he brake them from his armes, euen as it had bene a threde.

Dalila sayde vnto him: Yet hast thou begyled me & dessembled with me: O tell me yet, wherewithall mightest thou be bounde? He answered her: Yf thou playtest seuẽ hayrie lockes of my heade together in a fyllet, and fastenest them in with a nayle (I shulde be weake.) And she saide vnto him: The Philistynes vpõ the Samson. But he awaked out of his slepe, & drue out & playted hayrie lockes with the nale and the fyllet.

D The sayde she vnto him: How cast thou saye \hat{y} thou louest me, where as thine hert is not yet with me? Three tymes hast thou disceaue me, and not tolde me wherein thy greate strength is. So whan she was euery day importune vpon him with her wordes, τ wolde not let him haue rest, his soule was faynte euen vnto the death, τ he shewed her his whole hert, τ sayde vnto her: * There came neuer rasoure vpon my heade, for I am a Nazaree of God fro my mothers wombe. Yf I were shauen, my strength shulde departe fro me, so that I shulde be weake, and as all other men. Now whan Dalila sawe that he had opened all his hert vnto her, she sent τ called for the prynces of the Philistynes, τ sayde: Come yet once vp, for he hath opened his whole hert vnto me.

E The came the prynces of the Philistynes vp vnto her, τ broughte the money with them in their handes. And she made him to slepe vpon hir lappe, τ called one which shoue of the seuē hayrie lockes of his heade. And she beganne to vexe him. Thē was his strength departed fro him. And she sayde vnto him: The Philistynes vpon the Samson. Now whā he awoke out of his slepe, he thoughte: I will go forth as I haue done afore tyme, τ ease my selfe, τ knewe not \hat{y} the LORDE was departed from him. But the Philistynes toke him, τ put out his eyes, and broughte him downe to Gasa, τ bounde him with fetters, and made him to grynde in the preson. But the heer of his heade beganne to growe agayne, where it was shauen of.

F Whan \hat{y} prynces of the Philistynes were gathered together, to make a greate sacrifice vnto Dagon their god, and to be ioyfull, they sayde: Oure god hath delyuered Samson oure enemye in to oure hande. Like wyse whan \hat{y} people sawe him, they prayed their god, τ sayde: Oure god hath delyuered in to oure handes oure enemye, \hat{y} destroyed oure londe, τ slewe many of vs. Now whan their hert was ioyfull, they sayde: Let vs fetch Samson, that he maye make some pastyme before vs. Then fetched they Samson out of the preson, τ he made pastyme before them. And they set him betwene two pilers. But Samson sayde vnto the lad \hat{y} led him by the hande: Let me touche the pilers wher vpon the house stondeth, \hat{y} I maye leane ther vnto. As for \hat{y} house, it was full of men τ women. All the prynces of the Philistynes were there also, and vpon the rofe were aboute a thre thousande men and women, which behelde what pastyme Samson made.

But Samson called vpon the LORDE, τ G sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thynke vpon me, τ strength me but this once O God I beseke the, \hat{y} for both myne eyes I maye auēge me on the Philistynes. And he toke holde of \hat{y} two mydpilers, that the house stode vpon τ was holden by, the one in his righte hāde, τ \hat{y} other in his lefte, τ saide: My soule dye with the Philistynes, τ he bowed him selfe mightly. Then fell the house vpon the prynces τ vpon all the people that were therein, so that there were mo of \hat{y} slayne which dyed in his death, thē he slewe whyle he lyued. Then came his brethren downe and all his fathers house, and toke him, and caried him vp, and buried him in the graue of his father Manoah betwene Zarga and Esthaol. He iudged Israel twentye yeaere.

The xviij. Chapter.

THERE was a man vpō mount Ephraim, A named Micha, which sayde vnto his mother: The thousande and hundreth syluerlinges which thou hast taken vnto the, τ sworne, and spoken of before myne eares: beholde, \hat{y} same money is by me, I haue taken it vnto me. Then sayde his mother: The blessinge of the LORDE haue thou my sonne. So he gaue his mother the thousande τ hundreth syluerlinges agayne. And his mother saide: That money haue I sanctified vnto the LORDE with my hande for my sonne, to make a molten ymage: therfore I geue it the agayne. Neuertheles he delyuered \hat{y} money agayne vnto his mother.

Then toke his mother two hundreth syluerlinges, τ put them forth to \hat{y} goldsmith, which made a molten ymage, \hat{y} was afterwarde in Michas house. And thus the man Micha had a gods house, τ made an ouerbody cote, τ Idols, and fylled \hat{y} handes of one of his sonnes, \hat{y} he mighte be his prest. + At \hat{y} tyme was there no kynge in Israel, τ euery man dyd the thinge \hat{y} was righte in his awne eyes. There was a yōge man of Bethleem Iuda, amōge the kynreds of Iuda, and he was a Leuite, and was a straunger there. The same wente out of the cite of Bethleem Iuda, to walke whither he coulede.

C And whā he came vp to mount Ephraim vnto the house of Micha, to go on his iourney, Micha axed him: Whence comest thou? He answered him: I am a Leuite of Bethleem Iuda, and am walkyng where I can. Micha sayde vnto him: Tary with me, thou shalt be my father and my prest, I will geue the euery yeaere ten syluerlinges and thy appoynted raymēt, and meate and drynke: and the Leuite wēte on. And the Leuite agreed to abyde with the man: and he helde the yonge mā, as one of his owne sonnes. And Micha fylled the Leuites hande, that he mighte be his prest, and so he was in Michas house. And Micha sayde: I am sure the LORDE wyll do me good now, that I haue a Leuite to my prest.

The xliij. Chapter.

AT that tyme was there no kynge in Israel. And ſ trybe of ſ Danites soughte them an enheritaunce to dwell in, *for vnto that daie there was no enheritaunce fallen vnto them amonge the trybes of Israel. And the childrē of Dan sent out of their kynreds fyue captaynes (which were men of armes) from Zarga and Esthaol, to spye and search out the londe. And they sayde vnto them: Go youre waie, and search out the londe. And they came vp to mount Ephraim in to ſ house of Micha, and taried there all nighte. And whyle they were there with Michas huszsholde, they knewe ſ voyce of the yonge man the Leuite, and sayde vnto him: Who broughte ſ hither? What makest thou here? and why woldest thou come hither?

13 He answered thē: Thus ſ thus hath Micha done vnto me, and hath hyred me to be his prest. They sayde vnto him: O axe at God, ſ we maye perceaue, whether oure iourney which we go, shal prospere well or not. The prest answered them: Go youre waye in peace, youre iourney ſ ye go, is before the LORDE. Then the fyue men wente their waye, and came vnto Lais, and sawe that the people which was therin, dwelt sure, euen as ſ Sidonians, at rest, and carelesse, and that there was no lorde in the londe to vexe them, and were farre from the Sidoniās, and had nothinge to do with eny man.

* Iosu. 19. d.

And they came to their brethrē to Zarga and Esthaol. And their brethren saide vnto them: How is it with you? They sayde: Arise, let vs go vp vnto them, for we haue sene the londe, ſ it is a very good londe: make haist therfore, and be not slacke to go, that ye maye come to take possession of the londe. Whan ye come, ye shall come to a carelesse people, and the londe is wyde: for God hath deliuered this place in to youre hande, where nothinge wanteth of all ſ is vpon earth.

Then wente there thence out of the kynreds of Dan from Zarga and Esthaol, sixe hundredre men ready wapened to ſ battayll, and wente vp, and pitched at Kiriath Iearim in Iuda: therfore called they the same place, ſ hoost of Dan, vnto this daye, which is behinde Kiriath Iearim.

And frō thence they wēte vp vnto moūt Ephraim, and came to the house of Micha. Then answered the fyue men that wēte out to spye the londe of Lais, and sayde vnto their brethren: Knowe ye not that in these houses there is an ouerbody cote, Idols, and molten ymages? Now maye ye loke what ye haue to do. They departed thence, and came to the house of the yonge man the Leuite in Michas house, and saluted him fredly. But the sixe hundredre men, which were of ſ children of Dan, stode ready harnesssed before ſ gate. And the fyue men that were gone out to spye ſ londe, wēte vp, and came thither, and toke the ymage, the ouerbody cote, and the molten Idols. In the meane whyle stode ſ prest at the gate, with the sixe hundredre ready harnesssed.

Now whā these were come in to Michas house, and toke the ymage, the ouerbody cote, and the molten Idols, the prest sayde vnto them: What do ye? They answered him: Holde thy peace, and laye thine hande vpon thy mouth, and go with vs, ſ thou mayest be oure father and prest. Is it better for the to be prest in one mans house, then amonge a whole trybe and kynred in Israel? This pleased the prest well, and he toke both the ouerbody cote, and the Idols, and the ymage, and came in amonge the people. And whan they turned them and wente thence, they sent their children, and catell, and soch precious thynges as they had, before them.

Whan they were come farre now from the house of Micha, the men ſ were in Michas houses gathered the together by Michas house, τ folowed f childrē of Dan, and cried vpon the childrē of Dan. They turned their faces about, and sayde vnto Micha: What ayleth the, f thou makest soch a crienge? He answered: Ye haue taken awaye my goddes, and the prest, τ are goinge youre waie, and what haue I behynde? What is here? And yet ye saye vnto me: What ayleth the? But the childrē of Dan saide vnto him: Let not thy voyce be herde amōge vs, that some wrothfull mē thrust not at the, and so thy soule and the soule of thy house be destroyed. So the childrē of Dan wēte on their waye. And Micha, whan he sawe f they were to stronge for him, turned backe, and came agayne to his house.

¶ But they toke that Micha had made, τ the prest whom he had, τ came vnto Lais, to a quyet carelessse people, and slewe them with the edge of the swerde, and burnt the cite with fyre, and there was no man to deliyuer them: for they laye farre frō Sidon, and had to do with no man. And they laye in the valley, which is besyde Beth Rehob. Then buylded they the cite, τ dwelt therin, τ called it Dan, after the name of their father Dan, whom Israel begat. And f cite was called Lais afore tyme.

And the children of Dan set vp the ymage for them, and Ionathan f sonne of Gerson the sonne of Manasse, τ his sonnes were prestes amōge the trybe of f Danites, τ vnto the tyme f they were led awaye captiue out of the londe. And thus they set amōge the ymage of Micha, which he had made, as lōge as f house of God was at Silo.

The xix. Chapter.

¶ At the same tyme was there no kynge in Israel, and there was a man of Leui, which was a straūger besyde moūt Ephraim, and had taken him a cōcubine of Bethleem Iuda to wife. And whā she had played the harlot besyde him, she ranne frō him to hir fathers house vnto Bethleem Iuda, τ was there foure monethes longe. And hir husbāde gat him vp, τ wente after her, to speake frēdly with her, τ to fetch her againe, τ had a seruauit τ a couple of asses with him. And she led him in to hir fathers house. But whan the damsels father sawe him, he was glad, τ receaued him: τ his father in lawe, f damsels father kepte him, so f he taried three dayes with him: thus they ate and drōke, and remained there all nighte.

But on f fourth daye he gat him vp early, τ wolde go his waye. Then sayde f damsels father vnto his sonne in lawe: f Refresh thine hert first with a morsell of bred, and then shal ye go. And they sat them downe, τ ate and dronke both together: Then sayde the damsels father vnto the man: Oh tarye all nighte, f we maie refresh thine hert. But f mā arose, τ wolde nedes go. And his father in lawe constrayned him to tarye all nighte. On the fifth daye in the mornyng he gat him vp, and wolde be gone. Then sayde the damsels father: I praye the comforte thine hert, τ let vs tary tyll f daye be farther past, and so they ate both together.

And the man gat him vp, and wolde go with his concubine and with his seruauit. But his father in lawe the damsels father, saide vnto him agayne: Lo, the daye is spent, τ it begynneth to be euen, tary all night: beholde, here is lodginge yet this daye, abyde here this night, it shal refresh thine hert: to-morrow by times gett you vp, and go youre waye vnto thy tent. Neuertheles the man wolde not tary, but gat him vp, τ wēte his waye, and came ouer agaynst Iebus (that is Ierusalem) and his couple of asses ladē, and his concubine with him.

Now whan they were come nye vnto Iebus, the daye fell fast awaye. And f seruauit saide vnto his master: I prairie you go on, and let vs turne in to this cite of the Iebusites, and tarye therin allnight. Notwithstandinge his master sayde vnto him: I wil not turne in to f cite of the aleauntes, that are not of the children of Israel, but I wyl go ouer vnto Gibeā. And he sayde vnto his seruauit: Go thou before, that we maye come to some place, and tarye at Gibeā or at Ramah allnight. And they wente on and walked, and the Sonne wente downe vpon the harde by Gibeā, which lyeth in the trybe of Ben Iamin: and they turned in there, f they mighte come in, and tarye at Gibeā all nighte. But whan he came in, he sat him downe in f strete of the cite: for there was noman that wolde lodge them in his house that night.

And beholde, then came there an olde mā from his worke out of the felde in the euen-inge: and he was also of mount Ephraim, and a straunger at Gibeā: but ſ̄ mē of that place were ſ̄ childrē of Iemini. And whan he liſte vp his eies, & ſawe the ſtraunger in the ſtete he ſayde vnto him: Whither wilt thou go? & whence comest thou? He answered him:

We are goinge on oure iourney from Bethleē Iuda, vntyll we come beſyde mount Ephraim, whēce I am, and wente vnto Bethleem Iuda, and now I go vnto ſ̄ houſe of ſ̄ LORDE &
no mā wil harbarow me. We haue ſtrawe and prouēder for oure aſſes, and bred and wyne for me and thy handmayden, and for the yonge man which is with thy ſeruaunt, ſo ſ̄
we wante nothinge.

¶ The olde man ſayde: Peace be with the:
what ſoeuer thou wanteſt, thou findeſt it with me, onely tarye not in the ſtete all nighte.
And he broughte him in to his houſe, and gaue the aſſes prouender: and they waſhed their fete, and ate & dronke. And whā their hert was now ioyfull, the men of the cyte, the children of Belial, came, and compaſed the houſe rounde aboute, and ruſſhed at ſ̄ dore, and ſayde vnto ſ̄ olde man, which was the good man of ſ̄ houſe: Bringe out the mā which is come in to thy houſe, that we maye knowe him.

*But the good man of the houſe wente forth to them, and ſayde vnto them: Oh no my brethren, do not ſo wickedly, conſideringe this man is come in to my houſe: Oh do not ſoch folye. Beholde, I haue a daughter yet a virgin, and this man hath a cōcubine, thoſe wil I brynge forth vnto you, that ye maye humble them, and do with them as ye lyke:
but do not ſoch foly vnto this man. Neuer-theles the men wolde not herken vnto him.
Then toke ſ̄ man his concubine and broughte her forth vnto them: and they knewe her, and dealte ſhamefully with her all ſ̄ night vntill the mornynge. And whan the mornynge brake on, they let her go.

¶ Then came the woman early in the morn-ynge, and fell downe at the dore of the mā's houſe that her lorde was in, and laye there tyll it was light. Now whan hir lorde roſe vp in the mornynge, and opened the dore of the houſe, and wente forth to go on his iour-ney, beholde, his concubine laye at the dore of the houſe, and hir handes vpon the thresholde. He ſaide vnto her: ſtonde vp, let vs go. Neuertheles ſhe gaue him no anſwere.

Thē toke he her vp vpon his aſſe, gat him vp,
and wente vnto his place.

Now whan he came home, he toke a ſwerde, and helde his concubine, and cut her with the bones and all in to twolue peces, and ſent them in to all the coaſtes of Iſrael. Who ſo euer ſawe it, ſayde: Soch a thinge hath not bene done ner ſene, ſence the tyme that ſ̄ children of Iſrael departed out of the londe of Egipte, vnto this daye. Now as concernynge this, take youre advyſement, and geue youre counsell, and ſhew it forth.

The xx. Chapter.

THEN wente the children of Iſrael out and gathered a congregacion together as one man, frō Dan vntill Bersaba, and from the londe of Gilead vnto the LORDE to Miſpa: and there came together of all the quarters of the people, and of all the trybes of Iſrael in to the congregacion of the people of God, foure hundreth thoſande fote men that drue out ſ̄ ſwerde. But the children of Ben Iamin herde, how that ſ̄ children of Iſrael were gone vp vnto Miſpa. And the children of Iſrael ſayde: Tell vs, how happened this euell?

Then answered the Leuite the huſzbande of the woman that was ſlayne, and ſayde: I came to Gibeā in Ben Iamin with my concu-byne, to tary there allnight, then the cytesins of Gibeā gat them vp agaynſt me, and compaſed me aboute in the houſe by night, and thoughte to ſlaye me, and defyled my cōcubyne, ſo that ſhe dyed: then toke I my cōcubyne, and cut her in peces, and ſent the peces in to euery countre of the inheritaunce of Iſrael: for they haue done an abhominacion and folye in Iſrael. Beholde, here are ye children of Iſrael: aduſye you well, and take this matter in hande.

So all the people gat them vp as one mā, and ſayde: Nomā ſhal go in to his tente, ner departe to his houſe, but this wil we do now agaynſt Gibeā: Let vs caſt lot, and take ten men of an hundreth, and an hundreth of a thouſande, and a thouſande of ten thouſande, out of all ſ̄ trybes of Iſrael, ſ̄ they maie take fode for ſ̄ people, to come & do with Gibeā Ben Iamin, acordynge to their folye which they haue done in Iſrael. Thus all the men of Israel beyng confederate, gathered them selues together as one man vnto the cite: and the trybes of Israel sent men vnto all the kindreds of Ben Iamin, and caused to saye vnto them: What manner of wickydnes is this, that is done amonge you? Delyuer here therfore the men the children of Belial at Gibeā, that we maye put them to death, and do awaye the euell out of Israel. Neuertheles the children of Ben Iamin wolde not folowe the voyce of their brethren the children of Israel, but gathered them selues out of ʒ cities vnto Gibeā, to go forth in battayll agaynst the children of Israel.

¶ And the same daye were there nombred of the children of Ben Iamin out of the cities, sixe and twenty thousande men, that drue the swerde, beside the citesyns of Gibeā of whom there were tolde seuē hundredre chosen men. And amōge all this people there were chosen out seuē hundredre men, which vsed not the right hande but the lefte, and yet with the slyng coulde they touch an heer, and not mysse. But the men of Israel, beside them of Bē Iamin, were nōbred foure hūdreth thousande, which drue the swerde, ʒ were all men of armes. And the children of Israel arose, and wente vp to the house of God (in Silo) and axed at God, and sayde: Who shall go vp for vs to beginne the battayll with ʒ children of Ben Iamin? The LORDE saide: Iuda shall begynne.

So the children of Israel gat thē vp in ʒ mornynge, ʒ pitched ouer agaist Gibeā, ʒ euery man of Israel wēte out to fighte with Ben Iamin, and set them selues in aray to fighte agaynst Gibeā. Then fell the children of Ben Iamin out of Gibeā, and slewe the same daye amonge Israel two ʒ twentye thousande to the grounde.

¶ But the people of the men of Israel comforted them selues, and made them ready to fighte yet more in the same place, after they had prepared them selues the daye afore. And the children of Israel wente vp, and wepte before the LORDE vntyll the euenynge, and axed at the LORDE, ʒ sayde: Shall we go eny more to fighte with oure brethren the children of Ben Iamin? The LORDE sayde: Go vp vnto them. And whan the children of Israel gat them vp to the childrē of Ben Iamin on ʒ next daye, the Ben Iamites fell out of Gibeā agaynst them the same daye, and slewe yet eightene thousande of ʒ children of Israel to the grounde, which all drue the swerde.

Then wente all the children of Israel vp, and all the people, and came to the house of God, and wepte, and taried there before the LORDE, ʒ fasted that daye vntyll the euen, and offred burntofferynge and deedofferynge before the LORDE. And the children of Israel axed at the LORDE (the Arke of the couenaunt of God was there at that tyme, and Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the sonne of Aaron stode before him at the same tyme) ʒ they sayde: Shal we go forth eny more to fighte with oure brethren the childrē of Ben Iamin, or shal we leaue of? The LORDE sayde: Go vp, tomorrow wyll I delyuer them in to youre handes.

And the children of Israel set a preuy watch agaynst Gibeā rounde aboute, and so the children of Israel wente vp to the children of Ben Iamin on the thirde daye, and set them selues in aray agaynst Gibeā like as the other two tymes afore. Thē came the children of Ben Iamin out agaynst the people, ʒ brake out of the cite, ʒ beganne to slaye certayne wounded of the people (like as the other two times afore) in the felde vpon two stretes: wherof one goeth towarde Bethel, the other vnto Gilead vpon a thirtey men in Israel. Then thought the childrē of Ben Iamin: They are smytten before vs like as afore. But the childrē of Israel sayde: Let vs flye, that we maie prouoke them out of the cite in to the hye stretes.

Then all the men of Israel gat them vp from their place, and prepared them selues vnto Baal Thamar. And the hinder watch of Israel brake out of their place, from ʒ caue of Gaba, and came vnto Gibeā, twentye thousande chosen men out of all Israel, so that it was a sore battayll: but they knewe not that the euell shulde happen vnto them. Thus the LORDE smote Ben Iamin before the children of Israel, so that the same daye the children of Israel destroyed fyue ʒ twentye thousande and an hundredre men in Ben Iamin, which all drue the swerde.

¶ For whan the childrē of Ben Iamin sawe that they were smitten, the men of Israel gaue them rowme (to flye). For they trusted to the watch, which they had sett by Gibeā. And the watch made haist also, ʒ brake forth vnto Gibea, and wente vpon it, and smote all the cite with the edge of ȝ swerde. They were appoynted betwene them selues the men of Israel and the hynder watch, to fall vpon them with the swerde, whan the smoke of the cite arose. Now whan the men of Israel turned them in the battayll, and Ben Iamin beganne to smyte the wounded in Israel vpon a thirtie men, and thoughte, they are smytten before vs, like as in the battayll afore, then beganne there a piler of smoke to arise vp from the cite. And Ben Iamin loked behinde them: and beholde, the flamme of ȝ cite wente vp vnto heauen. And the men of Israel turned them, and were feare vpon ȝ men of Ben Iamin: for they sawe that the euell wolde happen vnto them.

¶ And they turned them before the men of Israel in the waye to the wyldernes, but the battayll folowed vpon them. And them of the cite destroyed they amoge them. And they compased Ben Iamin rounde aboute, and folowed vpon them vnto Mennah, and trode them downe tyll afore Gibea eastwarde. And there fell of Ben Iamin eightene thousande men, which were all men of armes.

Whan the remnaunt of Ben Iamin sawe that, they turned them and fled towarde the wyldernes vnto the stonye rocke of Rimō. But in the same strete they slewe fyue thousande men, and folowed vpon them vnto Gideom, and slewe two thousande of thē: and so there fell the same daye of Ben Iamin fyue and twenty thousande men which drue ȝ swerde, and were all mē of armes. Onely sixe hundred men turned backe, and fled towarde the wyldernes vnto the stonye rocke of Rimō, and abode in the rocke of Rimō foure monethes. And the men of Israel came agayne to the children of Ben Iamin, and smote them that were in the cite with ȝ edge of the swerde, both mē and catell and all that was founde: and what soeuer was foude in the cite, they cast it in to the fyre.

The xxi. Chapter.

¶ THE men of Israel had sworē at Mispā, and sayde: Noman shal geue his daughter to the Ben Iamites to wife. And the people came to the house of God (in Silo) ¶ abode there before God vntill the euenynge, and lifte vp their voyce, and wepte sore, and sayde:

* Num. 31. c.

O LORDE God of Israel, wherefore is this come to passe in Israel this daye? But on the morow the people gat thē vp early, and builded there an altare, and offred burnt-offerings and deedofferynges.

And the children of Israel sayde: Where is there eny mā of the trybes of Israel, that is not come vp with the congregacion vnto the LORDE? For there was a greate ooth made, that who so came not vp to Mispā vnto the LORDE, shulde dye the deeth. And the children of Israel were sory for Ben Iamin their brother, and sayde: This daye is there one trybe lesse in Israel. How wyll we do that the remnaunt maye haue wyues? For we haue sworne by the LORDE, that we wyl not geue thē wyues of oure daughters. And they sayde: Where is there eny mā of the trybes of Israel, that is not come vp to the LORDE vnto Mispā? And beholde, there was not one man of the citesyns of Iabes in Gilead.

Then sent the congregacion twelue thousande men of armes thither, and commaunded them, and sayde: Go youre waye, and smite the citesyns of Iabes in Gilead with the swerde, the women also and the children, but so that ye do after this maner: *Se that ye damne all them that are males, and all the women that haue lyen with men. And amonge the citesins of Iabes in Gilead they foude foure hundred damsels, which were virgins, and had lyen with noman: those they broughte in to the hoost vnto Silo, which lyeth in the londe of Canaan.

Then sent the whole congregacion, ¶ and caused to talke with the children of Ben Iamin, which were in the stonie rocke of Rimō and called vnto them frendly. So the children of Ben Iamin came agayne at the same tyme, and they gaue them women which they had of the women of Iabes in Gilead, and founde no mo after that maner. Then were the people sory for Ben Iamin, that ȝ LORDE had made a gappe in the trybes of Israel. And the Elders of the congregaciō sayde: What wil we do, that the remnaunt maye haue wyues also? for the wemē in Ben Iamin are destroyed, and they sayde: The inheritaunce of them of Ben Iamin that are escaped, must nedes remaine, that there be not a trybe destroyed out of Israel: ¶ we can not geue them oure doughters to wyues. For the children of Israel haue sworne and sayde: Cursed be he that geueth a wyfe to the Ben Iamites.

And they sayde: Beholde there is a yearly feast of the LORDE at Silo, which lieth on the northsyde of the Gods house, and on the eastside of the strete as a mā goeth from Bethel vnto Sichem, and lieth on the south side of Libona. And they commaunded the children of Ben Iamin, & sayde: Go youre waye, and wayte in the vynyardes. And whan ye se that the doughters of Silo go forth by cōpanyes to daunse, get you out of the vynyardes, and euery man take him a wyfe of the doughters of Silo, and go youre waye in to the lode of Ben Iamin. As for their fathers and brethren, whan they come to lawe with vs, we wyll saye vnto them: Be fauourable to them, for they haue not taken thē in battail: but ye gaue thē not vnto them by time, and it is youre faute.

The children of Ben Iamin did so, and accordinge to their nombre toke them wyues from the daunse, whom they caught by violence, and wente their waye, & dwelt in their awne inheritaunce, and buylded cities and dwelt therein. The children of Israel also gat them vp from thence at the same time, euery one to his trybe and to his kinred, and departed thēce, euery man to his awne inheritaunce. *At ȳ time was there no kyng in Israel, and euery man dyd ȳ thinge ȳ was right in his awne eies.

Chap. IIII.

Boos marieth Ruth, which beareth him Obed Davids graundfather.

The first Chapter.

IN ȳ tyme whan the Iudges ruled, there was a dert in the londe. And there wente a mā from Bethleē Iuda to take his journey in to the londe of the Moabites with his wife and two sonnes, which man was called Eli Melech, and his wife Naemi, & his two sonnes, the one Mahelon, and the other Chilion: these were Ephrates of Bethleem Iuda. And whan they came in to the londe of ȳ Moabites, they dwelt there. And Eli Melech Naemis huszbande dyed, & she was left behinde with hir two sonnes, which toke Moabitish wyues: the one was called Arpa, the other Ruth. And whan they had dwelt there ten yeare, they dyed both, Mahelon and Chilion, so that the woman remainyed desolate of both hir sonnes and hir huszbande.

Then gat she her vp with both hir sonnes wyues, & wente agayne out of the lode of ȳ Moabites (for she had herde in the londe of B the Moabites, & the LORDE had visited his people & geuen them bred) & so she departed from & place where she was, & both hir sonnes wyues with her. And as they wete by the waye to come agayne in to the londe of Iuda, she sayde vnto both hir sonnes wyues: Go youre waye, & turne backe ether of you to hir mothers house: the LORDE shewe mercy vpon you, as ye haue done on the & are deed & on me. The LORDE graunte you, & ye maie fynde rest ether of you in hir huszbādes house (whom ye shal get) and she kyssed them.

Then lift they vp their voyce, and wepte, & sayde vnto her: We wil go with vnto thy people. But Naemi sayde: Turne agayne my daughters, why wolde ye go with me? How can I haue children eny more in my body, to be youre huszbandes? Turne agayne my daughters, and go youre waye, for I am now to olde to take an huszbande.

C And though I shulde saye: I hope this night to take an huszbande & to brynge forth children, yet coulde ye not tary till they were growne vp: for ye shulde be to olde, so that ye coulde haue no huszbandes. No my daughters, therefore am I sory for you, for & hāde of the LORDE is gone forth ouer me.

Then lifte they vp their voyce, and wepte yet more, and Arpa kyssed hir mother in lawe (and turned backe againe) but Ruth abode styll by her. Neuertheles she sayde: Beholde, thy syster in lawe is turned backe vnto hir people and to hir god, turne thou againe also after thy sister in lawe. Ruth answered: Speake not to me therof, that I shulde forsake the, and turne backe from the: whither so euer thou goest, thither wil I go also: and loke where thou abydest, there wil I abide also: Thy people is my people, & thy God is my God. Loke where thou diest, there wil I dye, and euen there wil I also be buried. The LORDE do this and that vnto me, death onely shal departe vs.

D Now when she sawe, that she was stedfastly mynded to go with her, she spake nomore to her therof. So they wente on both together, till they came vnto Bethleem. And when they were come in to Bethleem, the whole cite was moued ouer them, and sayde: Is not this Naemi? Neuerthelesse she sayde vnto them: call me not Naemi, but Mara: for the Allmightie hath made me very sory. I departed full, but the LORDE hath brought me home agayne emptye. Why call ye me then Naemi? whā the LORDE hath broughte me lowe, and the Allmightie hath made me sory?

It was aboute the tyme of the begynninge of the barlye haruest, whan Naemi and hir sonnes wife Ruth & Moabitysse, came agayne from the londe of the Moabites vnto Bethleem. There was a kinsman also of & kynred of Eli Melech Naemis huszbande, whose name was Boos, which was an honest man.

The ij. Chapter.

A ND Ruth the Moabitisse saide vnto A Naemi: Let me go in to & felde, & gather eares of corne, after him, in whose sight I shal finde fauoure. She sayde vnto her: Go thy waie my daughter. She wete on, & came & gathered after & reapers in & feld. And it fortuned that the same felde was the enheritaunce of Boos, which was of the kynred of Elimelech, and beholde, Boos came from Bethleem, and sayde vnto the reapers: The LORDE be with you. They answered: The LORDE blesse the. And Boos sayde vnto his yongman which had the ouersight of & reapers: Whose damsell is this? The yonge man that was set ouer & reapers, answered and sayde: It is the damsell the Moabitisse, which came agayne with Naemi from the londe of the Moabites. And B she sayde: Let me plucke vp and gather (I prae the) betwene the sheues after the reapers: and thus is she come, and hath stonde here euer sence the mornynge, and within a litle whyle she wolde haue bene gone home agayne.

Then sayde Boos vnto Ruth: Hearest thou my daughter? Thou shalt not come vpon another mans londe to gather, and go not awaye from hence, but tary with my dāsels, and loke where they reape in & felde, go thou after them: for I haue cōmaunded my seruantes that no man touch the. And yf thou be a thyrst, go thy waye to the vessell & drynke, where my seruantes drawe. Then fell she downe vpon hir face, and bowed hir self downe to the earth, and sayde vnto him: How haue I founde this fauoure in thy sighte, that thou woldest knowe me, which am yet a stranger?

Boos answered and sayde vnto her: It is C tolde me altogether, what thou hast done vnto thy mother in lawe after thy huszbādes death, how that thou hast left thy father and thy mother, and thy native countre, and art come to a people, whom thou hast not knowne afore. The LORDE recompence the thy doinge, and thy rewarde be perfecte with the LORDE God of Israel, vnto whom thou art come to put thy trust vnder his wynges. She sayde: let me fynde fauoure (syr) before thyne eyes, for thou hast comforted me, and spoken frendly vnto thy handmaydē, where as I am not yet like one of thy handmaydēs.

Boos sayde vnto her: Whan it is eatinge tyme, come hither, and eate of the bred, and dyppe thy morsell in the vyneger. And she sat hir downe besyde the reapers. And he set parched corne before her, and she ate, & was satisfied, and lefte ouer. And whā she rose to gather, Boos commaunded his seruantes, and sayde: Let her gather betwene the sheues also, and do her no dishonestye: and cast of the sheues vnto her, and let it lye that she maye gather it vp, and se that noman reprove her for it.

So she gathered in the felde vntyll euen and she shaked out what she had gathered, and it was almost an Ephā of barley: and she toke it vp, and came in to the cite, and shewed hir mother in lawe what she had gathered. She toke forth also, and gaue her of that which was left, wherof she was satisfied. Thē sayde hir mother in lawe vnto her: Blessinge haue the man that hath knowne the, where thou hast gathered and laboured this daye.

She tolde hir mother in lawe by whom she had laboured, and sayde: The mans name, by whom I haue wroughte to daye, is Boos. Naemi sayde vnto hir daughter in lawe: The blessinge of the LORDE haue he, for he hath not leftte of to be mercifull vnto the luyunge * and to the deed. And Naemi sayde vnto her: The same man belongeth vnto vs, and is oure nye kynsman. Ruth the Moabitisse saide: He saide morouer vnto me: Thou shalt resorte vnto my seruantes, tyll they haue made an ende of all my harvest. Naemi sayde vnto Ruth hir daughter in lawe: It is better my daughter, that thou go forth with his damself, lest eny man withstode the in another felde. Thus she kepte herselfe with Boos damself, so that she gathered vntill the barley harvest and the wheate harvest was out, and came againe to hir mother in lawe.

* Tobī. 2. a.

The iij. Chapter.

AND Naemi hir mother in lawe sayde vnto her: My daughter, I wyll prouyde rest for the, that thou maiest prospere. Boos oure kynsman, by whose damself thou hast bene, casteth vp barley now this night in his barne. Bathe thyselfe therfore, and 'moffell the, and put on thy clothes, and go downe vnto the barne, so ſ̄ nomā knowe the, tyll they haue all eaten and dronken.

Whan he layeth him downe then to sleape, mark ſ̄ place where he lyeth downe, and come thou, and take vp the couerynge at his fete, and laye the downe, so shall he tell the what thou shalt do. She sayde vnto her: what so euer thou saiest vnto me, I wil do it.

She wente downe to the barne, & dyd all as hir mother in lawe had cōmaunded her. And whā Boos had eatē & dronkē, his hert was mery, & he came and layed him downe behynde a heape of sheues. And she came secretly, and toke vp the coueringe at his fete, and layed hir downe. Now whā it was midnight, the man was afrayed, and groped aboute him, and beholde, a woman laye at his fete. And he sayde: Who art thou? She answered: I am Ruth thy handmayden, sprede thy wynges ouer thy hādayden: for thou art the nexte kynsman.

He sayde: The LORDES blessinge haue thou my daughter. Thou hast done a better mercy here after then before, ſ̄ thou art not gone after yonge men, nether riche ner poore. Feare not now my daughter: All ſ̄ thou hast sayde, will I do for the: for all the cite of my people knoweth, ſ̄ thou art a vertuous womā. Trueth it is now, ſ̄ I am a nye kynsmā, but there is one nyer then I. Tarye thou all night. Tomorrow yf he take the, well: yf he like not to take ſ̄, then wil I take ſ̄ my selfe, as truly as ſ̄ LORDE lyueth. Slepe thou tyll ſ̄ mornyng. And she slepte at his fete vntyll ſ̄ morow. And she rose vp or euer one coulde knowe another. And he thoughte thus: That no mā knowe now ſ̄ there hath come a woman in to the barne, and he sayde: Reach me the cloke ſ̄ thou hast on the, & holde it forth. And she helde it forth. And he meet her sixe measures of barley, and layed it vpon her, & she wente in to the cite, & came to hir mother in lawe, which sayde:

How is it with the my daughter? And she tolde her all þ̃ the mā had done vnto her, ⁊ sayde: These sixe measures of barlye gaue he me, for he sayde: Thou shalt not come empty vnto thy mother in lawe. She sayde: Abyde my daughter, tyll thou se what þ̃ matter wil growe to: for the man wilt not ceasse, tyll he brynge it to an ende this daye.

The iiii. Chapter.

BOOS wente vp to þ̃ gate, and sat him downe there: ⁊ beholde, whan þ̃ nye kynsman wente by, Boos spake vnto him, ⁊ sayde: Come ⁊ syt the downe here (and called him by his name.) And he came ⁊ sat him downe, ⁊ he toke ten men of the Elders of þ̃ cite, ⁊ sayde: Syt you downe here. And they sat thē downe. Thē sayde he to the nye kynsman: Naemi which is come againe frō the lōde of the Moabites * offreth to sell þ̃ pece of londe, þ̃ was oure brothers Eli Melech, therfore thoughte I to shewe it before thine eares, ⁊ to tell the: Yf thou wilt redeme it, then bye it before the citesyns ⁊ before the Elders of my people: but yf thou wylt not redeme it, then tell me, þ̃ I maie knowe: for there is no nye kynsmā excepte thou, and I nexte after the.

He sayde: I wil redeme it. Boos saide: In the daye þ̃ thou byest the lōde out of þ̃ hande of Naemi, thou must take Ruth also the Moabitisse the wife of the deed, that thou mayest rayse vp a name to þ̃ deed in his inheritance. Thē sayde he: I can not redeme it, lest I happlye destroye myne awne enheritaunce. Redeme thou þ̃ I shulde redeme, for I can not redeme it. But this was an olde custome in Israel concernynge the redemyng ⁊ chaūginge, þ̃ all matters mighte be stable, the one put of his shue, ⁊ gaue it vnto þ̃ other: þ̃ was the testimony in Israel.

And the nye kynsman sayde vnto Boos: Bye thou it, ⁊ he put of his shue. And Boos sayde vnto the Elders and to all the people: Ye are witnesses this daie, þ̃ I haue boughte out of the hande of Naemi, all that belonged to Eli Melech, and all that was Chilions and Mahelons: And Ruth the Moabitisse Mahelons wife, take I to wife, ⁊ that I maye rayse vp a name vnto þ̃ deed in his inheritance, and that his name be not rote out from amonge his brethren, and out of the gate of his place: Of this are ye witnesses. And all the people that was in the gate with the Elders, saide: We are witnesses. The LORDE make the woman that commeth in to thy house, as Rachel and Lea (⁊ which both haue buylded vp the house of Israel) that she maye be an ensample of vertue in Ephrata, and haue an honorable name in Bethleem. And thy house be as þ̃ house of Phares (⁊ whō Thamar bare vnto Iuda) thorow the sede, that the LORDE shall geue the of this damsell.

So Boos toke Ruth, and she became his wife. And whan he laye with her, the LORDE graunted her þ̃ she concealed, and bare a sonne. Thē sayde the women vnto Naemi: Prayed be the LORDE, which hath not suffred a kynsman to ceasse from the at this tyme, that his name maye contynue in Israel: he shal restore thy life agayne, and prouyde for thine age. For thy sonnes wife which hath loued the, hath borne him that is better vnto the, then seven sonnes.

And Naemi toke the childe, and layde it vpon hir lappe, and became the nurse of it, and hir neighbours gaue him a name ⁊ sayde: There is a childe borne vnto Naemi, and they called his name Obed. The same is the father of Isai, which is þ̃ father of Dauid.

This is þ̃ generacion of Phares. ¶ Phares begat Hesrom. Hesrom begat Aram. Aram begat Aminadab. Aminadab begat Naasson. Naasson begat Salmon. Salmō begat Boos. Boos begat Obed. Obed begat Isai. Isai begat Dauid.

The first Chapter.

THERE was a man of Ramatham Sophim of mount Ephraim, *whose name was Elcana & sonne of Ieroham, & sonne of Elihu, & sonne of Tohu, & sonne of Zuph, & was an Ephrate. And he had two wyues, & one was called Anna, & other Peninna. As for Peninna, she had children, but Anna had no childrē. And & same man wēte vp frō his cite †at his tyme, to worshippe and to offer vnto the LORDE Zebaoth at Silo. There were the prestes of the LORDE Ophni and Phineas, the two sonnes of Eli. Now when it came vpon a daye that Elcana offred, he gaue partes vnto his wife Peninna, and to all his sonnes and daughters. But vnto Anna he gaue one deale heuely, for he loued Anna. Neuertheles †the LORDE had closed hir wombe, & hir aduersary cast her in the tethe with hir vnfrutefulnes, because the LORDE had closed hir wombe: thus dyd she euery yeare, when they wente vp to the house of the LORDE, and thus she prouoked her. So she wepte, and ate nothinge. But Elcana hir huszbande sayde vnto her: Wherefore wepest thou? and why eatest thou not? And wherefore is thine hert so greued? Am not I better vnto the then ten sonnes?

Then stode Anna vp, when she had eaten and drunken at Silo. But Eli the prest sat vpon a stole by the poste of the temple of the LORDE. And she was full of heuynes in hir herte, and prayed vnto the LORDE, and wepte, and vowed a vowe, and sayde: O LORDE Zebaoth, yf thou wilt loke vpon the aduersite of thy handmayden, and thynke vpon me, and not forget thy handmayden, and wilt geue thy handmayden a sonne, I wil geue him vnto the LORDE all his life longe, *and there shal no rasoure come vpon his heade.

And whā she had prayed longe before ꝑ LORDE, Eli toke hede to hir mouth, for Anna spake in hir hert, hir lippes onely moued, but hir voyce was not herde. Then thoughte Eli she had bene drunken, and sayde vnto her: How longe wilt thou be drunken? Let come from the the wyne that thou hast by the. Neuertheles Anna answered and sayde: No my lorde, I am a soroufull woman, wyne and stronge drynke haue I not drunken †but haue poured out my hert before ꝑ LORDE. Counte not thy handmayden a daughter of Belial: for out of my heuy thoughte and sorow haue I spoken hitherto.

¶ Eli answered her, and sayde: Go thy waye in peace, the God of Israel shal graunte ꝑ thy petition that thou hast desyred of him. She sayde: Let thy handmayden fynde fauoure in thy sighte. So the woman wente hir waye and ate, and loked nomore so soroufully: and on ꝑ morow they gat them vp by tymes. And whan they had worshipped before ꝑ LORDE, they returned, and came home vnto Ramatha.

And Elcana laye with Anna his wife, and the LORDE remembred her. And after certayne dayes, she cōceaued and bare a sonne, and called his name Samuel, for I haue desyred him (sayde she) of the LORDE. And whan the man Elcana wente vp with all his houszholde to offre sacrifice and his vowe vnto the LORDE at soch tyme as ꝑ custome was, Anna wente not vp, but sayde vnto hir huszbande: (I wil not go vp) tyll ꝑ childe be weened: then will I brynge him, that he maye appeare before the LORDE, and cōtinue there †for euer.

¶ Elcana hir huszbande sayde vnto her: Thē do as thou thynkest best, tary tyll thou haue weened him: but the LORDE perfourme that he hath spoken. So the woman abode, and gaue hir sonne sucke, tyll she weened him. And whan she had weened him, she broughte him vp with her, with thre bullockes, with an Ephī of fyne floure, and a bottell of wyne, and broughte him in to ꝑ house of the LORDE at Silo.

Neuertheles the childe was yet but yonge.

And they slewe a bullocke, and broughte the childe vnto Eli. And she sayde: O my lorde, as truly as thy soule lyueth my lorde, I am the woman that stode here by ꝑ, and made intercession vnto the LORDE, whan I prayed for this childe. Now hath ꝑ LORDE graunted me my petition, which I desyred of him, therefore haue I geuen him ouer vnto the LORDE, as longe as he is lent vnto the LORDE. And they worshipped ꝑ LORDE there.

The ij. Chapter.

AND Anna prayed, and sayde: My hert reioyseth in the LORDE, ¶ my horne is exalted in the LORDE.

My mouth is opened wyde vpō myne enemies, for I am glad of thy saluacion.

There is no man holy as the LORDE, for withoute he is nothinge, and there is no cōforte like vnto oure God.

Let go youre greate boostinge of hye thynges, let go out of youre mouth that olde byworde: for the LORDE is a God ꝑ knoweth all thinges, ¶ he hath set all workes in order.

The bowe of the mightie is broken, and the weake are gyrded aboute with strength.

They that were fylled afore, are solde for bred: and they that were hongrie, are satisfied: vntyll the baren bare seuē, and tyll she that had many childrē, was become weake.

¶ The LORDE slayeth, and geueth life: he ledeth vnto hell, and bryngeth out agayne.

The LORDE maketh poore and maketh riche: He bryngeth lowe and exalteth.

¶ He taketh vp the neady out of the dust, and lifeth vp ꝑ poore out of the myre, that he maye set them amonge the prynces, and to let them inheret the seate of honoure: for the foundacions and corners of the worlde are the LORDES, and he hath set the compasse of the earth theron.

He shall preserue the fete of his sayntes, but ꝑ vngodly shal be put to sylēce in darrenesse. ¶ For there is no mā that can do oughte of his owne power.

The LORDES enemies shal be put in feare before him, he shal thōder vpō thē in heauē.

house. And the childe became the LORDES mynister before Eli the prest. But Elis sonnes were the childrē of Belial, and knewe not the LORDE, ner the dutye of the prestes vnto the people: but whan eny man wolde offre oughte, the prestes boye came, whyle the flesh was seethinge, and had a thre forked fleshoke in his hande, and thrust it in to the cauldron, or ketell, or panne, or pot: and loke what he drue forth with the fleshoke, that toke the prest therof. Thus dyd they vnto all Israel, which came thither vnto Silo.

Like wyse, or euer they burned the fatt, the prestes lad came, and sayde vnto him that broughte the offeringe: Geue me the flesh, that I maye roste it for the prest, for he wyl receaue no souden flesh of f , but rawe. ¶ Yf eny man sayde then vnto him: Let the fat burne as it oughte to do this daye, and afterwarde take what thine hert desyreth, then sayde he vnto him: Thou shalt geue it me euen now: yf no, I wyl take it from the by violēce. Therefore was the synne of f childrē very great before the LORDE, for f people spake euell of f meatofferynge of f LORDE. But Samuel was a mynister before the LORDE, and the childe was gyrded with an ouer body cote of linnen. His mother also made him a litle cote of sylke, and broughte it vp vnto him at cōuenient tymes, whā she wente vp with hir huszbande to offer f offeringe in due season.

And Eli blessed Elcana a his wife, and sayde: The LORDE geue the sede of this woman, for this good that thou hast lent vnto the LORDE. And they wete vnto their place. And the LORDE vysited Anna, so that she cōceaued and bare thre sonnes and two daughters: but the childe Samuel grewe vp with the LORDE.

As for Eli, he was very olde, and herde of all that his sonnes dyd vnto all Israel, and how they laye with the women that serued God before the dore of the tabernacle of witness, and he sayde vnto them: wherfore do ye this? For I heare of youre euell conuersacion of all this people. Not so my childrē, this is no good reporte that I heare, ye cause the people of the LORDE to offende. ¶ Yf eny mā synne agaynst a man, the iudge cā redresse it. But yf eny mā synne agaynst f LORDE, who can redresse it? Neuertheles they herkened not vnto the voyce of their father, for the LORDES wyll was to slaye them. But the childe Samuel wente and grewe vp, a was accepted of the LORDE a of mē.

There came a man of God to Eli, and sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I shewed my selfe vnto thy fathers house, whan they were yet in Egipte vnder f house of Pharaο, and chose him there vnto my selfe before all the trybes of Israel, for the presthode, that he shulde offer vpon myne altare, and burne incense, and weere the ouerbody cote before me, a vnto thy fathers house I gaue all the offeringes of the children of Israel. Why layest thou thy selfe then agaynst my sacrifices and meatofferings, which I commaunded (to offer) in the habitacion: and thou honourrest thy sonnes more then me, that ye mighte fede youre selues with the firstlinges of all the meatofferynges of my people of Israel?

Therefore sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: I haue spoken, that thy house and thy fathers house shulde walke before me for euer. But now sayeth the LORDE: That be farre fro me. But who so euer honoureth me, him wil I honoure also: as for those f despyse me, they shal not be regarded. Beholde, a the tyme shal come, that I wyl breake thyne arme in two, and the arme of thy fathers house, so that there shal no oldeman be in thy house. And thou shalt se thine aduersaries in the habitacion, in all the good of Israel, and there shal neuer be olde man in thy fathers house. Yet wyl I not rote out euery man of the fro myne altare, but f thine eyes maye be consumed, a that thy soule maye be sory: a a a greate multitude of thy house shal dye, whan they are come to be men.

And this shalbe a token vnto the, that shal come vpon thy two sonnes Ophni and Phineas: ¶ They shall both dye in one daye. ¶ But vnto my selfe I wyl rayse vp a faithfull prest, which shal do acordinge as it is in my hert a in my soule: vnto him wyl I buylde a sure house, that he maye allwaye walke before myne aoynted. And who so euer remayneth of thy house, shall come and worshippe him for a syluer peny and for a peece of bred, and shall saye: I praye the leaue me to one prestes parte, that I maye eate a morsell of bred.

AND when the childe Samuel mynistr'd vnto the LORDE vnder Eli, the worde of ȝ LORDE was deare at the same tyme, nether was there eny sure ȝ manifest vision. And it fortun'd at the same tyme, that Eli laye in his place, *and his eyes beganne to be dymme, so that he coulde not se. And Samuel had layed him downe in ȝ temple of the LORDE (where the Arke of God was) before ȝ lampe of God was put out. And the LORDE called Samuel. He answered: Beholde, here am I. And he ranne vnto Eli, ȝ sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. But he saide: I haue not called the, go thy waye agayne, and laye the downe to slepe. And he wente his waye, and layed him downe to slepe.

The LORDE called againe: Samuel. And Samuel arose, ȝ wente vnto Eli, ȝ sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. Neuertheles he sayde: My sonne, I haue not called the. Go thy waye agayne, and laye the downe to slepe. As for Samuel, he knewe not the LORDE as yet, ȝ the worde of ȝ LORDE was not yet shewed vnto him. And ȝ LORDE called Samuel ȝ thirde tyme. And he arose, ȝ wente vnto Eli, ȝ sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. Then perceaued Eli ȝ the LORDE called ȝ childe, ȝ he sayde vnto him: Go thy waye agayne, ȝ laye the downe to slepe: and yf the LORDE call the eny more, then saye: Speake LORDE, for thy seruauent heareth. Samuel wete his waye, and layed him downe in his place. Thē came ȝ LORDE, ȝ stode, and called like as afore: Samuel, Samuel. And Samuel sayde: Speake (LORDE) for thy seruauent heareth. And the LORDE saide vnto Samuel: Beholde, I do a thinge in Israel, ȝ who so euer shall heare it, both his eares shal glowe. In ȝ daie will I rayse vp vpon Eli ȝ all ȝ I haue spokē cōcernynge his house. Therefore haue I sworne vnto ȝ house of Eli, ȝ this wickednes of ȝ house of Eli shall not be recōcyled nether with sacrifice ner with meatoffringe for euer.

* 1 Re. 4. c. + 1 Reg. 2. g.

And Samuel laye vnto ȝ morow, ȝ opened the dores of the house of the LORDE.

But Samuel was afrayed to tell the vysion vnto Eli. Then Eli called him ȝ sayde: Samuel my sonne. He answered: Beholde, here am I. He sayde: What is ȝ worde ȝ the LORDE hath spokē vnto the? hyde it not fro me. God do this ȝ that vnto ȝ , yf thou hyde oughte fro me, of all that he hath talked with the. Then Samuel tolde him all-together, ȝ hyd nothinge from him. He sayde: It is the LORDE, let him do what pleaseth him.

Samuel grewe vp, ȝ the LORDE was with him, ȝ there fell none of all his wordes vpō the earth. And all Israel frō Dan vnto Bersaba, knewe ȝ Samuel was faithfull to be a prophet of the LORDE. And the LORDE appeared agayne at Silo: for the LORDE shewed him selfe vnto Samuel at Silo, thorow the worde of the LORDE.

The iij. Chapter.

AND all Israel spake of Samuel. And Israel sente forth to the battayll against the Philistynes, ȝ pitched besyde the ȝ Helpe stone: As for the Philistynes, they pitched at Aphek, and prepared them selues agaynst Israel. And when the battayll beganne, the hoost was deuyded, so that Israel was smytē before the enemies, ȝ in the edge in the felde they slewe aboute a foure thousande men. And when the people came in to the hoost, the Elders of Israel sayde: Wherefore hath the LORDE caused vs to be smytten this daie before the Philistynes? Let vs take vnto vs the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt from Silo, ȝ let it come amōge vs, that it maye helpe vs from the hande of oure enemies. And the people sent vnto Silo, ȝ caused to fet thēce the Arke of ȝ couenaunt of the LORDE Zebaoth, that sytteth vpon the Cherubins. And with the Arke of the couenaunt of God there were the two sonnes of Eli, Ophni and Phineas.

And when the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE came in to the hoost, all Israel shouted with a greate shoute, so that the earth sounded withall. But when the Philistynes herde ȝ noyse of ȝ shoute, they sayde: what noyse is this of soch greate shoutinge in the tentes of the Hebrues? And when they per-ceased y the Arke of the LORDE was come in to the hoost, they were afrayed ⁊ sayde: God is come in to the hoost. And they sayde morouer: Wo vnto vs, for it hath not bene thus afore tyme. Wo vnto vs. Who wil deliuer vs frō the hande of these hye goddes? These are the goddes that smote Egipte with all maner of plagis in the wyldernes. Be stronge now and manly ye Philistynes, that ye serue not the Hebrues* as they haue serued you. Be manly and fighte.

Then foughte the Philistynes, ⁊ Israel was smytten, ⁊ euery one fled vnto his tête, ⁊ there was a very greate slaughter, so that there fell of Israel thirthe thousande fotemē, ⁊ the Arke of God was takē, ⁊ the two sonnes of Eli, Ophni and Phineas dyed.

Then rāne there one of Ben Iamin out of the fore fronte of the battayl, ⁊ came vnto Silo the same daye, ⁊ had his clothes rente, and had earth vpō his heade. And whan he came in, Heli sat vpon the seate, that he mighte lōke towardē the waye: for his herte was fearful aboute y Arke of God. And whan the man came in to the cite, he tolde it forth: and all the cite cried. And whan Eli herde y noyse of the cryēge, he axed: What noyse of busynes is this? The man came haistely, and tolde Eli. (As for Eli, he was fourescore and eightene yeare olde, ⁊ and his eyes were dymme, so that he coulde not se.) The man sayde vnto Eli: I come and am fled this daye out of the hoost. He sayde: How is it my sonne?

Then answered the tydinge bringer, ⁊ sayde: Israel is fled before the Philistynes, and a greate slaughter hath there bene amonge the people, ⁊ thy two sonnes Ophni ⁊ Phineas are deed, yee ⁊ the Arke of God is takē awaye. Whan he had made mencion of the Arke of God, he fell downe bacwarde from the seate by the gate, and brake his neck, and dyed: for he was olde, ⁊ an heuy man. He iudged Israel fortie yeares. The wife of his sonne Phineas was with childe, ⁊ shulde shortly be deliuered, whan she herde the tydinges y the Arke of God was taken, and y hir brother in lawe and hir huszbāde were deed, she bowed hir selfe and trauayled: for hir payne came vpon her. And whan she was now at the poynte of death, the wemen that stode by her, sayde: Feare not, thou hast a yōge sonne.

* Iud. 13. a. + 1 Re. 2. g.

But she gaue no answer, nether regarded it, and she called the childe Icabod, and sayde: The glory is gone from Israel, because the Arke of God was taken awaye, and hir brother in lawe and hir huszbande. And she sayde morouer: The glory is gone from Israel, for the Arke of God is takē awaye.

The v. Chapter.

AS for the Arke of God, the Philistynes toke it and broughte it from the stone of helpe vnto Aszdod in to the house of Dagon, and set it besyde Dagon. And whan they of Aszdod rose vp early on the morowe, they founde Dagon lyenge on his face vpon the earth, before the Arke of the LORDE. But they toke vp Dagon, and set him agayne in his place. Neuertheles whan they rose vp early on the nexte morowe, they founde Dagon lyenge on his face agayne vpon the earth before the Arke of the LORDE: but his heade and both his hādes hewen of vpon the threszholde, so that the block laie there onely. Therefore the prestes of Dagon, and all they that go in to his house, treade not vpō the threszholde of Dagon at Aszdod vnto this daye.

But the hande of the LORDE was heuy vpon them of Aszdod, and destroyed them, and smote Aszdod and all the borders therof in secrete places. Whan the men of Aszdod sawe that they were so played, they sayde: § Let not the Arke of the God of Israel tary with vs, for his hande is to harde vpō vs ⁊ vpon oure god Dagon. And they sent forth and gathered all the prynces of the Philistynes vnto them, and sayde: What shal we do with the Arke of the God of Israel? Then answered they of Geth: Let the Arke of the God of Israel be borne aboute. And they caried the Arke of the God of Israel rounde aboute.

But whā they bare it aboute, there was a very greate rumoure in the cite thorow the hande of the LORDE, and smote the people of the cite, from the smallest vnto the greatest, and destroyed them in the secrete places. Then sent they the Arke of the LORDE vnto Ekron. But whā the Arke of the LORDE came vnto Ekron, they of Ekron cried: They haue caried the Arke of God aboute vnto me, to slaye me and my people.

Then sente they forth, and gathered all y prynces of the Philistynes together, and sayde:

+ 1 Reg. 3. a. § Deut. 32. e.

Sende awaye the Arke of the God of Israel agayne vnto hir place, that it slaye not me & my people: for there is a very greate rumoure with the deed in all the cite, and the hande of God is there. And the people that dyed not, were smytten in secrete places, so that the noyse of the cite wete vp vnto heauen.

The bi. Chapter.

THUS was the Arke of the LORDE in the londe of the Philistynes seven monethes. And the Philistynes called their prestes and soythsayers, and sayde: What shal we do with the Arke of the LORDE? Shewe vs, wher with shal we sende it vnto hir place? They sayde: Yf ye wyll sende awaye the Arke of the God of Israel, sende it not awaye emptye, but geue a trespase offeringe: so shal ye be made whole, and ye shal knowe, why his hande departeth not from you.

They sayde: What is the trespase offeringe that we shall geue him? They answered: Fyue hynder partes of golde, and fyue golden myce, acordyng to the nombre of the fyue prynces of ʒ Philistynes. For there hath bene one maner of plage vpon you all, and vpon youre prynces. Therefore must ye make youre hynder partes of one faszshion and youre myce, which haue destroyed youre londe, that ye maye geue the God of Israel the honour: peraduenture his hæde shal be the lighter vpon you and vpon youre God, and vpon youre londe. Why harden ye youre hert, as the Egipcians and Pharao hardened their hert? Whan he shewed him selfe vpon them* dyd not they let them departe to go their waye?

Go to now therfore, and make a new cart, and take two mylke kyne, vpon ʒ which there neuer came yock, and yocke them to ʒ cart, and let their calues tary behynde them at home: and take ye the Arke of the LORDE and laye it vpon the cart: and the Iewels of golde that ye geue him for a trespase offeringe put in a coffer beside it, & sende it awaye and let it go. And loke well: yf it go the waie of hir awne coaste Beth Semes, thē hath he done vs all this greate euell: Yf no, then shal ye knowe that his hande hath not touched vs, but ʒ it is happened vnto vs by chaūce.

The men dyd so, and toke two yonge mylke kyne, and yocked them to a cart, and helde their calues at home, and layed the Arke of the LORDE vpon the cart, and the coffer with the golden myce, and with the ymages of their disease. And the kyne wente straight waye vnto Beth Semes vpon one hye strete, and wente on blearynge, and turned nether to the righte hande ner to the left. And the prynces of the Philistynes wente after them vnto ʒ coast of Beth Semes.

The Beth Samites were euen reapyng downe their wheate haruest in the valley, and lyfte vp their eyes, and sawe the Arke, and reioysed to se it. The cart came in to the felde of Iosua the Beth Semite, and there it stode styll. And there was a greate stone, and they claue the tymber of the cart, and offred the kyne vnto the LORDE for a burntofferynge.

But the Leuites toke downe the Arke of the LORDE, and the coffer that was by it, wherin the Iewels of golde were, and set thē vpon the greate stone. The men of Beth Semes offred burntofferynges, and other offeringes also vnto the LORDE the same daye. And whan the fyue prynces of the Philistynes had sene it, they departed agayne the same daye towarde Ekron.

These are the golden diseases, that the Philistynes offred for a trespase offeringe vnto the LORDE: Aszdod one, Gasa one: Ascalon one, Gath one, and Ekron one: and golden myce, acordyng to the nombre of all the cities of the Philistynes amonge the fyue prynces, from the walled cite vnto the vyllage, and vnto the greate playne felde, wher vpon they set the Arke of the LORDE (which was) vnto this daye vpon the felde of Iosua the Beth Semite.

And certaine of Beth Sames were slaine because they had sene ʒ Arke of the LORDE, and he slewe fyfthe thousande and seuentye men of the people. Then mourned the people, because the LORDE had done so greate a slaughter in the people. And the men at Beth Semes sayde: Who maye stōde before the LORDE so holy a God? And to whō shal he go frō vs? And they sent messangers to ʒ inhabitors of Kiriath Iearim, saūge: The Philistynes haue brought the Arke of God agayne, come downe, & fetch it vp vnto you.

The biij. Chapter.

SO the men of Kiriath Iearim came downe, & fetched vp ʒ Arke of ʒ LORDE, &

* Exo. 12. c.

brought it in to ȝ house of *Abinadab at Gibeā, ⁊ they consecrated Eleazar his sonne, ȝ he might kepe ȝ Arke. And frō ȝ daye that the Arke of ȝ LORDE abode at Kiriath Iearim, ȝ tyme extended forth so longe tyll it came to twentye yeares: and all the house of Israel wepte after the LORDE.

But Samuel sayde vnto all the house of Israel: † Yf ye turne you withall youre hert vnto the LORDE, then put awaye from you the straunge goddes and Astaroth, and directe youre hert vnto the LORDE and †serue him onely, so shall he deluyer you out of the hande of the Philistynes. Then the childrē of Israel put awaye Baalim and Astaroth from them, and serued the LORDE onely.

Samuel saide: Gather all Israel together vnto Mispā, that I maye praye for you vnto the LORDE. And they came together vnto Mispā, and drue water, ⁊ poured it out before the LORDE, and fasted the same daye, and there they sayde: We haue synned vnto the LORDE. So Samuel iudged the children of Israel at Mispā.

But whan the Philistynes herde that ȝ children of Israel were come together vnto Mispā, the prynces of the Philistynes wete vp against Israel. Whan ȝ childrē of Israel herde that, they were afrayed of ȝ Philistynes, ⁊ sayde vnto Samuel: Ceasse not to crye vnto the LORDE oure God for vs, ȝ he maie helpe vs out of the hande of ȝ Philistynes. Samuel toke a fat lambe, ⁊ offred an whole burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, ⁊ cried vnto the LORDE for Israel, and the LORDE herde him. And whyle Samuel was offerynge ȝ burnt sacrifice, ȝ Philistines came to fight agaynst Israel. But the LORDE thondred a thonder vpon the Philistynes the same daye ⁊ discōfyted thē, so ȝ they were smyttē before Israel. Thē wente ȝ men of Israel forth, ⁊ chased ȝ Philistynes, ⁊ smote them till vnder Beth Car. Then toke Samuel a stone, ⁊ set it vp betwene Mispā ⁊ Sen, ⁊ called it ȝ Help stone, ⁊ sayde: "Hither to hath the LORDE helped vs. Thus were the Philistynes brought downe, ⁊ came nomore within the border of Israel. And ȝ hādē of ȝ LORDE was against the Philistynes, as longe as Samuel lyued.

So Israel gat the cities agayne, that the Philistynes had conquered, frō Ekron vnto

Gath, with the borders thereof, those did Israel rescue out of the hande of the Philistynes: ⁊ Israel had peace with the Amorites. Samuel iudged Israel as lōge as he liued, ⁊ wete aboute euery yere vnto Bethel ⁊ Gilgal ⁊ Mispā: ⁊ whā he had iudged Israel in all these places, he came agayne vnto Ramath for there was his house, ⁊ there he iudged Israel, ⁊ builded an altare there vnto ȝ LORDE.

The liij. Chapter.

BUT whan Samuel waxed olde, he set his sonnes to be iudges ouer Israel. His firstborne sonne was called Ioel ⁊ the secōde Abia, ⁊ they were iudges at Bersaba. Neuertheles his sonnes walked not in his wayes, but enclyned vnto couetousnes, ⁊ tokē giftes, ⁊ wraysted the lawe. Then all ȝ Elders in Israel gathered thē selues together, ⁊ came to Ramath vnto Samuel, ⁊ saide vnto him: Beholde, thou art waxen olde, ⁊ thy sonnes walke not in thy wayes, † set a kynge now ouer vs therefore, to iudge vs, as all ȝ Heithē haue. Thē was Samuel displeased whā they sayde: Geue vs a kynge, to iudge vs. And Samuel prayed before the LORDE.

The LORDE saide vnto Samuel: Herken vnto the voice of the people in all ȝ they haue sayde vnto the. For they haue not refused the, but me, ȝ I shulde not be kinge ouer them. They do vnto the as they haue done euēr, sence the daie ȝ I brought them out of the londe of Egipte vnto this daye, and haue forsaken me, and serued other goddes. Herkē now therfore vnto their voyce. shal he take the Tithes, & geue vnto his chāberlaynes and seruautes. And youre seruautes and youre maydes, and youre best yonge men, and youre asses shal he take, and do his busynes withall. Of youre flockes shal he take the Tithes, and ye shal be his seruautes. Whan ye shal crye then at the same tyme ouer youre kyng, whom ye haue chosen you, the LORDE shall not heare you at the same tyme. Neuerthelesse the people refused to heare the voyce of Samuel, and sayde: Not so, but there shall be a kyng ouer vs, ȳ we maye be as all other Heithē, ȳ oure kyng maie iudge vs, & go forth before vs, and gouerne oure warres. Thē herkened Samuel vnto all ȳ ȳ people sayde, & tolde it before ȳ eares of the LORDE. The LORDE sayde vnto thē: Herken thou vnto their voyce, and make them a kyng. The ir. Chapter.

THERE was a man of Ben Iamin named * Cis, the sonne of Abiel, the sonne of Zeor, the sonne of Bethorah, ȳ sonne of Apiah, the sonne of a man of Iemini, a valeaunt man, which had a sonne named Saul, which was so goodly a yonge man, that there was not a goodlier amonge the children of Israel, higher by the heade then all the people. Cis the father of Saul had lost his asses, and he sayde vnto Saul his sonne: Take one of the children with the, get the vp, go thy waye, and seke the asses. And he wente his waye thorow mount Ephraim, and thorow the lōde of Solisa, and founde them not. They wente thorow the lōde of Saalim, & there they were not. They passed thorow ȳ lōde of Iemini, & fōunde thē not. But whā they came in to the londe of Zuph, Saul sayde vnto the childe that was with him: Come, let vs go home agayne, lest my father let go the asses, and take care for vs. He sayde: Beholde, here is an honorable man of God in this cite, all that he sayeth, commeth to passe. Let vs go thither now, peraduenture he maye shewe vs oure waye which we go. But Saul saide vnto his childe: Though we shulde go, what brynge we the man? For the bred is gone out of oure walet, and els haue we no gifte to brynge the man of God, what haue we? The childe answered agayne, and sayde: Beholde, I haue the fourth parte of a syluer Sycle by me, ȳ same wyll we geue the man of God, that he maye shewe vs oure waye.

(Afore tyme in Israel, whan a man wente to axe counsell at the LORDE, he sayde: Come, let vs go to the Seer: for they that now are called prophetes, were called Seers afore tyme.) Saul sayde vnto his childe: Thou hast well spoken, come let vs go. And whan they wente vnto the cite where the man of God was, and came vp to the cite, they founde damsels which were gone forth to drawe water, vnto them they sayde: Is the Seer here? They answered them and sayde: Yee. Beholde, he is there, make haist, for he came in to the cite this daye, because the people haue a sacrifice to do to daye in the hye place. Whan ye come in the cite, ye shal fynde him, afore he go vp to the hye place for to eate: for the people wyll not eate tyll he come. For he shall blesse the offeringe, then shal they eate that are called. Therefore go youre waie vp, for euē now shal ye fynde him.

And whan they came vp to the cite, and were euen in the myddes of the cite, beholde, Samuel came forth in their waye, and wolde go vp to the hye place. († But the LORDE had opened Samuels eare the daye afore, or euer Saul came, and sayde: Tomorrow aboute this tyme wyll I sende a man vnto the out of the lōde of Ben Iamin, him shalt thou anoynte to be prynce ouer my people of Israel, that he maye delyuer my people from the hande of the Philistynes: for I haue loked vpon my people, and their crye is come before me.) Now whan Samuel behelde Saul, the LORDE answered him: lo, ȳ is the man of whom I tolde the, that he shulde raigne ouer my people.

Then came Saul vnto Samuel vnder ȳ gate, and sayde: Tell me (I praye the) where is the Seers house? Samuel answered Saul, and sayde: I am the Seer. Go vp before me vnto the hye place: for ye shall eate with me to daye, tomorrow wyll I lett the go, and all that is in thynne hert, wyll I tell the: and as for the Asses which were lost three dayes ago, care not thou for them, for they are founde. And to whom shall belonge all that is pleasant in Israel? Shall it not belonge vnto the and to all thy fathers house? Saul answered: Am not I a sonne of Iemini, * and of the smallest trybe, and my kynred the leest amonge all the kynreds of y trybe of Ben Iamin? Why speakest thou so the vnto me? Samuel toke Saul & his childe & brought them in to the perler where they shulde eate, and satt them aboute those that were called, of whom there were aboute a thirtie men. And Samuel sayde vnto the coke: Geue me the porcion that I gaue the, and bad the kepe it by the. Then the coke toke vp a shulder, and bare it forth, and set it before Saul. And (Samuel) sayde: Beholde, this is left, laye it before the, and eate: for it was kepte for the agaynst this tyme, when I called the people. Thus Saul ate with Samuel the same daye.

And when they were gone downe from the hye place vnto the cite, he talked with Saul in the chamber. And they rose vp early on the morow. And when the mornyng sprynge arose, Samuel called Saul in the chamber, and sayde: Vp, y I maye sende the thy waye. And Saul gat him vp: & they both wete forth together, he and Samuel. And when they came downe to the ende of the cite, Samuel sayde vnto Saul: Speake vnto y childe, that he go on forth before vs, but stode thou styll now, that I maie shewe the what God hath sayde:

The x. Chapter.

THEN toke Samuel a glasse of oyle, and poured it vpō his heade, and kissed him, and sayde: Seist thou that the LORDE hath anoynted the, to be the prince ouer this enheritaunce? Whan thou goest now fro me, thou shalt fynde two men besyde † Rachels graue in the coast of Ben Iamin at Zelzah, which shal saie vnto the: The asses are founde, whom thou wentest to seke: and beholde, thy father hath put the asses out of his mynde, and taketh thoughte for the, and sayeth: What shall I do for my sonne?

And when thou goest on forth from thence, thou shalt come to the Oke of Thabor, there shall thre men fynde the, which go vp vnto God towarde Bethel: one beareth thre kiddes, another thre loaves of bred the thyrd a bottel with wyne: and they shall salute the, and geue the two loaves, which thou shalt take of their hande. After that shalt thou come to the hyll of God, y where the Philistynes watch is: and whā thou comest there in to the cite, there shall mete the a company of prophetes commynge downe from the hye place, and before them a Psaltery, and tabret, a pype and a harpe, and they them selues prophecience. And the sprete of the LORDE shall come vpon the, and thou shalt prophecy with them, and shalt be chaunged in to another man.

Whan these tokens now come vnto the, ¶ then do what so euer commeth vnder thyne hande: for God is with the. Thou shalt go downe before me vnto Gilgall: Beholde, thither wyl I come downe vnto the, that thou mayest offre burntofferynge and deedofferynge. ¶ Seuen dayes shalt thou tarye till I come to the, and shewe the what thou shuldest do. And when he turned his shulder to go from Samuel, God chaunged him another hert, and all these tokes came the same daye.

And when they came vnto the hill, beholde, there met him a company of prophetes ¶ and the sprete of God came vpon him, so that he prophecied amonge them. But whā they which knewe him before, sawe him that he prophecied with the prophetes, they sayde all amonge them selues: What is happened vnto the sonne of Cis? Is Saul also amonge the prophetes? And one y was there, answered and sayde: Who is their father? ¶ Hereof came the prouerbe: Is Saul also amonge the prophetes? And whā he had left of prophecience, he came vp to the hyll.

Sauls vnclē sayde vnto him and to his childe: Whither wente ye? They answered: To seke the asses. And whan we sawe that they were awaye, we came vnto Samuel. Then sayde Sauls vnclē: Tell me, what sayde Samuel vnto you? Saul answered his vnclē: He tolde vs, y the asses were foude. But of y kyngdome he tolde him nothinge what Samuel had sayde.

Samuel called the people together vnto the LORDE to Mispā, and spake vnto the children of Israel: Thus saith y LORDE the God of Israel: I broughte Israel out of Egipte, and deluyered you from the hande of y Egipcians, and from the hande of all the kyngdomes that oppressed you. ¶ But now haue ye refused youre God, which hath helped you out of all youre sorowes and troubles, ⁊ ye haue saide vnto him: Set a kinge ouer vs. Well, stonde ye now before ꝑ LORDE acord- inge to youre trybes and kynreds.

Now when Samuel had brought forth all the trybes of Israel, the trybe of Ben Iamin was taken. And whan he had broughte forth the trybe of Ben Iamin with his kynreds, the kynred of Matri was takē, ⁊ Saul the sonne of Cis was takē. And they sought him, but they founde him not.

Then axed they further at the LORDE, whether he was for to come thither. The LORDE answered: Beholde, he hath hyd him selfe amonge ꝑ vessels. Then ranne they thither, and fetched him. And whan he stode amonge the people, he was hygher by the heade then all the people. And Samuel sayde vnto all the people: There se ye him whom the LORDE hath chosen, for in all the people there is none like him. Then gaue all the people a shoute, and sayde: *God saue the new kyng.

Samuel tolde the people all the t'lawe of the kyngdome, and wrote it in a boke, and layed it before the LORDE. And Samuel let all the people go, euery one to his awne house. And Saul wente home also vnto Gibeā, and there wente with him one parte of the hoost, whose hertes God had touched. But the childrē of Belial sayde: What shal this felowe helpe vs, ⁊ and despyed him, ⁊ broughte him no presente. But he made him as though he herde it not.

The xi. Chapter.

NAHAS ꝑ Ammonite wēte vp ⁊ layed sege vnto Iabes in Gilead. And all the men of Iabes sayde vnto Nahas: Be at one with vs, ⁊ we wyl serue the. But Nahas ꝑ Ammonite answered them: I wil make a couenant with you, of this condicion, that I maye thrust out all youre right eyes, and put you to shame amonge all Israel. Then sayde all the Elders of Iabes vnto him: Geue vs seuen dayes respyte, that we maye sende messaungers in to all ꝑ coastes of Israel: Yf there be then no sauioire, we wyl go forth vnto the.

So the messaungers came vnto Gibeā of Saul, and spake this before the eares of the people. Then all ꝑ people lifte vp their voyce, and wepte. And beholde, Saul came after the oxen out of the felde, and sayde: What ayleth the people that they wepe? So they tolde him the earande of the men of Iabes. ꝑ Then came the sprete of God vpon him, whan he had herde these wordes, and his wrath was sore moued, and he toke a couple of oxen, and hewed them in sunder, and sent them in to all the coastes of Israel by the messaungers, sayenge: Who so euer goeth not forth after Saul and Samuel, his oxen shalbe thus dealte withall.

Then fell the feare of the LORDE vpon the people, so that they wente forth like as one man, ⁊ and they were tolde at Basek, and of the childrē of Israel there were thre hundredre thousande men, and thirtie thousande of the children of Iuda. And they spake vnto the messaungers that were come: Saye thus to the men of Iabes in Gilead: Tomorrow shal ye haue helpe, whan ꝑ Sonne is at the whotest. Whan ꝑ messaungers came and tolde this to the men of Iabes, they were glad. And the men of Iabes sayde: Tomorrow wyl we come forth vnto you, that ye maye do vnto vs, what so euer it pleaseth you. And on ꝑ nexte morow Saul set the people in thre partes, and came in to the hoost aboute the mornyng watch, and smote the Ammonites tyll the daye was at the whotest. As for those ꝑ remayned, they were so scatred, that two of them abode not together.

Then sayde the people vnto Samuel: Where are they that sayde: ꝑ Shulde Saul raigne ouer vs? Delyuer vs here the men, that we maye put them to death. But Saul sayde: There shal noman dye this daye, for to daye hath the LORDE geuen health in Israel. Samuel sayde vnto the people: Come, let vs go vnto Gilgall, and renue the kyngdome there. Then wente all the people vnto Gilgall, and there they made Saul kinge before the LORDE at Gilgal, and offred deed-offerings before the LORDE. And Saul with all the men of Israel reioysed there greatly.

The xij. Chapter.

SAMUEL sayde vnto all Israel: Beholde, I haue herkened vnto youre voyce in all that ye sayde vnto me, and haue made a kyngde ouer you. And now lo, there goeth youre kyngde before you. As for me, I am waxen olde and graye heered, and my sonnes are with you: and I haue gone before you fro my youth vp vnto this daye. Beholde, here am I: answere ye agaynst me before the LORDE and his anoynted, *yf I haue taken eny mans oxe or asse, yf I haue done eny man violence or wronge, If I haue oppressed eny ma, yf I haue receaued a gifte of eny mans hande, and kepte it secretly, I wil restore it you agayne.

They saide: Thou hast done vs nether violence ner wronge, nether oppressed, ner taken ought of eny mans hande. He sayde: The LORDE be witness agaynst you, and so be his anoynted this daye, that ye haue founde nothings in my hãde. They saide: Yee they shalbe witnesses. And Samuel sayde vnto the people: The LORDE which made Moses and Aaron, and broughte youre fathers out of the londe of Egipte (is here present.) Stõde forth now therfore, that I maye iudge you before the LORDE ouer the righteousnes of the LORDE, which he hath done for you and youre fathers.

†Whan Iacob was come in to Egipte, youre fathers cryed vnto the LORDE. †And he sent Moses and Aaron to brynge youre fathers out of Egipte, and to cause them for to dwell in this place.

§But whan they forgat the LORDE their God, he solde them vnder the power of Sissera, the captayne at Hazor ¶and vnder the power of the Philistynes ¶and vnder the power of the kinge of the Moabites, which foughte agaynst them. But they cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: We haue synned, in that we haue forsaken the LORDE, and serued Baalim and Astaroth. But now deliuer vs from the hande of oure enemies, and we wyl serue the. Then the LORDE sent Ierubaal, †Bedan, †Iephthae, §§and Samuel, ¶deliuered you from youre enemies rounde aboute, and caused you to dwell safe.

¶But whan ye sawe that Nahas the kynge of the children of Ammon came agaynst you ¶ye sayde vnto me: Not thou, but a kynge shal raigne ouer vs, where as notwithstandinge youre God was youre kynge. Now, there haue ye youre kynge, who ye haue chosen and desyred: for lo, the LORDE hath set a kinge ouer you. Yf ye shal feare the LORDE now, and serue him, and herken vnto his voice, and not be dishobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE, then shall both ye and youre kynge that raigneth ouer you, folowe ¶LORDE youre God. But yf ye herken not vnto ¶ye voyce of the LORDE, but be dishobedient vnto his mouth, then shal the hande of the LORDE be agaynst you, and agaynst youre fathers.

Stonde forth now also, and beholde this greate thinge, that the LORDE shal do before youre eyes. Is not now the wheate harvest? Yet wyll I call vpõ the LORDE, so that he shal cause it thonder and rayne, that ye shall knowe and se the greate euell, which ye haue done in the sight of the LORDE, in that ye haue desyred to haue a kynge.

And whan Samuel called vpon the LORDE, the LORDE caused it to thõder and raine the same daye.

Then all the people feared the LORDE ¶greatly and Samuel, and they sayde all vnto Samuel: Praie thou vnto the LORDE thy God for thy seruantes, that we dye not: for beside oure sinnes we haue done this euell also, that we haue desyred vnto vs a kinge. Samuel sayde vnto the people: Feare not, ye haue done all this euell in dede. Neuertheles departe not backe from the LORDE, but serue the LORDE with all youre hert, and go not asyde after vanite, for it profyeth you nothinge, and can not deliuer you, in so moch as it is but a vayne thinge. ¶¶For the LORDE shall not forsake his people because of his greate names sake: for the LORDE hath begonne to make you a people vnto him selfe. But God forbyd that I shulde synne so vnto the LORDE, to ceasse from prayenge for you, and from teachinge you the good ¶righteous waye. Feare ye the LORDE therfore, and serue him faithfully with all youre hert: for ye haue sene, how greate thinges he doth vnto you. But yf ye do wickedly, both ye ¶your kynge shal perishe.

SAUL had bene kynge one yeare, and whã he had raigned ouer Israel two yeares, he chose him thre thousande mē out of Israel: two thousande were with Saul at Michmas vpon the mount of Bethel, and one thousande with Ionathas at Gibeã of Ben Iamin. As for the other people, he let them go euery one vnto his tente. But Ionathas smote y Philistynes in their awne *watch, which was at Gibeā. That came to y Philistynes eares. And Saul caused to blowe the trompes in all the londe, ⁊ to saye: Let the Hebrues heare. And all Israel herde saye: Saul hath smytten the Philistynes watch, for Israel stanke before the Philistynes. And all the people cried after Saul vnto Gilgal.

33 Then the Philistynes gathered them selues together to fighte with Israel, thirtie thousande charettes, sixe thousande horsmen, and other people besyde, in nombre as the sonde by the See shore, and wente vp, and pitched at Michmas on the eastsyde of Bethauen. When the men of Israel sawe that mysfortune laye vpon the neckes of thē (for the people was come therto) they crope in to caues and dennes, in to rockes, and holes and welles. But the Hebrues wente ouer Iordane in to y lande of Gad and Gilead. As for Saul he was yet at Gilgal, and all the people were faynthearted after him. †Then taried he seuen dayes accordinge to the tyme apoynted of Samuel. And whan Samuel came not vnto Gilgal, the people were scattered abrode from him. Then sayde Saul: Brynge me hither a burntofferinge and deedofferings. And he offred a burntofferynge. But whan he had made an ende of the burntofferynge beholde, Samuel came. Then wente Saul forth to mete him, that he might salute him.

C But Samuel sayde: What hast thou done? Saul answered: I sawe that the people was scattered abrode fro me, and thou camest not in due season: and the Philistynes were gathered together at Michmas. Then sayde I: Now shall the Philistynes come downe to me vnto Gilgal, and I haue not besoughte the face of the LORDE: ⁊ so I boldened my selfe, ⁊ offred a burntofferynge.

Samuel sayde vnto Saul: Thou hast done foolishly, and not kepte the commaundement of the LORDE thy God, which he commaunded the. For (yf thou haddest not done this) he had prospered thy kyngdome vpō Israel for euer: but now shall not thy kyngdome contynue. †The LORDE hath soughte him out a man after his owne hert: him hath the LORDE commaunded to be pryncce ouer his people, for thou hast not kepte y the LORDE commaunded y. And Samuel arose, and wente vp from Gilgal vnto Gibeā Ben Iamin.

D And Saul nombred the people that was founde with him, vpon a sixe hundreth men. Saul ⁊ his sonne Ionathas, and y people that was with them, taried at Gibeā Ben Iamin: but y Philistynes had pitched their tentes at Michmas. And out of the hoost of the Philistynes there wente thre bondes of men to destroye: one turned the waye towarde Ephraim to the londe of Sual: another turned towarde the waye of Bethoron: the thirde turned towarde the waye, that reacheth to the valley of Zeboim vnto the wyldernes.

But there was not a smyth founde in all the lōde of Israel: for y Philistynes thoughte: The Hebrues mighte happily make swerdes and speares. And all Israel were fayne to go downe to the Philistynes, whan eny man had a plowshare, a mattock, an axe, or a sythe to sharpe: and the edges of the plowshares, and mattocks, ⁊ forckes, and axes, were laboured, and the poyntes blont. Now whan the daye of the battayll came, there was nether swerde ner speare founde in the hande of all the people, that was with Saul and Ionathas: but for Saul and Ionathas his sonne there was somewhat founde. And y Philistynes watch wete out ouer by Michmas.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A IT fortunat at y same tyme, y Ionathas sayde vnto his lad which was his wapen bearer: Come, let vs go ouer to the Philistynes watch y lyeth aboue, ⁊ he tolde not his father. Saul dwelt at y ende of Gibeā vnder a Pomgranate tre, which was in the suburbe. § And the people y were by him, were vpon a sixe hundreth men. And Abia the sonne of Achitob the brother of Icabod, the sonne of Phineas y sonne of Eli y prest of the LORDE at Silo, wayre the ouerbody cote. But the people knewe not that Ionathas was gone.

Betwene the passages where Ionathas soughte to go ouer vnto the Philistynes watch, there were two hye rockes, the one on the one syde, the other on the other: the one was called Bozez, the other Senne. And y one laye on the north syde towarde Michmas, and the other on the south syde towarde Gaba. And Ionathas sayde vnto his wapen bearer:

† 1 Re. 16. c. § 1 Re. 13. d.

Come, let vs go ouer to þ̄ watch of these vn-circumcised, peradventure the LORDE shall worke with vs, *For it is no harde matter for the LORDE to helpe by many or by fewe. Then answered him his wapen bearer: Do all that is in thine hert, go on thy waie, beholde, I am with the, euen as thine hert wyll.

13 Ionathas sayde: Well than, Whan we are gone ouer to the men, and come within the sighte of them, yf they saye: stonde styll, tyll we come to you, then wyll we stonde styll in oure place, and not go vp to them. But yf they saye: Come vp to vs, we wyll go vp to them, thē hath the LORDE deliuered them in to oure hande, and this shalbe a token for vs. Now whan they came both in the sighte of the Philistynes watch, the Philistynes sayde: Se, †‡ Hebrues are gone out of their holes, that they were crepte in to. And the men in the watch answered Ionathas and his wapen bearer, and sayde: Come vp to vs, and we wyll teach you what the matter is. Then sayde Ionathas to his wapen bearer. †Come vp after me, the LORDE hath deliuered them into Israels hande. And Ionathas clamme vp with handes and fete, and his wapen bearer after him. And Ionathas smote them downe before him, and his wapen bearer slewe behynde him, so that the first slaughter that Ionathas and his wapen bearer dyd, was vpo a twentye men, with in the length of halue an aker of londe, which a pare of oxen maye tyll in one daye.

14 And there came a fearfulnes and flight in the hoost vpon the felde, and amonge all the people of the watch: and vpon the †destroyers there came a fearfulnes also and flight, so that the londe was in a rumoure, and *there came a flight thorow God. And Sauls watchmē at Gibeā Bē Iamin sawe, that † multitude gat them awaye, and ranne to and fro.

Saul sayde vnto the people that was with him: Tell and se which of vs is gone awaye. And whan they nombred, beholde, Ionathas † his wapen bearer was not there. Then saide Saul vnto Ahia: Brynge hither the Arke of God (for at that tyme was the Arke of God with the children of Israel.) And whyle Saul was yet speakinge to the prest, the multitude in the Philistynes hoost gat vp, ranne, and was greate. And Saul sayde vnto the prest:

Withdawe thine hande. And Saul cried, and all the people that was with him, and came to the battayll. And beholde, euery mans swerde was agaynst another, and there was a very greate rumoure.

The Hebrues also that were with † Philistynes afore, and had gone vp with them in the hoost on euery syde, ioyned them selues vnto Israel which were with Saul and Ionathas. And all the men of Israel which † had hyd thē selues vpon mount Ephraim, whan they herde that the Philistynes fled, folowed after them in the battayll. Thus † LORDE helped Israel at that tyme, and † battayll lasted vnto Bethauen.

And whan the men of Israel came forth, Saul charged all the people the same daye, and sayde: Cursed be euery man, which eateth bred vntyll euen, that I maye auenge me on myne enemies. Then all the people taisted no bred. And all the people of the londe came in to the wodd. But there laye hony vpon the felde: and whan the people came in to the wodd, beholde, the hony flowed, but no man put of it to his mouth with his hāde: for the people were afraied because of the ooth. As for Ionathas he had not herde, that his father had charged the people, and he put forth his staff that he had in his hande, and dypped the ende of it in † hony combe, and turned his hande to his mouth, and his eyes were lighted.

Then answered one of the people, and sayde: Thy father hath charged the people, and sayde: Cursed be euery mā that eateth oughte this daye. Neuertheles the people were faynte. Then sayde Ionathas: My father hath troubled the londe: Se how lighte myne eyes are become, because I haue taisted a litle of this hony. Yf the people this daie had eatē of the spoyle of their enemies that they founde, the slaughter shulde haue bene greater agaynst the Philistynes. Yet smote they the Philistynes the same daye fro Michmas vnto Aialon, and the people were very weery.

And † people turned to the spoyles, and toke shepe and oxen, and calues, and slewe them vpon the earth, † and ate them with the bloude. Then was it tolde Saul: Beholde, the people synne agaynst the LORDE, in that they eate bloude. He sayde: Ye haue done euell: roll vnto me now a greate stone. And Saul sayde morouer: Go abrode amonge the people, and saye vnto them, that euery one brynge me his oxe and his shepe, and slaye them here, that ye maye eate, and not to synne agaynst the LORDE with eatynge of bloude. Then broughte all the people euery one his oxe with his hāde the same nighte, and slewe them there. And Saul buylded an altare vnto ꝑ LORDE. This is the first altare that he buylded vnto the LORDE.

And Saul sayde: Let vs go downe after the Philistynes, by nighte, and spoyle them tyll it be cleare mornynge, that we let none escape. They answered: Do what so euer pleaseth thee. But the prest sayde: Let vs go nye here vnto God. And Saul axed at God. Shal I go downe here after ꝑ Philistynes? ¶ wilt thou deluyder thē in to Israels hande? Neuertheles he answered him not at that tyme.

¶ Then sayde Saul: Let all the armyes of the people come hither, and make search and se, in whom is this synne at this tyme. For as truly as God the Sauoure of Israel lyueth, ¶ though it be in my sonne Ionathas, he shal dye. And no man answered him of all the people. And he sayde vnto all Israel: Be ye on the one syde, I ¶ my sonne Ionathas wyl be on this syde. The people sayde vnto Saul: Do as it pleaseth the. And Saul sayde vnto the LORDE the God of Israel: Do thou that right is. Thē was Ionathas and Saul taken: but the people wente forth fre. Saul sayde: Cast the lot ouer me and my sonne Ionathas. So Ionathas was takē. And Saul sayde vnto Ionathas: Tell me, what hast thou done? Ionathas tolde him, ¶ sayde: I taisted a litle hony with the staff that I had in my hande, and beholde, must I dye therefore? Thē sayde Saul: God do this and that vnto me, Ionathas thou must dye the death.

¶ But the people sayde vnto Saul: Shulde Ionathas dye, that hath done so greate health in Israel this night? God forbyd. * As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shal not one heer of his heade fall vpon ꝑ earth: for with God hath he wroughte at this tyme. So the people deluyered Ionathas, that he dyed not. Then wente Saul vp from the Philistynes: and the Philistynes wente vnto their place.

But Saul had cōquered the kyngdome ouer Israel, he foughte against all his enemyes rounde aboute, against the Moabites, agaynst the childrē of Ammon, agaynst the Edomites, agaynst the kynge of Zoba, agaynst ꝑ Philistynes: and whither so euer he turned him, he gat ꝑ victory. And he made an hoost, and smote ꝑ + Amalechites, and deluyered Israel from the hande of all those that spoyled them.

Saul had these sonnes: Ionathas, Isui, and Malchisua. And these were ꝑ names of his two daughters: the firstborne Merob, ¶ ꝑ yōgest Michol. And Sauls wife was called Ahinoam, the daughter of Ahimaas. And his chefe captaynes name was Abner, the sonne of Ner, Sauls vnclē. + Cis was ꝑ father of Saul. But Ner ꝑ father of Abner was the sonne of Abiel.

There was a mightie sore warre against the Philistynes, as lōge as Saul lyued. And where Saul sawe a man that was stronge and mete for ꝑ warre, he toke him to him.

The xv. Chapter.

SAMUEL sayde vnto Saul: ꝑ The LORDE ¶ sent me to anoynte the for to be kynge ouer his people of Israel: heare now therfore the voyce of the wordes of the LORDE. Thus sayeth ꝑ LORDE Zebaoth: I haue remembered what Amaleck dyd vnto Israel, ¶ how he layed wayte for him in ꝑ waye, whan he wente out of Egipte: Go thy waye now therfore, and smyte the Amalechites, ¶ damne them with all that they haue, ¶ spare him not: but slaye both man and woman, children ¶ sucklynges, oxen ¶ shepe, Camels and asses. Saul commaunded the people the same, and nombred them at Talaim, two hūdreth thousande fote men, ¶ ten thousande men of Iuda.

And whan Saul came to the cite of the Amalechites, he set an hynder watch by the ryuer, and sayde vnto ꝑ Kenites: Get you hence, departe, and go downe from ꝑ Amalechites, ꝑ I smyte you not with them, ¶ for ye shewed mercy vnto all the children of Israel, whā they departed out of Egipte. So the Kenites gat them awaye from amonge the Amalechites.

Then smote Saul the Amalechites from Heula vnto Sur (which lyeth ouer against Egipte) ¶ toke Agag the kynge of ꝑ Amalechites alyue, ¶ damned all ꝑ people with the edge of the swerde. Neuertheles Saul and the people spared Agag, and the shepe and oxen ⁊ were good and fat, and the lambes, and all that was good, and wolde not damne thē: but loke what was foule and nothinge worth, that they damned.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto Samuel, and sayde: It repenteth me that I made Saul kynge, for he hath turned him selfe backe fro me, and not cōfirmed my wordes. Therefore was Samuel angrie, ⁊ cried vnto the LORDE all that nighte. And Samuel gat him vp early, that he might mete Saul in ⁊ mornyng. And it was tolde him, that Saul was come vnto Carmel, * ⁊ had set him vp a piler, and was gone aboute, and come downe to Gilgall.

Now whā Samuel came to Saul, Saul sayde vnto him: Blessed be thou vnto ⁊ LORDE, I haue perfourmed the worde of ⁊ LORDE. Samuel answered: What crye is this then of shepe in myne eares, and the crye of oxen which I heare?

Saul sayde: They haue broughte them from the Amalechites: for the people spared the best shepe ⁊ oxen for the offerynge of ⁊ LORDE thy God, the other haue we damned. Neuertheles Samuel answered Saul: Let me tell the what ⁊ LORDE hath sayde vnto me this nighte. He sayde: Saye on. Samuel sayde: † When thou wast but small in thine awne eyes, wast thou not ⁊ heade amōge the trybes of Israel? ⁊ the LORDE anoynted the to be kynge ouer Israel? and ⁊ LORDE sent ⁊ in to the waye, ⁊ sayde: Go thy waie ⁊ damne the synners the Amalechites, and fighte agaynst them, tyll thou haue vtterly destroyed thē? Wherefore hast thou not herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, but hast turned thy selfe to the spoyle, and done euell in the sighte of the LORDE?

Saul answered Samuel: Yee I haue herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, ⁊ haue gone the waye that ⁊ LORDE sent me, and broughte Agag the kynge of the Amalechites, ⁊ damned the Amalechites: but ⁊ people haue takē of the spoyle, shepe ⁊ oxen, and ⁊ best amōge the damned, to offer vnto ⁊ LORDE thy God in Gilgall. Samuel saide: Hath the LORDE pleasure in sacrifices and burnt offerynges, in obeynge the voyce of the LORDE? Beholde, ‡ obedience is better then offerynge, and to herken is better then the fat of rammes. For disobedience is as ⁊ synne of ⁊ witchcrafte, and rebellion is as the blasphemy of Idolatrye. In so moch now as thou hast refused the worde of the LORDE, he hath refused the also, that thou shuldest not be kynge.

Then sayde Saul vnto Samuel: I haue synned, ⁊ I haue transgressed the commaundement of the LORDE and thy worde: for I was afraied of the people, and herkened vnto their voyce. And now forgeue me my synne, ⁊ returne with me, that I maye worshippe ⁊ LORDE. Samuel saide vnto Saul: I wil not turne backe with ⁊, for thou hast refused the worde of the LORDE, and the LORDE hath refused the also, ⁊ thou shuldest not be kynge in Israel. And whan Samuel turned him backe to go his waye, he gat him by ⁊ edge of his garment, ⁊ rēte it. Then sayde Samuel vnto him: The LORDE hath rente the kyngdome of Israel from ⁊ this daye, ⁊ geuen it vnto thy neigboure, which is better then thou. The ouerwynner in Israel also shal not lye, nether shal he repente: for he is no man, that he shulde repente.

He sayde: I haue synned, yet honour me now before the Elders of my people and before Israel, and turne backe with me, that I maye worshippe the LORDE thy God. So Samuel turned agayne after Saul, that Saul mighte worshippe the LORDE. But Samuel sayde: Bring me hither Agag the kynge of the Amalechites. And Agag wente vnto him, tēderly. And Agag saide: Thus departeth the bytternesse of death. Samuel sayde: ¶ Like as thy swerde hath made wemen childlesse, so shal thy mother also be with out children amonge wemen. So Samuel hewed Agag in peces before ⁊ LORDE in Gilgall.

¶ And Samuel departed vnto Ramath. But Saul wente vp to his house at Gibeā Saul. And Samuel sawe Saul nomore vnto the daye of his death. Neuertheles Samuel mourned for Saul, because it repented the LORDE, that he had made Saul kynge ouer Israel.

whom I haue refused, that he shulde not be kynge ouer Israel? Fyll thine horne with oyle, go thy waye, I wyll sende the to Isai the Bethleemite: for amonge his sonnes haue I prouyde me a kynge. But Samuel sayde: How shal I go? Saul shal perceaue it, and shal slaye me. The LORDE sayde: Take the a calfe from the droue, & saye: I am come to do sacrifice vnto ȝ LORDE. And thou shalt call Isai to ȝ sacrifice, so shall I tell the what thou shalt do, that thou mayest anoynte me him, whom I shall shewe the. Samuel dyd as the LORDE sayde, and came to Bethleem. Then were the Elders of the cite astonnyed, and wente forth to mete him, and sayde: *Is thy commynge peaceable? He sayde: Yee. I am come to do sacrifice vnto the LORDE. Sanctifye youre selues, & come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Isai and his sonnes, and called them to the sacrifice.

B Now whā they came in, he behelde Eliab, & thoughte, whether he shulde be his anoynted before the LORDE. But ȝ LORDE sayde vnto Samuel: loke not vpon his countenance, ner vpon the tallnesse of his person, For I iudge not after the sighte of man. A man hath respecte vnto the thinge that is before his eyes, but the LORDE loketh vpon the hert. Then Isai called Abinadab, & broughte him before Samuel. And he sayde: This hath not the LORDE chosen. Then Isai broughte Samma. But he sayde: This also hath not the LORDE chosen. Then broughte Isai his seuen sonnes before Samuel. Neuertheles Samuel saide vnto Isai: The LORDE hath chosen none of these.

C And Samuel sayde vnto Isai: Are here all the childrē? He sayde: There is yet one ȝ leest of all, and beholde, he kepeth the shepe. Thē sayde Samuel vnto Isai: Sende & cause him to be fetchtd, for we will not syt downe at the table, vntyll he come. Then sent he, & caused him be broughte. And he was well coloured with fayre eyes & of a beutyfull countenance. And the LORDE saide: Aryse, and anoynte him, that is he.

Thē toke Samuel his oyle horne, & anoynted him amonge his brethrē. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpō Dauid frō ȝ daye forth. As for Samuel, he gat him vp, & wente vnto Ramath.

* 3 Re. 2. b.

But the sprete of the LORDE departed from Saul, and an euell sprete from ȝ LORDE vexed him. Then sayde Sauls seruantes vnto him: Beholde, an euell sprete from God vexeth the. Let oure lord saie vnto his seruantes which stonde before him, ȝ they seke a man which can playe vpon the harpe, and instrumente, that whan the euell sprete of God cōmeth vpon the, he maye playe with his hande, to ease the withall. Then sayde Saul vnto his seruantes: Prouyde me a mā, that can playe well vpon the instrumente, & brynge him vnto me.

Then answered one of the children, & sayde: Beholde, I sawe a sonne of Isai ȝ Bethleemite, which can playe vpon the instrumēte, an honest & valeant man, and one ȝ hath vnderstōdinge in matters, & is wellfaouored. Thē Saul sent messaungers vnto Isai, sayēge: Sende me Dauid thy sonne, which is with the shepe. Then toke Isai an asse with bred, & a bottell with wyne, and a kyd, and sent it vnto Saul by Dauid his sonne. So Dauid came to Saul, & stode before him, & he loued him well, and he became his wapen bearer. And Saul sente vnto Isai, sayēge: Let Dauid remaine before me, for he hath founde fauoure in my sighte. Now whan the sprete of God came vpō Saul, Dauid toke ȝ harpe, & played with his hande: so was Saul refreszshed, & eased, & the euell sprete departed from him.

The xviij. Chapter.

THE Philistynes gathered their hoost to ȝ battayl, and came together to Socho in Iuda, & pitched their tentes betwene Socho & Aseka, at the ende of Damin. But Saul & the mē of Israel came together, & pitched in the Oke valley, & prepared them selues to the battayll agaynst the Philistynes. And the Philistynes stode vpon a hyll on the one syde, and the Israelites vpon a hyll on the other syde, so that there was a valley betwene them.

Then stepte there forth from amonge the Philistynes a stoute bolde man, named Goliath of *Gath, sixe cubites and an hande breth hye, and had an helmet of stele on his heade, and a fast habergion vpon him, and the weight of his habergion was fyue thousande Sicles of stele, and harnessse of stele had he vpon his legges, and a shyld of stele vpon his shulders: and the shaft of his speare was like a weuers lome, and the yron of his speare had sixe hundred Sicles of yron, and his wapen bearer wente before him.

33 And he stode and called vnto the hoost of Israel, and sayde vnto them: Wherefore are ye come forth to prepare youre selues to the battayll? Am not I a Philistyne, and ye the seruauentes of Saul? Chose one amonge you to come downe vnto me: yf he can fighte agaynst me and slaye me, then wil we be youre seruauentes: but yf I can ouercome him and slaye him, then shal ye be oure seruauentes, to do vs seruyce. And the Philistyne sayde: I haue spokē disdzanedly vnto the hoost of Israel this daye. Geue me one, and let vs fighte together. Whan Saul and all Israel herde these wordes of ʒ Philistyne, they were astonnyed, and sore afraied.

But Dauid was the sonne of a man of Ephrata of Bethleem Iuda, whose name was Isai, which had eight sonnes, and was an olde man in Sauls tyme, and was well strycken in age amonge men. And the thre eldest sonnes of Isai were gone with Saul to the battayll. And there names were these: Eliab the first borne, Abinadab the seconde, and Samma the thirde. But Dauid was the yongest of all. So whan the thre eldest were gone with Saul to the battayll, Dauid wente agayne from Saul, to kepe his fathers shepe at Bethleem. But the Philistyne stepte forth early in the mornynge and at euen, and stode there fortye dayes.

Ⓒ Isai sayde vnto Dauid his sonne: Take this Ephra of firmentye for thy brethren, and these ten loaves of bred (and runne to the hoost vnto thy brethren) ⁊ these ten new cheses, and brynge them to ʒ captayne, and loke how thy brethren do, whether it go well with them or no, and take what they byd the. But Saul and they, and all the men of Israel were in the Oke valley, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes.

Then Dauid gat him vp early in the mornynge, and commytted the shepe to ʒ keper, and toke his burthen, wente his waye, as Isai commaunded him, and came to the tēt. And the hoost was gone forth, and had prepared them selues, and cried in the battayl: For Israel had set them selues in aray, and the Philistynes were agaynst their hoost in their aray also.

Then lefte Dauid the vessell that he bare, with the keper of the stuffe, and ranne to the hoost, and wente in, and saluted his brethren. And whyle he was yet talkynge with them, beholde, then came vp the stoute bolde man, whose name was Goliath, the Philistine of Gath, out of the Philistynes hoost, and spake like as afore, and Dauid herde it. But euery man of Israel, whan he sawe the man, fled from him, and was sore afraied of him.

And euery man in Israel sayde: Hauē ye sene the man commynge vp hither? For he is come vp hither, to speake disdzanedly vnto Israel. And who so euer smyteth him, him wyll the kyng make ryche, and geue him his daughter, and make his fathers house fre in Israel.

Then sayde Dauid vnto the men that stode by him: What shalbe done to the man, that smyteth this Philistyne, and turneth this shame awaye from Israel? For what is he this Philistyne this vncircūeysed, that defyeth the hoost of ʒ lyuynge God? Then the people tolde him as afore: Thus shall it be done vnto ʒ man that smyteth him. And Eliab his greater brother herde him talke with the men, and was very wroth agaynst Dauid, and sayde: Wherefore art thou come downe? and why hast thou left a fewe shepe in the wyldernes? I knowe thy presumptuousnesse well ynough, and the wickednesse of thine hert: for thou art come downe to se the battayll. Dauid answered: What haue I downe now? Is there not an occasion? And he turned him selfe from him vnto another, and spake acordinge as he had sayde before. Then the people answered him like as afore.

And whan they herde the wordes which Dauid sayde, they tolde them in the presence of Saul, and he caused him be fetched. And Dauid sayde vnto Saul: Let no mans hert be discouraged because of him. Thy seruauent shall go, and fighte with the Philistyne. Neuertheles Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Thou art not able to go agaynst this Phylistyne to fighte with him, for thou art but a childe: but this is a man of warre from his youth vp.

Dauid sayde vnto Saul: Thy seruauent kepte 32 his fathers shepe, and there came a lyon and a Bere, and caried awaye a shepe from the flocke, then wente I forth after him, and smote him, and delyuered it out of his mouth. * And whan he wolde haue bene vpon me, I toke him by his beerde, and smote him, and slewe him. So thy seruauunt smote both the Lyon and y Bere. Therefore shall this Philistyne this vncircumcysed be euen as one of them: for he hath defyed the hoost of the luyunge God. And Dauid sayde: The LORDE that deluyered me from y Lyon and Beer, shall deluyere me also from this Philistyne.

And Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Go thy waye, the LORDE be with the. And Saul clothed Dauid with his clothes, and set an helmet of stele vpon his heade, and put an habergion vpo him. And Dauid girded his swerde aboue his clothes, and beganne to go, for he had neuer bene vsed to it afore. Then sayde Dauid vnto Saul: I can not go thus, for I haue not bene vsed to it, and so he laied it from him, and toke his staff in his hande, and chose fyue slighte stones out of the ryuer, and put them in the shepardes bagge which he had by him, and toke a slynge in his hande, and made him to the Philistyne. And the Philistyne wente forth, and made him to Dauid, and his wapen bearer before him.

F Now whan the Philistyne loked & sawe Dauid, he thoughte scorne of him: for he was but a childe, well coloured, and beutyfull to loke vpon. And the Philistyne sayde vnto Dauid: Am I a dogg then, that thou comcest vnto me with a staffe? And he cursed Dauid by his God, and sayde vnto Dauid: Come hither to me, I wil geue thy flesh to the foules vnder the heauen, and to the beastes in the felde. Neuertheles Dauid sayde vnto the Philistyne: Thou comcest vnto me with swerde, speare and shyld. But I come vnto the in the name of the LORDE Zebaoth the God of the hoost of Israel, whom thou hast despyed. This daye shall the LORDE deluyere the in to my hãde, that I maye smyte the, and take thy heade from the, and geue the bodies of the hoost of the Philistynes this daye vnto the foules vnder the heauen, and to the wyld beestes vpon the earth, that all the londe maye knowe y Israel hath a God. And all this congregacion shal knowe, that the LORDE saueth nether thorow swerde ner speare: for the battayll is the LORDES, & he shal deluyere you in to oure handes.

Now whan the Philistyne gat him vp, and wente forth and drue nye vnto Dauid, Dauid made haiste, and ranne from y hoost vnto the Philistyne. And Dauid put his hãde in his bagg, and toke out a stone, & thrue it with the slynge, *and hytt the Philistyne euen in the fore heade, so that the stone stacke in his fore heade, and he fell downe to the grounde vpon his face.

So Dauid ouercame y Philistyne with the slynge and with y stone, and smote him, and slewe him. And for so much as Dauid had no swerde in his hande, he ranne and stode ouer y Philistyne, and toke his swerde, and drue it out of the sheeth, and slewe him, and smote of his heade withall. Whan the Philistynes sawe that the strongest of them was deed, †they fled. And the men of Israel and Iuda gat the vp, and cryed and folowed vpon the Philistynes, tyll they came vnto the valley, and to the Portes of Ekron. And the Philistynes fell downe slayne vnto Gath and to Ekron. And the children of Israel turned agayne from chasyng of the Philistynes, and spoyled their tentes. But Dauid toke the heade of the Philistyne, and broughte it vnto Ierusalem, as for his armour, he layed it in his tente.

Whan Saul sawe Dauid go forth agaynst the Philistyne, he saide vnto y Abner his chefe captaine: Abner, whose sonne is this childe? Abner sayde: As truly as thy soule lyueth O kynge, I wote not. The kynge sayde: Axe the whose sonne the yonge mã is. Now whan Dauid came agayne from the slaughter of the Philistyne, Abner toke him, and broughte him before Saul, and he had the Philistynes heade in his hande. And Saul sayde vnto him: Whose sonne art thou, thou yonge man? Dauid sayde: I am a sonne of thy seruauunt Isai the Bethleemite.

The xliij. Chapter.

AND whan he had made an ende of talkynge with Saul, the soule of Ionathas was bounde with the soule of Dauid, and Ionathas loued him as his owne soule. And Saul toke him the same daye, and let him not go agayne to his fathers house. And Ionathas and Dauid made a couenant together, for he loued him as his owne soule. And Ionathas put of his owne cote that he had vpon him, and gaue it vnto Dauid: yee and his cloke, his swerde, his bowe, and his girdell. And Dauid wente forth whither so euer Saul sent him, and behaued him selfe wysely. And Saul set him ouer the men of warre, and he pleased all the people well, and all the seruautes of Saul.

It fortuned, that whan Dauid was come agayne from the slaughter of the Philistyne, the women wente out of all the cities of Israel with songes & daunces, to mete kyng Saul, with tymbrels, with myrth, and with fyddels. And the women sange one to another, and played & sayde: * Saul hath smytten his thousande: but Dauid his ten thousande.

Then was Saul very wroth, and & worde displeased him sore, and he sayde: They haue ascribed ten thousande vnto Dauid, and but one thousande vnto me: what shal he haue more but the kyngdome? And from that daye forth, Saul loked sowerly vpō Dauid.

The nexte daye after came the euell sprete of God vpon Saul, and prophecyed in & myddes of the house. But Dauid played on the instrumente with his hande, as he was wonte daylie. And Saul had a iauelynge in his hande, and cast it, and thoughte: I wyll stycke Dauid fast to the wall. Neuerthelesse Dauid turned himselfe twyse awaye from him. And Saul was afraied of Dauid: for the LORDE was with him, and was departed from Saul. Then Saul put him from him, and set him to be prynce ouer a thousande men, and he went out and in before the people. And Dauid behaued himselfe wysely in all his doynges, and the LORDE was with him.

Now whan Saul sawe that he was so exceedynge wyse, he stode in feare of him. But all Israel and Iuda loued Dauid, for he wente out and in before them. And Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Beholde, my greatest daughter Merob † wyl I geue the to wyfe: be stronge now, & gouerne the warres of the LORDE. For Saul thought: my hāde shal not be vpon him, but the hande of & Philistynes. Neuertheles Dauid answered Saul: Who am I? & what is my life & the kynred of my father in Israel, that I shulde mary the kynges daughter?

But whan the tyme came, that Merob & daughter of Saul shulde haue bene geue vnto Dauid, she was geuen vnto Adriel & Meholahite to wyfe. Neuerthelesse Michol Sauls daughter loued Dauid. Whan this was tolde Saul, & matter pleased him well, & he sayde: I wyl geue him her, & she maye be a snare vnto him, & that the handes of & Philistynes maye come vpon him. And he sayde vnto Dauid: This daye shalt thou be my daughters huszbāde & secōde time. And Saul spake vnto his seruautes: Talke with Dauid secretly & saye: Beholde, the kyng hath pleasure in the, and all his seruautes loue the, mary thou therefore the kynges daughter.

And Sauls seruautes spake these wordes in the eares of Dauid. But Dauid saide: Thyne ye it but a small matter, to mary the kynges daughter? As for me, I am but a poore symple man. And Sauls seruautes tolde him agayne, and sayde: Soch wordes hath Dauid spoken. Saul sayde: Then saye ye vnto Dauid: The kyng desyreth no dowry, but onely an hundreth foreskynnes of the Philistynes, that vengeance maye be taken of the kynges enemies. Howbeit Saul thought to cause Dauid be slayne by the hādes of the Philistynes. Then his seruautes tolde Dauid these wordes, and Dauid was contente with the matter, to mary the kynges daughter.

And after a fewe dayes Dauid gatt him vp, and wente with his men, and smote two hundreth men amonge the Philistynes. And Dauid broughte their foreskynnes, and made their nombre sufficient vnto the kyng, & he mighte mary the kynges daughter. Thē Saul gaue him his daughter Michol to wyfe. And Saul sawe and perceaued, that the LORDE was with Dauid. And Michol Sauls daughter loued him. Then was Saul the more afraied, and became his enemye as lōge as he lyued. And whan the prynces of the Philistynes wēte forth, Dauid behaued him selfe more wysely then all the seruautes of Saul in their outgoynge: so that his name was in greate reputacion.

The xix. Chapter.

SAUL spake to Ionathas his sonne, and to all his seruautes, that they shulde kyll Dauid. † Neuerthelesse Ionathas the sonne of Saul loued Dauid exceedingly, and tolde him, and sayde: Saul my father goeth aboute to slaye the. Kepe the therefore (I praye the) in the mornyng and abyde in secrete, and hyde the. But I wyl go forth, and stonde besyde my father in the felde where thou art, and wyl speake of the vnto my father: and what soeuer I se I shal brynge the worde.

* 1 Re. 21. d. and 29. b. † 1 Re. 17. c.

‡ 1 Re. 18. a.

And Ionathas reported þ̄ best of Dauid vnto Saul his father, and sayde vnto him: Oh let not the kynge synne agaynst his seruauent, for he hath not synned agaynst the, and his doynge is very necessary for the, * he put his lyfe in his hande also, and smote the Philistyne, ⁊ the LORDE dyd a greate health vnto all Israel: this hast thou sene, and reioysed therof. Wherefore wylt thou then offende agaynst innocent bloude, that thou woldest kyll Dauid without a cause? Then herkened Saul vnto the voice of Ionathas and sware: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, he shal not dye. Then Ionathas called Dauid, and tolde him all these wordes, and brought him to Saul, so that he was in presence like as afore tyme.

But there arose a battayll agayne, and Dauid wente forth, and fought agaynst the Philistynes, and smote a greate slaughter, so that they fled before him. Neuertheles þ̄ euell sprete of the LORDE came vpon Saul, and he sat in his house, and had a iauelynge in his hande. But Dauid plaied vpon the instrument with his hāde. And Saul thought with the iauelynge to sticke Dauid fast to the wall. Howbeit, he wente asyde frō Saul and the iauelynge smote in the wall. And Dauid fled, and escaped that night.

Notwithstandinge Saul sent his messaungers to Dauids house, that they shulde laye wayte for him, and kyll him in the mornynge. Michol Dauids wyfe tolde him this, and sayde: Yf thou saue not thy soule this night, thou shalt dye tomorrow. † Then Michol let him downe thorow the wyndow, so that he wente his waye, fled, and escaped. And Michol toke an ymage, and layed it in the bed, and laied a goates skynne at the heade of it, and couered it with clothes. Then Saul sent messaungers, to fetch Dauid. But she sayde: He is sicke. Neuerthelesse Saul sent messaungers to se Dauid, ⁊ sayde: Bring him vp to me with the bed, that he maye be slayne.

Now when the messaungers came, beholde, the ymage laye in the bed, and a goates skynne at the heade of it. Then sayde Saul vnto Michol: Why hast thou begyled me, and let myne enemye go, that he mighte escape? Michol sayde vnto Saul: He sayde vnto me: Let me go, or I wyl kyll the. As for Dauid, he fled, and escaped, and came to Samuel vnto Ramath, and tolde him all þ̄ Saul had done vnto him. And he wente with Samuel, and they abode at Naioth.

And it was tolde Saul: Beholde, Dauid is at Naioth in Ramath. Then Saul sente messaungers to fetch Dauid. And they sawe a company of prophetes prophecieng, and Samuel had the ouersight of them. Then came the sprete of God vpon the messaungers of Saul, so that they prophecyed also.

Whan this was tolde Saul, he sent other messaungers, which prophecied likewise. Then sente he messaungers the thyrd tyme, and they in like maner prophecyed. Then wente he himselfe also vnto Ramath, and whan he came to the greate well which is at Secho, he axed and sayde: Where is Samuel and Dauid? Then was it tolde him: beholde, at Naioth in Ramath. And he wente thither, euen vnto Naioth in Ramath. And þ̄ sprete of God came vpon him also, and he wete ⁊ prophecied till he came vnto Naioth in Ramath. And he put of his clothes, ⁊ prophecied likewise before Samuel, ⁊ fell downe naked all that daye and all that night. † Here of came the prouerbe: Is Saul also amonge the prophetes?

The rr. Chapter.

DAUID fled frō Naioth in Ramath, and came, ⁊ spake before Ionathas: What haue I done? What trespase haue I made? What haue I synned in þ̄ sighte of thy father, þ̄ he seketh to kyll me? He sayde vnto him: God forbyd, thou shalt not dye. Beholde, my father doth nothinge, nether greate ner small, but he sheweth it before myne eares. Wherefore shulde my father thē hyde this fro me? It shal not be so. Thē sware Dauid agayne, and sayde: Thy father knoweth well, þ̄ I haue founde fauoure in thy sighte, therefore shal he thynke: Ionathas shal not knowe of this, lest it greue him. Verely, as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, there is but one steppe betwene me ⁊ death. Ionathas sayde vnto Dauid: I wil do for the what so euer thy hert desyareth. Dauid sayde vnto him: Beholde, tomorrow is the new Mone, that I shulde syt at the table with the kynge. Let me hyde my selfe therefore in the felde vnto the thirde daye at euen. Yf thy father then axe after me, saye: Dauid prayed me, þ̄ he mighte runne to Bethleem vnto his cite, for all his kynred haue there a yearly sacrifice. Yf he saye then: It is good, the stondesth it well with thy seruau. But yf he be wroth, thou shalt perceaue that he intendeth euell. Do mercy therfore vpon thy seruau: *for with me thy seruau hast thou made a couenaunt in the LORDE. But yf there be eny trespase in me, then slaye me thy selfe, for why woldest thou brynge me vnto thy father?

Ionathas sayde: That be farre from the, that I shulde perceaue my father to intende eny euell agaynst the, and shulde not tell the. Dauid sayde: Who shal brynge me worde, yf thy father geue the an harde answer? Ionathas sayde vnto Dauid: Come, let vs go forth in to the felde. And they wente out both in to y^e felde. And Ionathas sayde vnto Dauid:

LORDE God of Israel, yf I perceaue by my father tomorow or on the thirde daye, that it goeth well with Dauid, & sende not vnto the, and shewe the before thine eares, then let the LORDE do this and that vnto Ionathas. But yf my father delyte in euell agaynst the, I will shewe it before thine eares also, and let y^e go, that thou mayest departe in peace.

And the LORDE be with the, as he hath bene with my father. Yf I do it not, then do thou no mercy of the LORDE on me, while I lyue, no not whan I dye, and plucke thy mercy fro my house for euer. And whan the LORDE roteth out y^e enemies of Dauid, every one out of the londe, then let Dauid rote out Ionathas also with his house, and the LORDE requyre it of the hande of Dauids enemies.

And Ionathas proceeded further, and sware vnto Dauid (he loued him so well: for he loued him euen as his owne soule) and Ionathas sayde vnto him: Tomorow is y^e new Mone, and thou shalt be axed after: for thou shalt be wanted where thou wast wonte to sit. But on the thirde daye come downe soone, & go in to y^e place where thou hydest the on the workdaye, & set the downe by the stone of Asel: then wyl I shute thre arrowes on y^e side, as though I wolde shute at a marck: and beholde, I will sende the boye, and saye vnto him, Go seke y^e arrowes. Yf I saye now vnto the lad: Lo, the arrowes lye hitherwarde behynde y^e, fetch them, then come thou, for it is peace, and there is no parell, as truly as the LORDE lyueth. But yf I saye vnto the lad: beholde, the arrowes lye yonderwarde before the, then go thou thy waye, for the LORDE hath let the go. †As for that which thou and I haue spokē together, the LORDE is betweene me and the for euer.

Dauid hid himself in the felde. And whā the new Mone came, the kynge sat him downe at the table to eate. Whan the kynge had set him downe in his place as he was wonte by the wall, Ionathas stode vp, but Abner sat him downe besyde Saul. And Dauid was myssed in his place. And Saul spake nothinge that daye, for he thoughte: There is somewhat happend vnto him, that he is not cleane. On the seconde daye of the new Mone, whan Dauid was myssed in his place, Saul saide vnto Ionathas his sonne: Wherefore is not the sonne of Isai come to the table nether yesterdays ner to daye?

Ionathas answered Saul: He prayed me that he mighte go vnto Bethleem, and sayde: Let me go, for oure kynred hath a sacrifice to do in the cyte, and my brother hath sent for me himselfe: yf I haue founde fauoure now in thy syghte, I wyl go, and se my brethren: therefore is he not come to the kynges table. Then was the kynge wroth at Ionathas, and sayde vnto him: Thou wicked and vnthrift, I knowe how that thou hast chosen the sonne of Isai, to the shame of thy selfe and of thy shamefull mother. For as longe as y^e sonne of Isai lyueth vpō earth nether thou ner thy kingdome shal prospere. Sende now therfore, and cause him to be fetchted vnto me, †for he is a childe of death.

Ionathas answered his father Saul and sayde vnto him: Wherefore shal he dye? what hath he done? Then shot Saul the iauelynge at him, that he might smite him. Thē perceaued Ionathas, that his father was vtterly determed to kyll Dauid, and he rose vp from y^e table in a wrothfull displeasure, and ate no bred y^e same seconde daye of the new Mone: for he was vexed because of Dauid, that his father had done him soch dishonoure.

On the morow wente Ionathas forth in to the felde, at the tyme appointyed of Dauid, and a litle boy with him, and sayde vnto y^e boy: Runne and seke me the arrowes which I shute. Whan the boy ranne, he shot an arrowe ouer him. And whan the boy came to the place whither Ionathas had shot ⁊ arowe, Ionathas cryed after him, and sayde: The arowe lyeth yonderwarde before the. And he cryed after him agayne: haist the, and stonde not styll. Then the boy gathered vp Ionathas arowes, and brought them to his lorde. And the boy knewe nothinge, onely Ionathas and Dauid knewe of ⁊ matter.

Then Ionathas gaue his boy his wapēs and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, and cary them in to the cite. And whan the boy was gone, Dauid arose from the place towarde the south, and fell vpon his face to the grounde, and worshipped thre tymes, and they kissed one another, and wepte together. But Dauid most specially. And Ionathas saide vnto Dauid: Go thy waye in peace: *What soeuer we both haue sworne ⁊ spokē together in the name of the LORDE, the LORDE be witnesse betwene me and the, betwene my sede and thy sede for euer. And Ionathas gat him vp, and came in to the cite.

The xxi. Chapter.

DAUID came to Nobe to ⁊ prest Ahimelech. And Ahimelech was astonied, whan he sawe Dauid comminge, and sayde vnto him: Why comest thou alone, and noman is with the? Dauid sayde vnto Ahimelech the prest: The kinge hath comytted a matter vnto me, and sayde: Let nomā knowe wherfore I haue sent the, and what I haue commaunded the: for I haue appoynted my seruantes to mete me here ⁊ there. *Yf thou haue now ought vnder thy hande, a loafe of bred or fyue, geue me the same in my hande, or what so euer thou findest.

The prest answered Dauid, and sayde: I haue no comen bred vnder my hande, but the holy bred, yf the yonge men haue onely refrained them selues from women. Dauid answered the prest, and sayde vnto him: The women were kepte thre dayes from vs whan we departed forth, and the yonge mens vessels were holy. But this waye is vnholly, neuertheless it shalbe sanctified to daye in the instruments. § Then the prest gaue him of ⁊ holy, in so much as there was none other bred but the shewbreds, which were taken vp before the LORDE, that there might be other freshbreds set therein the daye whā he toke them awaye.

But the same daye was there a man sparrēd in before the LORDE, one of Sauls seruantes, named Doeg an Edomite, ⁊ mightiest amonge Sauls hyrdmen. And Dauid sayde vnto Ahimelech: Is there not a speare or a swerde here vnder thine hande? I haue not taken my swerde and weapens with me: for the kynges matter requyred haist. The prest sayde: The swerde of Goliath the Philistyne ¶ whom thou smotest in the Oke valley, is here wrapped in a cloth behynde the ouerbody cote. Yf thou wylt haue it, take it, for here is els none but it. Dauid sayde: There is not soch another, geue me it.

And Dauid gat him vp, and fled from Saul, and came to Achis ⁊ kyng of Gath. But Achis seruantes sayde vnto him: This is Dauid the kyng of the londe, of whom they sunge in the daunce, and sayde: ¶ Saul hath smytten his thousande, but Dauid his ten thousande. And Dauid toke these wordes to hert, and was sore afayed of Achis the kyng of Gath, and altered his countenance before them, and shewed himselfe as he had bene madd in their handes, and stackered towarde the dores of the gate, and his slauerynges ranne downe his beard. Then sayde Achis vnto his seruantes: Beholde, ye se that the man is out of his wyt, why haue ye brought him vnto me? Haue I to fewe madd men, that ye haue brought this hither to be madd before me? Shulde he come in to my house?

The xxij. Chapter.

DAUID wente frō thence, ⁊ fled vnto the caue of Adullam. Whan his brethren and all his fathers house herde that, they came downe thither vnto him. And there gathered vnto him all men that were in trouble and det, and sory of hert, and he became their heade, so that there were with him vpon a foure hundred men.

And Dauid wente from thence towarde Misa in the londe of the Moabites, and sayde vnto the kyng of the Moabites: Let my father and my mother go out and in amonge you, tyll I se what God wil do with me. And he lefte them before the kyng of ⁊ Moabites, so that they remayned by him, as longe as Dauid was in the castell. Neuertheles the prophet Gad sayde vnto Dauid: Abyde not in the castell, but go thy waye, and come in to the lond of Iuda. Then departed Dauid, and came in to the wodd of Hareth. And Saul herde that Dauid and the men which were with him, were come forth.

33 Now whyle Saul dwelt at Gibeā vnder a groue in Rama, he had a lauelinge in his hande, and all his seruantes stode by him. Then sayde Saul vnto his seruantes that stode by him: Heare ye children of Iemini: Shal the sonne of Isai geue lodes and vynyardes vnto you all, & make you all captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hūdrreds, that ye haue all conspyred agaynst me, and there is no mā that sheweth it before myne eares, *for so much as my sonne also hath made a couenaunt with the sonne of Isai? There is no man amonge you that letteth it for my sake, or y openeth it vnto myne eares: for my sonne hath stered vp my seruantes against me, that he maye laye wayte for me, as it is manifest.

Then answered Doeg y Edomite which stode besyde Sauls seruantes, and sayde: + I sawe the sonne of Isai, that he came vnto Nobe, to Ahimelech y sonne of Achitob, which axed counsell at the LORDE for him, and gaue him fode, & the swerde of Goliath the Philistyne.

© Then sent the kyng, and caused to call Ahimelech the prest the sonne of Achitob, and all his fathers house, the prestes that were at Nobe, and they came all to the kyng. And Saul sayde: Heare thou sonne of Achitob. He saide: Here am I my lorde. And Saul sayde vnto him: Wherefore haue ye cōspyred agaynst me, thou & the sonne of Isai, that thou hast geuen him bred and a swerde, and axed counsell at God for him, to stere him vp, that he mighte laye awayte for me, as it is manifest?

Ahimelech answered the kyng and saide: And who is amonge all thy seruantes like Dauid, which is faithfull, and hath married the kynges daughter, and goeth in thine obedience, & is honorably taken in thine house? Haue I begonne then first this daye to axe counsell at God for him? That be farre fro me. Let not the kyng laie soch to his seruantes charge in all my fathers house: for thy seruaut knewe not of all these thinges nether small ner greate. Neuertheles the kyng saide: Ahimelech thou must dye y death, thou and all thy fathers house. And the kyng sayde to his fote men that stode by him: Turne you, and slaye the prestes of the LORDE, for their hande is with Dauid also.

Not withstondinge the kynges seruantes wolde not laye their handes vpon y prestes of the LORDE, to slaye them. Then saide y kyng vnto Doeg: Turne the, and slaye the prestes. + Doeg the Edomite turned him, and slewe the prestes, so that the same daye there dyed fyue and foure score men, which wayre ouerbody cotes of linnen. And Nob the cite of the prestes smote he with the edge of the swerde, both men and women, children and sucklynges, oxen and asses, and shepe.

Neuerthelesse there escaped a sonne of Ahimelech (the sonne of Achitob) whose name was Abiathar, and fled after Dauid, and tolde him, that Saul had slayne y prestes of the LORDE. Dauid sayde vnto Abiathar: I knewe well the same daye that Doeg the Edomite was there, that he wolde tell Saul. I am giltie of the soules of thy fathers house. Abyde thou with me, and feare not. He that layeth wayte for my lyfe, shall laye wayte for thyne also, and thou shalt be preserued with me.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND it was tolde Dauid: Beholde, the Philistynes fight against Cegila, and spoyle the barnes. Then Dauid axed at the LORDE, and sayde: Shal I go, & smyte these Philistynes? And the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid: Go thy waye, thou shalt smyte the Philistynes, and delyuer Cegila. But y men that were with Dauid, sayde vnto him: Beholde, we are here in feare in Iewry, and shall we go to Cegila vnto the hoost of the Philistynes? Thē Dauid axed at the LORDE agayne. And the LORDE answered him, and sayde: Vp, get the downe to Cegila, for I wil delyuer the Philistynes in to thy hande.

So Dauid wente with his men vnto Cegila, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes, & droue awaye their catell, and smote them with a greate slaughter. Thus Dauid delyuered them of Cegila. For whan Abiathar the sonne of Ahimelech fled vnto Dauid at Cegila, he bare downe the ouerbody cote with him.

Thē was it tolde Saul, that Dauid was come to Cegila, and he sayde: God hath deliuered him in to my hãde, for he is shut fast in, now that he is come in to a cite which is keppe with gates and barres. And Saul caused for to call all the people downe to þæt battaill vnto Cegila, þæt they might besege Dauid and his men. But whan Dauid perceaued þæt Saul intēded euell against him, he saide vnto Abiathar þæt prest: Brynge me hither the ouerbody cote. And Dauid sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, thy seruauent hath herde, that Saul goeth aboute to come for to destroye the cite of Cegila for my sake. Shal the citysens of Cegila deliuer me ouer in to his handes? And shal Saul come downe, as thy seruauent hath herde? Tell thy seruauent this, O LORDE God of Israel. And the LORDE saide: He shal come downe.

¶ Dauid sayde: Shall the citysens of Cegila deliuer me and my men in to Sauls handes? The LORDE sayde: Yee. Thē Dauid gat him vp with his mē, of whom there were vpon a sixe hundred, and walked whither they coude. Now whan it was tolde Saul that Dauid was escaped from Cegila, he let his iourney stonde. As for Dauid, he remayned in the wildernes in the castell, and abode vpon the mount in the wildernes of Siph. But Saul soughte him as longe as he lyued. Neuertheles God gaue him not in to his handes. And Dauid sawe, that Saul was gone forth to seke after his life. But Dauid was in the wildernes of Siph, in the wodd.

¶ Then Ionathas the sonne of Saul gat him vp, and wēt vnto Dauid in to the wod, and strenghted his hande in God, and sayde vnto him: Feare not, my father Sauls hande shal not finde þæt; and thou shalt be kyng ouer Israel, so will I be the nexte vnto the. And þæt my father knoweth right well. *And they made a couenaunt both together before the LORDE. And Dauid remayned in the wodd. As for Ionathas, he wente home agayne.

¶ But the þisphites wente vp to Saul vnto Gibeath, and sayde: Is not Dauid hyd with vs in the castell in þæt wodd, vpon mouit Hachila, which lyeth on the righte hande of the wildernes? Let the kynges come downe now therefore accordinge to all the desyre of his hert, and we wyll deliuer him in to the kynges hande. Then sayde Saul: Blessed be ye of the LORDE, that ye haue had pytie vpon me: Go youre waye now therefore, and be sure, that ye maye knowe and se in what place his fete haue bene, and who hath sene him there: for it is tolde me, that he is full of sotiltey. Loke well and spye out all the places, where he hydeth him, and come agayne to me, whan ye are sure, and I will go with you. Yf he be in the londe, I wyll enquire after him amonge all the thousandes in Iuda.

¶ Then gat they them vp, and wente their waye vnto Siph before Saul. But Dauid and his men were in the wyldernes of Maō, euen in the felde on the righte hande of the wildernes. Now whan Saul wente thither with his men to seke him, it was tolde Dauid and he gat him downe to the rocke, and abode in the wildernes of Mahon. Whan Saul herde that, he folowed after Dauid in the wildernes of Mahon. And Saul with his men wente on the one syde of the hyl: Dauid with his men on þæt other syde of þæt hill. But whan Dauid made haist to escape from Saul, Saul with his men compased aboute Dauid and his men, that he might take thē. ¶ Neuertheles there came a messaūger vnto Saul, and sayde: Make haist and come, for the Philistynes are fallē in to the londe. Thē Saul turned him from chacyng of Dauid, and wente agaynst the Philistynes. Therefore is þæt place called þæt Sela Mahelkoth. And Dauid wente vp from thence, and abode in the castell at En Gaddi.

The xliij. Chapter.

¶ NOW whan Saul came agayne from the Philistines, it was tolde him: Beholde, Dauid is in the wyldernes of Engaddi. And Saul toke thre thousande chosen men out of all Israel, and wente to seke Dauid with his men vpon the stony rockes of the wyld goates. And whan he came to the shepe foldes by þæt waye, there was a caue, and Saul wente in to couer his fete. But Dauid and his men sat behinde within the caue.

¶ Then sayde Dauids men vnto him: Lo, this is the daye, wherof the LORDE thy God hath sayde vnto the: Beholde, I wyll deliuer thyne enemye in to thy hande, that thou mayest do with him what it pleaseth the. And Dauid stode vp, and cut of the tye of Sauls garment quietly. Neuertheles it smote him afterwarde in his hert, because he had cut of the type of Sauls garment, and sayde vnto his men: The LORDE let that be farre fro me, that I shulde do it, & laye my hande vpon my lorde the LORDES anoynted: for he is y anoynted of the LORDE. And Dauid withelde his seruantes with wordes, & suffred the not to ryse vp agaynst Saul.

But whan Saul gat him vp out of the caue, and was goinge his waye, Dauid rose vp also after him, and wente out of the caue, and cried behynde Saul, & sayde: My lorde the kyng. And Saul loked behynde him. And Dauid bowed downe his face to the earth, and worshipped, and sayde vnto Saul: Why herkenest thou vnto the wordes of men, that saye: Dauid seketh thy mysfortune? Beholde, thine eyes se this daye that the LORDE gaue the in to my hande in the caue, and I was counceiled to slaye the: Neuertheles thou wast fauoured, for I sayde: I wil not laye my hande vpon my lorde, for he is the LORDES anoynted. Beholde, my father the type of thy garment in my hande, that I wolde not slaye the, whan I cut of the type of thy garment. Knowe and se, y there is no euell ner trespase in my hande: nether haue I offended the, and thou folowest after my soule, to take it awaye. The LORDE shal be iudge betwene me and the, and auenge me on the, but my hāde shal not be vpon the, acordinge as it is sayde after the olde prouerbe: Vngodlynnes commeth of the vngodly: but my hande shal not be vpon the. Whom persecutest thou O kyng of Israel, whom persecutest thou? a deed dogg? a flee? The LORDE be iudge, and geue sentence betwene me and the, and cōsidre it, and defende my cause, and delyuer me from thy hande.

Now whan Dauid had spoken out these wordes vnto Saul, Saul saide: *Is not this thy voyce my sonne Dauid? And Saul lifte vp his voyce, and wepte, and saide vnto Dauid: Thou art more righteous then I: for thou hast recompensed me good, but I haue rewarded the euell. And this daye hast thou shewed me how thou hast done me good, for so moch as y LORDE hath delyuered me in to thy hande, and thou neuertheles hast not slaine me. What is he, which yf he fynde his enemye, wyl let him go in a good waye? The LORDE rewarde the good for y thou hast done vnto me this daye. Beholde now, I knowe that thou shalt be kyng, & the kyngdome of Israel stondesth in thy hande: sweare now therfore vnto me by the LORDE, y thou shalt not rote out my sede after me, nether destroye my name out of my fathers house. And Dauid sware vnto Saul. Then wente Saul home, but Dauid gat him vp with his men vnto the castell.

The xrb. Chapter.

AND Samuel dyed, and all Israel gathered them selues together, mourned for him, & buried him in his house at Ramath. As for Dauid, he rose, and wente downe in to the wyldernesse of Paran. And there was a man at Maon, and his possession at Carmel, and the man was of greates power, and had three thousande shepe, and a thousande goates. And it fortuneth that he clypped his shepe at Carmel, and his name was Nabal, but his wyues name was Abigail, and she was a woman of good vnderstandinge, & bewtyfull of face. But the man was harde, and wicked in his doynge, and was one of Caleb.

Now whan Dauid herde in the wyldernes y Nabal clypped his shepe, he sent out ten yonge men, & saide vnto them: Go vp vnto Carmel, & whan ye come to Nabal, salute him frendly on my behalfe, & saye: Good lucke, peace be with the & thine house, & with all y thou hast. I haue herde saye that thou hast shepe clyppers. Now thy shepherdes whom thou hast, haue bene with vs, we haue done them no dishonoure, and they wated nothinge of their nombre, as long as they were at Carmel: Axe thy yonge men, they shal tell the, and let thy yonge men fynde fauoure in thy sighte: for we are come in a good daye, geue thy seruantes & thy sonne Dauid what thy hande fyndeth.

And whā Dauids yonge men came, and spake all these wordes on Dauids behalfe vnto Nabal, they lefte of. But Nabal answered Dauids seruantes, & sayde: What is he y Dauid? & who is the sonne of Isai? There are many seruantes now y runne awaye from their masters. Shulde I take my bred, water and flesh, that I haue slayne for my clyppers, & geue it vnto mē whom I knowe not whence they are?

Thē Dauids yonge mē turned their waye agayne. And whan they came agayne vnto him, they tolde him all these wordes. The sayde Dauid vnto his men: Euery man gyrd his swerde aboute him. And euery one gyrd his swerde aboute him. And Dauid gyrd his swerde aboute him also, and there wete vp after him vpon a foure hundred men, but two hundred remayned with the stuffe.

C Neuertheles one of the yonge men tolde Abigail Nabals wife, and sayde: Beholde, Dauid sent messaungers out of the wyldernes to blesse oure lorde, Notwithstandinge he was fearede vpō them, and yet haue they bene very profitable men vnto vs, and haue done vs no dishonoure, and we wanted none of the nombre as lōge as we walked with them, when we were in the felde: but they haue bene oure wall daye and nighte, as longe as we kepte the shepe by them. Take hede now therfore, and loke well what thou doest, for there is surely a mysfortune at hande agaynst oure lorde, & agaynst all his house. And he is a man of Belial, to whom no man darre saye eny thinge. Then Abigail made haist, and toke two hundred loaves of bred, and two botels of wyne, and fyue shepe ready dighte, and fyue measures of firmentye, and an hundred frayles of rasens, and two hundred frayles of fygges, & layed them vpō asses, and sayde to hir yonge men: Go ye youre waye before me, beholde, I wyl come after. And she tolde Nabal hir housbāde nothinge therof. And as she rode vpō the asse, and wente downe in the shadowe of f̄ hill, beholde, Dauid & his mē met hir downe, so that she came vpon them.

D But Dauid sayde: Wel, all that this man had in f̄ wyldernes, haue I kepte for naughte, so that there wanted nothinge of all that he had, and he rewardeth me euell for good. God do this and yet more vnto the enemies of Dauid, yf vntyll tomorow in the mornynge I leaue this man (of all that he hath) so moch as one that maketh water agaynst f̄ wall. Now whan Abigail sawe Dauid, she lighte downe from the asse in all the haist, and fell vpō hir face before Dauid, and worshiped him to the grounde, and fell at his fete, and sayde: Oh my lorde, let this trespace be myne, and let thy handmayde speake before thine eares, and heare the wordes of thy handmayden: Let not my lorde set his hert agaynst this Nabal the man of Belial, for he is a foole, acordinge as his name is called: his name is foole, and foolishnes is with him. As for me thy handmayde, I sawe not my lordes yonge men, whom thou dydest sende.

But now my lorde, as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, the LORDE hath kepte the backe, f̄ thou shuldest not come agaynst bloude, and he hath deliuered thine hande.

Thine enemyes be now as Nabal, and so be they that wolde my lorde euell. Here is f̄ blessinge, f̄ thy handmayde hath brought my lorde, take it, and geue it vnto the yonge men, that walke vnder my lorde. For a sure house shal f̄ LORDE make my lorde, which fighteth the fighte of the LORDE, and no euell shall be founde in the all thy life longe. And yf eny man ryse vp to persecute f̄, and to laye wayte for thy soule, then shal the soule of my lorde be bounde in the bundell of f̄ lyuynge, euen with the LORDE thy God. But f̄ soule of thine enemyes shalbe turned backe with the slynge. Whan the LORDE therfore doth all this good for my lorde (which he hath promysed the) and commaundeth f̄ to be his Duke ouer Israel, then shal it be no stomblinge blocke ner occasion of fallynge vnto my lordes hert, that thou hast not shed bloude without a cause, and auenged thy selfe, then shal f̄ LORDE do good vnto my lorde, and thou shalt thynke vpon thy handmayden.

F Then saide Dauid vnto Abigail: Blessed be the LORDE God of Israel, which hath sent the to mete me this daye: and blessed be thy speach, and blessed be thou, which hast kepte me backe this daye, that I am not come agaynst bloude, to auenge me with myne awne hande. Verely (as truly as the LORDE the God of Israel lyueth, which hath hyndred me that I shulde do the no euell.) Yf thou haddest not met me in all the haist, Nabal shulde not haue had lefte him vntyll f̄ lighte mornynge, so moch as one that maketh water agaynst the wall. So Dauid toke of hir hāde what she had broughte him, and sayde vnto her: Go vp in peace vnto thy house: beholde, I haue herkened vnto thy voyce, and accepted thy personne.

But whan Abigail came to Nabal, beholde, he had prepared a feast in his house like a kynges feast, and his hert was mery, for he was very drunken. And she tolde him nothinge, nether small ner greate vntyll f̄ cleare mornynge. But whan it was daye, & the wyne was come from Nabal, his wife tolde him these thinges.

Then was his hert deed in his body, so that he became euen as a stone: and ouer ten dayes the LORDE smote him, so y he dyed. Whan Dauid herde that Nabal was deed, he sayde: Blessed be y LORDE which hath auenged my rebuke on Nabal, and preserued his seruaunt from euell. And the LORDE hath rewarded Nabal that euell vpon his heade.

And Dauid sent, and caused to talke with Abigail, y he mighte take her to wife. And whan Dauids seruauntes came to Abigail vnto Carmel, they spake vnto her, and saide: Dauid hath sent vs vnto the, that he maye take y to wife. She rose vp, and worshipped vpon hir face vnto the earth, and sayde: beholde, here is thy handmayde, that she maie do seruyce vnto the seruauntes of my lorde, and to waszshe their fete. And Abigail made haist, and gat her vp, and rode vpō an asse, and fyue maydens that were vnder her, and wente after Dauids messaungers, and became his wife. Dauid toke Ahinoam of Iesrael also, and they both became his wyues. But Saul gaue Michol his daughter the wife of Dauid vnto Phalti y sonne of Lais of Gallim.

The xxvi. Chapter.

THEY of Siph came to Saul vnto Gibeath, a sayde: *Is not Dauid hyd vpō the hill of Hachila, which lyeth ouer agaynst the wyldernes? Then Saul gat him vp, and wente downe to the wildernes of Siph, and thre thousande chosen men of Israel with him, to seke Dauid in the wildernes of Siph, and pitched vpon the hill of Hachila, which lyeth by the waye before the wildernes. But Dauid remayned in the wyldernes, and whan he sawe that Saul came after him in to the wildernes, he sent out spyes, and kneue of a suertie, that he was come in dede.

And Dauid gat him vp, and came to the place where Saul had pitched his tēt, and sawe the place where Saul laye with his chefe captayne †Abner y sonne of Ner: for Saul laye in the tent, and the hoost aboute him. Then answered Dauid, and sayde vnto Ahimelech the Hethite, and to Abisai the sonne of Ieru Ia y brother of Ioab: Who wil go downe with me to Saul in to the hoost? Abisai sayde: I wil go downe with the.

So Dauid and Abisai came to the people in the night season, a beholde, Saul laye and slepte in the tent, and his speare stacke in y grounde at his heade. But Abner and the people laye rounde aboute him. The sayde Abisai vnto Dauid: God hath closed thine enemye in thyne hande this daye. Therefore will I now thrust him thorow once with the speare euen in to the grounde, y he shall haue ynough of it. Neuertheles Dauid sayde vnto Abisai: Destroye him not, for who wil laye hande vpon the anoynted of y LORDE, a remayne vngiltye? Dauid sayde morouer: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, y y LORDE him selfe smyte him not, or excepte his tyme come that he dye, or that he go in to the battayll and perishe, the LORDE let it be farre fro me, that I shulde laye my hande on the LORDES anoynted. Take y speare now therfore at his heade, a the cuppe of water, a let vs go. So Dauid toke y speare a the cuppe of water at Sauls heade, a they wente their waye. And there was no man y sawe it, ner perceaued it, nether awaked, but they slepte euery one, for there was a depe slepe fallen vpon them from the LORDE.

Now whan Dauid was come ouer on y other syde, he stode vpon the toppe of the mount a farre of (so that there was a wyde space betwene them) and cried vpon y people, and vpō Abner the sonne of Ner, a sayde: Hearrest thou not Abner? And Abner answered and sayde: Who art thou that cryest so, and diseasest the kynge? And Dauid sayde vnto Abner: Art thou not a man? And where is there soch one as thou in Israel? Why hast thou not then kepte thy lorde y kynge? for there is one of y people come in to destroye thy lorde y kynge. It is not well that thou hast done. As truly as the LORDE lyueth †ye are the children of death, because ye haue not kepte youre lorde the LORDES anoynted. Beholde now, where is y kynges speare, and the cuppe of water that was at his heade.

Then kneue Saul the voyce of Dauid, and saide: y Is not that thy voyce my sonne Dauid? Dauid sayde: It is my voyce my lorde the kynge. And he sayde morouer: Why doth my lorde so persecute his seruaunt? What haue I done? and what euell is there in my hande? Yet let my lorde the kynge heare but the wordes of his seruaunt? Y y LORDE prouoke the against me, let there be smelled a meatofferynge: but y the childrē of men do lit, cursed be they before the LORDE, because they haue thrust me out this daye (that I shulde not dwell in the LORDES inheritance) and saye: Go thy waye, and serue other goddes. So fall not now my bloude vpon the earth from the face of the LORDE. For the kyng of Israel is gone forth to seke a flee, as a partriche is folowed on vpo the mountaynes.

And Saul sayde: I haue synned: Come agayne Dauid my sonne, I wil do the nomore hurte, because my soule hath bene deare in thy sighte this daye. Beholde, I haue done foolishly and very vnwisely. Dauid answered and sayde: Beholde, here is the kynges speare, let one of the yongemen come ouer here and fetch it. But the LORDE shal rewarde euery one acordinge to his righteousnes and faith, for ¶ LORDE deliuered ¶ this daye in to my hande: neuertheles I wolde not laie my hande vpo the LORDES anynted. And as thy soule hath bene greatly reputed in my sighte this daye, so let ¶ LORDE repute my soule in his sighte, ¶ deliuer me from all trouble. Saul saide vnto Dauid: Blessed be thou Dauid my sonne, thou shalt do it, ¶ be able. But Dauid wente his waye, and Saul turned agayne vnto his place.

The xxvij. Chapter.

DAUID thoughte in his hert: One of these dayes shal I fall in to the handes of Saul: It is better that I get me my waye in to ¶ londe of ¶ Philistynes, that Saul maye leaue of from sekyng me in all the coastes of Israel, so shall I escape his handes. And he gat him vp, and wente ouer (with the sixe hundred men that were with him) vnto Achis the sonne of Maach kyng of Gath. So Dauid remayned by Achis at Gath, with his mē, euery one with his housholde, and Dauid with his two wyues, Ahinoam the Iesraelitisse, and Abigail Nabals wife of Carmel. And whan worde came to Saul that Dauid was fled vnto Gath, he soughte him nomore.

And Dauid sayde vnto Achis: Yf I haue founde grace in thy sighte, then let there be geuen me a place in one of the cities of the londe, that I maye dwell therein. Wherefore shulde thy seruauent dwell in the kynges cite with the? Then Achis gaue him Siclag the same daye. Therefore belongeth Siclag to the kynges of Iuda vnto this daye. The tyme that Dauid dwelt in the londe of the Philistynes, is foure monethes.

Dauid wente vp with his men, and fell in to the londe of the Gessurites and Girsites, and *Amalechites: for these were the inhabitants of this londe of olde, as thou comest to Sur vnto the lode of Egipte. But whā Dauid smote ¶ londe, the let nether man ner woman lyue, and toke the shepe, oxen, asses, Camels and rayment, and returned and came to Achis. So whan Achis spake: Whither fell ye in to daye? Dauid sayde: Towarde the south parte of Iuda, towarde ¶ south parte of the Ierahmielites, ¶ towarde the south parte of the Kenites. But Dauid let nether man ner woman come lyuynge vnto Geth, and thoughte: They mighte peraduēture speake ¶ reporte agaynst vs: thus dyd Dauid, and this was his maner as longe as he dwelt in ¶ londe of the Philistynes. Therefore Achis gaue credence vnto Dauid, and thoughte: he hath made him selfe stynke before his people of Israel therefore shal he be my seruauent for euer.

The xxvij. Chapter.

IT fortunat at ¶ same tyme, that the Philistynes gathered their hoost together to the battayll, to go agaynst Israel. And Achis sayde vnto Dauid: Thou shalt knowe, that thou and thy men shal go forth with me in the hoost. Dauid sayde vnto Achis: Well, thou shalt se what thy seruauent shal do. Achis saide vnto Dauid: Therefore wyll I ordene the to be the keper of my heade as longe as I lyue. †As for Samuel, he was deed, and all ¶ people had mourned for him, ¶ buried him in his cite Ramath. §So Saul had dryuen the soythayers and expounders of tokens out of ¶ londe. Now whan the Philistynes gathered them selues together, and came and pitched their tentes at Sunem, Saul gathered all the people together, ¶ they pitched at Gilboa. But whan Saul sawe the hoost of the Philistynes, he was afrayed, and his hert was discouraged, and he axed counsell at the LORDE. But ¶ LORDE gaue him no answere, nether by dreames, ner by the ¶ lighte, ner by prophetes.

The sayde Saul vnto his seruauentes: Seke me a womā which hath a sprete of soyth-sayege, that I maye go vnto her, and axe at her. His seruantes sayde vnto him: Beholde, at Endor is there a woman, which hath a sprete of soysstayenge. And Saul chaunged his clothes, and put on other, and wente his waye and two men with him, and came by nighte vnto the woman, and sayde: Propheeye vnto me (I pray the) thorow the sprete of soysstayenge, and brynge me him vp whom I shal name vnto the. The womā saide vnto him: Beholde, thou knowest what Saul hath done, how he hath roted out the soysstayes & witches from the londe, wherfore wilt thou brynge my soule then in to þy nett, that I maye be slayne? But Saul swaue vnto her by þy LORDE, and sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shall no harme happen vnto the for this. Then sayde þy woman: Whom shal I brynge vp vnto the? He sayde: Brynge me vp Samuel.

Now when þy woman sawe Samuel, she cryed loude, and sayde vnto Saul: Wherfore hast thou begyled me? Thou art Saul. And the kynge sayde vnto her: Feare not, what seist thou? The woman sayde vnto Saul: I se goddes cōmyng vp out of þy earth? He sayde: How is he shapened? She sayde: There cometh vp an olde man, and is clothed with a longe garment. Then perceaued Saul that it was Samuel, & bowed him selfe downe with his face to the grounde, and worshiped him.

Samuel saide vnto Saul: Why hast thou disquyeted me, to cause me to be broughte vp? Saul sayde: I am sore troubled, the Philistynes fighte against me, & God is departed fro me, & geueth me no answer, nether by prophetes ner by dreames: therefore haue I called the, þy thou mightest shewe me, what I shal do. Samuel sayde: What wilt thou axe at me, seynge the LORDE is departed from the, and is become thine enemye? The LORDE shal do vnto the euen as he spake by me, *and shall plucke the kyngdome out of thy hande, and geue it vnto Dauid thy neyghboure, because thou hast not herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, ner perfourmed the displeasure of his wrath agaynst Amalek. Therefore hath the LORDE done this now vnto the. Morouer the LORDE shal deliuer Israel with the also in to the handes of the Philistynes: †tomorow shalt thou and thy sonnes be with me. And the hoost of Israel shal the LORDE deliuer in to the handes of the Philistynes. Then fell Saul immediatly vnto the earth, for he coulde not stonde, and was sore afayed at these wordes of Samuel, so that there was nomore strength in him: for he had eaten no bred all that daye and all that night.

And the woman wente in to Saul, & sawe that he was sore vexed, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thy handmayde hath herkened vnto thy voyce, and I haue put my soule in my hande, so that I haue herkened vnto thy wordes which thou spakest vnto me. Therefore folowe thou also the voyce of thy handmayde. I wil set a morsell of bred before the to eate, that thou mayest come to thy strength, & go thy waye. But he refused, and sayde, I wil not eate. Then his seruantes & the woman cōpelled him, so that he herkened vnto their voyce.

And he rose vp from þy grounde, and sat vpon the bed. The woman had a fat calfe at home, so she made haist, and kyled it, and toke meell and dyd kneet it, and baked swete cakes, & broughte them forth before Saul, & before his seruantes. And when they had eaten, they stode vp, and wete their waye þy nighte.

The xxij. Chapter.

THE Philistynes gathered all their armies together at Aphek. But Israel pitched at Ain in Iesrael. And the prynces of the Philistynes wete forth with hundreds and with thousandes, but Dauid and his men wete behynde with Achis. Thē sayde the prynces of the Philistynes: What shal these Hebrues do? Achis saide vnto thē: Is not this Dauid þy seruauant of Saul kynge of Israel, which hath bene with me now yeaues and dayes, & I haue founde no euell in him sence the tyme that he fell to me vnto this daye? †Neuertheles the prynces of þy Philistynes were wroth at him, & sayde vnto him: Let the man turne backe agayne, & abyde in his place, & which thou hast appoynted him, that he go not downe with vs to þy batayll, and become oure aduersary in þy felde. For wherin coulde he better do his lorde a pleasure, thē in the heades of these men? Is not this Dauid, of whom they sunge in the daunce: †Saul hath smyttē his thousande, but Dauid his ten thousande? Then Achis called Dauid, and sayde vnto him: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, I take the for an honest man, and thy out goynge and ingoynge with me in þy hoost pleasest me well, and no euell haue I marked in the, sence þy tyme that thou camest to me vnto this daye. But thou pleasest not the pryoces. Returne now therfore, and go thy waye in peace, that thou do no euell in the sighte of the prynces of þy Philistynes.

Dauid sayde: What haue I done, & what hast thou marked in thy seruauant, sence þy tyme that I haue bene in thy presence vnto this daye, that I shulde not come and fighte agaynst the enemies of my lorde the kynge? Achis answered and sayde vnto Dauid: I knowe well that thou pleasest myne eyes euē as an angell of God. But the prynces of þy Philistynes haue sayde: Let him not go vp with vs vnto the batayll. Get the vp therfore tomorow by tynes, and thy lordes seruauantes which are come with the. And whan ye haue gotten you vp early in the mornyng, whan it is lighte, go youre waye. So Dauid & his men gat them vp early, to go their waye in the mornyng, and to come agayne in to the londe of the Philistynes. But the Philistynes wente vp towardes Iesrael.

The xxx. Chapter.

NOW whan Dauid came to Siclag on the thirde daie with his men, the Amalechites had fallē in on þy south parte and at Siclag, and had smytten Siclag, and burned it with fyre, and had caried awaye the wemē out of it, both small & greate. Neuertheles they had slayne no man, but dryuen thē thence, and were goynge on their waye. Now whan Dauid with his men came to the cite, and sawe that it was brent with fyre, and that their wyues, sonnes & daughters were led awaye captiue, Dauid and the people that was with him lefte vp their voyce, and wepte so longe tyll they coulde wepe nomore. For Dauids two wyues also were caried awaye captiue, Ahinoam þy Iesraelitisse, and Abigail Nabals wife of Carmel. And Dauid was very sorowfull, for the people wolde haue stoned him: for þy soule of all the people was in greate heynes, euery one ouer his sonnes and daughters.

Neuertheles Dauid strengthened him selfe in the LORDE his God, & sayde vnto Abiathar

þy prest the sonne of Ahimelech: *Bringe me hither the ouerbody cote. And whan Abiathar had broughte the ouerbody cote vnto Dauid, Dauid axed at the LORDE, and sayde: Shal I folowe vpon the men of warre, and shal I ouertake them? He sayde: Yee, folowe vpō them, thou shalt ouertake them, and shalt rescue the pray. Then wente Dauid his waye, and the sixe hūdreth men that were with him. And whan they came to the ryuer of Besor, some stode styll. But Dauid and the foure hundreth men folowed after: As for the two hūdreth men that stode styll, they had bene slowe to go ouer the ryuer of Besor.

And they founde a man of Egipte vpon the felde, him they broughte vnto Dauid, & gaue him bred to eate, and water to drynke, and gaue him a quantite of fygges, & two quantities of rasyns. And whan he had eaten, his sprete came to him agayne: for in thre dayes and thre nightes he had eatē no bred, and dronke no water.

Dauid sayde vnto him: Whose art thou? & whence art thou? He sayde: I am a childe of Egipte, an Amalechites seruauant, & my master hath forsaken me, because I was sicke thre dayes a goo. We fell here in towardes þy south syde of Chrethus, and vpon Iuda, and towardes þy south parte of Caleb, & haue burned Siclag with fyre.

Dauid sayde vnto him: Wilt thou bringe me downe to these men of warre? He sayde: Swear vnto me by God, þy thou shalt not slaye me, ner delyuer me in to my masters hāde, and I wil bringe the downe to these mē of warre. And he broughte thē downe, and beholde, they were scatred vpon all þy grounde, eatinge and drynkyng, and kepyng holy daye, and were makinge mery chere, because of all the greate spoyles that they had taken out of the londe of the Philistynes and of Iuda.

And Dauid smote them from þy morow tyll the euen, agaynst the nexte daye, so that there escaped none, excepte foure hundreth yonge men, which rode vpon camels, & fled. So Dauid rescued all that the Amalechites had taken, and his two wyues, & there myssed nothinge, nether small ner greate, nether sonnes ner daughters, ner spoyles: what so euer they had taken, Dauid broughte all agayne. And Dauid toke the shepe and oxē, and droue f catell before him. And they sayde: This is Dauids spoyle.

And whan Dauid came to the two hundredth men, which had bene slowe to folowe after Dauid, and abode at the ryuer of Besor, they wente forth to mete Dauid, and the people f was with him. And Dauid came to the people, and saluted them frendly.

Then answered soch men as were euell t Belials men (amonge them that had gone with Dauid) and sayde: Seynge they wente not with vs, they shal haue none of the spoyles that we haue rescued: but let euery mā take his wife t his children and be goynge.

Then sayde Dauid: Ye shall not do so (my brethren) with that which f LORDE hath geuen vs, and hath preserued vs, and delyuered these men of warre (which were come agaynst vs) in to oure hādes. Who shulde cōsente vnto you herin? like as the porcion is of them that wente downe to the battayll, so shal f porcion be of them also that a bode with the stuffe, t shalbe deuyded a lyke.

From that tyme forth hath this bene an ordinaunce t lawe in Israel vnto this daye. And whan Dauid came to Siclag, he sent of the spoyle vnto the Elders in Iuda his neighbours, and sayde: Beholde, there haue ye the blessinge out of the spoyle of the enemies of the LORDE, namely vnto them of Bethel, vnto them at Ramath in the south, vnto them at Iathir, vnto them at Aroer, vnto them at Siphamoth, vnto them at Eschemoa, vnto them at Rachal, vnto them in the cities of the Ierahmielites, vnto them in the cities of the Kenites, vnto them at Horma, vnto thē at Borasan, vnto thē at Atach, vnto them at Hebron, and vnto all the places where Dauid had walked with his men.

The xxi. Chapter.

BUT f *Philistynes foughte against Israel, and the men of Israel fled before the Philistynes, and fell downe smytten vpon the mount Gilboa. And the Philistynes preassed vpon Saul and his sonnes, and slewe Ionathas, t Abinadab and Malchisua the sonnes of Saul. And the battayll was sore agaynst Saul, t the archers fell vpon him with bowes, and he was sore wounded of the archers.

Then sayde Saul vnto his wapēbearer: Drawe out thy swerde, and thrust it thorow me, that these vncircumcised come not and slaie me, and make a laughinge stocke of me. Neuertheles his wapenbearer wolde not, for he was sore afrayed. Then toke Saul f swerde, and fell therin. Now whan his wapenbearer sawe that Saul was deed, he fell also vpon his swerde, and dyed with him. Thus dyed Saul and his thre sonnes, t his wapenbearer, and all his men together the same daye.

Whan f men of Israel which were beyonde the valley, and beyonde Iordane, sawe, f the men of Israel were fled, and that Saul and his sonnes were deed, they left f cities, and fled also. Then came the Philistynes, t dwelt therin.

† On the nexte daye came the Philistynes to spoyle f slayne, and founde Saul and his thre sonnes lyenge vpon mount Gilboa, and smote of his heade, and toke of his harnesse, and sent it in to the lande of the Philistynes rounde aboute, to shewe it in the house of their Idols, and amonge the people, t layed his harnesse in f house of Astaroth: but his bodye hanged they vp vpō the wall of Bethsan.

Whan they of Iabes in Gilead herde, what the Philistynes had done vnto Saul, they gat them vp, as many as were men of armes, and wente all the nighte, and toke f body of Saul, and the bodies of his sonnes from f wall of Bethsan, broughte thē to Iabes, t and brent them there, and toke their bones, and buried them vnder f tre at Iabes, t fasted seuē dayes.

AFTER the death of Saul whan Dauid was come agayne from the slaughter of the Amalechites, and had remayned two dayes at Siclag, beholde, on the thirde daye there came a man out of Sauls hoost, with his clothes rente, and earth vpon his heade. And whan he came vnto Dauid, he fell downe to the grounde, and worshipped. Dauid sayde vnto him: Whence comest thou? He sayde vnto him: Out of the hoost of Israel am I fled. Dauid sayde vnto him: Tell me, what is the matter? He sayde: the people is fled from the battayll, and many of the people are fallen: Yee and Saul also is deed and his sonne Ionathas. Dauid sayde vnto the yonge mā that brought him this worde: How knowest thou that Saul and Ionathas his sonne are deed? The yonge man answered him this, sayde: I came by chauce vnto mount Gelboa, and beholde, Saul leane vpon his speare, and the charettes and horsmē folowed harde after him: and he turned him aboute, and sawe me, and called me. And I sayde: Here, am I. And he sayde vnto me: What art thou? I sayde vnto him: I am an Amalechite. And he saide vnto me: Come to me, and kyll me, for anguysh hath gotten holde of me: for my life is yet whole within me. Then stepte I to him and slewe him, for I knowe well that he coude not lyue after his fall. And I toke the crowne from his heade, and the armelet fro his arme, and haue broughte it here vnto the yonge lord. Then toke Dauid holde of his clothes, and rente them, and so dyd all the mā that were with him, and mourned, and wepte, and fasted vntyll the euen, ouer Saul and Ionathas his sonne, and ouer the people of the LORDE, and ouer the house of Israel, because they were fallen thorow the swerde.

And Dauid sayde to the yonge man that broughte him worde: What art thou? He sayde: I am the sonne of a straunger an Amalechite. Dauid sayde: How happeneth it that thou wast not afrayed to laye thine hāde vpon the LORDES anointed to destroye him? And Dauid sayde vnto one of his yonge men: Come hither, and slaye him. And he smote him that he dyed. Then sayde Dauid vnto him: Thy bloude be vpon thyne owne heade. For thy mouth hath spoken against thyselfe and sayde: I haue slayne the anoynted of the LORDE. And Dauid mourned this lamentacion ouer Saul and Ionathas his sonne, and commaunded to teach the childrē of Iuda the bowe. Beholde, it is written in the boke of the righteous.

The ij. Chapter.

AFTER these actes Dauid †axed at the LORDE, and sayde: Shall I go vp in to one of the cities of Iuda? And the LORDE sayde vnto him: Go vp. Dauid sayde: Whither? He sayde: Vnto Hebron. So Dauid wente thither with his two wyues, Ahinoam the Iesraelitisse, and Abigail Nabals wyfe of Carmel. And Dauid broughte vp the men that were with him also, euery one with his housholde, and they dwelt in the cities of Hebron. And ŷ men of Iuda came, and there they anointed him kyng over the house of Iuda.

And whā it was tolde Dauid, ŷ that they of Iabes in Gilead had buried Saul, he sent messaungers vnto them, sayenge: Blessed be ye of the LORDE, that ye haue done soch mercy vpon youre lorde Saul, and haue buried him. The LORDE therefore shewe mercy now and faithfulness vpon you. And because ye haue done this, I also wyll do you good. Let youre hāde now therfore be comforted, and be ye stronger: for though Saul youre lorde be deed, yet hath the house of Iuda chosen me to be kyng ouer them.

But Abner the sonne of Ner, which was Sauls chefe captayne, toke Iszboseth the sonne of Saul, and broughte him thorow the hoost, and made him kyng over Gilead, Assuri, Iesrael, Ephraim, Ben Iamin and ouer all Israel. And Iszboseth the sonne of Saul was fourtye yeare olde, when he was made kyng of Israel, ‡ he reigned two yeares. But the house of Iuda helde with Dauid: ¶ The tyme ŷ Dauid was kyng at Hebron ouer the house of Iuda, was seuen yeare and sixe monethes longe.

And Abner the sonne of Ner wēte forth with the seruantes of Iszboseth the sonne of Saul, out of ŷ hoost vnto Gibeon. And Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia wēte forth with Dauids seruantes, and they met together by the pole at Gibeon, and these loue of Ben Iamin on Iszboseth Sauls sonnes syde, and twolue of Dauids seruantes. And euery one gat another by the heade, and thrust his swerde in his syde, and fell together: therfore is the place called Helkath hazurim (that is, the felde of the Worthies) which is at Gibeon.

And there arose a sore harde battayll the same daye. But Abner and the men of Israel were put to flighte of Dauids seruantes. Thre sonnes of Zeru Ia were there, Ioab, Abisai ‡ Asahel. As for Asahel, he was lighte of fete as a Roo in ŷ felde, ‡ folowed after Abner, and turned not asyde nether to the righte hande ner to ŷ lefte from Abner. Then Abner turned him aboute, and sayde: Art thou Asahel? He sayde: Yee. Abner sayde vnto him: Go thy waye ether to the righte hande or to the lefte, and get the one of ŷ yonge men, and take his harness from him. Neuertheles he wolde not leaue of frō him. Then sayde Abner agayne to Asahel: Get the awaye fro me, why wilt thou that I smyte the to the grounde? and how darre I lifte vp my face before thy brother Ioab? Howbeit he wolde not go his waye.

Then Abner thrust him in with a speare in to his bely, so that the speare wēte out behynde him. And there he fell and dyed before him: and who so came to the place where Asahel laye deed, stode styll there. But Ioab and Abisai folowed vpon Abner, till the sonne wente downe. And whan they came to þ̄ hyll of Amma, which lieth before Giah, by þ̄ waye to the wildernes of Gibeon, the children of Ben Iamin gathered them selues together behynde Abner, and grewe to a multitude, and stode vpon the toppe of an hyll.

And Abner called vnto Ioab, and sayde: Shal the swerde the deuoure without ende? Knowest thou not, that it wyll be bytter at the last? How longe wil it be or thou saie vnto the people, that they leaue of from their brethr̄e? Ioab sayde: As truly as God lyueth yf thou haddest sayde thus daye in the morninge, the people had ceassed euery one from his brother. And Ioab blew the trompet, & all the people stode still, and folowed nomore vpon Israel, nether foughte they eny more.

Abner and his men wente all that same night ouer the playne felde, and passed ouer Iordane, & walked thorow all Bithron, and came to the tentes. Ioab turned him from Abner, and gathered all þ̄ people together. And of Dauids seruauantes there myssed nyntene men, and Asahel. But Dauids seruauantes had smytten so amonge Ben Iamin and the men of Abner, that thre hundreth and thre score men were deed. And they toke vp Asahel, and buried him in his fathers graue at Bethleem. And Ioab with his men wete all that night: and at the breake of the daie they came vnto Hebron.

The iij. Chapter.

AND there was a longe battayll betwene the house of Saul and the house of Dauid. But Dauid wente and increased, and the house of Saul wente and mynished. And vnto Dauid were children borne at Hebron. His firstborne sonne Ammon of Ahinoam the Iesraelitisse: the seconde Chileab of Abigail the wyfe of Nabal of Carmel: the thirde Absalon the sonne of Maacha the daughter of Thalmaj kyng of Gessur: the fourth Adonia the sonne of Hagith: the fyfth Saphatia the sonne of Abital: þ̄ sixte Iethream of Eglā Dauids wife. These were borne vnto Dauid at Hebron.

Now whan it was warre betwene the house of Saul & the house of Dauid, Abner strenghted Sauls house. And Saul had had a concubyne, whose name was Rispa the daughter of Aia. And Iszboseth sayde vnto Abner: Wherefore liest thou with my fathers concubyne? 33

Then was Abner very wroth at these wordes of Iszboseth, and sayde: Am I a dogges heade then, that I agaynst Iuda do mercy vnto the house of Saul thy father, and vnto his brethren and kynsfolkes? and haue not deluyered the in to þ̄ hande of Dauid, and thou layest a trespass to my charge this daye for a womans sake? God do Abner this and that, yf I do not * as the LORDE hath sworne vnto Dauid, that the kyngdome maye be taken frō the house of Saul, and þ̄ seate of Dauid set vp ouer Israel and Iuda, from Dan vnto Berseba. Then coulde he not answere him one worde agayne, he feared him so.

And Abner sent messangers vnto Dauid, sayenge: Whose is the londe? And sayde: Make thy couenaunt with me. Beholde, my hande shall be with the, to turne all Israel vnto the.

He sayde: Wel, I wyll make a couenaunt with the, but one thyng I desyre of the, that thou se not my face, excepte thou brynge me first Michol Sauls daughter, whan thou comest to se my face. Dauid sent messangers also vnto Iszboseth the sonne of Saul, sayenge: † Geue me my wyfe Michol, whom I married with an hundreth foreskinnies of the Philistynes. Iszboseth sent, and caused for to take her from the man † Palthiel the sonne of Laïs. And hir huszbande wente with her, and wepte behynde her vnto Bahurim. Then sayde Abner vnto him: Turne backe agayne, and go thy waye. And he turned backe agayne. C

And Abner talked with the Elders in Israel, and sayde: Your myndes haue bene set afore tyme and longe a goo vpon Dauid, that he mighte be kyng ouer you, do it now therefore, for þ̄ LORDE hath sayde of Dauid: I wil deluyer my people of Israel by the hāde of Dauid my seruauant, from the hande of the Philistynes, and from the hande of all their enemies.

Abner spake also before the eares of Ben Iamin, and wente to speake before the eares of Dauid at Hebron all that Israel and the whole house of Ben Iamin was contente withall. Now whan Abner came to Hebron vnto Dauid, and twēty men with him, Dauid made them a D feast. And Abner sayde vnto Dauid: I wyll get me vp, and go gather all Israel together to my lorde the kyng, and that they maye make a couenant with the, that thou mayest be kyng, at thy soules desyre.

So Dauid let Abner go from him in peace. And beholde, Dauid seruantes and Ioab came from the men of warre, and broughte a greate spoyle with them. And Abner was not now with Dauid at Hebron, for he had sent him from him, so that he was gone his waye in peace.

¶ But whan Ioab and all the hoost with him was come, it was tolde him that Abner the sonne of Ner came to the kyng, and how he had sent him fro him, so that he was gone his waye in peace. Then wente Ioab in to the kyng, and sayde: What hast thou done? Beholde, Abner came to the, why hast thou sent him from the, that he is gone his waye? Knowest thou not Abner the sonne of Ner? For he came to the to disceau the, that he mighte knowe thy outgoynge, and ingoynge, and to spie out all that thou doest. And whan Ioab wente out from Dauid, he sent messagers after Abner, to fetch him agayne from Boharsira, and Dauid knewe not therof. Now whan Abner came agayne vnto Hebron, Ioab brought him in to ʒ middes vnder ʒ gate, to talke with him secretly, and thrust him there in to ʒ bely that he dyed, because of his brother Asahels bloude.

¶ Whan Dauid knewe of it thereafter, he sayde: I am vngiltye, and so is my kyngdome for euer before the LORDE concernynge the bloude of Abner ʒ sonne of Ner: but vpon the heade of Ioab fall it, and vpon all his fathers house, and in the house of Ioab there ceasse not one to haue a renninge yssue and a leprosy, and to go vpon a staffe, and fall thorow the swerde, and to haue scarnesse of bred. Thus Ioab and his brother Abisai slewe Abner, *because he had slayne their brother Asahel in the battaill at Gibeon.

Dauid sayde vnto Ioab and to all ʒ people ʒ was with him: Rente youre clothes, and gyrd sack cloth aboute you, and make lamentacion for Abner. And the kyng wente after the Bere. And whan they buryed Abner at Hebron, the kyng lifte vp his voyce, and wepte besyde Abners graue, and all the people wepte also.

¶ And the kyng mourned for Abner, and sayde: Abner is not deed as a foole dyeth. Thy handes were not bounde, thy fete were not vexed with fetters, thou art fallen as a man falleth before wicked vnthrifites. Then all the people bewayled him yet more.

Now whan all the people came in to eate with Dauid, whyle it was yet hye daye, Dauid sware, and sayde: God do this and that vnto me, yf I taist ether bred or oughte els afore the Sone go downe. And all ʒ people knewe it, and it pleased them well all that ʒ kyng dyd in the sighte of all the people. And all the people and all Israel perceaued the same daye, that it came not of the kyng, that Abner the sonne of Ner was slayne. And the kyng sayde vnto his seruantes: Knowe ye not that this daye a pryncce and a greate man is fallen in Israel? As for me, I am yet but tender and anyonted kyng. But the men the children of Zeru Ia are to harde for me. The LORDE recompence him that doth euell, accordinge to his wickednes.

The iiii. Chapter.

WHAN Sauls sonne herde ʒ Abner was deed at Hebron, his hādes were feble, ¶ all Israell was sory. But there were two men captaynes ouer the soudyers vnder the sonne of Saul, the one was called Baena, the other Rehob, sonnes of Rimon ʒ Berothite, of the childrē of Ben Iamin: for Beroth was couēted also in Ben Iamin. And the Berothites were fled vnto Gethaim, ¶ were straigers there vnto this daye. Ionathas also the sonne of Saul had a sonne which was lame on his fete, ¶ was fyue yeare olde whan the rumoure of Saul and Ionathas came from Iesrael. And his nose toke him, and fled. And whyle she made haist and fled, he fell, and was lame: And his name was Mephiboseth.

Then wente the sonnes of Rimon ʒ Berothite, Rehob ¶ Baena, ¶ came to the house of Iszboseth, in the heate of the daye, ¶ he laye vpō his bed at the noone daie. And they came in to the house to fetch wheate, ¶ thrust him in the bely, ¶ gat them awaye. For whā they came in to ʒ house, he laye vpō his bed in his chamber, ¶ they stickte him to death, ¶ smote of his heade, and toke his heade, and departed by the waye of the playne felde all that nighte, and broughte the heade of Isboseth to Dauid vnto Hebron, and sayde vnto the kyng: Beholde, there is the heade of Iszboseth the sonne of Saul thine enemye, which layed wayte for thy soule. This daye hath the LORDE auenged my lorde the kynge of Saul and his sede.

Then answered Dauid vnto Rehob and Baena his brother, ⁊ sonnes of Rimon ⁊ Berothite, ⁊ sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, which hath deliuered my soule out of all trouble, *I toke him ⁊ brought me worde and sayde: Saul is deed, and he thoughte he had bene a good messaunger, and at Siclag I put him to death, vnto whom I shulde haue geuen a rewarde for his message. And these vngodly personnes haue slayne a righteous man in his owne house vpon his bed. Yee shulde not I requyre his bloude of youre handes, and take you awaye from ⁊ earth? And Dauid commaunded his yonge men, which slewe them, and smote of their handes and fete, and hanged them vp by ⁊ pole at Hebron. But the heade of Iszboseth toke they, and buried it in Abners graue at Hebron.

The b. Chapter.

AND all the trybes of Israel came to Dauid vnto Hebron, and sayde: †Beholde, we are thy bone and thy flesh. And afore tyme whā Saul was kynge ouer vs, thou leddest Israel out and in. So the LORDE hath sayde: Thou shalt kepe my people of Israel, and shalt be the duke ouer Israel. And all the Elders in Israel came to ⁊ kynge vnto Hebron. And kynge Dauid made a couenaunt with them at Hebron before ⁊ LORDE. And they anoynted Dauid to be kynge ouer Israel. Thyrtye yere olde was Dauid whan he was made kynge, and reigned fortye yeres. §At Hebron raigned he seue yeres and sixe monethes ouer Iuda: but at Ierusalem he reigned thre and thirtie yeres ouer all Israel and Iuda.

And the kynge wente with his men to Ierusalem, agaynst the Iebusites, which dwelt in the londe. Neuertheles they sayde vnto Dauid: Thou shalt not come hither but the blynde and lame shal dryue ⁊ awaie. (They thoughte plainly, that Dauid shulde not come in.) Howbeit Dauid wanne the castell of Sion, which is the cite of Dauid. Then sayde Dauid the same daye: ¶Who so euer smytheth the Iebusites, and optayneth the perquellies, the lame ⁊ the blynde, which (Iebusites) Dauids soule hateth. Herof cometh the proverbe: "Let no blynde ner lame come in to the house. So Dauid dwelt in ⁊ castell, and called it the cite of Dauid. And Dauid builded roude aboute fro Millo and within. And Dauid grewe, ⁊ the LORDE the God Zebaoth was with him.

And Hiram the kynge of Tyre sent messangers vnto Dauid, ⁊ and Ceder trees for walles, and Carpenters, and Masons, to builde Dauid an house. And Dauid knewe, that the LORDE had conformed him kynge ouer Israel, and exalted his kingdom for his people of Israels sake. And Dauid toke yet mo wyues and concubynes at Ierusalem, after he was come from Hebron, and there were yet mo sonnes ⁊ doughters borne vnto him. ¶ And these are the names of them that were borne vnto him at Ierusalem: Samma, Sobab, Nathan, Salomon, Iebegar, Elisua, Nepheg, Iaphia, Elisama, Eliada, Eliphalet.

And whan the Philistines herde that Dauid was anoynted kynge ouer Israel, they wete vp all to seke Dauid. Whan Dauid perceaued that, he wete downe in to a castell. But the Philistynes came and scattered them selues beneth in the valley of Rephaim. And Dauid axed at the LORDE, and sayde: Shal I go vp agaynst the Philistynes? and wylt thou delyuere them in to my hande? The LORDE sayde vnto Dauid: Go vp, I wyl delyuere the Philistynes in to thy hande.

And Dauid came vnto Baal Prazim, and smote the there, and sayde: The LORDE hath deuyded myne enemies, euen as the waters parte asunder: therefore is the same place called Baal Prazim. And they left their ymagines there, but Dauid and his men caried the awaye.

Neuerthelesse the Philistynes wente vp agayne, and scattered them selues beneth in the valley of Rephaim. And Dauid axed at the LORDE. The LORDE sayde: Thou shalt go vp, but compase them behinde, that thou mayest be vpon them ouer agaynst the Peer trees: and whan thou hearest vpon the toppe of the Peertrees, the sounde of the goinge be bolde, for then is the LORDE gone forth before the, to smyte the hoost of the Philistines. Dauid dyd as the LORDE

AND Daud gathered agayne all the yonge chosen men in Israel, ^eeuen thre thousande, and gat him vp, and wente with all the people that was with him of the citesins of Iuda, to fetch vp the Arke of God from thence: whose name is: The name of the LORDE Zebaoth dwelleth theron betwene the Cherubins. *And they caused the arke of God to be caried vpō a new cart, [†]and fetched it out of [‡]house of Abinadab, which dwelt at Gibeā. Vsa and Ahio the sonnes of Abinadab droue [§]new cart. And when they broughte it with the Arke from the house of Abinadab which dwelt at Gibeā, Ahio wente before the Arke: and Daud and all the house of Israel played before the LORDE, with all manner of instrumentes of Pine tre, with harpes, and Psalteries, and tabrettes, and belles, and Cymbals.

[‡]And when they came to the barnesfloore of Nahon, Vsa stretched out his hande, [§]and helde the Arke of God, for the oxen wete out asyde. Then waxed the wrath of the LORDE feare agaynst Vsa, and God smote him there because of his presumpciō, so that he dyed there besyde the Arke of God. Then was Daud sory, because the LORDE had made soch a rente vpon Vsa, and he called the same place Perez Vsa vnto this daye. And Daud feared the LORDE the same daie, and sayde: How shall the Arke of the LORDE come vnto me? And he wolde not let it be broughte to him in to the cite of Daud, but caused it be brought in to [‡]house of Obed Edom the Gathite. And whan the Arke of the LORDE had contynued thre monethes in the house of Obed Edom the Gathite, the LORDE blessed him and all his house.

[¶]And it was tolde kyng Daud, that the LORDE had blessed the house of Obed Edō and all that he had because of the Arke of God. ¶Then wente he, and fetched vp the Arke of God out of [‡]house of Obed Edom in to the cite of Daud with ioye. And whā they were gone sixe steppes in with the Arke of the LORDE, they offered an ox and a fat shepe. And Daud daunsed with all his mighte before the LORDE, and was girded with an ouerbody cote of lynnē. And Daud with all Israel brought vp [‡]Arke of the LORDE with tabrettes and trompettes.

And whan the Arke of the LORDE came in to the cite of Daud, Michol the daughter of Saul lokd out at a window, and sawe kyng Daud leapyng, spryngyng and daūsyng before the LORDE, and despyed him in hir hert. But whan they brought in [‡]Arke of the LORDE, they set it in hir place in the myddes of the Tabernacle, which Daud had pitched for it. And Daud offred burnt offerynges and deed offerynges before [‡]LORDE. And whan Daud had made an ende of offeryng the burntofferiunges and deedofferiunges, he blessed the people in the name of the LORDE Zebaoth, and dealte out vnto all the people, and to the multitude of Israel, both to man [¶]and womā, vnto euery one a cake of bred, and a pece of flesh, and a meece of potage. Then wente all the people their waye, euery one vnto his house.

Whan Daud came agayne to blesse his house, Michol the daughter of Saul wente forth to mete him, and sayde: How glorious hath the kyng of Israel bene to daye, which hath vncouered himselfe before the maydes of his seruantes, like as the rascall people discover them selues. But Daud saide vnto Michol: I wil play before [‡]LORDE, which hath chosen me afore thy father, and afore all his house, because he hath commaunded me to be the pryncer ouer the people of the LORDE, euen ouer Israel, and yet wyl I be vyler then so, and wyl be lowe in myne owne sighte: and with the maydens wherof thou hast spoken, wyl I be honoured. As for Michol the daughter of Saul, she had no childe vnto the daye of hir death.

The biij. Chapter.

NOW whan the kyng sat in his house, [¶]and the LORDE had geuen him rest from all his enemies on euery syde, he sayde vnto the prophet Nathan: Beholde, I dwell in a house of Cedre, and the Arke of God dwelleth amonge the curtaynes. Nathan sayde vnto the kyng: Go thy waye, what so euer thou hast in thine hert, [‡]do: for the LORDE is with the. But the same night came [‡]worde of the LORDE vnto Nathan, [¶]and sayde: Go [¶]and speake to my seruānt Daud:

Thus sayeth \S LORDE: Shalt thou buylde me an house to dwell in? I haue dwelt in no house sence the daye that I broughte the children of Israel vnto this daye, but haue walked in the Tabernacle and Habitation, whither so euer I wente with the children of Israel. Dyd I euer speake to eny of the trybes of Israel (whom I commaunded to kepe my people of Israel) τ sayde: Wherefore do ye not buylde me an house of Cedar wodd?

\S So shalt thou speake now vnto my seruauant David: Thus sayeth the LORDE Zebaoth: *I toke the from the pasture whan thou wentest behynde the shepe, \S thou shuldest be \S pryncer ouer my people of Israel, τ haue bene with the whither so euer thou wentest, τ haue roted out all thine enemies before the, τ haue made the a greate name, acordinge to the name of the greate men vpon earth. And for my people of Israel I wyll appoynte a place, and wyll plante them, that they maye remayne there, nomore to be remoued, and \S the childrē of wickednes oppresse them nomore, like as afore, and sence the tyme that I ordeyned Iudges ouer my people of Israel. And I wyll geue the rest from all thine enemies. And the LORDE sheweth the, that the LORDE wyl make the a house.

\S Now whan thy tyme is fulfilled \S thou shalt slepe with thy fathers, I wil after \S rayse vp thy seide, which shal come of thy body: his kyngdome wyl I stablishe, he shal buylde an house for my name, τ and I wyll stablyshe \S seate of his kyngdome for euer. \S I wyll be his father, and he shall be my sonne. ¶ Whan he doth a trespase, I wyll reprove him with the rodd of men and with the plagis of \S childrē of men: But my mercy shal not be withdrawn frō him, as I haue withdrawē it frō Saul, whō I haue takē awaye before the. As for thy house τ thy kyngdome, it shal be established for euer before the, τ thy seate shal endure fast for euernore.

Whan Nathan had tolde all these wordes τ all this vision vnto David, kynge David came and sat him downe before the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE God, who am I? and what is my house, \S thou hast broughte me thus farre? Therefore art thou greatly magnified O LORDE God: ¶ for there is none like the, τ there is no God but thou, acordinge vnto all that we haue herde with oure eares.  For where is there a people vpon earth as thy people of Israel? For whose sake God wente to delyuer him a people, and to make him selfe a name, and to do them soch greate and terrible thinges in thy lōde before thy people, τ whom thou hast deliuered vnto thy selfe frō Egipte, from the people, and from their goddes. And thy people of Israel hast thou prepared the to be a people vnto thyne owne selfe for euer, and thou O LORDE art become their God.

Stablishe now \S worde therfore for euer (O LORDE God) which thou hast spokē ouer thy seruauant τ ouer his house, τ do acordinge as thou hast sayde. So shall thy name be greate for euer, so that it shal be sayde: The LORDE Zebaoth is the God ouer Israel, τ the house of thy seruauant David shal be made sure before the. For thou LORDE Zebaoth, thou God of Israel hast opened the eare of thy seruauant, and sayde: I wil buylde the an house. Therefore hath thy seruauant founde his hert, to praye this prayer vnto the. τ Now LORDE God thou thy selfe art God, τ thy wordes shal be the trueth. Thou hast spoken soch good ouer thy seruauant. Begynne now therfore, and blesse thy seruantes house, that it maye be before the for euer, for thou LORDE God thine awne selfe hast spoken it: and with thy blessinge shal thy seruantes house be blessed for euer.

Dauid smote Hadad Eser also the sonne of Rehob kyng of Zoba, whan he wete to fetch his power agayne at y water Euphrates. And of them toke Dauid a thousande t seuen hundred men, and twenty thousande fote men, and lamed all the charettes, saue an hundred which he kepte behynde. But the Sirians came from Damascos to helpe Hadad Eser kyng of Zoba. And Dauid smote two and twenty thousande men of the Syrians, and layed people vnto Damascus in Syria.

Thus was Syria subdued vnto Dauid, so that they broughte him giftes: for y LORDE helped Dauid whither so euer he wente. And Dauid toke y shyldes of golde, which Hadad Esers seruantes had, and broughte them to Ierusalem. But from Bethah t Berothai y cities of Hadad Eser toke Dauid very moch brasse.

¹⁴ Dauid gat him selfe a name also whan he came, t smote eightene thousande of y Sirians in y Salt valley. And he layed people in all Edomea, t and all Edom was subdued vnto Dauid: for the LORDE helped Dauid, whither so euer he wente. Thus was Dauid kyng ouer all Israel. And he executed iudgmente and righteousnes vnto all y people. y Ioab y sonne of Zeru Ia was captayne ouer the hoost. Iosaphat the sonne of Ahilud was Chanceler. do mercy vpon him for Ionathas sake? There was a seruaut of Sauls house, named y Siba, whom they called vnto Dauid, t the kyng sayde vnto him: Art thou Siba? He sayde: Yee thy seruaut. The kyng sayde: Is there yet eny man of Sauls house, y I maye do the mercy of God vpon him? Siba sayde vnto the kyng:  There is yet a sonne of Ionathas, lame on his fete. Now whan Mephiboseth the sonne of Ionathas the sonne of Saul came vnto Dauid, he fell vpon his face, t worshiped him. Dauid sayde: Mephiboseth. He sayde: Here am I thy seruaut. Dauid sayde vnto him: Feare not, for I wyll do mercy vpon the for thy father Ionathas sake, and wil restore vnto the all the londe of thy father Saul: but thou shalt eate bred daylie at my table. He worshiped and sayde: Who am I thy seruaut, that thou turnest the to a deed dogg as I am?

Then the kyng called Siba y seruaut of Saul, and sayde vnto him: All y hath belonged vnto Saul t to all his house, haue I geuen to thy lordes sonne. Tyll his londe for him therefore, thou t thy children t seruantes, t bryng it in, y it maye be bred for thy lordes sonne, and y he maye enioye it: but Mephiboseth thy lordes sonne shal eate bred daylie at my table. the sonne of Nahas, as his father dyd mercy vpon me. And so he sent, and comforted him by his seruantes ouer his fathers death. Now whan Dauids seruantes came in to the londe of the children of Ammon, the mightie men of the children of Ammon sayde vnto Hanun their lorde: Thynkest thou it is for the honoure of thy father in thy sighte, y David hath sent comforters vnto the? Hath he not sent his seruantes vnto y (thynkest thou) to spye and search out the cite and to ouerthrowe it?

33 Then toke Hanun the seruantes of Dauid, and shoue of the one halue of their beerdes, and cut of the halfe of their garmetes euen by the girdell, and so let them go. Whā this was tolde Dauid, he sent to mete them: for the men were put to greate shame. And the kynge caused to saye vnto them: Abyde at Iericho, tyll youre beerdes be growne, and then come agayne.

Whan the childrē of Ammon sawe that they stynked in the sighte of Dauid, they sent and hyred the Sirians of the house of Rehob, and the Sirians at Zoba euen twentye thousande fote men, and from the kynge of Maecha a thousande men, and from Istob twolue thousande men. Whan Dauid herde that, he sent Ioab with all the hoost of y men of warre. And the children of Ammon wente forth, and prepared them selues to y battayll before the intraunce of the gate. But the Sirians of Soba, of Rehob, of Istob and of Maecha were alone in the felde.

6C Now whan Ioab sawe that the battayll was set vpō him before and behynde, he chose of all the best yonge men in Israel, and prepared him selfe agaynst the Syrians. And the resydue of the people put he vnder the hande of his brother Abisai, that he mighte prepare him agaynst the childrē of Ammon. And sayde: Yf y Syrians be to mightie for me, helpe thou me: but yf the children of Ammon be to mightie for the, I shal helpe the. Take a good corage vnto the, and let vs be strongere for oure people, and for y cite of oure God: neuertheles the LORDE do what pleaseth him.

And Ioab made him forth with the people that was with him, to fighte agaynst the Syrians: and they fled before him. And whan the children of Ammon sawe that the Syrians fled, they fled also before Abisai, and wente in to the cite. So Ioab turned agayne from the children of Ammon, and came to Ierusalem. And whan the Syrians sawe y they were smytten before Israel, they came together.

And Hadad Eser sent and broughte out y Syrians beyonde the water, and conueyed their power in, and Sobath the chefe captayne of Hadad Eser wente before thē. Whan this was tolde Dauid, he gathered all Israel together, and wente ouer Iordane, and came to Helam, and the Syrians prepared them selues agaynst Dauid to fighte with him, howbeit the Syrians fled before Israel. And Dauid slewe of the Syrians seuē hundreth charettes, and fortye thousande horsmē, and Sobath the chefe captayne smote he also, so that he dyed there. Whan the kynges which were vnder Adad Eser, sawe, that they were smytten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and were subdued vnto them. And the Syrians were afraied to helpe the children of Ammon eny more.

The xi. Chapter.

AND whan y yeare came aboute what tyme as y kynges vse to go forth, Dauid sent Ioab and his seruantes with him, and all Israel, to destroye the children of Ammon, and to laye sege vnto Rabba: but Dauid abode at Ierusalem.

And aboute the euētyde it fortuneth that Dauid arose from his restinge place, and wente vp to y toppe of the kynges palace, and from y toppe he sawe a woman waszshinge hir selfe, and the woman was of a very fayre bewtye. And Dauid sent, and caused to axe what woman it was, and sayde: Is not that Bethseba the daughter of Eliam the wife of Vrias the Hethite? And Dauid sent messengers, and caused for to fetch her. And whā she was come in vnto him, he laye with her. Neuertheles she halowed hir selfe from hir vncleennes, and turned agayne vnto hir house. And the womā was with childe, and sent, and caused to tell Dauid and to saye: I am with childe. Dauid sent vnto Ioab (saye ge:) Sende me Vrias y Hethite. And Ioab sent Vrias vnto Dauid. And whan Vrias came to him, Dauid axed him yf it stode well with Ioab, and with the people and with the battayll.

to thy house, and wash thy fete. And whan Vrias wente out of the kynges palace, the kynges gifte folowed him. And Vrias layed him downe to slepe before the kynges palace gate, where all his lordes seruauntes laye, & wente not downe in to his house. Whan worde came to Dauid: Vrias is not gone downe in to his house, Dauid sayde vnto him: Camest thou not ouer the felde? Why wentest thou not downe in to thy house? Vrias sayde vnto Dauid: The Arke and Israel & Iuda abyde in the tentes: And Ioab my lorde and my lordes seruauntes lye in þy felde, and shal I go in to my house to eate and drynke, and to lye with my wyfe? As truly as thou luest, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not do this thinge. Dauid sayde vnto Vria: Abyde here then to daye, tomorrow wil I let the go. So Vrias abode at Ierusalem the same daye, and the nexte also. And Dauid called him to eate & drynke before him, & made him dronken. And at euen he wente to lye him downe for to slepe vpon his couche with his lordes seruauntes, and wente not downe in to his house.

On the morow wrote Dauid a letter vnto Ioab, & sent it by Vrias. After this maner wrote he in the letter: Set Vrias in þy sorest parte of þy batayll, & turne you behynde him, þy he maye be slayne. Now whā Ioab layed sege to the cite, he set Vrias in þy place, where he knewe þy the mightiest men of Armes were. And whan the men of the cite fell out and foughte agaynst Ioab, there fell certayne of þy people of Dauids seruauntes. And Vrias the Hethite dyed also.

Then sent Ioab, and caused to tell þy kyng all the matter concernynge the battayll, and comaunded the messaunger, and sayde: Whan thou hast tolde þy kyng all the matter concernynge the batayll, and seist that he is wroth, and yf the kyng saye vnto the: Wherefore came ye so nye the cite with the batayll? Knowe ye not how they vse to shute from the wall? *Who smote Abimelech the sonne of Ierubaal? Dyed not a womā cast a pece of a mylstone vpo him from the wall, so that he dyed at Thebez? Why came ye so nye the wall? Then shalt thou saye: Thy seruaunt Vrias the Hethite is deed also.

The messaunger wente his waye, and came and tolde Dauid all together, wherfore Ioab had sent him. And the messaunger sayde vnto Dauid: The men preuayled against vs, and fell out vnto vs in to þy felde: and we were vpon them harde at the dore of þy porte. And the archers shot from the wall vpon thy seruauntes, and slewe certayne of the kynges seruauntes: and thy seruaunt Vrias the Hethite is deed also.

Dauid sayde vnto the messaunger: Thus shalt thou saye vnto Ioab: Let not þy vexethe, for the swerde consumeth now one now another. Go forth with the battayll against the cite, that thou mayest destroye it, and cōforte the men. And whan Vrias wife herde that Vrias was deed, she mourned for hir huszbande. But whā she had made an ende of mournynge, Dauid sent, and caused her be fetched vnto his palace, and she became his wyfe, and bare him a sonne. Neuertheles this dede þy Dauid dyd, displeased the LORDE.

The xij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sent Nathan vnto Dauid. Whan he came to him, he tolde him: There were two men in one cite, the one riche, the other poore. The riche man had very many shepe and oxen: but the poore man had nothinge saue one litle shepe, which he had boughte, and norished it, so that it grewe vp with him and his children together. It ate of his bred, and dranke of his cuppe, and slepte in his lappe, and he helde it as a daughter. But whan there came a straunger vnto the riche man, he spared to take of his awne shepe & oxen (to prepare oughte for the straunger that was come vnto him) and toke the poore mans shepe, and prepared it for the man that was come vnto him.

Thē was Dauid wroth with greates displeasure agaynst that man, and sayde vnto Nathan: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, the man that hath done this, is the childe of death. †The shepe also shal he make good foure folde, because he hath done soch a thinge, and not spared it.

Then sayde Nathan vnto Dauid: Thou art euen the man. Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: ‡I haue anyointed the to be kyng ouer Israel, and deluyered the out of the hande of Saul, and haue geuen the thy lordes house, and his wyues in to thy lappe, and the house of Israel and Iuda haue I geuen the: and yf that be to litle, I wyl yet do this and that for the also. Wherefore hast thou then despyed the worde of the LORDE, to do soch euell in his sighte? Vrias the Hethite hast thou slayne with the swerde: His wife hast thou taken to be thy wyfe, but him hast thou slayne with y swerde of the children of Ammon.

¶ Now therefore shal not y swerde departe from thy house for euer, because thou hast despyed me, and taken the wife of Vrias the Hithite, to be thy wife. Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, *I wyll rayse vp euell of thyne awne house, and wyll take thy wyues before thyne eyes, and wyl geue them vnto thy neyghboure, so that he shall lye with thy wyues by Sonne lighte. For thou hast done it secretly, but I wyl do this in the sighte of all Israel, and by Sonne lighte.

Then sayde Dauid vnto Nathan † I haue synned vnto the LORDE. Nathan sayde vnto Dauid: So hath the LORDE also taken away thy synne, thou shalt not dye. But for so much as thou throw this dede hast caused the enemies of the LORDE to blasphemie, y sonne that is borne vnto the, shall dye the death. And Nathan wente home. As for the childe which Vrias wife bare vnto Dauid, the LORDE smote it, so that it was deedsicke.

¶ And Dauid besoughte God for the childe, and fasted, and wente in, and laie all night vpon the earth. Then rose the Elders of his house, and wolde haue taken him vp frō the grounde: neuertheles he wolde not, nether ate he with them. Vpon the seuenth daye y childe dyed. And Dauids seruantes durst not tell him that the childe was deed. For they thoughte: Beholde, whan the childe was yet alyue, we spake vnto him, and he herkened not vnto oure voyce, How moch more shall it greue him, yf we saye: The childe is deed? And Dauid sawe that his seruantes made a whisperinge together, and perceaued that the childe was deed, and sayde vnto his seruantes: Is the childe deed? They sayde: Yee. Then rose Dauid vp from the earth, and wasshed him selfe, and anoynted him, and put on other garmentes, ⁊ wente in to the house of the LORDE, and worshipped.

¶ And whan he came agayne, he commaunded to set bred before him, and ate. Then sayde his seruantes vnto him: What maner of thinge is this that thou doest? Whan the childe was alyue, thou fastest and wepest: but now that it is deed, thou stōdest vp and eatest? He sayde: I fasted and wepte for the childe whan it was yet a lyue, for I thoughte: Who knoweth, peraduenture the LORDE maye be gracious vnto me, that the childe maye lyue. ‡ But now that it is deed, wherefore shulde I fast? Can I fetch it agayne? I shal go vnto it, but it shall not come agayne vnto me. And whan Dauid had comforted Bethseba his wife, he wente in vnto her, and laye with her. § And she bare a sonne, whom he called Salomon. And the LORDE loued him. And he put him vnder the hāde of Nathan y prophet, which called him Iedidia because of the LORDE.

So Ioab foughte agaynst Rabba of y children of Ammon, and wanne the kynges cite, ⁊ sent messaūgers vnto Dauid, ⁊ caused to saye vnto him: ¶ I haue foughte against Rabba, and haue wonne the water cite also. Gather thou therfore the residue of the people together, and laye sege to y cite, and wyne it, that I wyne it not, and haue the name therof. So Dauid gathered all y people together, and wente, ⁊ foughte agaynst Rabba, and wanne it, and toke their kynges crowne frō his heade (which in weight had a talente of golde, and precious stones) and was set vpon Dauids heade, and very moch spoyle caried he out of the cite. As for the people that was therin, he broughte thē forth, and layed them vnder yron sawes and hokes and wedges of yron, and burned thē in tyle ouens. Thus dyd he vnto all the cities of the children of Ammon. Then returned Dauid and all the people vnto Ierusalem agayne.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND it fortuneth after this, that Absalom a y sonne of Dauid had a fayre sister, whose name was Thamar, ⁊ Ammon the sonne of Dauid loued her. And Ammon was in greate combrance, in so moch that he was euen sicke, because of Thamar his sister. For she was a virgin, and Ammon thoughte it shulde be harde for him to do any thinge vnto her. But Ammon had a frēde, whose name was Ionadab the sonne of Simea Dauids brother. And the same Ionadab was a very wyse man, which sayde vnto him: Why art thou so leane (thou kynges sonne) from daye to daye? Mayest thou not tell me? Then sayde Ammon vnto him: I loue Thamar my brother Absaloms sister exceedingly.

33 Ionadab sayde vnto him: laye the downe vpon thy bedd, and make the sicke. And whan thy father commeth to loke how thou doest, saye vnto him: Oh let my sister Thamar come, that she maye fede me, and make a meece of meate before me, that I maye se it, & eate it of hir hande. So Ammon layed him downe, and made him sicke. Now whā the kyng came in to loke how he dyd, Ammon sayde vnto the kyng: Oh let my sister Thamar come, and make me a syppyng or two, and that I maye eate it of hir hande. Then sent Dauid for Thamar in to the house, and sayde vnto her: Go thy waye to thy brother Ammons house, & make him a meece of meate. Thamar wente vnto hir brother Amons house, but he laye in his bed. And she toke floure, and mixte it, and dighte it before his eyes, and made him a syppyng. And she toke the meece of meate, and poured it out before him: but he wolde not eate.

C And Ammon saide: Put forth euery man fro me. And euery man wete forth from him. Then sayde Ammon vnto Thamar: Brynge me that meece of meate in to the chamber, that I maye eate it of thy hande. Then toke Thamar ſyppyng that she had made, and broughte it vnto Ammon hir brother in to the chamber.

And whan she broughte it vnto him ſhe mighte eate, he toke holde of her, & sayde vnto her: Come my sister, lye with me. Neuertheles she saide: Oh no my brother, force me not: for so do they not in Israel, do not thou soch foly. Whither shal I go with my shame? And thou shalt be as one of the vywyse in Israel. But speake vnto the kyng, he shal not withholde me from the.

D Howbeit he wolde not herken vnto her, and ouercame her, * and forced her, and laye with her. And Ammon hated her exceedingly, so that the hate was greater then the loue was before. And Ammon sayde vnto her: Vp, and get the hence.

She saide vnto him: This euell that thou thrustest me out, is greater then the other, that thou hast done vnto me. Neuertheles he herkened not vnto her, but called his boye that serued him, and sayde: Put awaye this woman fro me, and locke the dore after her. And she had a partye garment on: for soch garmentes wayre ſ kynges daughters whyle they were virgins.

And whā his seruauant had put hir forth, & lockte the dore after her, Thamar strowed aszshes vpon hir heade, and rente the partye garment which she had vpon her, and layed hir hande vpon hir heade, and wente on, and cryed. And hir brother Absalom sayde vnto her: Hath thy brother Ammon bene with the? Now holde thy peace my sister, it is thy brother, and take not the matter so to hert.

So Thamar remainyd a wyddowe in her brother Absaloms house. And whan kyng David herde of all this, he was very sory. As for Absalom, he spake nether euell ner good to Ammon: but Absalom hated Ammon, because he had forced his sister Thamar.

After two yeaes had Absalom shepe clyppers at Baal Hazor, which lyeth by Ephraim. And Absalom called all the kynges children, and came to the kyng, and sayde: Beholde, thy seruauant hath shepe clyppers, let it please ſ kyng with his seruantes to go with his seruante. But the kyng sayde vnto Absalom: No my sonne, let vs not all go, lest we be to chargeable vnto the.

And he wolde nedes haue had him to go, howbeit he wolde not, but blessed him. Absalom sayde: Shall my brother Ammon go with vs then? The kyng sayde vnto him: Wherefore shall he go with the? Then was Absalom so importune vpon him, that he let Ammon and all the kynges childre go with him.

F But Absalom commaunded his yonge men, and sayde: Take hede whan Ammon is mery with wyne (and I saye vnto you: Smyte Ammon, and slaye him) that ye be not afraied: for I haue commaunded you, be stronge, and playe the men. So Absaloms yonge men dyd vnto Ammon, as Absalom had commaunded them. Then stode all the kynges children vp, and euery one gat him vp vpon his Mule, and fled. And whyle they were yet on their waye, the rumoure came to kyng David, that Absalom had slayne all the kynges children, so that not one of them was lefte.

Then stode the kyng vp, and rente his clothes, & layed him downe vpon the earth, and all his seruantes that stode aboute him, rente their clothes. Then answered Ionadab § sonne of Simea Dauids brother, and sayde: Let not my lorde thynke that all the yonge men the kynges children are deed, but § Ammon is deed onely: for Absalom hath kepte it in him selfe sence the daie that he forced his sister Tamar. Therefore let not my lorde the kyng take it so to hert, that all the kynges children shulde be deed, but that Ammon is deed onely.

As for Absalom, he fled. And the yonge man that kepte the watch, lifte vp his eyes, and loked, and beholde, A greate people came in the waye one after another by the hill syde. Then sayde Ionadab vnto the kyng: Beholde, the kynges children come. Euen as thy seruauant sayde, so is it happened. And whan he had ended his talkynge, the kynges children came, and lifte vp their voyce, and wepte.

The kyng and all his seruantes wepte also very sore. But Absalom fled, and wente vnto Thalmay the sonne of Ammihud kyng of Gesur. As for Dauid he mourned for his sonne euery daye. Whan Absalom was fled and gone vnto Gesur, he was there thre yere. And kyng Dauid ceased from goinge out agaynst Absalom, for he had comforted him selfe ouer Ammon that he was deed.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IOAB the sonne of Ieru Ia perceaued § the kynges hert was agaynst Absalom, and sent vnto Thecoa, and caused to fetch from thence a prudent woman and saide vnto her: Make lamētacion, and weere mournynge garments, & anoynte the not with oyle: but fayne thy selfe as a woman which hath mourned longe ouer a deed, and thou shalt go in to the kyng, and speake so & so vnto him. And Ioab tolde her what she shulde saye.

And whan the woman of Thecoa wolde speake with the kyng, she fell vpon hir face to the grounde, and worshipped, and sayde: Helpe me O kyng. The kyng sayde vnto her: What ayleth the? She sayde: I am a wedowe, a woman that mourneth, and my husbāde is deed. And thy handmayde had two sonnes, which stroue together in the feld: and whyle there was noman to parte thē a sunder, the one smote the other, and slewe him.

* Deu. 19. c. † 1 Re. 14. g.

And beholde, all the whole kynred ryseth vp agaynst thy handmayden, and saye: *Delyuer him which hath smytten his brother, that we maye kyll him, for the soule of his brother whom he hath slayne, and that we maye destroye the heyre also. And thus are they mynded to put out my sparke, which yet is lefte, that there shulde no name ner eny thinge els remayne ouer vnto my husbāde vpon earth.

The kyng sayde vnto the woman: Go thy waye home, I wil geue a cōmaudemēt for §. And the woman of Thecoa saide vnto § kyng: The trespase be vpon me (my lorde § kyng) and vpon my fathers house: but the kyng and his seate be vngiltye. The kyng sayde: He that speaketh agaynst the, brynge him vnto me, so shall he touch the nomore. She sayde: Let the kyng thynke vpon the LORDE his God, that there be not to many auengers of bloude to destroye, and that they brynge not my sonne to naught. He sayde: † As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shall not one heer of thy sonne fall vpon the earth. And the woman sayde: Let thy handmayde speake somewhat to my lorde the kyng. He sayde: speake on. The woman sayde: Wherefore hast thou deuised such a thinge agaynst the people of God? And how happeneth it that the kyng speaketh soch, to make himselfe giltye, and causeth not his out lawe to be broughte agayne? For we all dye the death, and as the water that sinketh in to the earth, which is not taken vp. ‡ And God will not take awaye the lyfe, but vnbethynketh himselfe, § euen the very outlawe be not cleane thrust out from him.

Thus am I come also to speake this to my lorde the kyng in the presence of the people, for thy handmayden thoughte: I wyll speake to the kyng, peraduenture he shall do that his handmayden sayeth, for he shall heare his handmayden, to delyuer me from the hande of all them, that wolde destroye me with my sonne from the enheritaunce of God. And thy handmayden thoughte, § worde of my lorde the kyng shall be as a meatofferynge, § for my lorde the kinge is as an angell of God, so that he can heare good and euell, therefore shall the LORDE thy God be with the.

The kyng answered and sayde vnto the woman: Kepe nothyng fro me that I axe the. The woman sayde: Let my lorde the kinge speake on. The kinge sayde: Is not the hande of Ioab with the in all this? The woman answered and sayde: As truly as thy soule lyueth (my lorde O kynge,) there is els noman nether at the righte hande ner at þ left, but euen as my LORDE the kynge hath sayde, for thy seruauent Ioab hath commaunded me, and he himselfe hath taughte thy handmayden all these wordes, that I shulde turne this matter of this faszshio, this hath Ioab thy seruauent done. But my lorde is wyse, as the wysdome of an angell of God, so that he knoweth all thynges vpon earth.

Then sayde the kynge vnto Ioab: Beholde, I haue done this: go thy waye therfore and brynge the childre Absalom agayne.

Then fell Ioab vpon his face vnto the grounde, and worshipped, and thanked the kynge, and sayde: This daye doth thy seruauent perceaue, that I haue founde grace in thy syghte my lorde the kynge, in that the kynge doth as his seruauent hath sayde. So Ioab gat him vp, and wente vnto Gesur, and broughte Absalom to Ierusalem. But the kinge sayde: Let him go agayne in to his house, and not se my face. Thus Absalom came agayne to his house, and sawe not þ kynges face.

But in all Israel there was not so fayre, and so maruelous goodly a man, as Absalom. From the sole of his fote vnto the toppe of his heade there was not one blemysch in him. And whan his heade was rounded (that was comonly euery yeaere, for it was to heuy for him, so that it must nedes haue bene rounded) the heer of his heade weyed two hūdreth Sicles after þ kynges weight. And vnto Absalom there were borne thre sonnes and one daughter, whose name was Thamar, and she was a woman of a fayre bewtye: So Absalom abode two yeaere at Ierusalem, and sawe not the kynges face.

And Absalom sent for Ioab, that he mighte sende him to the kynge. And he wolde not come to him. But he sent the seconde tyme, yet wolde he not come. Then sayde he vnto his seruantes: Ye knowe Ioabs pece of londe that lyeth by myne, and he hath barlye theron: go youre waye therfore and set fyre vpon it. So Absaloms seruantes sett fyre vpon Ioabs pece of londe.

Then Ioab gat him vp, and came to Absalom in to the house, and sayde vnto him: Wherefore haue thy seruantes set fire vpon my pece of londe? Absalō sayde vnto Ioab: Beholde, I sent for the, and caused to saye vnto the: Come hither, that I maye sende the to the kynge, and to saye: Wherefore came I from Gesur? It were better for me that I were there yet. Let me therfore se the kynges face. But yf there be eny trespass in me, then put me to death. And Ioab wente in to the kynge, and tolde him. And he called Absalom, to come in to the kynge, and he worshipped vpon his face to the grounde before the kynge. And the kynge kyssed Absalom.

The xv. Chapter.

AND after this it fortuneth that Absalom caused to prepare himselfe chearettes and horses, and fyfye men, which were his fote mē. And Absalō gat him vp allwaye early in the mornynge, and stode in the waye by the porte: and whan eny man had a matter which shulde come to the kynge for iudgment, Absalom called vnto him and sayde: Of what cite art thou? Yf he sayde then: thy seruauent is of one of the trybes of Israel, then sayde Absalom vnto him: Beholde, thy matter is righte and plaine: but there is noman appoynted þ of the kynge to heare the.

And Absalom sayde: O who setteth me to be iudge in þ londe, that euery man which hath a plee or matter to do in þ lawe, might come to me, that I might helpe him to right. And whan eny man came to him to do worshipp, and to do him obeisaunce, he put forth his hāde, and helde him and kyssed him. After this maner dyd Absalom vnto all Israel whan they came to the lawe vnto the kynge, and so dyd he steale awaye the hert of þ men of Israel.

After fortye yeaeres sayde Absalom vnto the kynge: I wil go and perfourme my vowe at Hebron, which I made vnto the LORDE. For thy seruauent made a vowe, * whan I dwelt at Gesur in Siria, and saide: Whan þ LORDE bryngeth me agayne to Ierusalem, I shal do a Gods seruyce vnto the LORDE. The kynge sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace. And he gat him vp, and wente vnto Hebron.

* 2 Re. 13. g.

But Absalom had sent out spyes in all the trybes of Israel, sayenge: Whan ye heare the noyse of the trompe, saye: Absalom is made kynge at Hebron. There wente with Absalom two hundreth men called from Ierusalem, but they wente on simply, and knewe not of the matter. Absalom sent also for Achitophel (the Gilonyte) Dauids councler, out of his cite Gilo. Now whan he did the sacrifice, the conspiracion was mightie and the people ranne together, and multiplied with Absalom.

Then came one which tolde Dauid, and sayde, that the hert of euery man in Israel folowed Absalom. Dauid sayde vnto all his seruantes that were with him at Ierusalem: Vp, let vs fle, for here shall be no escapyng for vs before Absalom.

Make haist that we maye be goyng, lest he ouertake vs and catch vs, and dryue some mysfortune vpon vs, and smyte the cyte with the edge of the swerde. Then sayde the kynge seruantes vnto him: Loke what my lorde y kinge choseth, beholde, here are thy seruantes. And the kynge wente forth on fote with all his housholde. *But ten concubynes lefte he to kepe the house.

And whan the kynge and all the people came forth on fote, they wete farre from home, and all his seruantes wente by him, and all the Chrethians and Plethians, and all the Gethites (euen sixe hundreth men) which were come on fote from Gath, wente before the kynge.

And the kynge sayde vnto †Ithai y Gethite: Why goest thou also with vs? Turne backe, and byde with the kynge, for thou art a straunger: get the hence agayne vnto thy place. Thou camest yesterdaye, and to daye thou iuperdest to go with vs: As for me, I wyl go whither I can: turne thou backe agayne, and mercy and faithfulness happen vnto thy brethren with the. Ithai answered, and sayde, †As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as my lorde the kynge lyueth, loke in what place my lorde the kynge shalbe, (whether it chaunce to life or death) there shal thy seruant be also.

Dauid sayde vnto Ithai: Then come, and go with vs. So wente Ithai the Gethite and all his men, and the whole multitude of the children that were with him. And all the lande wepte with loude voyce, and all the people with them. And the kynge wete ouer the broke Cedron, and all the people wente ouer by the waye that goeth to the wyldernes.

And beholde, Sadoc was there also, and all the Levites that were with them, ¶ they bare y Arke of the couenaunt of God, and set it there. And Abiathar wente vp, tyll all the people came out of the cite. But the kynge sayde vnto Sadoc: Brynge the Arke of God in to the cite agayne. Yf I shal fynde grace before the LORDE, he shall fetch me agayne, and shall let me se it, and the house of it. But yf he saye thus: I haue no pleasure to y, beholde, here am I, let him do with me as it pleaseth him.

And the kynge saide vnto Sadoc y prest: O thou y Seer, turne agayne to y cite with peace, and Ahimaas thy sonne with the and Ionathas the sonne of Abiathar: beholde, I wyl tary in the playne of the wyldernes, tyll the message come from you, and tell me. So Sadoc and Abiathar broughte the Arke of God agayne to Ierusalem, and remainyd there.

But Dauid wente vp to mount Olyuete and wepte, ¶ his heade was couered. And all the people that was with him, had euery man his heade couered and wente on and wepte. And whan it was tolde Dauid, that Achitophel was in the cofederacy with Absalom, he sayde: LORDE turne thou Achitophels counsell to foolishnes.

And whan Dauid came vp to the toppe of the mount, where the vse was to worshippe God, Chusai the Arachite met him with his cote rent, and earth vpon his heade. And Dauid sayde vnto him: Yf thou go with me, thou shalt be chargeable vnto me: but yf thou goest agayne in to the cite, and sayest vnto Absalom: I am thy seruant O kynge euen as I was thy fathers seruant, so wyl I now be thy seruant, ¶ Then shalt thou brynge Achitophels counsell to naughte. So is Sadoc and Abiathar y prestes with the, and all that thou hearest out of the kynges house, tell it vnto Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes. Beholde, their two sonnes are with the: Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc, and Ionathas the sonne of Abiathar, by them mayest thou sende me worde what thou hearest. So Chusai Dauids frende came in to the cite. And Absalom came to Ierusalem.

The xvi. Chapter.

AND when Dauid was gone a lytle by from the toppe of the mount, beholde, Siba the seruaūt of Mephiboseth met him with a couple of asses saddled, wheron were two hundred loaves of bred, and an hundred quantities of rasyng and an hūdreth quantities of fygges, and a bottell of wyne. Then sayde the kynge vnto Siba: What wilt thou do herewith? Siba sayde: The asses shalbe for the kynges housholde to ryde vpon, and the loaves and fygges for the yonge men to eate, and the wyne shalbe for them to drynke whan they are weery in the wyldernes. The kynge sayde: Where is thy lordes sonne? Siba sayde vnto the kynge: Beholde, he abydeh at Ierusalē, for he saide: To daye shal ŷ house of Israel restore my fathers kigdome vnto me. The kynge saide vnto Siba: Beholde, *all that Mephiboseth hath, shalbe thine. Siba sayde with reuerence, Let me finde grace in thy sight my lord O kynge.

But whan kynge Dauid came to Bahurim, beholde, there wente out a man of the kynred of the house of Saul, †whose name was Semei the sonne of Gera, which wente forth and †cursed, and cast stones at Dauid, and at all kynge Dauids seruauntes and all the people and all the mightie men were at his righte hande and at his lefte. Thus sayde Semei whan he cursed: Get the forth, get the forth thou bloody hounde, thou man of Belial. The LORDE hath rewarded the for all the bloude of the house of Saul, ŷ thou becamest kynge in his steade. Now hath the LORDE geuen the kyngdome in to ŷ hande of Absalom thy sonne, and beholde, now stickest thou in thine owne myschefe, for thou art a bloody hounde.

But Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia sayde vnto the kynge: Shall this deed dogg curse my lord the kynge? I wyl go and take the heade awaye from him. The kynge saide: Ye children of Zeru Ia, what haue I to do with you? Let him curse on, for the LORDE hath commaunded him: Curse Dauid. Who can saye now: Why doest thou so?

C And Dauid sayde vnto Abisai and to all his seruauntes: Beholde, my sonne which came of my body, seketh after my lyfe, how moch more now the sonne of Iemini? Let him curse on, for the LORDE hath commaunded him: †peradventure the LORDE shall consyde my aduersyte, and recompence me good for his cursynge this daye. So Dauid wente on his waye with his men. But Semei wente on by the mount besyde him, and cursed, and cast stones at him, & threwe clottes of earth.

And the kynge came in and all the people that was with him, weery, and refreshed himselfe there. But Absalom and all the people of the men of Israel came to Ierusalem and Achitophel with him. Whan Chusai the Arachite Dauids frende came in to Absalom, he sayde vnto Absalom: God saue the kynge God saue the kynge.

Absalom sayde vnto Chusai: Is this thy mercy vnto thy frende? Why art thou not gone with thy frende? Chusai sayde vnto Absalom: Not so, but loke whom the LORDE choseth, and this people, and all the men in Israel, his wyl I be, and byde with him. Secondly, whom shulde I serue? Shulde I not do seruyce before his sonne? Like as I haue serued in the presence of thy father, so wyl I do seruyce before the also.

And Absalom sayde vnto Achitophel: Geue vs youre counsell what we shal do? Achitophel sayde vnto Absalom: †Go lye with thy fathers concubynes, whom he hath lefte to kepe the house, so shall all Israel heare that thou hast made thy father to stynke, and the hande of all them that are with ŷ, shal be the bolder. Then made they a tente vnto Absalom †vpon the house toppe. And Absalom laye with his fathers concubynes in the sighte of all Israel.

At that tyme whan Achitophel gaue a counsell, that was euen as yf a man axed counsell at God: So were all the counsels of Achitophel both with Dauid and with Absalom.

The xvij. Chapter.

AND Achitophel sayde vnto Absalom: I wil chose out twolue thousande mē, and wyl get me vp, and persue Dauid by nighte, and fall vpon him whan he is feble and weery: Whan I vex him thē, so that all the people which is by him, flieth, I wil smite the kynge onely, and brynge all the people vnto the agayne. So whan every man is brought vnto the as thou desyrest, then shal all the people be in peace. Absalom thought that good, and so dyd all the Elders in Israel. But Absalom sayde: I praye you call Chusai the Arachite also, and let vs heare what he sayeth therto. And whā Chusai came in to Absalom, Absalom saide vnto him: Thus hath Achitophel spoken, Saye thou now, shal we do it or not?

Then sayde Chusai vnto Absalom: It is no good counsell & Achitophel hath geuen at this tyme. And Chusai sayde morouer: Thou knowest thy father well and his men, that they are stronge and of a wrothfull stomack, euen *as a Beer that is robbed of hir yonge ones in the felde. Thy father also is a man of warre, and wyl not be negligēt with the people. Beholde, he hath now peradventure hyd hymselfe in some caue or in some place. Yf it came to passe then that it chaunced euell at the first, & there shulde come a rumoure and saye: There is a slaughter done in the people that folowed Absalō: thē shulde euery man be discouraged, which els is valeaunt, & hath a hert like a lyō: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is stronge, and that all they which be with him, are mightie men.

But this is my coucell, that thou gather together all Israel from Dan vnto Berseba in nombre as the sonde of the See, and go thou thine owne person amonge them, then wil we fall vpon him in what place we finde him, and wyll ouerwhelme him euen as the dew falleth vpon the earth, so that we shal not leaue one of him and of all his men. But yf he resorte in to a cite, then shal all Israel cast roapes aboute the same cite, and drawe it in to the riuier, so that there shal not one stone of it be founde.

Then sayde Absalom and euery man in Israel: The counsell of Chusai the Arachite is better then Achitophels counsell.

† But the LORDE broughte it so to passe, that ‡ good counsell of Achitophel was hyndred, that the LORDE mighte brynge euell vpon Absalom.

¶ And Chusai sayde vnto Sadoc & Abiathar the prestes: Thus and thus hath Achitophel counceiled Absalom and the Elders in Israel: but so and so haue I counceiled. Sende now therfore in all the haist, and tell Dauid, and saye: Abyde not all nighte in the playne felde of the wyldernes, but get the ouer, that the kyng be not swallowed vp, and all the people that is with him. As for Ionathas and Ahimaaz, they stode by the well of Rogel, and a damsell wente thither and tolde them. They wente on their waye, and tolde kyng Dauid, for they durst not be sene to come in to the cite.

But a lad sawe them, and tolde Absalom. Neuertheles they wente on their waye, and came to a mans house at Bahurim, which had a well in his courte, and they wēte downe in to it. And the woman toke and spred a couerynge ouer the welles mouth, & strowed firmentye corne theron, that it was not perceaued. Now whan Absaloms seruantes came to the woman in to the house, they sayde: where is Ahimaaz and Ionathas? The womā sayde vnto them: They are gone ouer the litle water.

And whā they soughte and founde them not, they wente agayne to Ierusalem. And whan they were gone, they clymmed vp out of the well, and wente their waye, and tolde Dauid & kyng, and sayde vnto Dauid: Get you vp, and go soone ouer ‡ water, for thus and thus hath Achitophel geuen counsell agaynst you.

Then Dauid gat him vp, and all the people that was with him, and passed ouer Iordane tyll it was cleare mornyng. And there was not one, but he wente ouer Iordane.

Whan Achitophel sawe that his coucell wente not forth, he saddled his asse, gat him vp, and wēte home in to his cite and put his house to poynte, and hanged him selfe, and dyed, and was buried in his fathers graue.

And Dauid came to Mahanaim, and Absalom wente ouer Iordane, & all the men of Israel with him. And Absalom had set Amasa ouer the hoost in Ioabs steade. Amasa was the sonne of a man, whose name was Iethra a Iesraelite, which laye with Abigail the daughter of Nahas the sister of Zeru Ia Ioabs mother. But Israel and Absalom pitched in Gilead.

Whan Dauid was come to Mahanaim, ‡ Nahas of Rabbath of the childrē of Ammon, and † Machir the sonne of Ammiel of Lodebar, and † Barsillai a Gileadite of Roglim broughte bedstufte, tapestrie worke, basens, earthen vessell, whete, barley, meel, parched corne, beenes, otemeell, ryse, hony, butter, shepe and fat oxen vnto Dauid, and to þ̄ people that was with him, for to eate: for they thought, The people shall be hongrie, weerye and thirstye in the wyldernes.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND Dauid mustred the people þ̄ was with him, and set captaynes ouer thē, ouer thousandes and ouer hundreds. And sent out of the people one thirde parte vnder Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia Iobas brother, and one thirde parte vnder * Ithai the Gethite. And the kynges sayde vnto the people: I wyl go forth with you also. Neuertheles the people sayde: Thou shalt not go forth, for though we fle, or die halfe of vs they shal not regarde vs. For thou art as ten thousande of vs. Therefore is this better that thou mayest helpe vs out of the cite. The kynges sayde: Loke what ye are content withall, that wyl I do. And the kynges stode in the gate, and all the people wente forth by hundreds and by thousandes. And þ̄ kinge cōmaunded Iob and Abisai, and Ithai, and sayde: Intreate me the yonge man Absalom gently. And all the captaynes herde it, whā the kynges cōmaunded all the captaynes concernynge Absalom. And whan the people were come forth in to the felde agaynst Israel, the battayll beganne in the wod of Ephraim. And the people of Israel were smitten there before Dauids seruauantes, so that there was a greate slaughter the same daye, of twentye thousande men. And the battaill was scatred abroad there in the londe. And the wod consumed moche more people the same daye, then the swerde consumed.

And Absalom met Dauids seruauantes, and rode vpon a Mule. And whan the Mule came vnder a greate thicke Oke tre, his heade toke holde on the Oke, and so hanged he betwene heauen and earth, but the Mule ranne awaye from vnder him. Whan a certayne man sawe that, he tolde Iob, and saide: Beholde, I sawe Absalom hange vp̄ an Oke tre. And Iob saide vnto the mā þ̄ tolde it him: Beholde, sawest thou that, why smotest thou him not there to the groides? so wolde I haue geuen the of myne awne behalfe ten syluerlynges and a gyrdell.

C The man sayde vnto Iob: Yf thou haddest

* 3 Re. 2. b.

weyed me a thousande syluerlynges in my handes, yet wolde I not haue layed my handes on the kynges sonne. For the kynges cōmaunded the and Abisai and Ithai before oure eares, and sayde: Kepe me the yonge man Absalom. Or yf I had dyssembled vpon the ioperdy of myne owne soule (for so moch as nothings shulde be hyd from þ̄ kinge) thou thy selfe shuldest haue stōde against me. Iob sayde: Not so, I wil vpon him before thy face.

Then toke Iob thre speares in his hande, and thrust Absalom thorow þ̄ hert, while he was yet alyue vpon the Oke. And ten yōge men Iobas weapenbearers, came aboute him, and smote him to death. Then blew Iob the trompe, and broughte the people agayne, that they shulde folowe nomore vpon Israel. For Iob wolde fauoure the people. And they toke Absalom, and cast him in the wod in to a greate pytt, and layed a greate heape of stones vpon him. And all Israel fled, euery one vnto his tente.

Absalom had set him vp a piler whyle he was yet alyue, which stode in the kynges valley, for he sayde: I haue no sonne, therefore shall this be a remembrance of my name: and he called the piler after his owne name. And vnto this daie it is yet called Absaloms place.

Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc sayde: Let me runne now, and brynge the kynges worde, that the LORDE hath gotten him righte frō the hande of his enemies. But Iob sayde: Thou shalt bringe no good tidinges to daie another daye shalt thou brynge him worde, and not to daye, for the kynges sonne is deed. But vnto Chusi sayde Iob: Go thou thy waye, and tell the kynges what thou hast sene. And Chusi did his obeysauce vnto Iob, and ranne. Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc saide agayne vnto Iob: What and I ranne also? Iob sayde: What wilt thou runne my sonne? Come hither, thou shalt brynge no good tydings. (He answered:) What and I ranne yet. He saide vnto him: Renne on thy waye then. So Ahimaas ranne the straight waye, and came before Chusi.

E As for Dauid, he sat betwene the two gates. And the watchman wente vp to þ̄ toppe of the porte vpon the wall, and lifte vp his eyes, and sawe a man renninge alone, and cryed, and tolde the kinge. The kynges sayde: Yf he be alone, then is there good tydings in his mouth. And as the same wente and came forth, the watchman sawe another man rennyng, and cryed in the porte and sayde: Beholde, there renneth a man alone. The kinge sayde: The same is a good messaunger also. The watchman sayde: I se the rennyng of the first as it were the rennyng of Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc. And the kynge sayde: He is a good man, and bryngeth good tidings. Ahimaas cryed, and sayde vnto þe kinge: Peace, and worshipped before the kynge vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: Praise be the LORDE thy God, which hath geuen ouer þe men that lifte vp their handes agaynst my lorde the kynge.

f The kynge sayde: Goeth it well with the yonge man Absalom? Ahimaas sayde: I sawe a grete vproure, whan Ioab the kynge's seruaunt sent me thy seruaunt, and I wote not what it was. The kynge sayde: Go aboute, and stonde here. And he wente aboute and stode there. Beholde, then came Chusi and sayde: I brynge good tydings my lorde the kynge: The LORDE hath executed righte for the this daye, from the hande of all them that rose vp agaynst the. But the kynge sayde vnto Chusi: Goeth it well with the yonge man Absalom? Chusi sayde: Euen so go it with all the enemyes of my lorde the kynge, and with all them that ryse vp agaynst the to do euell, as it goeth with the yonge man. Then was the kynge soroufull, and wente vp in to the perler vpon the gate, and wepte, and as he wente, he sayde thus: O my sonne Absalō, my sonne, my sonne Absalom, wolde God þe I shulde dye for the. O Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

The xix. Chapter.

α AND it was tolde Ioab: beholde, þe kinge wepeth & mourneth for Absalom. And so out of þe victorie of þe daye there came a mourninge amonge all the people. For the people had herde the same daye, þe the kynge toke on heuely because of his sonne. And þe people stale awaye the same daye, so that they came not in to the cite: as a people that is put to shame, pycketh them selues awaye, whan they are fled in a battayll. As for the kynge, he had couered his face, and cryed loude, and sayde: Oh my sonne Absalom, Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

But Ioab came to the kynge in to the house, and sayde: This daye hast thou shamed all thy seruautes (which haue deliuered thy soule this daye, and the soules of thy sonnes, of thy daughters, of thy wyues, and of thy cōcubynes) in that thou louest them that hate the, and hatest those that loue þe. For to daye thou shewest thyselfe, that thou carest not for the captaynes and seruautes: For I perceauē this daye, that yf Absalom onely were alyue, and we all deed this daye, thou woldest thynke it were well.

Get the vp now therfore, and go forth, and speake louyngly vnto thy seruautes. For I swear vnto the by þe LORDE, yf thou go not forth, there shall not be lefte the one man this night: this shalbe worse vnto þe, then all the euell that happened the sence thy youth vp hither to. The kynge gat him vp, and sat in the gate. And it was sayde vnto the people: beholde, the kynge syteth in the gate. Then came all the people before þe kynge. But Israel was fled euery one vnto his tent.

And all the people stroue in all the trybes of Israel, and sayde: The kynge ryd vs from the hande of oure enemies, and deliuered vs from the hande of the Philistynes, and was fayne to fle out of the lōde for Absalom. So Absalom whom we had anoynted ouer vs, is deed in the battayll. Why are ye so styll now, that ye fetch not the kynge agayne?

Ⓢ The kynge sent vnto Sadoc & Abiathar the prestes, & caused to saye vnto the: Speake to the Elders of Iuda, & saye: Why wyl ye be the last to fetch the kynge agayne vnto his house? (for þe sayenge of all Israel was come before the kynge in to his house) ye are my brethren, my bone, and my flesh. Wherefore wyl ye then be the last to brynge the kynge agayne? And saye vnto Amasa: Art not thou my bone and my flesh? God do this & that vnto me, yf thou shalt not be the chefe captayne before me in Ioabs steade, as longe as thou lyst.

And he bowed the hert of all the men of Iuda as of one man. And they sent vnto þe kynge: Come agayne, thou and all thy seruautes: So the kynge came agayne. And whan he came vnto Iordane, þe men of Iuda were come to Gilgal, for to go downe to mete the kynge, that they mighte brynge þe kynge ouer Iordane. And Semei the sonne of Gera the sonne of Iemini, which dwelt at Bahurim, made haist, and wente downe with ȝ men of Iuda to mete kynge Dauid, and there were with him a thousande mē of Ben Iamin. *Siba also the seruaunt of the house of Saul with his fyfene sonnes and twenty seruautes, ȝ gat them thorow Iordane and passed ouer ȝ fery, that they mighte brynge ouer the kynge's housholde, and to do him pleasure.

But Semei the sonne of Gera fell downe before the kynge, whan he passed ouer Iordane, and sayde vnto the kynge: O my lord, laye not the trespase vnto my charge, ȝ thynke not vpon it that thy seruaunt vexed the, in the daye whan my lord the kynge wente out of Ierusalem: and let not ȝ kynge take it to hert, for thy seruaunt knoweth that he hath synned. And beholde, this daye am I come the first amonge all the house of Ioseph, for to go downe to mete my lord the kynge.

Nēuertheles Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia answered and sayde: And shulde not Semei dye therefore, seynge he hath cursed ȝ anoynted of ȝ LORDE? But Dauid sayde: What haue I to do with ye children of Zeru Ia, that ye wyll become Sathan vnto me this daye? Shulde eny man dye this daye in Israel? Thynkest thou that I knowe not, ȝ I am become kynge ouer Israel this daye? And ȝ kynge sayde vnto Sime: Thou shalt not dye. And the kynge sware vnto him.

Mephiboseth the sonne of Saul came downe also to mete the kynge. And he had not made cleane his fete ner combed his beerde, nether had he waszshed his clothes from the daye that the kynge was gone awaye, vntyll the daye that he came agayne in peace. Now whā he came to Ierusalem for to mete the kynge, the kynge sayde vnto him: Mephiboseth, wherfore wentest thou not with me? And he sayde: My lord O kynge, my seruaunt hath deale vnrighteously with me: for thy seruaunt thoughte: I wil saddell an asse and ryde theron, and go vnto the kynge: for thy seruaunt is lame, and he hath accused thy seruaunt before my lord ȝ kynge. ¶ But my lord ȝ kynge is an angell of God, and thou mayest do what pleaseth the. For all my fathers house was nothinge, but people of death before my lord ȝ kynge. ¶ And yet hast thou set thy seruaunt amonge them that eate at thy table. What other righteousnes haue I, that I shulde crye eny more vnto the kynge? The kynge sayde vnto him: What speakest thou yet more of thy matter? I haue sayde: Thou and Siba parte the londe betwene you. Mephiboseth sayde vnto the kynge: Let him take it all, in as much as my lord ȝ kynge is come home in peace.

And Barsillai the Gileadite came downe from Roglim, and broughte the kynge ouer Iordane, that he mighte cōueye him in Iordane. And Barsillai was very olde, so good as foure score yeare olde, ¶ the same had prouyded ȝ kynge of fode whyle he was at Mahanaim, for he was a very noble man. And the kynge sayde vnto Barsillai: Thou shalt go ouer with me, I wyll take care for the with myne awne selfe at Ierusalem. But Barsillai sayde vnto the kynge: What haue I yet to lyeue, that I shulde go vp to Ierusalem with the kynge? This daye am I foure score yeare olde. How shulde I knowe what is good or euell, or taist what I eate or drynke, or heare what the Musicians do synge? Why shulde thy seruaunt be chargeable first vnto my lord the kynge? thy seruaunt shall go a litle with the kynge ouer Iordane. Why wil the kynge recompence me after this manner? Let thy seruaunt turne backe agayne, that I maye dye in my cite besyde my father and my mothers graue. Beholde, there is thy seruaunt Chimeam, let him go ouer with my lord the kynge, and do vnto him what pleaseth the.

The kynge sayde: Chimeam shal go ouer with me, and I wyll do for him what liketh the: and what so euer thou desyrest of me, that wyll I do for the also. And whan all ȝ people was gone ouer Iordane and the kynge likewise, the kynge kyssed Barsillai and blessed him, and he turned vnto his place. And ȝ kynge passed ouer vnto Gilgal, and Chimeam wente with him. And all the people of Iuda broughte the kynge ouer, howbeit there was but halfe of the people of Israel there.

And beholde, thē came all the men of Israel vnto the kynge, ȝ sayde vnto him: Why haue oure brethren the men of Iuda stollen the awaye, and haue conueyed ȝ kynge and his housholde ouer Iordane, and all Dauids men with him? Then answered they of Iuda vnto them of Israel: The kynge is of oure nye kynred, why are ye angrie therefore? Thynke ye that we haue receaued eny fode or giftes of the kyng? Then answered they of Israel vnto them of Iuda, & sayde: We haue ten tymes more with the kyng and with Dauid, the thou, why hast thou regarded me then so lightly, that oures were not the first to fetch oure kyng agayne? But they of Iuda spake harder then they of Israel.

The xx. Chapter.

THERE was a famous man of Belial there, whose name was Seba [†]sonne of Bichri, a mā of Iemini, which blew the trompe, and sayde: *We haue no porcion in Dauid, ner inheritance in [†]sonne of Isai: let euery one get him to his tent, O Israel. Then fell euery man in Israel from Dauid, and folowed Seba the sonne of Bichri. But the men of Iuda cleued vnto their kyng from Iordane vnto Ierusalē. When Dauid came home to Ierusalem, he toke the ten concubynes (*whom he had left to kepe the house) and put them in a holde to be kepte, and made prouysion for them: but he laye not with them, and so were they shut vp vnto their death, and lyued wedowes.

And [†]kyng sayde vnto Amasa: Call me all the men of Iuda together agaynst the thirde daye, & be thou here present also. And Amasa wēte to call Iuda together. And he was slacke to come at [†] tyme which he had appoynted him. And Dauid sayde vnto Abisai: Now shall Seba the sonne of Bichri do vs more harme then Absalom. Take thou thy lordes seruantes, and folowe vpon him, [†] he fynde not some strōge cities for him, and so escape out of oure sighte. Then wente Ioabs mē forth after him, and the Chrethians and Plethians, and all the mightie mē: and they wēte out of Ierusalem to folowe vpon Seba the sonne of Bichri.

But when they were by the greate stone at Gibeon, Amasa came before them. As for Ioab, he was gyrded aboue his garnet which he had on, and vpon it he had a swerde gyrded, which hanged by his thye in the sheeth, and wente easily out and in, and fell frō him. And Ioab sayde vnto Amasa: Peace be with the my brother. And Ioab toke Amasa by the beerde with his righte hāde, to kysse him. And Amasa toke no hede vnto [†] swerde in Ioabs hande, and he thrust him therewith in to the bely, [†] his bowels ranne out vpon the earth, and he thrust at him no more. And so he dyed.

Ioab & his brother Abisai folowed vpon Seba [†]sonne of Bichri. And one of Ioabs seruantes stode by him, and sayde: What is he this [†] wolde be agaynst Ioab to please Dauid, and to be with Dauid in Ioabs steade? As for Amasa, he laye rolled in the bloude in [†] myddes of the strete. But whā one sawe that all the people stode there still, he remoued Amasa from the strete vnto the felde, and cast a clothe vpon him, for so moch as he sawe, that who so euer came by him, stode styll. Now when he was put out of the waye, euery man wēte after Ioab, to folowe vpon Seba the sonne of Bichri.

And he wente thorow all [†] trybes of Israel vnto Abel Beth Maacha, and all the best chosen men gathered them selues together, & folowed after him, and came and beseged him at Abel Beth Maacha, and made a banke aboute the cite harde on [†] wall. And all the people that was with Ioab, layed to their ordynance, and wolde haue cast downe the wall.

Then cried there a wyse womā out of [†] cite: Heare, heare, saye vnto Ioab that he come hither, I wyl speake with him. And whā he came to her, the woman sayde: Art thou Ioab? He sayde: Yee. She sayde vnto him: Heare the wordes of thy hand-mayden. He sayde: I heare. She sayde: The comon sayenge was somtyme: Who so wyll axe, let him axe at Abel, and so came it to a good ende. This is [†] noble and faithfull cite in Israel, and wilt thou destroye the cite and the mother in Israel? Why wilt thou swalowe vp the enheritaunce of the LORDE?

Ioab answered and sayde: That be farre, that be farre from me, that I shulde swalowe vp and destroye. The matter is not so, but a certayne man of mount Ephraim named Seba the sonne of Bichri, hath līfe vp him selfe agaynst kyng Dauid, delyuer him onely, and I wyl departe from the cite. The woman sayde vnto Ioab: Beholde, his heade shal be cast vnto the ouer the wall. And the woman came in to all the people with hir wysdome. And they smote of the heade of Seba the sonne of Bichri, and cast it vnto Ioab. Then blew he the trompe, and they departed from the cite, euery one vnto his tent. But Ioab came agayne to Ierusalem vnto the kyng.

* Ioab was captayne ouer all the hoost of Israel: Benaia † sonne of Ioiada was ouer the Chrethians and Plethians: Adoram was rent gatherer: Iosaphat the sonne of Ahilud was Chaunceler: Seia was the scribe: Sadoc and Abiathar were the prestes: Ira also ‡ lairite was Dauids prest.

The xxi. Chapter.

21 THERE was a derth also in Dauids tyme three yeares together. And Dauid soughte the face of † LORDE. And the LORDE sayde: Because of Saul and because of that bloody housholde † ‡ he slewe the Gibeonites. Then the kyng caused for to call the Gibeonites, and spake vnto them. (As for the Gibeonites, they were not of † children of Israel, but a remnaunt of the Amorites: howbeit † the children of Israel had sworne vnto thē, and Saul soughte for to smyte them in his gelousy, for the childrē of Israel and Iuda.) Then sayde Dauid to the Gibeonites: What shal I do vnto you? And where withall shal I make the attonement, that ye maye blesse † enheritaunce of † LORDE? The Gibeonites sayde vnto him: It is not for golde and syluer that we haue to do with Saul and his house, nether haue we oughte to do for to slaye eny mā in Israel.

33 He sayde: What saye ye then, that I shal do vnto you? They sayde vnto † kyng: The man that hath destroyed vs and broughte vs to naughte, shulde we destroye, that nothinge be left him in all the coastes of Israel. Let there be geuen vs seuen men of his sonnes, that we maye hange them vp vnto the LORDE at Gibeā of Saul the chosen of the LORDE. The kyng sayde: I wyll geue them. Howbeit the kyng spared Mephiboseth † sonne of Ionathas † sonne of Saul, because of the ooth of the LORDE † was betwene them: † namely, betwene Dauid † Ionathas the sonne of Saul. But the two sonnes of Rispa † daughter of Aia, whom she had borne vnto Saul, Armoni † Mephiboseth, And the fyue sonnes of Michol the daughter of Saul, whom she bare vnto Adriel the sonne of Barsillai the Mahalothite, dyd the kyng take, and gaue them in to the handes of † Gibeonites, which hanged thē vp vpo the mount before the LORDE.

So these seuen fell at one tyme, and dyed 22 in the tyme of the first haruest, whan † barly haruest begynneth. Then toke Rispa the daughter of Aia a sack cloth, † spread it vpon the rock in the begynnynge of the haruest, tyll the water from the heauen dropped vpō them, and suffred not the foules of the heauen to rest on them on the daye tyme, nether the wyld beestes of the felde on the night season. And it was tolde Dauid what Rispa the daughter of Aia Sauls concubyne had done.

And Dauid wente and toke the bones of Saul and the bones of Ionathas his sonne from † citesens at Iabes in Gilead (which they † had stollen from † strete at Bethsan, where † Philistynes had hanged thē, what tyme as the Philistynes had smytten Saul vpon mount Gilboa) and broughte them vp from thence, and gathered them together with the bones of them that were hanged. And 23 the bones of Saul and of his sonne Ionathas buried they in † londe of Ben Iamin, besyde † graue of his father Cis. So after this was God at one with the londe.

But there arose warre agayne of † Philistynes agaynst Israel. And Dauid wente downe † his seruantes with him, † foughte agaynst the Philistynes. And Dauid was weery, † Ieszi of Nob (which was one of the children of Rapha, and the weight of his speare was thre C. weight of brasse, and had a new harnesse vpon him) thoughte to smyte Dauid. Neuertheles Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia helped him, † smote the Philistyne to death. Then sware Dauids men vnto him, † sayde: ¶ Thou shalt nomore go forth with vs vnto the warre, that the lanterne in Israel be not put out.

24  Afterwarde there arose yet warre at Nob with the Philistynes. Then Sibechai the Husathite smote Saph, which also was one of the childrē of Rapha.

And there arose yet warre at Gob with the Philistynes. Then Elhanan the sonne of Iaere Örgim a Bethleemite smote Goliath the Gethite, which had a speare, whose shaft was like a weeuers lome.

And there arose yet warre at Gath, where there was a cōtēcious man, which had sixe fyngers on his handes, and sixe toes on his fete, that is foure and twēty in the nombre, and he was borne also of Rapha. And whan he spake despitēfully vnto Israel, Ionathas ꝑ sonne of Simea Dauids brother smote him. These foure were borne vnto Rapha at Gath, and fell thorow the hande of Dauid and of his seruauentes

The xxij. Chapter.

AND Dauid spake the wordes of this songe before the LORDE, what tyme as the LORDE had deluyered him frō the hande of all his enemies, and from the hande of Saul, and he sayde.

The LORDE is my stony rock, & my castell, and my deluyerer.

God is my strength, in him wyl I put my trust: my shyld & the horne of my saluacion, my defence & my refuge, my Sauoure, thou shalt helpe me from violent wronge.

* I wil call vpon the LORDE with prayse, so shal I be deluyered from myne enemies.

For the sorowes of death cōposed me, and the brokes of Belial made me afraied.

The paynes of hell came aboute me, and the snares of death had ouertaken me.

WHā I was in trouble, I called vpō the LORDE, yee euen my God called I vpon, & so he herde my voyce frō his holy temple, & my cōplaynte (came) in to his eares.

The earth trembled and quaked, the foundations of the heauen shoke and moued, because he was wroth.

Smoke wente vp from his nose, and consumynge fyre out of his mouth, coles were kyndled therof.

He bowed the heauens and came downe, and it was darke vnder his fete.

He sat vpon Cherub and dyd flye, and appeared vpon the fethers of the wynde.

He made darknes his paulyon rounde aboute him, thicke water in the cloudes of ꝑ ayre.

At the brightnesse of him were the fyre coles kyndled.

The LORDE thondered from heauē, and the Hyest put forth his voyce.

He shot his arowes, and scatered them: he lightened, and discomfited them.

The pourynges out of the See were sene,

* Psal. 17. a.

and the foundations of the earth were discovered at the chydyinge of the LORDE, & at the breth of the sprete of his wroth.

He sent downe from aboue, and receaued me, and drue me out of many waters.

He deluyered me fro my stronge enemye, from them that hated me, for they were to mightie for me.

They ouertoke me in the tyme of my trouble, but the LORDE was my succoure.

He broughte me forth in to liberty: he deluyered me, because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The LORDE shal rewarde me after my righteounes, and accordinge to the clenness of my handes shal he recompence me.

For I haue kepte ꝑ waye of the LORDE, & haue not bene vn godly agaynst my God.

For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, and haue not put his ordinaunces fro me.

Therefore wil I be perfecte vnto him, and wyl eshue myne awne wickednes.

So shal ꝑ LORDE rewarde me after my righteounes, accordinge to the clēnes of my handes in his eye sighte.

With the holy shalt thou be holy, and with the perfecte thou shalt be perfecte.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed people, and shalt set thine eyes agaynst the proude to brynge them downe.

For thou O LORDE art my lanterne. The LORDE shal lighte my darknesse.

For in ꝑ I shal discōfite an hoost of men, & in my God I shal leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is perfecte: ꝑ wordes of the LORDE are tryed in the fyre: he is a shyld for all thē that put their trust in him.

For where is there a God, excepte ꝑ LORDE? Or who hath eny strength without oure God?

God hath strēghed me with power, and made playne a perfecte waye for me.

He hath made my fete like hartes fete, & hath set me vp an hye.

He teacheth my handes to fighte, and bendeth the stele bowe with myne armes.

And thou hast geuen me the shyld of thy health, and with thy louynge correccion shalt thou multiplie me.

Thou hast enlarged my goynge vnder me, and myne ankes haue not slyded.

I wyl folowe vpon myne enemies, and destroye thē: and wyl not turne backe agayne, tyll I haue broughte them to naught.

f I wil cōsume them and thrust them thorow, that they come not vp: they shal fall vnder my fete.

Thou hast girded me with strength to ȝ battayll, and hast subdued them vnder me ȝ rose vp agaynst me.

Thou hast made myne enemies to turne their backs vpō me, that I might destroye them that hate me.

They shal crye, but there shalbe no Sauoure: yee euen vnto the LORDE, but he answereth them not.

I wil beate them as small as the dust of the earth: euen as ȝ claye of the stretes wil I make them thynne, and sprede them out abrode.

But me shalt thou deluyser from the strynges of the people, and shalt kepe me to be ȝ heade of the Heythen: A people whom I haue not knowne, shal serue me.

ⓐ The straunge children haue denyed me: at the hearynge of the care shal they herke vnto me.

The straunge children are waxen olde, ȝ are shut vp in their presons.

The LORDE lyueth, and blessed be my God, and magnified be the strength of my health.

God seyth that I be auenged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

He bryngeth me out fro myne enemies: ȝ from them ȝ ryse vp agaynst me, shalt thou exalte me, and from ȝ cruell man shalt thou deluyser me.

* For this cause wyl I geue thanks vnto the amonge the Heythen, and synge prayses vnto thy name.

Which doth greate health for his kynge, ȝ sheweth mercy vnto Dauid his anoynted, and to his sede for euermore.

The xiiij. Chapter.

Ⓐ THESE are the last wordes of Dauid: Dauid the sonne of Isai sayde. The man, that was set vp to be ȝ anoynted of the God of Iacob, ȝ a pleasaunt dyter of songes of Israel, sayde: The sprete of the LORDE hath spoken by me, and the vtteraunce therof is done thorow my tunge. He sayde: The God of Israel hath spoked vnto me, the strength of Israel, the gouernoure amonge men, the righteous gouernoure in the feare of God. As the lighte is in ȝ mornyng when the Sonne aryseth, so that for the brightnesse therof no cloude remayneth: and as the grasse loketh vpon the earth thorow the rayne, euen so shal my house be with God. † For he hath made an euerlastinge couenaunt with me, well appoynted on euery syde and sure. For this is all my health ȝ pleasure, that it shal growe. But the Belial shal be vtterly ȝ cleane roted out as the thornes, which mē take not in their hādes. And they ȝ touch them, shal destroye them with yrons ȝ speares: ȝ in the fyre shal they be brent, that they maye be broughte to naught.

These are the names of Dauids Worthies: Ⓐ Iasabeam ȝ sonne of Hachmoni, "the chefest amonge thre, which lifte vp his speare, ȝ slewe eight hundredth at one tyme.

After him was Eleasar the sonne of Dodi the sonne of Ahohi amonge the thre Worthies with Dauid, whan they spake despytfully to the Philistynes, and were gathered together to the battayll, and the men of Israel wente vp. Then stode he vp and smote the Philistynes, tyll his hande was so weery that it cromptled with the swerde. And the LORDE gaue a greate victory at the same tyme, so that the people turned after him to spoyle. After him was Samma the sonne of Age ȝ Hararite. Whā the Philistynes had gathered them selues in a company, and in the same place there was a pece of lōde full of small corne, and the people fled before the Philistynes, thē stode he in the myddes of ȝ pece of londe, ȝ deluyered it, ȝ smote ȝ Philistynes. And God gaue a greate victory.

And these thre pryncipall amonge thirtie, came downe in the haruest vnto Dauid, Ⓒ in to the caue of Adullam, ȝ the hoost of ȝ Philistynes laye in ȝ valley of Rephaim. But Dauid was at the same tyme in the castell, and ȝ Philistynes people laye at Bethleem. And Dauid was desirous, and sayde: Wolde God ȝ some man wolde fetch me a drynke of water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate. Thē brake the thre Worthies in to the hoost of the Philistynes, and drue of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder ȝ gate, ȝ caried it ȝ broughte it vnto Dauid: neuertheles he caried not drynke it, but offred it vnto the ^B *Abisai ⁊ brother of Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia was one also chefe amonge thre. He lifte vp his speare ⁊ smote thre hundreth, ⁊ was an awncient man amonge thre, ⁊ the noblest amonge thre, ⁊ was their ruler. But he came not vnto the thre. † And Benaia the sonne of Ioiaa, the sonne of Ishail (a man of greates actes of Cabzeell) smote two mightie gäutes of ⁊ Moabites, ⁊ wete downe, ⁊ slewe a lyon at a well in the snowe tyme. He smote also a fayre goodly man of Egipte, which had a speare in his hande. But he wete downe to him with a staffe, and toke the speare out of the Egipcians hande by violence, and slewe him with his owne speare. This dyd Benaia the sonne of Ioiaa, and was a famous man amonge thre Worthies, and more honorable then the thirte, but he came not vnto the thre. And Dauid made him of his secrete coucell.

Asahel the brother of Ioab is amonge ⁊ thirte: Elham his vnclen sonne at Bethleem. The children of Iasen and Ionathas: Samma the Hararite, Eliphelet the sonne of Ahaszbai ⁊ sonne of Maechathi, Eliam the sonne of Aчитophel ⁊ Gilonite, Hesrai of Carmel, Paerai the Arbite, Iegael the sonne of Nathan of Soba, Bani the Gadite, Zeleg the Ammonite, Naharai the Beerothite, the weapon bearer of Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia, Ira the Iethrite, Gareb the Iethrite, Vrias the Hethite. These are altogether seuen and thirte.

The xxiij. Chapter.

^B AND the LORDE was wrothfully displeased of ⁊ new agaynst Israel, ^a and moued Dauid amonge them, because he saide: Go, nombre Israel and Iuda. And the kynge sayde vnto Ioab ⁊ chefe captayne of his hoost:

Go aboute in all the trybes of Israel, from Dan vnto Berseba, and nombre the people, that I maye knowe how many they be. Ioab sayde vnto the kynge: The LORDE thy God adde vnto this people an hundreth tymes as moch as it is now, that my lorde the kynge maye se his eyes lust theron. But why hath my lorde the kynge a desyre to this thinge? Neuertheles the knynges worde preuayled agaynst Ioab and the captaynes of the hoost.

So Ioab and ⁊ captaynes of the hoost wente forth from the kynge, to nombre the people of Israel, and passed ouer Iordane, and pitched at Aroer, at the righte hande of the cite which lyeth in ⁊ ryuer of Gad, and at Iaseer, ⁊ ^B came to Gilead, and in the lowe countre of Hadsai, and came vnto Dan Iaan, and aboute Sidon, and came to the stronge cite of Tyrus, and all the cities of the Heuites and Cananites, and came forth to the south parte of Iuda vnto Berseba, and wete rounde aboute that countre, and after nyne monethes and twenty daies they came to Ierusalem. And Ioab delyuered vnto ⁊ kynge the summe of the people that was nombred. And in Israel there were eight C. thousande stronge men, that drue out the swerde: and in Iuda fyue hundreth thousande men. And after that the people was nombred, Dauids hert smote him selfe. And Dauid sayde vnto ⁊ LORDE: I haue synned sore, that I haue done this. And now LORDE take awaie the trespace of thy seruauit. For I haue done very vnwysely.

And whan Dauid rose vp in the mornyng, the worde of the LORDE came vnto the prophet God, Dauids Seer, ⁊ sayde: Go ⁊ speake vnto Dauid. Thus sayeth the LORDE: I brynge the thre thinges, chose the one of them, that I maye do it vnto the. Gad came vnto Dauid, and tolde him, and sayde vnto him: Wilt thou that seuen yere derth shall come in to thy londe? Or that thou be fayne to flye before thine aduersaries thre monethes, and they to persecute the? Or that there be pestilence thre dayes in the londe? Take aduysement therfore and se, what answer I shal bringe agayne vnto him ⁊ sent me.

Dauid sayde vnto Gad: I am in extreme trouble. † Neuertheles (yf it maye be) let me rather fall in to ⁊ handes of the LORDE (for his mercy is grete) I wyll not fall in to the handes of men.

† Eccli. 2. c. Susen. d.

¶ So the LORDE sent pestilence in to Israel from the morow vnto the tyme appoynted, so that there dyed of the people from Dan vnto Berseba, thre score and ten thousande men. And whan the angel stretched his hande ouer Ierusalem to destroye it, the LORDE repented ouer the euell, and sayde vnto the angell: It is ynough, holde now thy hande. The angell of the LORDE was besyde the barne of Arafna the Iebusite. But whan Dauid sawe the angell that smote the people, he sayde vnto the LORDE: beholde, It is I that haue synned, I haue done the trespase: As for these shepe, what haue they done? Oh let thy hãde be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house.

And Gad came to Dauid at the same tyme, and saide vnto him: Go vp, and set vp an altare vnto the LORDE in þy barne of Arafna the Iebusite. So Dauid wete vp as Gad sayde, and as the LORDE had commaunded. And whã Arafna loked aboute him, he sawe the knyng with his seruantes goinge vnto him, and he worshipped vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: Wherfore commeth my lorde þy knyng vnto his seruaut? Dauid sayde: To bye the barne of the, and to buylde an altare vnto the LORDE, that the plague maye cease from the people.

But Arafna sayde vnto Dauid: Let my lorde the kynge take it, and offre what pleaseth him. Beholde, there is an ox for a burnt offerynge, and sleddes, and vessels of oxen to the wodd. All this gaue Arafna vnto the kynge. And Arafna sayde vnto þy kynge: The LORDE thy God make the accepted vnto him. Neuertheles þy kynge sayde vnto Arafna: Not so, but I wyll bye it of the for as moch as it is worth. For I wyl not offre burnt offerynges vnto þy LORDE, of þy which I haue for naughte. So Dauid boughte the barne and the ox for fiftye Sicles of syluer, and buylded an altare there vnto the LORDE, and offred burnt offerynges & deed offerynges. And the LORDE was mercifull vnto þy lorde, and þy plague ceased from the people of Israel.

AND whā kinge Dauid was olde & well stryckē in age, he coulde not be warme, though he was couered with clothes. Then sayde his seruantes vnto him: Let vs seke a yonge damsell a virgin for oure lorde the kyng, to stonde before the kyng, and to norish him, & to slepe in his armes, and to warme oure lorde the kyng. And they sought a fayre dasell in all the coastes of Israel, and founde Abisag of Sunem, and brought her vnto ſ kyng. And she was a very fayre damsell, and noryshed ſ kyng, and serued him. Howbeit the kyng knewe her not.*

Adonias ſ sonne of Hagith lifte vp himselfe, and sayde: I wyl be kyng. And he prepared him charettes and horsmen, and fyftie men to be renners on fote before him. And his father reprovde hi not therfore, so moch as to saye: Wherefore doest thou so? And he was a man of a very fayre bewtye *and he had begotten him nexte after Absalō. And his matter stode by Ioab ſ sonne of Zeru Ia and by Abiathar the prest, which helped Adonias. But Sadoc the prest, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and Nathan the prest and Semei and Rei, and Dauids Worthies were not with Adonias.

33 And whā Adonias offred shepe and oxē, and fat catell besyde the stone of Soheleth, which lyeth by the twell of Rogel, he called all his brethre the kynges sonnes, and all the men of Iuda the kynges seruantes. But the prophet Nathan and Benaia, and the Worthies, and his brother Salomon called he not. Then sayde Nathan vnto Bethseba Salomons mother: Hast thou not herde ſ Adonias is kyng, and oure lorde Dauid knoweth not therof? Come now therfore, I wyl geue the counsell, that thou mayest delyuere thy soule and the soule of thy sonne Salomon. Come now and go in to kinge Dauid and saye vnto him: Hast not thou my lorde the kyng sworne and sayde vnto thy handmayden: Salomon thy sonne shall be kyng after me, and he shall sytt vpon my seate? Why is then Adonias made kyng? Beholde, while thou art yet there, and talkest with the kyng, I wyl come in after the, and tell forth thy tale. And Bethseba wente in to the kyng to ſ chamber.

* 2 Reg. 3. a.

And the kyng was very olde. And Abisag of Sunem serued the kyng. And Bethseba bowed herselfe, and worshipped the kyng.

The kyng sayde: What wilt thou? She sayde vnto him: My lorde, Thou hast sworne vnto thy handmayde by the LORDE thy God: Thy sonne Salomon shall be kyng after me and syt vpon my seate. But now lo, Adonias is kyng, and my lorde the kyng knoweth it not. He hath offred oxen and fat catell, and many shepe, and hath called all the kynges sonnes, and Abiathar the prest, and Ioab the chefe captayne. But thy seruaut Salomon hath he not bydden. Neuertheles thou my lorde art kyng, the eyes of all Israel loke vnto the, that thou shuldest shewe them who shall syt vpon the seate of my lorde the kyng after the. And whā my lorde the kyng slepeth with his fathers then shal I and my sonne Salomon be fayne to be synners.

But whyle she yet spake to the kyng, the prophet Nathan came, and she tolde ſ kyng: beholde, there is the prophet Nathan. And whan he came in before the kyng, he worshipped the kyng vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde My lorde O kyng, hast thou saide: Adonias shal be kinge after me, & syt vpo my seate? For he is gone downe this daye, and hath offred oxen, and fat catell, & hath called all the kynges sonnes, and the captaynes, and the prest Abiathar. And beholde, they eate and drynke before him, and saye: God saue the kyng Adonias. But me thy seruaut, and Sadoc the prest, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and thy seruaut Salomon hath he not called. Hath my lorde the kyng commaunded this, and not certified his seruantes who shall sytt vpon the seate of my lorde the kyng after him?

The kinge answered and saide: Call Bethseba vnto me. And she came in before the kinge. And whan she stode before the kyng, the kyng sware and sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth (which hath delyuered my soule out of trouble,) I wyl do vnto this this daye, euen as I sware vnto the by the LORDE the God of Israel, so that Salomon thy sonne shalbe kyng after me, and he shal sit vpon my seate in my steade.

Then Bethseba bowed hir selfe with hir face to the grounde, and thanked the kyng and sayde: God saue my lorde kyng Dauid for euermore. And the kynge sayde: Call me the prest Sadoc & the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiaida.

¶ And when they came in before the kynge, the kynge sayde vnto them: Take youre lordes seruantes with you, and set my sonne Salomon vpon my Mule, and cary him downe to Gihon: and let Sadoc f prest and the prophet Nathan, anoynte him there to be kynge ouer Israel, and blowe the trompe, and saye: God saue kynge Salomon, and go ye vp after him: and whan he commeth, he shal syt vpon myseate, and be kynge in my steade: for I haue ordeyned him to be pryncce ouer Israel and Iuda. Then answered Benaia the sonne of Ioiaida vnto the kynge, & sayde: Amen. The LORDE God of my lorde the kynge saye thus also. As the LORDE hath bene with my lorde the kynge, so be he with Salomon also, that his seate maye be greater then the seate of my lorde kynge Dauid.

Then wente they downe, the prest Sadoc and the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiaida, and the Chrethians, & Plethians, & set Salomon vpon kynge Dauids Mule, & broughte him to Gihon. And Sadoc the prest toke the oyle horne out of the Tabernacle, and anoynted Salomon. And they blew the trompe: And all f people sayde: God saue kynge Salomon.

¶ And all the people wente vp after him, and the people pyped with pypes, and was very ioyfull, so that the earth range at the noyse of them. And Adonias herde it, and all they whom he had called, which were with him, and they had new eaten. And whan Ioab herde the noyse of the trompe, he sayde: What meaneth this noyse of the cite and this busynes? But whyle he yet spake, beholde, Ionathas the sonne of Abiathar f prest came.

And Adonias sayde: Come in, for thou art a valeaunt man, and bryngest good tydings. Ionathas answered and sayde vnto Adonias: Alas, oure lorde kynge Dauid hath made Salomon kynge, and hath sent with him Sadoc the prest, and the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiaida, and the Chrethians and Plethians, and they haue set him vpon the kynges Mule: and Sadoc f prest with the prophet Nathan hath anoynted him kynge at Gihon, and from thence are they gone vp with ioye, that the cite range with all: that is the noyse that ye haue herde.

Salomon also sytteth vpon the kynges seate, and the kynges seruantes are gone in to wysch good lucke vnto oure lorde kynge Dauid, and haue sayde: Thy God make Salomon a better name then thy name is, and make his seate greater then thy seate. And they haue wyszshed the kynge good lucke vpon the bed. Morouer f kynge hath sayde thus: Prysed be f LORDE God of Israel, which this daye hath made one to syt vpon my seate, that myne eyes haue sene it.

Then were they afrayed, and gatt them vp all that were called by Adonias, and so they departed euery man his waye. But Adonias was afrayed of Salomon, and gat him vp, and wete his waye, & toke holde of f hornes of f altare. And it was tolde Salomon: beholde, Adonias feareth kynge Salomō, & beholde, he taketh holde of the hornes of f altare, & sayeth: Let kige Salomō sweare vnto me this daye, that he shall not slaye his seruaut with the swerde. Salomon sayde: Yf he wil be an honest man, there shall not one heer fall from him vpon the earth: but yf there be euell founde in him, he shall dye. And kinge Salomō sent, and caused him to be fetched * from the altare. And whan he came, he fell downe before kynge Salomon. But Salomon sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in to thy house.

The ij. Chapter.

NOW when the tyme came that Dauid A shulde dye, he commaunded Salomon his sonne, and sayde: "I go the waye of all the worlde, Be thou strōge therefore, and shewe thyselfe a man, and kepe the watch of the LORDE thy God, that thou walke in his wayes, and holde his ordinaunces, his commaundementes, his lawes, and his testimonies, as it is written in the lawe of Moses, that thou mayest be wyse in all that thou doest, and whither so euer thou turnest the: that the LORDE maye rayse vp his worde, which he hath spokē ouer me, and saide: Yf thy children kepe their waye and walke before me faithfully and truly and with all their hert and with all their soule, the shal there neuer fayle the a man vpon the seate of Israel.

Thou knowest well also what Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia hath done vnto me, what he dyd vnto the two chefe captaines of Israel, *Abner the sonne of Ner, and † Amasa the sonne of Iether, whom he slewe and shed the bloude of warre whā it was peace, & put the bloude of warre vpon his girdel ‡ was aboute his loynes, and in his shues that were vpon his fete: Do thou acordynge to thy wyszdom, that thou brynge not his graye heer downe to the graue in peace.

And to the children of Barsyllai the Gileadite, thou shalt shewe mercy, that they maye eate at thy table. For so ioined they the selues vnto me, whan I fled before thy brother Absalom. And beholde, thou hast with the † Semei the sonne of Gera the sonne of Iemini of Bahurim, which cursed me with very bytter and shamefull cursynges, what tyme as I wente to Mahanaim. Yet † came he downe to mete me at Iordan, where I sware vnto him by the LORDE, and sayde: I wyl not slaye the with the swerde. But suffre not thou him to be vngiltye, for thou art a wyse man, and shalt wel knowe what thou oughtest to do vnto him, that thou mayest brynge his graye heer downe to the graue with bloude.

¶ So Dauid slepte with his fathers, and was buried in the cite of Dauid. The tyme that Dauid was kynge ouer Israel, is fortie yeare. † Seuen yeares was he kynge at Hebrō and thre and thirtie yeare at Ierusalem. † And Salomon sat vpon the seate of Dauid his father, and his kyngdome was made very sure.

But Adonias the sonne of Hagith came in to Bethseba Salomons mother. And she sayde: Is thy comynge peaceable? He spake: Yee, and sayde: I haue somewhat to saye to the. She sayde: Saye on. He sayde: C Thou knowest that thy kyngdome was myne, and that all Israel had sett them selues vpon me, that I shulde be kynge, but now is the kyngdome turned, and become my brothers: for he hath it of the LORDE.

Now desyre I one petition of the, Make not my face ashamed. She sayde vnto him: Saye on. He sayde: Speake vnto kynge Salomon (for † he shall not shame thy face) that he maye geue me Abisag to wyfe. Bethseba sayde: Wel, I wil speake to the kynge for the.

And Bethseba came in to kynge Salomon to speake with him. And the kynge stode vp, and wente to mete her, and worshipped her, and sat him downe vpon his seate. And there was a chayre set for the kynges mother, so that she sat at his righte hande. And she sayde: One petition desyre I of the make not my face ashamed. The kynge sayde: Axe O my mother, I wyl not shame thy face. She sayde: Let Abisag of Sunem be geuen thy brother Adonias to wyfe.

Then answered kynge Salomon, and saide vnto his mother: Why desyrest thou Abisag of Sunem for Adonias? Axe the kyngdome for him also, for he is my greater brother,  and hath Abiathar the prest, and Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia. And the kynge sware by the LORDE, and sayde: God do this and that vnto me, Adonias shall haue spoken this agaynst his lyfe. And now as truly as the LORDE lyueth which hath ordeyned me, and made me to syt vpon the seate of my father Dauid, and hath made me a house († acordynge as he sayde) this daye shal Adonias dye.

And kynge Salomon sent thither by Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, which smote him that he dyed. And to the prest Abiathar sayde † kynge: Go thy waye vnto Anathot to thy londe, for thou art a man of deeth. Neuerthelesse I wyl not slaye the this daye for thou hast borne the Arke of the LORDE God before my father Dauid, and hast suffred also where my father suffred.

Thus Salomō put forth Abiathar, that he must nomore be the prest of the LORDE, that the worde of the LORDE mighte be fulfilled, † which he spake ouer the house of Eli at Silo.

And this rumoure came before Ioab: for Ioab cleued vnto Adonias, and not vnto Salomon. Then fled Ioab in to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, and toke holde of the hornes of the altare. And it was tolde kynge Salomon, that Ioab was fled in to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, and beholde, he stondest at the altare.

Then sent Salomon Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and sayde: Go slaye him. And whan Benaia came to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, he sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the kynge: Come forth. He sayde: No, I wyl dye here. And Benaia tolde this vnto the kynge agayne, and sayde: Thus hath Ioab spoken, and thus hath he answered me.

The kyng saide vnto him: Do as he hath spoken, and slaye him, and bury him, that thou mayest put fro me and my fathers house the bloude which Ioab hath shed with out a cause, and that the LORDE maye recompence him his bloude vpon his heade, because he smote two men, which were more righteous and better then he, and slewe them with f swerde that my father Dauid knewe not of: namely, *Abner f sonne of Ner the chefe captaine ouer Israel, t Amasa the sonne of Iether f chefe captaine ouer Iuda f their bloude maye be recompensed vpō f heade of Ioab and of his sede for euer: but Dauid and his sede, his house and his seate haue peace for euermore of the LORDE.

f And Benaia the sonne of Ioiada wente vp, and smote him, and slewe him: t he was buried in his house in the wyldernes. And f kyng set Benaia f sonne of Ioiada in his steade ouer the hoost. And t Sadoc f prest dyd the kyng set in the steade of Abiathar.

And the kyng sent, and caused for to call Semei, and sayde vnto him: Buylde the an house at Ierusalem, and dwell there, and departe not from thence, nether hither ner thither. In what daye so euer thou departest forth, and goest ouer f broke Cedron, be thou sure, that thou shalt dye the deeth: thy bloude be vpon thy heade. Semei sayde vnto the kyng: This is a good meynynge, as my lorde the kyng hath sayde, so shal thy seruauent do. So Semei dwelt at Ierusalem a longe season. But after three yere it fortuneth that two seruauentes ranne awaye from Semei vnto Achis the sonne of Maecha kyng of Gath.

And it was tolde Semei: beholde, thy seruauentes are at Gath. Then Semei gat him vp, and saddled his asse, and wete vnto Gath to Achis, for to seke his seruauētes. And whā he came thither, he broughte his seruauentes from Gath.

f And it was tolde Salomon, that Semei wente from Ierusalem vnto Gath, and was come agayne. Then sent the kyng, and caused for to call Semei, and sayde vnto him: Sware not I to the by the LORDE, and assured the, and sayde: Loke what daye so euer thou departest out and goest hither or thither, be sure that thou shalt dye the death? And thou saydest vnto me: I haue herde a good meynynge. Why hast thou not kepte the then accordinge to the ooth of the LORDE, and commaundement that I commaunded the?

And the kyng sayde vnto Semei: Thou remembrest all f wickednes, which thy hert knoweth t that thou dydest vnto my father Dauid. The LORDE hath recompensed f thy wickednes vpon thy heade. And kyng Salomon is blessed, and the seate of Dauid shalbe stablished before f LORDE for euer. And the kyng commaunded Benaia f sonne of Ioiada, which wente forth, and smote him that he dyed. And the kyngdome was stablished by Salomons hande.

The iij. Chapter.

A ND Salomon made mariage with Pharaos the kyng of Egipte, t toke Pharaos daughter, and broughte her in to the cite of Dauid, tyll he had buylded his house, and the LORDES house, and the walles rounde aboute Ierusalem. But the people offred yet vpon the hye places: for as yet there was no house buylded vnto the name of the LORDE vnto that tyme. But Salomon loued the LORDE, and walked after the ordinaunces of Dauid his father: excepte onely that he offred and brent incense vpon the hye places.

f And the kyng wente vnto Gibeon, to do sacrifice there: for that was a goodly hye place. And Salomon offred a thousande burntofferynge vpon the same altare. t And the LORDE appeared vnto Salomon at Gibeon in a dreame of the nighte, and God sayde: Axe what I shal geue f . Salomō saide: Thou hast done greate mercy vnto my father Dauid thy seruauent. Like as he walked before the in faithfulness and righteousness, and in a true hert with the, t this greate mercy hast thou layed vp for him, and geuen him a sonne to syt vpon his seate, as it is now come to passe.

f Now LORDE my God, thou hast made thy seruauent kyng in my father Dauids steade: As for me, I am but a small yonge man, knowynge nether my outgoynge ner ingoynge. And thy seruauent is amonge the people whom thou hast chosen: which is so greate, that no man can nombre them ner descrybe them for multitude. Geue thy seruauent therefore an obedient hert, that he maye iudge thy people, t vnderstonde what is good t bad: for who is able to iudge this thy mightie people?

This pleased the LORDE well, that Salomon axed such a peticion. And God sayde vnto him: For so moch as thou axest this, and desyrest not longe lyfe, nether riches, nether f soules of thine enemies, but vnderstōdīnge to heare iudgment, beholde, therefore haue I done acordyngte to thy wordes. * Beholde, I haue geuen the an hert of wysdome and vnderstōdyngte, so that soch one as thou hath not bene before the, nether shall ryse vp after the.

Yee and that thou hast not prayed for, haue I geuen the also, namely, ryches, and honoure, so that amonge the kynges in thy tyme there is not soch one as thou. And yf thou wilt walke in my wayes, so that thou kepe myne ordinaunces and lawes,^a as Dauid thy father hath walked, then wyll I geue the a longe lyfe.

C And whan Salomon awaked, beholde, it was a dreame, [†]and he came to Ierusalem, and stode before the Arke of the LORDES couenant, and offred burntofferynge, and healthofferings, and made a greate feast vnto his seruauentes.

At the same tyme came there two harlottes vnto f kyngte, and stode before him. And the one woman sayde: Oh my lorde, I and this woman dwelt in one house, and I was deluyered of a childe in the house with her: ¶ on the thirde daye after that I was deluyered, she was deluyered of a childe also. And we were together, so f there was no straunger in f house, but we two: ¶ this womans sonne died in the nyghte (for she smooored him in the slepe) and she rose vp in the nyghte, and toke my sonne fro my syde (where thy handmayde slepte,) and layed it in hir arme, and hir deed sonne layed she in myne arme. And whan I rose vp in the mornyngte to geue my sonne sucke, beholde, he was deed. But in the mornyngte I loked well, and beholde, it was not my sonne, whom I had borne.

D The other woman sayde: Not so, my sonne lyueth, and thy sonne is deed. But she sayde: Not so, thy sonne is deed, and my sonne lyueth. And thus spake thy before the kyngte. And the kyngte sayde: This womā saith: my sonne lyueth and thy sonne is deed: Yonder woman sayeth: Not so, thy sonne is deed, ¶ my sonne lyueth. And the kyngte saide: Fetch me a swerde. And whan the swerde was brought before the kyngte, the kyngte sayde: Parte the lyuyngte childe in two partes, and geue this woman the one halfe, and yonder woman the other halfe.

Then sayde the woman whose sonne lyued, vnto f kyngte: (for hir motherly hert was kyndled with pite ouer hir sonne) Oh my lorde, geue hir the childe alyue, and kyll it not. But the other sayde: Let it nether be myne ner thine, but let it be parted. Then answered the kyngte, and sayde: Geue this woman the lyuyngte childe, and slaye it not, for she is his mother. And all Israel herde of this iudgment that the kyngte had geuen: and they feared the kyngte, for they sawe that f wysdome of God was in him to kepe iudgmēt.

The iij. Chapter.

THUS was Salomon kyngte ouer all Israel. ^a And these were his prynces: Asaria the sonne of Sadoc the prest: Elihoreph, and Ahila the sonnes of Sisa, were prestes: Iosaphat the sonne of Ahilud was chaunceler: Benaia f sonne of Ioiada was the chefe captayne: Sadoc and Abiathar were prestes: Asaria the sonne of Nathan was ouer the officers: Sabud the sonne of Nathan the prest was the kynges frende: Ahisar was stewarde: Adoniram the sonne of Abda was rent gatherer.

And Salomon had twolue offycers ouer all Israel, which made prouysion of fode for the kyngte and his house: One had a moneth longe in f yeeare to make prouysion: The sonne of Hur vpon mount Ephraim. The sonne of Deber at Macaz and at Saalbaim, ¶ at Bethsames, and at Elon, and Beth Hanā. The sonne of Hased at Aruboth, and had therto Socho and all the londe of Hephher. The sonne of Abinadab all f lordshippe at Dor: ¶ had Taphat Salomōs daughter to wife. Aloth. Iosaphat the sonne of Paruha in Isachar. Semei the sonne of Ela in Ben Iamin. Geber the sonne of Vri in the londe of Gilead, in the londe of Sihon kynge of the Amorites, and of Og the kynge in Basan. One officer was in the same londe. As for Iuda and Israel, they were in nombre as the sonde of the see, and ate and dronke, and were mery. * Thus was Salomō lorde ouer all the kyngdomes (from the water of the londe of the Philistynes, vnto the border of Egippte) which broughte him giftes, and serued him as longe as he lyued.

And Salomon had daylie to his vytayles thirte quarters of fyne meel, thre score quarters of other meel, ten fat oxen, and twety small catell, and an hundred shepe, beside hartes and Roes, and wilde goates, and fat capons, and foules. For he had the lordshippe of all the londe on this syde the water, frō Tiphsa vnto Gasa, and ouer all the kynges on this syde the water: ¶ had peace of all his subiectes rounde aboute, so that Iuda and Israel dwelt safe, euery one vnder his vyne, and vnder his figge tre, from Dan vnto Berseba, as longe as Salomon lyued.

¶ And Salomō had fortye thousande cart horses, and twouthe thousande horsmen. And the officers prouyded the kynge Salomon with vytayles: and what soeuer belonged to the kynges table, that broughte euery man in his moneth, and myssed not: Barlye also ¶ strawe for the horses and coursers, ¶ broughte them vnto the place where the kyng was, euery one after his charge.

† And God gaue Salomon maruelous greates wysdome and vnderstandinge, and a large hert, as the sonde that lyeth vpon the See shore: so that the wysdome of Salomon was greater then the wysdome of all the children toward the south and of all the Egipcians. And he was wyser then all men, yee wyser then Ethan the Esrahite, Heman, Chalcal, and Darda, the sonnes of Mahol: and had a greate name amonge all the Heythē on euery syde. And he spake thre thousande ¶ proverbes, ¶ his songs were a thousande ¶ fyne. And he spake of trees, from the Ceder of Libanus vnto the Ioseph growth out of the wall: he talked also of catell, of foules, of wormes, of fisshes. And there came of all nacions to heare the wysdome of Salomon, and there came of all the kynges of the earth, which had herde of his wysdome.

The v. Chapter.

AND Hiram the kyng of Tyre sent his seruautes vnto Salomon, for he had herde, that they had anoynted him kyng in his fathers steade: for Hiram loued Dauid as lōge as he lyued. ¶ And Salomon sent vnto Hiram, sayenge:  Thou knowest that my father might not buyde an house vnto the name of the LORDE his God, because of the warre that was aboute him, vntyll the LORDE delyuered them vnder the soles of his fete: But now hath the LORDE my God geuen me rest on euery syde, so that there is no aduersary ner euell hynderaunce: Beholde, I am therfore aduysed to buyde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, accordinge as the LORDE spake vnto Dauid my father, and sayde: † Thy sonne, whom I shal set vpon thy seate in thy steade, shal buyde an house vnto my name. Commaunde therfore that they hewe me downe Ceders out of Libanus, and that thy seruautes be with my seruautes, ¶ the rewarde of thy seruautes wyl I geue the, what so euer thou shalt axe: for thou knowest, that with vs there is no mā which can hewe tymber as the Sidonians.

¶ When Hiram herde the wordes of Salomon, he was very glad, and sayde: Praise be the LORDE this daye, which hath geuen Dauid a wyse sonne ouer this greute people. And Hiram sent vnto Salomon, sayenge: I haue herde what thou hast sent vnto me: I wyl do accordinge vnto all thy desyre with Ceders and Pyne trees. My seruautes shall brynge them downe from Libanus vnto the See, and I wyl make them to flete vpon the See, vnto the place which thou shalt shewe me, and there wyl I cause them to aryue, ¶ thou shalt make the to be fetched. But thou shalt fulfyl my desyre also, and geue fode vnto my housholde folkes. So Hira gaue Salomon Ceders and Pyne trees accordinge to all his desyre. But Salomon gaue Hiram twentye thousande quarters of wheate to eate for his housholde, and twetye quarters of beaten oyle. This gaue Salomon yearly vnto Hiram.

¶ And the LORDE gaue Salomon wysdome, acordinge as he had sayde vnto him, & there was peace betwene Hiram and Salomon, and they made a couenaunt both together. And Salomon made an outchosinge (of workmen) thorow out all Israel. And ¶ outchosinge was thirtie thousande mē, and he sent thē to mount Libanus euery two monethes ten thousande, so that they were one moneth vpon Libanus, and two monethes at home. And * Adoniram was ouer the outchosinge.

And Salomon had thre score thousande ¶ ten that bare burthens, & foure score thousande that hewed tymber vpon the mount, besyde Salomons chefe officers, which were ordeyned ouer the worke: namely thre thousande and thre hundreth, which ruled ¶ people that laboured there in the worke. And ¶ kyngge commaunded, that they shulde breake out greate and costly stones, namely fre stone, for the foundation of the house. And Salomons masons, and Hirams, and they that were in those coastes, hewed out ¶ prepared tymbre and stones to the buyldinge of the house.

The bi. Chapter.

¶ IN the foure hundreth and foure score yeare after the * departinge of the children of Israel out of the londe of Egipte, in the fourth yeare of the raigne of Salomon ouer Israel, in the moneth Sif (¶ is the seconde moneth) was the house buylded vnto the LORDE. This house that kyngge Salomon buylded vnto ¶ LORDE, was thre score cubytes lōge, twenty cubytes brode, & thirtie cubites hye. And he buylded a † Porche before the temple of twentye cubytes longe after the bredth of the house, & ten cubites brode before the house. And in ¶ house he made wyndowes, which might be opened and shut with lyddes.

And rounde aboute by the wall of ¶ house he buylded a compase, so ¶ it wente both aboute the temple and the quere, and made his outwarde wall roide aboute. The nether most stacion was fyue cubytes wyde, and ¶ myddest sixe cubytes wyde, and the thirde seten cubites wyde. For he layed balikes rounde aboute the house, that they touched not ¶ wall of the house.

¶ And whan ¶ house was buylded, it was buylded of whole and outbroken stones, so ¶ there was herde nether hammer ner axe, ner eny other instrument of yron, whan the house was a buyldinge.

But on the righte syde of the myddes of the house there was a dore, so ¶ they might go vp to the myddest stacion by a turne gresse, ¶ from the myddest stacion vnto ¶ thirde. Thus buylded he the house, & fynished it, & syled ¶ house both aboue & by the walles with Ceder wodd. He buylded a galery also aboue vpon the whole house fyue cubytes hye, and couered the house with Ceder tymber.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Salomon, & sayde: Let this be the house ¶ thou buyldest. Yf thou shalt walke in myne ordinaunces, & do acordinge to my lawes, & kepe all my cōmaundementes, to walke therin, then wyl I stablyszshe my worde with ¶, († as I sayde vnto Dauid thy father) & wyl dwell amonge the childrē of Israel, and wil not forsake my people of Israel.

Thus Salomon buylded the house, & ¶ finished it, & buylded the walles on the insyde with Ceder tymber, from the grounde of ¶ house vnto the rofe, and syled it with tymbre on the ynsyde, and ouerlayed the floore of ¶ house with bordes of Pyne tre.

And behynde in the house he buylded a wall of Ceder tymber twentye cubytes longe, from the floore vnto the rofe. And there on the ynsyde buylded he the quere for the most holy. But the house of the temple before the quere was fortye cubites longe: on the ynsyde was the whole house of Ceder with throwne knoppes and floures, so that there was no stone sene. As for the quere, he prepared it on the ynsyde of the house, that the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE might be set therin. And before the quere (which was twentye cubites longe, twentye cubytes brode, and twentye cubytes hye, and ouerlayed with pure golde) he syled the altare with Ceder.

And Salomon ouerlayed the house on ¶ ynsyde with pure golde, & shot barres of golde before the quere, which he had ouerlayed with golde, so that ¶ whole house was layed ouer with golde. And all the altare also before ¶ quere ouerlayed he with golde.

ten cubites hye of Olyue tre. One wyng of ether of the Cherubs had fyue cubytes, so that from the edge of his one wyng to the edge of his other wyng there were ten cubytes. Euen so had the other Cherub ten cubites also, and both the Cherubs were of one measure and of one quantitie so \bar{y} ether Cherub was ten cubites hye. And he put the Cherubins within in the house. And the Cherubins spred forth their wynges, so that the wyng of the one touched the one wall, and the other Cherubs wyng touched the other wall. But in the myddes of \bar{y} house the one wyng touched another. And he ouerlayed the Cherubins with golde.

And on all the walles of the house rounde aboute, he caused to make carued worke, with carued Cherubins, palme trees, and floures. And the paument of the house ouerlayed he also with goldē plates. And at the intraunce of the quere he made two dores of olyue tre with fyue squared postes, and caused carued worke to be made therof with Cherubins, palme trees and floures, \bar{a} ouerlayed them with plates of golde. So made he also at the intraunce of the temple, foure squared postes of Olyue tre, and two dores of Pyne tre (so that ether dore had two syde dores one hāginge to another) and made carued worke therof, palme trees and floures, right as it was appoynted.

And he buylded a courte also within with three rowes of fre stone, and with one rowe of playne Ceder tymber.

In the fourth yeare in the moneth Sif, was the foundation of the LORDES house layed: and in the eleuenth yeare in the moneth Bul (that is the eight moneth) was the house fynished as it shulde be, so that they were seuen yeare a buyldinge of it.

The vij. Chapter.

BUT Salomon was a buyldinge his awne house thirtene yeare, \bar{a} fynished it, namely, he buylded an house of the wodd of Libanus, an hundreth cubites longe, fifty cubites wyde, \bar{a} thirtie cubites hye, foure-squared with rowes of pilers, and with carued Ceders. And the rofe aboue syled he also with Ceder wodd vpon the fyue \bar{a} fortie pilers, for one rowe had fyfene pilers, so \bar{y} there stode euer three pilers one right ouer agaynst another: so that euery space betwixe the pilers was one oueragaynt another foure squared with the pilers.

And he made a porche with pilers which was fiftye cubites longe, and thirtie cubites brode, \bar{a} yet a porche before it with pilers \bar{a} with a greate poste. He made a porche also vnto \bar{y} kynges seate (wherin \bar{y} iudgment was keppe) and made it to be the porche of iudgment, and syled it with Ceder from the paument vnto the paument agayne, and his owne house wherin he dwelt, in \bar{y} back courte made betwene \bar{y} house and the porche like the other. And like vnto the porche made he a house for Pharaos doughter, *whom Salomon had taken to wife.

All these were costly stone hewen after \bar{y} measure, cut with sawes on euery syde, from the grounde vnto the rofe: and without the greate courte also. As for the foundacions, they were costly and greate stones, ten and eighte cubites greate: and costly fre stones theron accordinge to \bar{y} measure, and Ceders. But the greate courte rounde aboute had three rowes of fre stone, \bar{a} one rowe of playne Ceders: Euen so also the courte by \bar{y} house of the LORDE within, and the porch by the house.

And kyng Salomon sent to fetch one † Hiram of Tyre a wedowes sonne, of the trybe of Nephtali, and his father had bene a man of Tyre, ‡ which was a connyng mā in metall, full of wysdome, vnderstandinge and knowlege to worke all maner of metall worke. Whan he came to kyng Salomon, he made all his worke, § and made two brasen pilers, ether of them eightene cubites hye: and a threde of xij. cubites was the measure aboute both \bar{y} pilers: and he made two knoppes of brasse molten, to set aboute vpon the pilers: and euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and on euery knoppe aboue vpon \bar{y} pilers seuē wrythen ropes like cheynes. And vpon euery knoppe he made two rowes of pomgranates rounde aboute on one rope, wherwith \bar{y} knoppe was couered. And the knoppes were like roses before \bar{y} porche foure cubites greate. And the pomgranates in the rowes rounde aboute were two hūdreth aboue and beneth vpon the rope, which wēte rounde aboute the thicknes of the knoppe, on euery knoppe vpon both the pilers. the porche of the temple. And that which he set on the right hande, called he Iachin: and that which he set on the lefte hande, called he Boos. And so stode it aboute vpon the pilers euen like roses. Thus was the worke of f pilers fynished.

20 And he made a molten lauer ten cubytes wyde from the one syde to the other rounde aboute, and fyue cubites hye, and a threde of thirtie cubites lōge was f measure rounde aboute: and aboute the same lauer that was ten cubites wyde, there wente knoppes on the edge therof rounde aboute the lauer. Two rowes were there of the knoppes molten with the lauer.

And it stode vpon twolue bullockes, wherof thre were turned towarde the north, thre towarde the west, thre towarde the south, and thre towarde the east, and the lauer aboute thereon, so that all their hynder partes were within vnder the lauer: wherof the thickeesse was an handbreth: and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a floured rose, and it conteyned two thousande *Battes.

And he made ten brasen seates, every one foure cubites longe and brode, and thre cubites hye. The seate was made so, that it had sydes betwene the ledges. And on the sydes betwene the ledges there were lyons, bullockes and Cherubins. And on f ledges which were aboute and beneath the lyons and bullockes, were the sydes made so, that they were set downwardes. And euery stole had foure brasen wheles with brasen axeltrees. And vpon the foure corners there were proppes molten, euery one ouer agaynst another, vnder set vnto the kettell.

30 And the soket vpon the stole was a cubyte hye and rounde, a cubyte and an halfe wyde: and on the soket there were knoppes in folde, which were foure squared t not rounde. The foure wheles stode beneath by the sydes, t the axeltrees of the wheles were harde on f seate. Euery whele was a cubite and a halfe hye, and they were wheles like cart wheles. And their axeltrees, spokes, nales, t shaftes were all molten. And the foure proppes vpon the foure corners of euery seate were harde on the seate.

And on the soket aboute vpon the seate a cubyte and an halfe rounde aboute, there were ledges and sydes harde on the seate. And on the plat of the same sydes and ledges, he caused to carue Cherubins, lyons and palme trees, one by another rounde aboute thereon. After this maner made he ten moltē seates, one maner of measure t widenes was in all.

And he made ten copper kettels, so that one kettell cōteyned fortye Battes, and was foure cubites greate, and vpon euery seate was a kettell. And fyue seates set he on the righte syde of the house, and the other fyue on the lefte syde. But the lauer set he before on the righte hande towarde the south.

And Hiram made pottes also and shouels and basens, t so fynished he all the worke, that kynge Salomon caused to be made in the house of the LORDE: namely f two pilers, and the rounde knoppes aboute vpon the two pilers, and the two wyrtyn ropes to couer the two rounde knoppes vpon the pilers. And the foure hūdreth pomgranates on the two wyrtyn ropes, euer two rowes of pomgranates vnto euery rope, to couer the two rounde knoppes vpon the pilers. And the ten seates, and ten kettels thereon, and the lauer, and twolue bullockes vnder f lauer. And the pottes, shouels and basens. And all the ornamentes which Hiram made vnto kynge Salomon for the house of the LORDE, were of pure metall. In the cōuntre by Iordane, caused the kynge them to be molten in thicke earth, betwene Sucoth and Zarthan. And Salomon let all the apperell be vnweyed, because the metall was so moch.

40 Morouer Salomon made all the apperell that belonged vnto the house of the LORDE: namely a golden altare, a golden table that the shewbred laye on, fyue candelstickes on the righte hande, and fyue candelstickes on the lefte (before the quere) of pure golde, with floures, lampes and snoffers of golde therto, flat peces, charges, basens, spones and censours of pure golde. And the hokes of f dores on the insyde of the house in the most holy, and in the dores of the house of the tēple of the LORDE were of golde.

Thus all the worke that kynge Salomon made in f house of the LORDE, was fynished. † And Salomon brought in that his father Dauid had sanctified, of syluer and golde and ornamentes, and layed it amonge the treasures of the house of the LORDE.

The iij. Chapter.

¶ THEN gathered kynge Salomon all þe Elders in Israel together, all the rulers of the trybes and prynces of the fathers amonge the children of Israel, vnto Ierusalem, to brynge vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE, *out of the cite of Dauid, that is Sion. And there resorted vnto kynge Salomon all the men in Israel, at the feast in the moneth Ethanim, that is þe seuenth moneth. And whan all þe Elders of Israel came, the prestes toke the Arke of the LORDE, and broughte it vp, and the Tabernacle of witness, and all the ornaments of the Sanctuary that were in the Tabernacle. This dyd the prestes and the Leuites. And kynge Salomon and all the congregacion of Israel þe were gathered vnto him, wente with him before the Arke, and offred shepe and bullockes, so many, that they coulde not be nombred ner tolde.

So the prestes broughte the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt vnto hir place, euen in to þe Quere of the house in the most holy vnder þe wynges of the Cherubins. For þe Cherubins spred out their wynges in the place where the Arke stode, and couered the Arke and the staues therof from aboue. And the staues were so lōge, that þe knoppes of them were sene from the Sanctuary before þe quere, but on the out syde were they not sene, and they were there vnto this daye.

¶ And in the Arke there was nothinge, but only the two tables of stone, † which Moses had layed therin at Horeb, whan þe LORDE made a couenaunt with the children of Israel, what tyme as they were departed out of the lond of Egypte.

But whan the prestes wente out of the Sanctuary, a cloude fylled the house of the LORDE, so þe prestes coulde not stonde & execute the office for the cloude: for the glory of the LORDE fylled the LORDES house. Then sayde Salomon: † The LORDE sayde, that he wolde dwell in a darke cloude. I haue buylde an house, to be an habitacion vnto the: a seate, þe thou mayest dwell there for euer. And þe kynge turned his face, & blessed all the congregacion of Israel. And all the cōgregacion of Israel stode, & he sayde:

Prayed be the LORDE God of Israel, which promised by his mouth vnto my father Dauid, and by his hāde hath fulfilled it, and sayde: † Sence the daye þe I broughte my people of Israel out of Egypte, haue I chosen no cite amōge all the trybes of Israel, to buylde me an house, that my name might be there. ¶ But Dauid haue I chosen, to be ouer my people of Israel.

And in dede my father Dauid was mynded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel: neuertheles the LORDE sayde vnto my father Dauid: Where as thou wast mynded to buylde an house vnto my name, thou hast done well, that thou art so aduysed. Howbeit thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sonne which shal come out of thy loynes, he shal buylde an house vnto my name. And the LORDE hath perfourmed his worde that he spake: For I am come vp in my father Dauids steade, and syt vpon the seate of Israel, as the LORDE sayde: and haue buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel: and there haue I ordeyned a place for the Arke, wherin is the LORDES couenaunt, which he made with oure fathers, whan he broughte them out of þe lond of Egypte.

And Salomon stode before the altare of the LORDE in the presence of the whole congregacion of Israel, and helde out his handes toward heauen, and sayde: ¶ O LORDE God of Israel, there is no god like the, nether aboue in heauen, ner beneth vpon earth, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for all thy seruantes that walke before þe with all their hert, thou that hast kepte promes with my father Dauid thy seruauant: With thy mouth thou saydest it, and with thy hande hast thou fulfilled it, as it is come to passe this daye. Now LORDE God of Israel make good vnto my father Dauid thy seruauant, that which thou hast promysed him, and sayde:  Thou shalt not wante a man before me to syt vpon the seate of Israel, yf thy childre kepe their waye, so þe they walke before me like as thou hast walked before me. ¶ And whan eny straunger, that is not of thy people of Israel, commeth out of a farre countre for thy names sake (for they shall heare of thy greete name, and of thy mightie hāde, and of thy outstretched arme) and commeth to make his prayer in this house, heare thou him then in heauen, euen in the seate of thy dwellynge, and do all for the which that straunger calleth vpon the, that all the nacions vpon earth maye knowe thy name, and that they maye feare the, as thy people of Israel do: and that they maye knowe, how that this house which I haue buylded, is named after thy name.

Whan thy people go forth to the battayll agaynst their enemyes, the waye that thou shalt sende them ¶ and shall praye vnto the LORDE towarde the waye of the cite which thou hast chosen, and towarde the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name, heare thou then their prayer and petition in heauen, and execute iudgment for them.

in heauen, * from the seate of thy dwellynge, and execute iudgment for them, and be mercifull vnto thy people that haue synned agaynst the, and vnto all their trespasses, wherwith they haue transgressed agaynst the, † and graunte the mercy in the sighte of them which led them awaye presoners, that their enemyes maye be mercifull vnto them: for they are thy people, and thyne enheritaunce, whom thou broughtest out of Egipte, from the yron furnace: that thine eyes maye be open vnto the petition of thy seruauant, and of thy people of Israel, that thou maiest heare them in all thinges for the which they shall call vpon the: ‡ (for thou O LORDE LORDE) hast sundered them out to be an inheritaunce vnto thy selfe, from amonge all the nacions vpon earth, accordinge as thou saydest by Moses thy seruauant, when thou broughtest oure fathers out of Egipte.

§ And whā Salomon had ended all this prayer and petition before the LORDE, he rose vp from the altare of the LORDE, and lefte of from knelynge and holdyng out of handes toward heauen, and stode and blessed all the congregacion of Israel with loude voyce, and sayde: Praisey be the LORDE which hath geuen rest vnto his people, accordinge as he sayde. There hath not one fayled of all his good wordes, which he spake by his seruauant Moses. The LORDE oure God be with vs, as he hath bene with oure fathers, and forsake vs not, nether withdrawe his hande from vs, but bowe oure hertes vnto him, that we maye walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, ordinaunces and lawes, which he commaunded oure fathers. And these wordes wherwith I haue made my petition before the LORDE, come nye vnto the LORDE oure God daye and nighte, that he maye execute iudgment for his seruauant and for his people of Israel, euery one at his tyme: that all nacions vpon earth maye knowe, that the LORDE is God, ¶ that there is none other. And let youre hert be perfecte with the LORDE oure God, to walke in his statutes, and to kepe his commaundementes, as it is this daye.

And the kynge with all Israel his people offred sacrifice before the LORDE. And Salomon offred deed offerynges (which he offred vnto the LORDE) two and twenty thousande oxen, and an hundredre and twenty thousande shepe. So the kynge and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORDE. The same daye dyd the kynge dedicate the myddelmost court, which was before the house of the LORDE: that he mighte there performe the burntofferynges, meatofferynges, and the fat of the deedofferynges: for the brasen altare that stode before ¶ LORDE, was to litle for the burntofferynges, meatofferynges, and for the fat of the deedofferynges.

And at the same tyme made Salomon a solempne feast, and all Israel a greate congregacion with him, from the border of Hemath vnto the ryuer of Egipte, before the LORDE oure God, seuen dayes, and yet seuen dayes, that were fourtene daies. And on the eight daye he let the people go. And they blessed the kynge, and wente vnto their tentes reioysinge and with a mery hert, because of all the good that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid his seruauant, ¶ to his people of Israel.

The ix. Chapter.

AND whan Salomon had fynished ¶ § a buyldinge of the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and all that his desyre and pleasure was to make, ¶ LORDE appeared vnto him the seconde tyme, ¶ euen as he appeared vnto him at Gibeon. And the LORDE sayde vnto him: I haue herde thy prayer and petition, that thou hast made before me, and haue sanctified this house which thou hast buylded, that I maye set my name there for euer: and myne eyes and my hert shalbe there allwaye. And yf thou walke before me (as thy father Dauid walked) with a perfecte and a true hert, so that thou do all that I haue commaunded the, and kepe myne ordinaunces and lawes, then wyll I stablish the seate of thy kyngdome ouer Israel for euer, accordinge as I promysed thy father Dauid, and sayde: ¶ Thou shalt not wante a man from the seate of Israel.

But yf ye turne back from me, ye and youre childre, and kepe not my commaundementes and ordinaunces which I haue layed before you, but go and serue other goddes, and worships them, then wyll I rote Israel out of the londe that I haue geuen them.  And the house that I haue halowed vnto my name, wyll I put awaye from my face. And Israel shall be come a byworde and fabel amōge all nacions, and so shal this hye house: so that euery one þ̄ goeth by, shall be astonyed, and make an hyssynge, and saye: *Wherfore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this londe and to this house? Then shal it be answered: Because they forsoke þ̄ LORDE their God, (which brought their fathers out of the londe of Egipte) and haue receaued other goddes, and worshipped them, and serued them. Therefore hath þ̄ LORDE brought all this euell vpon them.

¶ Now whan the twentye yeares were ended, *wherin Salomon buylded the two houses, the LORDES house and the kynges house, †where vnto Hiram the kyng of Tyre brought Salomō Cedar trees ⁊ Pyne trees, and golde after all his desyre, then gaue kyng Salomon vnto Hiram twentye cities in the countre of Galile. And Hiram departed from Tyre to vyset the cities which Salomon had geuen him, ⁊ they pleased him not, and he sayde: What maner of cities are these (my brother) that thou hast geuē me? And he called them the londe of Cabul vnto this daye. And Hiram sent vnto the kyng, sixe score hundreth weight of Golde. And the same is the summe of the taxe, that kyng Salomon raysted to the buyldinge of the house of the LORDE, and his awne house, ⁊ Millo, and the walles of Ierusalem, and Hasor, and Megiddo, and Gaser.

¶ For Pharaō þ̄ kyng of Egipte came vp, and wāne Gaser, ⁊ brent it with fyre, ⁊ slewe the Cananites þ̄ dwelt in the cite, ⁊ gaue it for a gifte vnto his daughter Salomōs wife. So Salomon buylded Gaser, ⁊ the lower Bethoron, and Baelath and Thamar, in þ̄ wyldernes, in the londe, ⁊ all the cities of the corne houses that Salomon had, and all the cities of the charettes, ⁊ all the cities of the horsmen, and what it pleased him to buylde at Ierusalem, in Libanus, ⁊ in euery countre of his domynion.

And all the remnaunt of the people of the Amorytes, Hethites, Pheresites, Heuites and Iebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, their children which they lefte behynde them in the londe (whom the children of Israel coulde not vtterly destroye) those dyd Salomon make tributaries vnto this daye.

†But of the children of Israel he made no bondmen, but let them be men of warre, and his seruautes, and prynces, and knights, and ouer his charettes and horsmē. And the officers which were ouer Salomons busynesse, were fyue hundreth and fyfity, which ruled the people, and perfourmed the worke.

And Pharaos daughter wente vp from the cite of Dauid, in to hir house †which he had buylded for her. †Then buylded he Millo likewise. And thre tymes in the yeare dyd Salomon offre burntofferynge and deed offerynge vpon the altare †that he had buylded vnto the LORDE, and burnt incense vpon it before the LORDE, and so was the house ended and fynished.

And Salomon made shippes also at Ezeon Geber, which lyeth by Eloth besyde the Reed See shore in þ̄ londe of the Edomites. And Hiram sent his seruautes by shippe, which were shipmen, and had experience of the See, with Salomons seruautes; and they came vnto ††Ophir, and fetched from thence one ⁊ twenty score hundreth weight of golde, and brought it vnto Salomon.

The x. Chapter.

AND whan kyng Salomons fame of the name of the LORDE came to the eares of the †Quene of riche Arabia, she came to proue him with darke sentences. And she came to Ierusalem with a maruelous greate trayne, with camels which bare spyes, and moch golde, and precious stones. And whan she came in to kyng Salomon, she spake vnto him all that was in hir hert. And Salomon tolde her euerythinge, and the kyng had nothinge in secrete, but he tolde it her. But whan the Quene of riche Arabia sawe all the wysdome of Salomon, and the house that he had buylded, and the meates of his table, and the dwellings of his seruautes, ⁊ the offices of his ministers, and their garments, and his butlers and the burntofferynge which he offred in the house of the LORDE, she wondred exceedingly, and coulde no longer refrayne, but sayde vnto the kyng: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behauiour and of thy wysdome.

13 And I wolde not beleue it, tyll I came and sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe hath not bene tolde me.

Thou hast more wysdome and good, the fame is that I haue herde. Happye are thy people and thy seruantes, that allwaie stonde before the, and heare thy wysdome. Prayed be the LORDE thy God, which had soch a pleasure vnto the, that he set the vpon the seate of Israel: because he hath allwaie loued Israel, and hath set the to be kynge, that thou shuldest mantayne iustyce and equyte.

And she gaue the kynge syxe score hundredth weighte of golde, and very moch spyce, and precious stones. There came neuer so moch spyce thither, as the Quene of riche Arabia gaue vnto kynge Salomon. And Hiram shippes, *which caried golde out of Ophir, broughte maruelous moch costly tymber and precious stones from Ophir. And of that costly tymber the kynge caused to make pilers in the house of the LORDE, and in the kynges house, and harpes and Psalteries for the Musicians. There came nomore soch costly tymber, nether was it sene vnto this daye. And kynge Salomon gaue the quene of riche Arabia, all that she desyred and axed, besydes that which he gaue her of a frye hande. And she returned, and departed in to hir lande with hir seruantes.

The golde that came to Salomon in one yere, was nyne and thyrtye score hundredth weighte, besydes that which came of chapmen, marchauntes and Apotecaries, and of the nexte kynges, and of the mightie men in the londe. And kynge Salomon caused to make two hundredth speares of beaten golde, sixe hundredth peces of golde put he to euery speare: and thre hundredth shyldes of the best golde, euen thre pounde of golde vpon euery shyld. And the kynge put them in the house of the wode of Libanus.

14 And the kynge made a greate seate of Yuery, and ouerlayed it with the most precious golde. And the seate had sixe steppes, and the heade of the seate was roude behynde. And there were two postes to leane vpon both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode vpon the leanyng postes, and twolue lyons stode vpon the sixe steppes on both the sydes. Soch one hath not bene made in eny kyngdome. All kynge Salomons drynkyng vessels were of golde, and all the vessels in the house of the wode of Libanus were of pure golde also: for syluer was not regarded in Salomons tyme. For the kynges Seeshippe the sayled vpon the See with the shippe of Hiram, came once in thre yere, and broughte golde, syluer, Yuery, Apes, and Pecockes.

Thus was kynge Salomon greater in riches and wysdome, then all the kynges vpon earth: And all the worlde desyred to se Salomon, that they mighte heare the wysdome which God gaue him in his hert. And they broughte him yearly euery man his present, vessels of syluer and golde, rayment and harnesse, spyces, horses and Mules. And Salomon broughte charettes and horsmen together, so that he had a thousande and foure hundredth charettes, and twolue thousande horsmen: and those he put in the charet cities, and with the kynge at Ierusalem.

And the kynge broughte it to passe, that there was as moch syluer at Ierusalem as stones: and as many Ceders as there were wyld figge trees in the valleys. And Salomons horses were broughte out of Egipte, and fro Keua: for the kynges marchauntes fetched them from Keua for money. And a charet came vp out of Egipte for sixe hundredth Sycles of Syluer, and an horse for an hundredth and fyfitye. Thus were they brought also vnto all the kynges of the Hethites and to the kynges of Siria by their handes.

The xi. Chapter.

BUT kynge Salomon loued many outlandish wemen, the Pharaos daughter, and wemen of Moab, of Ammon, of Edom, of Sidon, and of Heth, euen of those nacions, that the LORDE spake of vnto the children of Israel: "Go not ye vnto them, and let not them come vnto you: they shal surely bowe youre hertes after their goddes: Vnto these dyd Salomon encline with affection. And he had seven hundredth wemen to wyues, and thre hundredth concubynes, and his wyues turned his hert asyde. And when he was now olde, his wyues bowed his hert after strange goddes, so that his hert was not whole with the LORDE his God, as was the hert of Dauid his father.

So Salomon walked after Astaroth the god of the Sidonians, and after Malcom the abomination of the Ammonites. And Salomon dyd ȝ which displeased the LORDE, and folowed not ȝ LORDE to ȝ vttemost as dyd his father Dauid. Thē buylded Salomō an hie place vnto Chamos the abhominaciō of ȝ Moabites (vpon the mount that lyeth before Ierusalem) and vnto Moloch the abhominacion of the Ammonites.

B Thus dyd Salomon for all his outlādish wyues, which brent incense, and offred vnto their goddesses. But the LORDE was wroth at Salomon, because his hert was turned asyde from ȝ LORDE God of Israel, * which had two tymes appeared vnto him, and cōmaunded him, that he shulde not walke after other goddesses: and yet kepthe he not that the LORDE commaunded him. Therefore sayde the LORDE vnto Salomon: For so moch as this is done with the, and hast not kepthe my couenaunt and myne ordinaunces, which I commaunded the, therefore wyll I also plucke thy kyngdome from the, and geue it vnto thy seruauit: Neuertheles in thy tyme will I not do it, for thy father Dauids sake, but from the hande of thy sonne wyl I plucke it. Howbeit I wyl not plucke ȝ kyngdome cleane awaye. One trybe wyll I geue vnto thy sonne, for Dauid my seruantes sake, and for Ierusalems sake which I haue chosen.

C And the LORDE raysted vp an aduersary vnto Salomon, euen Hadad the Edomite of the kynges sede, which was in Edom. For whan Dauid was in Edom, and Ioab the chefe captayne wente vp to bury the slayne, he smote all the males in Edom. (For Ioab remayned there sixe monethes and all Israel, tyll he had roted out all ȝ males that were in Edom.) Then fled Hadad, and certayne men of ȝ Moabites with him, of his fathers seruantes. As for Hadad, he was a yonge man.

And they gat them vp fro Madian, and came vnto Paran, and toke men with them out of Paran, and came in to Egipte vnto Pharaō the kyng of Egipte: which gaue him an house and certayne vytales appoynted, ȝ gaue him a cōntre. And Adad founde greate fauoure in the sighte of Pharaō, so that he gaue him to wife euen the sister of his owne wife Thaphenes the Quene. And Thaphenes sister bare him Genubath his sonne, and Thaphenes norished him vp in Pharaos house, in so moch that Genubath was in Pharaos house amonge Pharaos children.

Now whā Hadad herde in Egipte, that Dauid was fallē on slepe with his fathers, and ȝ Ioab the chefe captayne was deed, he sayde vnto Pharaō: Let me go in to my cōntre. Pharaō sayde vnto him: What lackest thou with me, that thou wilt go in to thy cōntre? He sayde: Nothyng, but yet let me go.

God raysted him vp another aduersary also, one Reson the sonne of El Iada, which fled from his lorde Hadad Eser kyng of Zeba, and gathered men agaynst him, and was a captayne of the men of warre whan Dauid slewe them: and they wente vnto Damascus and dwelt there, and reigned at Damascus, and he was Israels aduersary as lōge as Salomon lyued. This is the harme ȝ Hadad suffred: therefore had he euell will at Israel, and was kyngye ouer Siria.

Morouer Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat an Ephraite Salomons seruauit (and his mothers name was Zeruga, a wedowe) lifte vp his hande also agaynst the kyngye. And this is the cause wherfore he lifte vp his hande agaynst the kyngye: Whan Salomon buylded Millo, he shut vp a gappe in the cite of Dauid his father. And Ieroboam was a mā of armes. And whan Salomon sawe that it was a mete yonge man, he set him ouer all the burthens of the house of Ioseph.

But at the same tyme it fortunēd, that Ieroboam wente out from Ierusalem, and the prophet Ahias of Silo founde him by the waye, and he had a new cloke vpon him, and they two were alone in the felde. And Ahia toke holde of the new cloke ȝ he had on, and rente the same in to twelue peces, and sayde vnto Ieroboam: Take thou ten peces vnto the.

For thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Beholde, euen thus wyll I rente the kyngdome from the hande of Salomō, and wyll geue the ten trybes. One trybe shall he haue for my seruauit Dauids sake, and because of the cyte of Ierusalem, ȝ which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel: for they haue forsaken me, and worshipped Astaroth the god of the Sidonians, Chamos the god of the Moabites, and Malcō the god of the children of Ammon, and haue not walked in my wayes, to fulfill my pleasure, myne ordinaunces, and lawes, as dyd Dauid his father.

* 3 Re. 3. a. and 9. a.

† 2 Par. 7. c.

Notwithstandynge I wyl not take the whole kyngdome from out of his hande, but wyl make him a prynce as longe as he lyueth for my seruauit Dauids sake, whom I dyd chose, which kepte my commaundementes & ordinaunces. * From out of the hande of his sonne wyl I take the kyngdome, and wyl geue ten trybes vnto the, and one vnto his sonne,[†] that Dauid my seruauit maye alwaye haue a lanterne before me in the cite of Ierusalem, which I haue chosen, that I maye set my name there. Therefore wyl I take the now, to raygne ouer all that thine hert desyreth, and thou shalt be kynge ouer Israel. Yf thou folowe now all that I shall commaunde the, and walke in my wayes, and fulfill my pleasure to kepe myne ordinaunces and commaundementes, as dyd my seruauit Dauid, then wyl I be with the, and buylde the a sure house, as I buylde vnto Dauid, and wyl geue Israel vnto the and therewith wyl I subdue the sede of Dauid, but not for euermore. But Salomon soughte to kyll Ieroboam. Then Ieroboam gat him vp, and fled in to Egipte to Sisak the kynge of Egipte, and remayned in Egipte, tyll Salomon dyed.

What more there is to saye of Salomon, and all that he dyd, and his wysdome, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of Salomon. The tyme that Salomon was kynge at Ierusalem ouer all Israel, is fortye yere. And Salomon fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buryed in the cite of Dauid his father, and Roboam his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xij. Chapter.

AND Roboam wete vnto Sichem, for all Israel was come to Sichem to make him kynge. And whan Ieroboam & sonne of Nebat herde that, while he was yet in Egipte (& whither he was fled for Salomon) he came agayne out of Egipte. And they sent for him, and called him. And Ieroboam with all the congregation of Israel came and spake to Roboam, and sayde: Thy father made oure yock to harde: therefore make thou now the harde bondage and the sore yock lighter, and we wyl submytte oure selues vnto the. He sayde vnto them: Go youre waye vnto the thirde daye, and then come to me agayne. And the people wete their waye.

And Roboam the kynge helde a counsell with the Elders that stode before Salomō his father whyle he lyued, & he sayde: What is youre counsell, that we maye geue this people an answer? They sayde vnto him: Yf thou do this people a pleasure to daye, and folowe their mynde, and heare them, and geue them good wordes, then shal they be obedient vnto the as longe as thou liuest. Neuertheles he forsoke the counsell that & Elders had geuen him, and axed counsell at the yonge men which were growne vp with him, and stode before him.

And he sayde vnto them: What is youre counsell that we maye answer this people which haue sayde vnto me: Make the yock lighter, that thy father hath layed vpō vs. And the yonge men that were growne vp with him, sayde vnto him: Where as the people haue sayde vnto the: Thy father hath made oure yock to sore, make thou it easier for vs, Thus shalt thou saye vnto them: My litle fynger shall be thicker then my fathers loynes. Now, my father layed a sore yock vpon you, but I wyl yet laye more theron: My father correcte you with scourges, but I wyl nourture you with scorpions.

So vpon the thyrde daye came Ieroboam with all the people vnto Roboam, as & kynge had appoynted and saide, come to me agayne on the thyrde daye. And the kynge gaue the people an harde rough answer, and forsoke the coucell that the Elders had geuen him, and talked with them after the counsell of the yonge men, and sayde: My father made youre yock sore, but I wyl make it yet sorer vpon you. My father correcte you with scourges, but I wil nourture you with scorpions. Thus the kynge folowed not the peoples mynde, for he was turned so fro the LORDE, that he mighte stablish his worde & which he spake by Ahias of Silo vnto Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat.

But whan all Israel sawe that the kynge wolde not heare them, the people gaue & kynge an answer and sayde: ¶ What porcion haue we then in Dauid or inheritance in the sonne of Isai? Get the to thy tentes O Israel. Loke thou now to thy house thou Dauid. So Israel wente vnto their tentes. As for Roboam, he reigned but ouer & children of Israel, which dwelt in the cities of Iuda. And whan kynge Roboam sent thither Adoram the rentgatherer, all Israel stoned him to death. But kyng Roboam strengthened himselfe, and gat him vp in to a charet, to fle vnto Ierusalem. Thus departed Israel from the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

Now whan all Israel herde, that Ieroboam was come againe, they sent for to call him to the whole congregacion, and made him kyng ouer all Israel. And no man folowed the house of Dauid, saue only the tribe of Iuda.

* And whan Roboam came to Ierusalem, all the house of Iuda and the trybe of Ben Iamin (euen an hundreth and foure score thousande chosen men of armes) gathered themselves together to fight against ¶ house of Israel, ¶ to brynge the kyngdome agayne vnto Roboam ¶ sonne of Salomō.

¶ But the worde of God came to Semeia the man of God, and sayde: Speake thou to Roboam the sonne of Salomon kyng of Iuda, and to all ¶ house of Iuda and Ben Iamin, and to the other people, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shall not go vp and fighte agaynst youre brethren the children of Israel. Let euery man go home agayne, for this is my dede. And they herkened vnto the worde of the LORDE, and turned back, to go their waye, as the LORDE sayde. But Roboam buylded Sichem vpon mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein, and departed thence, and buylded ¶ Penuel.

Ieroboā thoughte in his hert: The kingdome shall fall agayne now vnto the house of Dauid, yf this people go vp to offe in the LORDES house at Ierusalem, and so shall the hert of this people turne to their lorde Roboam kyng of Iuda, and thē shal they slaye me, and fall agayne to Roboam kyng of Iuda. And the kyng helde a counsell: and made two golden calues, and sayde vnto them: It is to moch for you to go to Ierusalē: beholde, ¶ there is thy God (O Israel) which broughte ¶ out of Egipte. And the one set he at Bethel, ¶ the other in Dan. And this dede turned to synne, for the people wente before the one vnto Dan.

¶ He made an house also in the hye places, ¶ and made prestes of the smallest in the people, which were not of the childrē of Leui. And vpon the fiftene daye of the eighte moneth he made an holy daye, like as the solempe feast in Iuda, and offered vpon the altare. Thus dyd he at Bethel, in doyng sacrifice vnto the calues which he had made, and at Bethel he ordeyned the prestes of the hye places that he had made: and offred vpon the altar (which he had made) at Bethel, the fiftene daye of the eight moneth, which he inuented of his owne hert. And he made the children of Israel an holy daye, ¶ wente vp to the altare to burne incense.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND beholde, there came a mā of God ¶ from Iuda (thorow the worde of the LORDE) vnto Bethel, and Ieroboam stode by the altar to burne incense. And he cried agaynst the altare thorow the worde of the LORDE, and sayde: O altar, altar, thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, there shal be borne vnto ¶ house of Dauid a sonne, Iosias by name ¶ which on the shal offer the prestes of the hye places, that burne incense vpon the, and mens bones shal he burne on the. And he gaue a wonder token the same daye, and sayde: This is the token, that the LORDE hath spoken it, beholde, the altar shall ryue, and the aszshes, that are thereon, shall be poured out.

But whan the kyng herde the worde of the man of God, that cried agaynst the altare at Bethel, he stretched out his hande by ¶ altare, and sayde: Laye hondes on him. And his hande that he stretched out, wythered, and he coulde not drawe it vnto him agayne. And ¶ altare roue, and the aszshes were poured out from the altare, accordinge to the wonder token that the man of God had geuen by the worde of the LORDE.

And the kyng answered, and sayde vnto the man of God:  O praye the face of the LORDE thy God, and make intercession for me, that my hande maie be restored vnto me agayne. Then prayed the man of God vnto the face of the LORDE. And the kynges hande was restored him agayne, and became as it was afore. And the kyng sayde vnto the man of God: Come home with me, and dyne, and I wil geue the a rewarde.

But the man of God sayde vnto the kyng: Yf thou geuest me halfe thy house, I wil not come with the: for in this place wyl I nether eate bred, ner drynke water. For thus am I commaunded, and thus is it sayde vnto me by the worde of the LORDE: Thou shalt eate no bred, and drynke no water, nether returne the waye that thou wentest.

C And he departed another waye, and returned not agayne the waye that he came to Bethel. But at Bethel there dwelt an olde prophet vnto whō his sonnes came, & tolde him all the workes y^e the mā of God had done that daye at Bethel, & the wordes that he had spoken vnto the kynge. And their father sayde vnto them: Which waye is he gone? And his sonnes shewed him the waye that the man of God was gone: which came from Iuda. He sayde vnto his sonnes: Saddell me the asse. And whā they had saddled him the asse, he rode theron, and wente after the man of God, and founde him syttinge vnder an Oke tre, and sayde vnto him: Art thou the man of God that came from Iuda? He sayde: Yee.

B He sayde vnto him: Come home with me, and eate bred. He sayde: I maye not turne backe with the, and come with the. Nether wyl I eate bred, ner drynke water with the in this place: for it is spoken vnto me by the worde of the LORDE: Thou shalt nether eate bred there, ner yet drynke water, nether shalt thou go agayne by the waye which thou wentest. He sayde vnto him: I myselfe am a prophet as well as thou, and an angell hath spoken with me by y^e worde of the LORDE, and saide: Bringe him againe with the, that he maye eate bred, and drynke water. But he lyed vnto him, and broughte him agayne, so that he ate bred, and dranke water in his house.

E And when they sat at the table, the worde of the LORDE came to the prophet that had broughte him agayne, and cryed vnto the man which was come frō Iuda, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because thou hast bene dishobedient vnto the mouth of y^e LORDE, and hast not kepte the commaundement that the LORDE thy God commaunded the, but hast turned backe, and hast eaten bred, and dronke water in y^e place, wherof he saide vnto the: Thou shalt nether eate bred ner drynke water, therefore shall not thy body come in to thy fathers graue.

And when he had eaten bred and drunkē the asse was saddled vnto the prophet whom he had brought agayne. * And whā he was gone, a lyon founde him by the waye, & slewe him, and his body was cast in y^e waye. And the asse stode by him, and the lyon stode by the body. And whā men wente by, they sawe the body cast in the waye, and the lyon stondynge besyde the body, and came and tolde it in the cite, where the olde prophet dwelt.

F When the prophet which had broughte him agayne, herde that, he sayde: It is the man of God, that hath bene dishobediēt vnto the mouth of the LORDE, therefore hath y^e LORDE delyuered him vnto the Lyon, which hath rente him, and slayne him, acordinge to the worde that the LORDE spake vnto him. And he sayde vnto his sonnes: Saddell me the asse. And when they had saddled it, he wente, and founde his body cast in the waie and the asse and the lyon stondynge beside y^e body. The lyon had eatē nothings of the body, nether had he torne the asse. Then toke the prophet the deed coarse of the man of God, and layed it vpō the asse, and broughte it agayne in to the cite of the olde prophet, to mourne, and to burye him.

G And he layed the coarse in his awne graue, and they mourned for him: Alas my brother. And when they had buried him, he saide vnto his sonnes: When I dye, burye me in the graue where the mā of God is buried, and laye my bones besyde his bones. † For it shal come to passe, that he cried (thorow the worde of the LORDE) against Bethel, and agaynst all y^e houses of the hye places, which are in the cities of Samaria.

Howbeit after this acte dyd not Ieroboā turne from his euell waye, but was peruerted, and made prestes of the hye places, euē of the smallest of the people: Loke whom it pleased him, his handes he fylled, & he was prest of the hye places. And this turned to synne vnto the house of Ieroboā, to destroye him and to brynge him to naughte.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AT the same tyme was Abia the sonne of Ieroboam sicke, and Ieroboam saide vnto his wyfe: Get the vp, and disguise the, so that no man perceaue that thou art Ieroboams wyfe, and go vnto Silo: beholde, there is the prophet Ahias, * which promysed me y^e I shulde be kynge ouer this people: and take with the ten loaves of bred and cakes, and a cuppe with hony, ⁊ go to him, that he maye tell the how it shal go with the childe. And Ieroboams wyfe did so, and gat hir vp, and wente vnto Silo, and came in to the house of Ahias. But Ahias coulede not se, for his eyes were dymme for age. Neuerthelesse the LORDE sayde vnto Ahias: Beholde, Ieroboams wyfe commeth, to axe a matter at the for hir sonne, for he is sycke. Speake thou therfore vnto her thus ⁊ thus. Now whan she came in, she shewed herselfe straunge. But whan Ahias herde the noyse of hir fete goynge in at the dore, he saide: Come in thou wyfe of Ieroboā. Why shewest thou thy selfe so straunge? I am sent vnto ⁊ an harde messaunger.

33 Go thy waye and tell Ieroboam: Thus sayeth ⁊ LORDE God of Israel: "I haue exalted the from amonge the people, and set the to be prynce ouer my people of Israel, and haue rente the kyngdome from the house of Dauid, and geuen it the. But thou hast not bene as my seruauant Dauid, which kepte my commaundemētes, and walked after me with all his hert, so that he did only ⁊ thinge that was righte in my sighte: and thou hast done worse then all they that haue bene before the: thou hast gone thy waye and made the other goddes, and molten ymages, to prouoke me vnto wrath, and hast cast me behynde thy backe.

Beholde therefore, I wil brynge mysfortune vpon the house of Ieroboam, and wyl rote out from Ieroboam euē him that maketh water agaynst the wall, the presoner and forsaken in Israel: and the posterite of ⁊ house of Ieroboam wyll I swepe out, as donge is swepte out, tyll he be cleane broughte to naught. * He that dieth (of Ieroboam) in the cite, the dogges shal eate him vp. But him ⁊ dyeth in the felde, shall the foules of the aire eat vp, for the LORDE hath spoken it.

Ⓒ Get the vp therfore, and go home, ⁊ whan thy fete enter in to ⁊ cite, the childe shal dye. And all Israel shal bewayle him, and burye him. For he onely of Ieroboam shal come to the graue, because there is some good founde in him before the LORDE God of Israel, in Ieroboams house. † But the LORDE shall rayse him vp a kyng, which shal rote out ⁊ house of Ieroboam in that daie. And what is it, ⁊ is now in hande all ready? And the LORDE shal smyte Israel, like as a rede is moued in the water: ⁊ shal rote out Israel from this good londe, that he gaue vnto their fathers, ⁊ shal scater them beyonde the water, because they haue made their groues to prouoke the LORDE vnto wrath. And Israel shall be geuen ouer because of the synne of Ieroboam, which hath synned him selfe, ⁊ made Israel to synne.

And Ieroboams wife gat her vp, wente hir waye, ⁊ came vnto Thirza. And whan she came vpō the threshold of the house, ⁊ childe dyed, ⁊ they buried him, ⁊ all Israel made lamentacion for him, † accordinge to ⁊ worde of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruauant Ahia ⁊ prophet. § What more there is to saye of Ieroboam, how he foughte ⁊ raigned, beholde, it is writen in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. The tyme that Ieroboam raigned, was two ⁊ twente yere. And he slepte with his fathers. And Nadab his sonne was kyng in his steade.

Roboam ⁊ sonne of Salomon was kyng in Iuda. ¶ One and forty yere olde was Roboam whā he was made kyng, ⁊ seuentene yere raigned he at Ierusalem, in the cite ⁊ the LORDE had chosen out of all ⁊ trybes of Israel, to set his name there. His mothers name was Naema an Ammonitisse. And Iuda dyd ⁊ which displeased the LORDE, ⁊ prouoked him to indignacion more thē all ⁊ their fathers had done with their synnes which they dyd: for they likewise buylded them hye places, pilers, and groues vpō euery hye hill, and amonge all grene trees. There were whoremōgers also, ⁊ they dyd all ⁊ abhominaciōs of ⁊ Heythē, whom ⁊ LORDE droue out before the children of Israel.

And Abia slepte with his fathers, and they buried him in the cite of Dauid. And Asa his sonne was kyng in his steade. ¶ In † twentyeth yere of kyng Ieroboam ouer Israel, was Asa kyng in Iuda, and reigned one & fortye yere at Ierusalem. His graundmothers name was Maecha the daughter of Abisalom. And Asa dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as dyd his father Dauid. And he remoued † † whoremongers out of the londe, and put downe all the Idols that his fathers had made.  He put his mother from the mynistracion, that she had made vnto Miplezeth in † groue. And there was warre betwene Asa & Baesa the kyng of Israel, as longe as they lyued.

Baesa the kyng of Israel wente vp agaynst Iuda, and buylded Rama, † that no man shulde go out and in of Asas syde the kyng of Iuda. Then toke Asa all the syluer and golde that was lefte in the treasure of the house of the LORDE, and in the treasure of the kynges house, and delyuered it in to his seruantes handes, & sent it vnto † Benadab the sonne of Tabrimon the sonne of Hesion kyng of Siria, which dwelt at Damascon, and let saye vnto him: There is a couenaunt betwene me and the, and betwene my father and thy father: therfore sende I the a present of syluer and golde, that thou shuldest breake the couenaunt which thou hast with Baesa the kyng of Israel, that he maye departe fro me.

Benadab agreed vnto kyng Asa, and sent his captaynes agaynst the cities of Israel, and smote Iion and Dan, & Abel Beth Maecha, and all Cineroth with the whole londe of Nephtali. Whā Baesa herde that, he left of from buyldinge Rama, and wente agayne vnto Thirza.

Kyng Asa caused it be proclamed in all Iuda: Here be no man excepte. And they toke awaye the stones and tymber from Rama, wherwith Baesa had buylded. And kyng Asa buylded Geba Ben Iamin & Mispa therewith.

Howbeit Baesa the sonne of Ahia of the house of Isachar conspired agaynst him, & smote him at Gibbethon, which was the Philistynes: for Nadab and all Israel layde sege to Gibbethon. In y one and thirtieth yeare of Asa kynge of Iuda, was Amri kynge ouer Israel twolue yeares, ⁊ raigned at Thirza sixe yeares. He boughte the mount of Samaria of Semer for two hundredth weight of syluer, ⁊ buylded vpon the mount, and called the cite which he buylded, after y name of Semer y owner of y mount of Samaria. And he thoughte it but a small matter to walke in the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat: * and toke Iesabel the daughter of Eth Baal kynge of Sidon to wife, and wente and serued Baal, and worshiped him. And vnto Baal he set vp an altare in Baals house, which he buylded him in Samaria, and made a groue: so that Achab dyd more to prouoke the God of Israel vnto wrath, then all the kynges y were before him in Israel.

At y same tyme dyd Hiel of Bethel buylde Iericho: † It cost him his first sonne Abiram, y he layed y foundation: ⁊ his yongest sonne Segub, y he set vp the portes: Acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, which he spake by Iosua the sonne of Nun.

And the rauē broughte him bred and flesh in the mornynge and in the euenynge, and he dranke of the ryuer.

And it fortunated after certayne dayes, that the riuer was dried vp: for there was no rayne in the lōde. Then came y worde of y LORDE vnto him, and sayde: § Get y vp, and go vnto Sarepta, which lieth by Sidō: for there haue I commaunded a wedowe to make prouysion for the.

And he gat him vp, and wente vnto Sarepta. And whan he came to the gate of y cite, beholde, the wedowe was there, and gathered stickes. And he called her, and sayde: Fetch me a litle water in a vessell, y I maye drinke. And as she was goinge to fetch it, he cried vnto her, ⁊ sayde: Brynge me a morsell of bred also in thine hande. She sayde: As truly as the LORDE thy God lyueth, I haue no bred, but an handfull of flour in a pitcher, ⁊ a curtesy oyle in a cruse: and beholde, I haue gathered vp one or two stickes, ⁊ wyll go and prepare it for me and my sonne, that we maye eate and dye.

Elias sayde vnto her: Feare not, go thy waye, ⁊ do as thou hast sayde: yet make me first a morsell of bred therof, ⁊ brynge it me forth: ⁊ afterwarde shalt thou make it for y ⁊ thy sonne. As truly as the LORDE thy God lyueth, there is no people ner kingdome, but my lorde hath sent thither to seke the. And whan they sayde: He is not here, he toke an oath of the same kyngdome and nacion, that they had not founde the. And now thou sayest: Go tell thy lorde: beholde, Elias is here. Now whan I were gone from the, the sprete of the LORDE shulde take ȝ awaye, I cannot tell whither: and yf I then came and tolde Achab, and founde the not, he shulde slaye me: But thy seruauit feareth the LORDE from his youth vp. Hath it not bene tolde my lorde what I dyd, whan Iesabel slewe the prophetes of the LORDE, how that I hyd an hundreth of the LORDES prophetes, here fiftye, and there fiftye in the caues, and prouyded for them with bred and water? And thou sayest now: Go thy waye, tell thy lorde: Elias is here, that he maye slaye me. Elias saide: As truly as ȝ LORDE Zebaoth lyueth, before whom I stōde, I wil shewe my selfe vnto him this daye. Then wete Abdia to mete Achab, ȝ tolde him. And Achab wete for to mete Elias.

And whan Achab sawe Elias, Achab sayde vnto him: Art thou he that troublest Israel? He sayde: I trouble not Israel, †but it is thou and thy fathers house, because ye haue forsaken the commaundementes of the LORDE, and walke after Baal. Go to, sende forth now, and gather me all Israel together vnto mount Carmell, and the foure hundreth and fiftye prophetes of Baal, and the foure hundreth prophetes of ȝ groue, which eate of Iesabels table. So Achab sent vnto all the children of Israel, ȝ gathered the prophetes together vnto mount Carmell.

Then stepte Elias vnto all the people, ȝ sayde: How longe halte ye on both ȝ sydes? Yf the LORDE be God, thē walke after him: but yf Baal be he, thē folowe him. And the people gaue him no answer. Thē sayde Elias vnto the people: I onely am lefte a prophet of ȝ LORDE: but Baals prophetes are foure C. and fiftie mē. Geue vs now two bullockes, ȝ let them chose one bullocke, ȝ heve him in peces, ȝ laye him vpō the wod, ȝ put no fyre thereon: so wil I take ȝ other bullock, τ laye him vpō the wod, τ put no fyre theron also: call ye then vpō the name of youre god, τ I wil call vpō the name of the LORDE: loke which God now answereth with fyre, let the same be God. And all the people answered τ sayde: That is righte. And Elias sayde vnto Baals prophetes: Chose ye one bullock, and do ye it first (for ye are many) and call ye vpon the name of youre god, τ laye no fyre theron.

D And they toke the bullock which he gaue them, τ prepared it, τ called vpon the name of Baal from the mornynge vntyll the noone daye, and sayde: O Baal heare vs. But there was nether voyce ner answer. And they hopped aboute the altare, as their vse was to do. Now whan it was noone daye, Elias mocked them, and sayde: Crye loude. For he is a god, peradventure he is musynge, or hath somewhat to do, or is gone some iourneye, or haplye he slepeth, so that he wolde be waked vp. And they cried loude, and prouoked the selues with knyues τ botkens, (as their maner was) tyll \mathfrak{f} bloude folowed. But whan \mathfrak{f} noone daye was past, they prophecied vntyll the tyme that the meatofferynge shulde be offered, τ there was nether voyce ner answer, ner one to regarde them.

Then sayde Elias vnto all the people: Come hither all ye people vnto me. And whan all \mathfrak{f} people came to him, he repayed \mathfrak{f} *altare of the LORDE \mathfrak{f} was broken, τ \dagger toke twelue stones accordinge to the nombre of \mathfrak{f} trybes of the childre of Iacob (vnto whom the worde of the LORDE spake, and sayde: \dagger Thy name shal be Israel) and of \mathfrak{f} stones he buylded an altare in the name of the LORDE, τ made a pytt rounde aboute the altare, like two forowes in the corne londe, τ prepared the wod, τ hewed \mathfrak{f} bullock in peeces, and layed him vpon JE the wod, τ sayde: Fetch foure pitchers full of water, and poured it vpō the burntofferynge, and vpon the wod. And he sayde: Do it yet once. And they dyd it once agayne. And he sayde: Do it \mathfrak{f} thirde tyme. And they dyd it the thirde tyme. And \mathfrak{f} water ranne aboute the altare, and \mathfrak{f} pytt was full of water also.

And whan the tyme was to offer \mathfrak{f} meatofferynge, Elias stepte forth, and sayde: O LORDE God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Israel, let it be knowne this daye, that thou art God in Israel, and I thy seruauent, and that I haue done all this accordinge vnto thy worde. Heare me O LORDE, O heare me, \mathfrak{f} this people maye knowe, how that thou art the LORDE God, that thou mayest afterwarde turne their hertes. \mathfrak{f} Then fell downe the fyre of the LORDE, and consumed the burntofferynge, the wodde, the stones and the earth, and licked vp the water that was in the pytt. Whan all the people sawe that, they fell vpon their faces, and sayde: The LORDE is God, \mathfrak{f} LORDE is God. Elias sayde vnto them: \mathfrak{f} Laye handes vpon Baals prophetes, \mathfrak{f} none of them escape. And they toke them. And Elias broughte them downe vnto \mathfrak{f} broke Cyson, τ slewe thē there.

And Elias sayde vnto Achab: Go vp, eate τ drynke, for it soundeth as though it wolde rayne sore. And whan Achab wēte vp to eate τ drinke, Elias ascēded vp to the toppe of Carmel, τ bowed him selfe downe to the earth, τ put his heade betwene his knees, τ sayde vnto his lad: Go vp, and loke towarde the See. He wente vp τ looked, τ sayde: There is nothinge. He sayde: Go agayne seuen tymes. And at the seueñtyme he sayde: Beholde, there goeth vp a litle cloude out of the see, like a mans hande. He sayde: Go vp, and saie vnto Achab: Bynde thy charet, τ go downe, \mathfrak{f} the rayne ouertake the not. And or a mā coulde turne him, the heauen was blacke with cloudes τ wynde, τ there came a greate rayne. But Achab rode his waie, τ departed vnto Iesrael. And the hāde of \mathfrak{f} LORDE came vpō Elias, and he gyrded his loynes, τ ranne before Achab, tyll he came vnto Iesrael.

The xix. Chapter.

AND Achab tolde Iesabel all \mathfrak{f} Elias had JE done, τ how he had slayne all Baals prophetes with the swerde. Thē sent Iesabel a messaunger vnto Elias, sayenge: The goddes do this τ that vnto me, yf I tomorow aboute this tyme, make not thy soule as one of these. Then was he afraied, τ gat him vp, τ wente where he wolde, τ came vnto Berseba in Iuda, and lefte his lad there. But he him selfe wente a daies iourney in to \mathfrak{f} wyldernes, τ came in, τ sat him downe vnder a Iuniper tre, τ wyszshed vnto his soule \mathfrak{f} he mighte dye, τ sayde: It is now ynough LORDE, take my soule, for I am no better then my

And beholde, f angell touched him, & sayde vnto him: Stonde vp, and eate. And he lokod aboute him, & beholde, at his heade there was a bred baken on the coles, & a cruse with water. And whan he had eaten and dronke, he layed him downe agayne to slepe.

33 And f angell of the LORDE, came agayne the seconde tyme, & touched him, & sayde: Stonde vp, and eate, for thou hast a greate waye to go. And he arose, and ate and drake, and wente on thorow the strength of that meate *fortye dayes and fortye nightes, euē vnto Horeb f mount of God: and there he came to a caue, and abode there allnighte. And beholde the worde of the LORDE came to him, and sayde vnto him: What doest thou here Elias? He sayde: I haue bene zelous for the LORDE God Zebaoth: for the children of Israel haue forsaken thy couenaunt, and broken downe thine altares, and slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, and I am lefte onely, & they seke to take awaye my life. He sayde: Go forth, and stonde vpon the mount before the LORDE. And beholde, the LORDE wēte ouer: and a greate mightie wynde, which rouse the mountaynes, and brake the harde stones, came before the LORDE, but the LORDE was not in the wynde. After the wynde came there an earthquake, but the LORDE was not in the earthquake.

C And after the earth quake there came a fyre, but the LORDE was not in the fyre. And after the fyre came there a styll softe hyssinge. Whan Elias herde that, he couered his face with his cloke, and wente forth, and stode in the dore of the caue. And beholde, there came a voyce vnto him, and sayde: What hast thou here to do Elias?

He sayde: I haue bene zelous for the LORDE God Zebaoth: for the children of Israel haue forsake thy couenaunt, broken downe thine altares, slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, & I onely am lefte, and they seke to take awaye my life. But the LORDE sayde vnto him: Go thy waye agayne thorow the wyldernes vnto Damascon, & go in, & t anyonte Hasael kyng of Siria, & Iehu the sonne of Nimsi kyng of Israel, & Eliseus f sonne of Saphat of Abel Mehola to be prophet in thy steade. And it shal come to passe, f , who so escapeth the swerde of Hasael, Iehu shal slaye him, & who so escapeth f swerde of Iehu, Eliseus shal slaye him. ¶ And I wil reserue vnto me vij. M. men in Israel: namely, all f knees which haue not bowed the selues vnto Baal, and euery mouth f hath not kyssed him.

And he departed thence, & founde Eliseus f sonne of Saphat, plowing with twolue yocke of oxen before him, & he him selfe was amōge the twolue. And Elias wēte vnto him, & cast his cloke vpon him. And he lefte the oxen, & ranne after Elias, & sayde: ¶ Let me kysse my father & my mother, and so wil I folowe the. And he sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, & come agayne, for I haue some what to do with the. And he ranne agayne from him, and toke a yock of oxen, and offred it, and sod f flesh with the wod of the oxen plowes, and gaue it vnto the people to eate, and gat him vp, & folowed Elias, and mynistrd vnto him.

The xx. Chapter.

A ND Benadab f kyng of Siria gathered all his power, & there were two & thirtie kynges with him, & horses & charrettes, and he wente vp, and layed sege vnto Samaria, & foughte agaynst it. And he sent messaungers vnto Achab f kyng of Israel in to f cite, & caused to saye vnto him: Thus sayeth Benadab: Thy syluer & thy golde is myne, and thy wyues & thy best children are myne also. The kyng of Israel answered, & sayde: My lord O kyng, euen as thou hast sayde, I am thine, and all that I haue.

And the messaungers came agayne, & sayde: Thus sayeth Benadab: For so moch as I haue sent vnto the, sayenge: Thy syluer & thy golde, thy wyues & thy childrē shalt thou geue me, tomorow aboute this tyme wil I sende my seruantes vnto the, f they maye serch thyne house and the houses of thy subiectes: & loke what pleasaunt thinge thou hast, f shal they take in their handes, and cary it awaye. So 33 the kyng of Israel called all f Elders of the lōde, & sayde: Mark well & se, what myschefe this mā seketh: He sent vnto me for my wyues & children, for syluer & golde, & I haue not sayde him naye. Then sayde all the Elders and all the people vnto him: Thou shalt not cōsente ner agree vnto him. And he spake vnto Benadabs messaügers, Saye vnto my lordē f̄ kyngē: All f̄ thynges wherfore thou dyddest sende vnto me thy seruauant at f̄ first, wil I do, but this can I not do. And f̄ messaungers wēte, and tolde this againe. Thē sent Benadab vnto him sayēge: The goddes do this and f̄ vnto me, yf the dust of Samaria shalbe ynough, for euery one of my people to brynge me an handfull therof. But f̄ kyngē of Israel answered, ⁊ sayde: Tell him, Let not him f̄ putteth on f̄ harnes, make his boast like him f̄ hath put it of. Whā Benadab herde f̄ (euē as he was drynkinge with the kynges in f̄ paynylon) he sayde vnto his seruaites: Set youre selues in arayē. And they set thē selues in araiē against f̄ cite.

And beholde, there came a prophet vnto Achab f̄ kyngē of Israel, ⁊ saide: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Hast thou sene all this greate multitude? Beholde, this daie wil I deluyur thē in to thy hande, so f̄ thou shalt knowe, how f̄ I am f̄ LORDE. Achab sayde: By whom? He sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Euen by the yonge men of the rulers of the londe. He sayde: Who shal order the battayl? He sayde: Thou. Then mustered he the yonge men of the rulers of the londe, ⁊ there were two hūdreth and two and thirtie of them: ⁊ after thē mustured he of the whole people of all the childrē of Israel, seūe thousande men, and they wente out in the noone daye. As for Benadab, he dranke and was dronken in the paynylon with the two ⁊ thirtie kynges which were come to helpe him. And the yonge men of the rulers of the londe wente forth first.

Benadab sent forth, ⁊ they brought him worde, ⁊ sayde: There come men out of Samaria. He sayde: Take them aliyue, whether they be come forth for peace, or for warre. But whan the londe rulers yonge men were gone forth, and the hoost behynde them, euery one smote him f̄ came in his waye. And the Sirians fled, and Israel folowed after them. And Benadab the kyngē of Syria escaped with horses and horsmē. And the kyngē of Israel wente forth, and smote horses and charettes, and dyd a greate slaughter on the Syrians.

Then came there a prophet vnto the kyngē of Israel, and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye and strength the, and take hede, and loke well what thou doest: for whan the yeare is aboute, the kyngē of Syria shall come against the of the new. For the kyngē of f̄ Sirians seruauantes sayde vnto him: Their goddes are goddes of the mountaynes, therefore haue they gotten the victory.

But let vs fyghte with them on the playne, and thou shalt se that we shal ouercome them. Do thus, put awaye the kynges euery one from his place, and set dukes in their steades, and appoynte the an hoost as was that which thou hast lost, ⁊ horses ⁊ charettes as the other were, and let vs fight against thē in the plaine, and thou shalt se that we shal haue the victory. He cōsented vnto their voyce, and dyd so.

Now whan the yeare was gone aboute, Benadab appoynted the Sirians, and wente vp towardē Aphek, to fighte agaynst Israel, and the childrē of Israel mustured, and prouyded them selues with vyttailes, and wēte to mete them, and pitched their tētes ouer against them, like two litle flockes of goates but the londe was full of the Syrians.

And there came a man of God, and sayde vnto the kyngē of Israel: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because the Syrians haue sayde, that the LORDE is a God of the moūtaines and not a God of the valleys, therefore haue I geuen all this greate heape in to thy handes, that ye maye knowe how that I am f̄ LORDE. And they pitched their tentes right ouer agaynst them seuen dayes. But vpon f̄ seuenth daye they wente together in to the battayll: and the children of Israel smote of the Sirians an hundreth thousande fote men in one daye, and the remmaunt fled to Aphek in to the cite, and the wall fell vpon the other seuen and twenty thousande men. And Benadab fled also vnto the cite in to a litle chamber.

Then sayde his seruauantes vnto him: Beholde, we haue herde that the kynges of the house of Israel are mercifull kinges, Let vs therefore put sack cloth aboute oure loynes, and halters aboute oure neckes, ⁊ go forth to the kyngē of Israel, peraduenture he shal let thy soule lyue.

And they put sack cloth aboute their loynes, and halters aboute their neckes, and came to the kyngē of Israel, and sayde: Benadab thy seruauant sayeth vnto the: O let my soule lyue. He sayde: yf he be yet aliyue, he is my brother. And the men toke him shortly at his worde, and expounded it for them selues and sayde: Yee Benadab is thy brother. He sayde: Come and brynge him. Thē wente Benadab forth vnto him, and he caused him to syt vpon the charet, and sayde vnto him: The cities that my father toke from thy father, wyl I geue the agayne. And make thou stretes for thyselfe at Damascō, as my father did at Samaria, so wyl I let the go with a bonde of peace. And he made a couenaunt with him, and let him go.

Then spake there a man amonge the children of the prophetes vnto his neyghboure by the worde of the LORDE: I praye the smite me. But he refused to smite him. Then saide he vnto him, because thou hast not herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, beholde, therefore shall there a lyon smyte the, when thou goest fro me. *And whan he wente frō him, a lyon founde him, and slewe him.

¶ And he founde another man, and sayde: I praye the smyte me. And the man smote him, and wounded him. Then wente the prophet, and stepte vnto the kynge by the waye syde, and altered his face with aszshes. And whan the kynge wente by, he cried vpon ꝑ kynge, and sayde: Thy seruauent wente forth in to the battayll, and beholde, there wente one asyde, and broughte a man vnto me, and sayde: Kepe this mā: yf he be myssed, thy soule shall be in steade of his soule, or els thou shalt weye downe an hundredth weichte of syluer. And whyle thy seruauent had here ⁊ there to do, he was awaye. The kynge of Israel sayde vnto him: It is thine owne iudgment, thou hast geuen it thyselfe.

Then put he the aszshes from his face in all the haist. And the kynge of Israel knewe him, that he was one of the prophetes. And he sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because thou hast let the damned man go, therefore shall thy soule be for his soule, and thy people for his people. And the kynge of Israel departed vnto his house, beinge troubled in his mynde and full indignacion, and came to Samaria.

The xxi. Chapter.

¶ AFTER these actes it fortuneth, that Naboth the Iesraelite had a vynyarde at Iesreel besyde the palace of Achab kynge of Samaria. And Achab spake to Naboth, and sayde: Geue me thy vynyarde, I wyl make me an herbgarden therof, because it is so nye my house: I wyl geue the a better vynyarde for it: or yf it please the, I wyl geue the syluer for it, as much as it is worth. But Naboth sayde vnto Achab: † The LORDE let that be farre fro me, that I shulde geue ꝑ my fathers heretage. Then came Achab home, beinge moued and full of indignacion, because of the worde that Naboth the Iesraelite had spoken vnto him, ⁊ sayde: I wyl not geue the my fathers inheritance. And he laied him downe vpon his bed, and turned his face asyde, and ate no bred. Then Iesabel his wyfe came in to him and sayde vnto him: What is ꝑ matter, that thy sprete is so cōbred, and that thou eatest no bred? He sayde vnto her: I haue spokē vnto Naboth the Iesraelite, and sayde: Geue me thy vynyarde for money: or yf it please ꝑ, I wyl geue the another for it. But he sayde: I wyl not geue the my vynyarde.

¶ Then sayde Iesabel his wyfe vnto him: What kindome were in Israel, yf thou diddest it? Stonde vp, and eate bred, I wyl get the the vynyarde of Naboth the Iesraelite. And she wrote a letter vnder Achabs name, and sealed it with his signet, and sent it vnto ꝑ Elders and rulers in his cite, which dwelt aboute Naboth, and wrote thus in ꝑ letter: Proclame a fast, and set Naboth aboue in the people, and set two men of Belial before him, to testifye and saye: Thou hast blasphemed God and the kynge. And brynge him forth, and stone him to death.

And the Elders and rulers of his cyte, which dwelt in his cite, dyd as Iesabel had commaunded them, acordynge as she had written in the letter that she sent vnto them and they proclaimed a fast, and caused Naboth to syt aboue amonge the people. Then came the two men of Belial, and stode before him, and testyfyed agaynst Naboth in ꝑ presence of the people, and sayde: Naboth hath blasphemed God and the kynge.

Then broughte they him out of the cite, and stoned him to death. And they sent Iesabel worde, sayenge: Naboth is stoned ⁊ put to death. Whā Iesabel herde that Naboth was stoned and deed, she sayde vnto Achab:

C Vp, and take possession of the vynyarde of Naboth the Iesraelite, which he denyed to geue the for money: for Naboth lyueth no more but is deed. And whan Achab herde ¶ Naboth was deed, he rose to go downe vnto the vynyarde of Naboth the Iesraelite, and to take possession of it.

But the worde of the LORDE came to Elias the Theszbite, and sayde: Get the vp, and go downe to mete Achab the kyng of Israel, which is at Samaria: beholde, he is in Naboths vynyarde, in to the which he is gone downe to take possession of it, and talke thou with him, and speake: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou hast slayne, and taken in possession. And thou shalt talke morouer vnto him, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: * Euen in the place where the dogges licked vp Naboths bloude, shall the dogges lick thy bloude also. And Achab sayde vnto Elias: Hast thou euer founde me thine enemye? He saide: Yee, I haue founde the, because thou art euen solde to do euell in the sighte of the LORDE. Beholde, † I wyll brynge mysfortune vpon the, and take awaye thy posterite, and wil rote out from Achab, euen him that maketh water agaynst the wall, and him that is shut vp and left behynde in Israel: and thy house wyll I make as the house of Ieroboam ¶ sonne of Nebat, and as the house of Baesa the sonne of Ahia, because of ¶ prouocacion wherwith thou hast prouoked me vnto wrath, and made Israel to synne.

D And ouer Iesabel spake the LORDE also and sayde: ‡ The dogges shal deuoure Iesabel in ¶ felde of Iesrael. § Who so of Achab dyeth in ¶ cite, him shal the dogges eate vp: and who so dyeth in the felde, the foules vnder the heauen shall eate him vp. So cleane ¶ solde to do myschefe in ¶ sighte of the LORDE hath no man bene, as Achab: for his Iesabel hath so disceaued him, and he maketh him selfe a greate abhominacion, that he goeth after Idols, acordige vnto all as dyd the Amorites, ¶ whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel.

But whan Achab herde these wordes, he rēte his clothes, ¶ put a sack cloth on his body, ¶ fasted, and slepte in sack cloth, and wente aboute hanginge downe his heade. And the worde of the LORDE came to Elias the Theszbite, ¶ sayde: Hast thou not sene how Achab humbleth him selfe before me? For so moch now as he hübleth him selfe in my sighte, I wil not brynge that plage whyle he lyueth: but by his sonnes life wil I brynge mysfortune vpon his house.

The xxij. Chapter.

A ND there passed ouer thre yeaes, that there was no warre betwene the Sirians ¶ Israel.  But in the thirde yeaere wente Iosaphat the kyng of Iuda downe to the kyng of Israel. And the kyng of Israel sayde vnto his seruantes: Knowe ye not ¶ Ramoth in Gilead is oures? and we syt styll, and take it not out of the hande of the kyng of Syria. And he sayde vnto Iosaphat: Wilt thou go with me to the battaill vnto Ramoth in Gilead? Iosaphat sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: I wyll be as thou, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses. And Iosaphat sayde vnto ¶ kyng of Israel: † Axe this daye at the worde of the LORDE. Then the kyng of Israel gathered the prophetes aboute a ‡ foure hundreth men, and sayde vnto them: Shal I go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to fighte, or shal I let it alone? They sayde: Go vp, ¶ LORDE shal deluyar it in to ¶ kynges hande. But Iosaphat sayde: Is there not one prophet here more of ¶ LORDE, that we maye axe at him?

The kinge of Israel saide vnto Iosaphat: Here is yet a man, one Micheas the sonne of Iemla, at whom we maye axe of the LORDE: but I hate him, for he prophecieth me no good, but euell. Iosaphat sayde: Let not the kyng saye so. Then called the kyng of Israel a chamberlayne, and sayde: Brynge hither soone Micheas the sonne of Iemla. As for the kyng of Israel and Iosaphat ¶ kyng of Iuda, they sat ether of them vpon his seate, arayed in their garmentes in the place at ¶ dore of the porte of Samaria, and all ¶ prophetes prophecied before the. ¶ Micheas sayde: As truly as the LORDE liueth, loke what the LORDE sayeth vnto me, þy wyl I speake. And whan he came to the kyngye, the kyngye sayde vnto him: Micheas, shal we go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to fight or shall we let it alone? He sayde vnto him: Yee, go vp, thou shalt prospere righte well, the LORDE shall geue it in to the kynges hande. But the kyngye sayde vnto him agayne: I charge þy that thou saye no other thinge vnto me but the trueth, in the name of þy LORDE. Then sayde þy kyngye of Israel vnto Iosaphat: Tolde not I þy that he wolde prophecyē me no good, but euell?

¶ He sayde: Heare now therfore the wordes of the LORDE: *I sawe the LORDE syt vpon his seate, and all the hoost of heauen stōdinge by him at his righte hande & at his left. And the LORDE saide: Who wil disceaue Achab to go vp, & fall at Ramoth in Gilead. And one sayde this, another that. Then wēt there forth a sprete, & stode before the LORDE, and sayde: I wyl disceaue him. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherwith? He sayde vnto him: I wyl go forth, and be a false sprete in the mouth of all his prophetes. He saide: Thou shalt disceaue him, and shalt be able: go forth and do so. Beholde now, †the LORDE hath geuē a false sprete in þy mouth of all these thy prophetes, and the LORDE hath spoken euell ouer the. Then stepte forth Sedechias the sonne of Cnaena, and smote Micheas vpon the cheke, and sayde: What, is the sprete of the LORDE departed fro me, to speake with the? Micheas sayde: Beholde, thou shalt se it in þy daye, whan thou shalt go frō one chamber to another to hyde the.

¶ The kyngye of Israel sayde: Take Micheas, and let him remayne with Amon the ruler of the cite, and with Ioas the kynges sonne, and saye: Thus sayeth the kyngye: Put this man in preson, and fede him with bred and water of trouble, tyll I come agayne in peace. Micheas sayde: Yf thou comest agayne in peace, then hath not the LORDE spoken thorow me. And he sayde: herken to all ye peopre.

¶ So the kyngye of Israel and Iosaphat þy kyngye of Iuda wente vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And the kyngye of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat: Chaunge thy clothes, and come in to þy battayll in thine araie. The kyngye of Israel chaunged his clothes also, and wēt in to the battayll. But the kyngye of Siria commaunded the rulers of his charettes (of whom there were two and thirtie) and saide: Ye shal fight nether agaynst small ner greate, but onely agaynst the kyngye of Israel. And whan the rulers of the charettes sawe Iosaphat, they thought it had bene the kyngye of Israel, and fell vpon him with fightinge. But Iosaphat cried. So whan the rulers of the charettes sawe that it was not þy kyngye of Israel, they turned back frō him.

¶ A certayne man bended his bowe harde, and shott the kyngye of Israel betwene the mawe and þy longes. And he sayde vnto his charetman: Turne thine hāde, and cary me out of the hoost, for I am wounded. And þy battayll was sore the same daie. And the kyngye stode vpō his charet, agaynst the Syriās and dyed in the eueninge, and the bloude ranne from the wounde in to the myddes of the charet. And whan the Sonne wente downe there was a proclamacion made in the hoost, and sayde: Euery one gett him in to his cite, and to his cōtre. Thus the kyngye dyed, and was broughte vnto Samaria, and they buried him in Samaria. And whan they waszshed the charet in the pole of Samaria, †þy dogges licked his bloude (but the harlottes waszshed him) acordinge to the worde of þy LORDE which he spake.

¶ What more there is to saye of Achab, & all þy he dyd, and of the Yuery house which he buylded, beholde, it is writen in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. So Achab slepte with his fathers, and his sonne Ahasia was kyngye in his steade.

¶ And Iosaphat the sonne of Asa was kyngye ouer Iuda in the fourth yeare of Achab kyngye of Israel, and was fyue and thirtie yeare olde whan he was made kyngye, and reigned fyue and twenty yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers

And he dyd that which was right in y sighte of the LORDE, yet put he not awaye y hie places, and y people offred and brent incēse yet vpon the hye places, and he had peace with the kynge of Israel.

londe also the whoremongers that yet were left, which remayned ouer in the tyme of his father Asa. And at that tyme there were no kynges in Edom. And Iosaphat had caused to make shippes vpon the See, which shulde go to fetch golde in Ophir, but they wente not: for they were broken at Ezeon Gaber. At that tyme sayde Ahasia the sonne of Achab vnto Iosaphat: Let my seruantes passe with thy seruantes in the shippes. But Iosaphat wolde not. And Iosaphat slepte with his fathers, and was buried in y cite of David. And Ioram his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The fyrst Chapter.

A HASIA the sonne off Achab was kyng ouer Israel at Samaria in ƿ seuententh yeaere of Iosaphat kige of Iuda, & reigned ouer Israel two yeaeres, & dyd ƿ which was euell in ƿ sight of the LORDE, and walked in the waye of his father and of his mother, & in the waie of Ieroboam ƿ sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne. And serued Baal, and worshipped him, and displeased the LORDE God of Israel, euē as his father dyd. The Moabites also fell awaye from Israel, whan Achab was deed.

And Ochosias fell thorow ƿ grate in his chāber at Samaria, and was deed sicke, and sent messaungers, and sayde vnto them: Go youre waye, and axe counsell at Beelzebub the god of Ekron, whether I shall recouer from this sicknesse. But the angell of ƿ LORDE sayde vnto Elias the Theszbite: Vp, & go mete the messaungers of the kyng of Samaria, and saie vnto them: Is there no God in Israel, that ye go to axe counsell at ƿ god of Ekron? Therefore thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou shalt not come from the bed wheron thou lvest, but shalt dye the death.

And Elias wente his waye. And whā ƿ messaungers came to Ochosias agayne, he sayde vnto thē: Why come ye agayne? They sayde vnto him: There came vp a man in oure waye, and sayde vnto vs: Go againe to the kinge that hath sent you, and saye vnto him: Thus saith the LORDE: Is there no God in Israel, ƿ thou sendest to axe couel at Beelzebub ƿ god of Ekrō? Therefore shalt thou not come from þy bed wheron thou lvest, but shalt dye the death. He sayde vnto them: What maner of man was it that mett you, and sayde this vnto you? They sayde vnto him: He had a rough heer vpon him, and a letheren gyrdell aboute his loynes. He sayde: It is Elias the Theszbite.

¶ And he sent vnto him a captaine ouer fyfye, with the same fyfye. And whan he came vnto him, beholde, he sat aboue vpon the moũt. He sayde vnto him: Thou mā of God, the kynges sayeth: Thou shalt come downe. Elias answered the captayne ouer fyfye, and sayde vnto him: Yf I be a man of God, the fyre fall downe then from heauen, and cōsume the and thy fyftie. *Then fell there fire from heauen, and consumed him and his fyfye. And agayne he sent another captayne ouer fyfye vnto him, with his fyfye, which answered, and sayde vnto him: Thou man of God, thus sayeth the kynges: Come downe in all the haist. Elias answered, and saide: Yf I be a mā of God, þy fyre fall downe from heauen, and consume the and thy fyfye. Then fell the fyre of God from heauen, and consumed him, and his fyfye. Agayne, he sent vnto him the thirde captayne ouer fyfye, with his fyftie.

¶ Now whan he came to him, he kneeled to Elias, and besought him, and sayde vnto him: Thou man of God, let my soule and þy soules of thy seruantes these fyfye, be somewhat worth in thy syghte. Beholde, the fyre fell downe from heauen, and hath consumed the fyrst two captaynes ouer fyfye with their fyfties. But now let my soule be somewhat worth in thy sighte. Then saide the angel of the LORDE vnto Elias: Go downe with him, and feare him not. And he gatt him vp, and wente downe with him vnto þy kynges.

¶ And he sayde vnto him: Thus saith the LORDE: Because thou hast sent forth messengers, and caused to axe counsell at Beelzebub the god of Ekron, as though there were no God in Israel to axe coicell at his worde, therefore shalt thou not come from the bed wheron thou hast layed the, but shalt dye þy death. So he dyed, acordynge to the worde of the LORDE which Elias sayde. And Ioram (his brother) was kyng in his steade in the seconde yere of Ioram the sonne of Iosaphat kyng of Iuda: for he had no sonne.

What more there is to saye of Ochosias, what he dyd, beholde, it is wryttē in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

The ij. Chapter.

WHAN the LORDE was mynded to take vp Elias in the tempest, Elias and Eliseus wente from Gilgall. And Elias sayde to Eliseus: Tary thou here I praye the, for the LORDE hath sent me vnto Bethel. But Eliseus sayde: As truly as the LORDE liueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not forsake the. And whan they came downe vnto Bethel, the prophetes children that were at Bethel, wēte forth to Eliseus, and sayde vnto him: Knowest thou not, that the LORDE wyl take thy lorde awaye from thy heade this daye? He saide: I knowe it well, holde ye youre peace.

¶ And Elias sayde vnto him: Eliseus, tary thou here I praye the, for the LORDE hath sent me vnto Iericho. Neuerthelesse he sayde: as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not forsake the.

¶ And whan they came vnto Iericho, the prophetes children which were at Iericho, stepte forth to Eliseus and sayde vnto him: Knowest thou not that the LORDE wyl take thy lorde awaye from thy heade this daie? He sayde: I knowe it well, holde ye youre peace. And Elias sayde vnto him: I praie the tary here, for þy LORDE hath sent me vnto Iordane. But he sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not forsake the. And they wente both together. But fyfye men of þy prophetes children wēte forth, and stode ouer agaynst thē a farre of: but they both stode by Iordane. Then toke Elias his cloke, and wrapped it together, and smote the water, which deyed it selfe on both the sydes, so that they wēte dry shod thorow it. And whan they were come ouer, Elias sayde vnto Eliseus: Axe what I shall do for the, afore I be taken awaye from the. Eliseus saide: That thy sprete maye be vpō me to speake twyse as moch.

¶ He sayde: Thou hast desyred an harde thinge: neuertheles yf thou shalt se me whā I am taken awaye from the, it shal be so: Yf no, thē shal it not be. And as they were goinge together, and he talked, there came a fyrie charet with horses of fyre, and parted thē both asunder. †And so wente Elias vp to heauen in the storme. But Eliseus sawe it, & cryed: My father, my father, the chareman of Israel and his horsmē. And he sawe him nomore.

And he toke holde of his clothes, and rente them in two peces, and toke vp Elias cloke that was fallen from him, and turned backe, and stode by the shore of Iordane, and toke the same cloke of Elias which was fallen from him, and smote it in the water, and saide: Where is now the LORDE God of Elias? And he smote it in to the water, and then parted it asunder on both the sydes, and Eliseus wente thorow.

And whan the prophetes children which were at Iericho ouer agaynst him, sawe him, they sayde: The sprete of Elias resteth vpō Eliseus, and so they wēte forth to mete him, and worshipped him to the groinde, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, there are fifty valeaunt mē amonge thy seruantes, let them go and seke thy lorde, peraduenture the sprete of the LORDE hath taken him, and cast him vpon some mountaine or in some valley. But he saide: Sende them not. Neuertheles they constrayned him, tyll he was ashamed, and sayde: Let them go. And they sent fifty men, which soughte him thre dayes: but they founde him not, and came agayne vnto him. And he abode at Iericho, and sayde vnto them: Tolde not I you, that ye shulde not go? And the men of the cite sayde vnto Eliseus: Beholde, there is good dwellynge in this cite, as my lorde seyth, but the water is euell, and the londe vnfrutefull.

He sayde: Bringe me hither a new vessell, & put salt in it. And they broughte it him. Then wēte he forth vnto the well of water, and cast the salt therin, & sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue healed this water: from hence forth shal there no deed ner vnfrutefulnes come of it. So the water was healed vnto this daye, acordinge to the worde of Eliseus which he spake.

And he wēte vp towarde Bethel. And as he was goynge vp by the waye, there came litle boyes out of the cite, and mocked him, & sayde: Come vp here thou balde heade, come vp here thou balde heade. And he turned him aboute. And whā he sawe them, he cursed them in the name of the LORDE. Then came there two Beeres out of the wode, and rente two and fortye of the children. From thence wēte he vp vnto mount Carmel, and from it turned he backe to Samaria.

The iiij. Chapter.

IORAM the sonne of Achab was kynge ouer Israel at Samaria in ⁊ eighteenth yere of Iosaphat kynge of Iuda, & reigned xij. yeares, & dyd ⁊ which was euell in ⁊ sighte of ⁊ LORDE, but not as his father & his mother: for he put away ⁊ pilers of Baal, which his father caused to make. Neuertheles he cleued vnto ⁊ synnes of Ieroboā ⁊ sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne, & departed not there frō.

Mesa ⁊ kynge of the Moabites had many shepe, & payed tribute vnto the kynge of Israel with the woll of an hundreth thousande lābes, & of an hūdreth thousande rāmes. * But whan Achab was deed, the kynge of ⁊ Moabites fell awaye frō the kynge of Israel. At ⁊ same tyme wēte kynge Ioram frō Samaria, & mustered all Israel, & sent vnto Iosaphat kynge of Iuda, sayenge: The kynge of the Moabites is fallen awaye fro me, come thou with me to fighte agaynst ⁊ Moabites. He sayde: I wil come vp, † I am euen as thou, and my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses. And sayde morouer: Which waye wil we go vp? He sayde: by the waye in the wylder-nesse of Edom.

So the kynge of Israel, the kynge of Iuda, & the kynge of Edom wente forth. And whan they had gone aboute seūē dayes iourney, ⁊ hoost & the cattell ⁊ were amonge thē had no water. Then sayde the kynge of Israel: Alas, the LORDE hath called these thre kynges, to delyuer thē in to the hande of the Moabites. But Iosaphat sayde: † Is here no prophet of ⁊ LORDE, ⁊ we maye axe coucell at ⁊ LORDE by him? Then answered one of ⁊ kynge of Israels seruantes, & saide: Here is Eliseus ⁊ sonne of Saphat, which poured water vpon Elias handes. Iosaphat sayde: The worde of ⁊ LORDE is with him. So the kynge of Israel & Iosaphat, and ⁊ kynge of Edom wente downe vnto him.

But Eliseus sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: What hast thou to do with me? go to the prophetes of thy father & to thy mothers prophetes. The kynge of Israel saide vnto him: No, for ⁊ LORDE hath called these thre kynges, to deluyer them in to the handes of the Moabites. Eliseus sayde: As truly as the LORDE Zebaoth lyueth, before whom I stode, yf I regarded not Iosaphat the kyng of Iuda, I wolde not regarde the, ner set oughte by \hat{y} . So bringe me now a mynstrell. And whan the mynstrell played vpō the instrument, the hande of the LORDE came vpō him. And he sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Make pittes by this broke. For thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shal se nether wynde ner rayne, yet shall the broke be full of water, that ye and youre houtholdes & youre catell maie drynke. Yee and that is but a small thinge 12 in the sighte of the LORDE. And the Moabites shal he deluyer in to youre handes, so \hat{y} ye shal smyte all the stronge cities, and all \hat{y} chosen cities * & shal fell downe all the good trees, and stoppe all the welles of water and all the good feldes shall ye make waist with stones.

On the morow, whan the meatofferynge is offered, beholde, there came water \hat{y} waye from Edom, and fylled \hat{y} londe with water. But whan the Moabites herde, \hat{y} the kynges came vp to fighte agaynst thē, they called all \hat{y} harnessed men, & their rulers, & stode on \hat{y} border. And whan they rose early in \hat{y} mornynge, & the Sonne wete vp vpon \hat{y} water, the Moabites thoughte the water ouer agaynst thē to be euē as reed as bloude, & they sayde: It is bloude, \hat{y} kynges haue destroyed them selues with the swerde, & one hath smytten another. Now Moab get the vp to the spoyles. But whan they came to the tentes of Israel, the Israelites gat vp, & smote the Moabites, & they fled before them.

13 Neuertheles they came in, & smote Moab, & brake downe the cities, & euery one cast his stone vpon all the good feldes, and made them full, and stopped all \hat{y} welles of water, and felled downe all the good trees, tyll there remayned but the stones in the brickwall, and they compased them aboute with slynges, and smote them.

But whā the kyng of \hat{y} Moabites sawe \hat{y} the battayll was to strōge for him, he toke to him seuē C. men, which drue \hat{y} swerde, to fall vpon the kyng of Edom: neuertheles they were not able. Then toke he his first sonne, which shulde haue bene kyng in his steade, and offred him for a burntofferynge vpon the wall. Then came there a grea^t wrath ouer Israel, that they departed from him, and turned agayne in to their londe.

AND there cried a woman amōge the wyues of the prophetes children unto Eliseus, and sayde: Thy seruau^t my husz-bāde is deed, and thou knowest that thy seruau^t feared the LORDE. Now commeth the man that he was detter vnto, and wyl take awaye both my children to be bonde seruantes. Eliseus sayde vnto her: What shal I do for the? Tell me, what hast thou in the house? She sayde: Thy handmayden hath nothinge in the house but a pitcher with oyle. He sayde: Go thy waye, borowe without of all thy neyghbours emptye vessels, & that not a fewe, and go in, and shut \hat{y} dore behynde the with thy sonnes, and poure of it in to all \hat{y} vessels: & whan thou hast fylled them, deluy^r them forth.

She wente, and shut the dore vnto her with hir sonnes, which broughte her the vessels, and so she poured in. And whan the vessels were full, she sayde vnto hir sonne: Brynge me yet one vessell. He sayde vnto her: There is not one vessell more here. Then stode \hat{y} oyle styll. And she sent, and tolde the man of God. He sayde: Go thy waye, sell the oyle, and paye the creditour: but lyue thou and thy sonnes of the resydue.

And it fortunēd at \hat{y} same tyme, that Eliseus wente vnto Sunem. And there was a riche woman, which helde him to eate with her: & as he passed oft thorow \hat{y} waye, he wete in vnto her: & ate with her. And she sayde vnto hir huszbande: Beholde, I perceaue that this is an holy man of God, which goeth euer thorow this waye, let vs make hi a litle chamber of boordes, & set a bed, a table, a stole & a candelsticke therin, that whan he commeth vnto vs, he maye resorte thither.

And it fortunēd vpon a tyme, that he came in, & layed him downe in the chamber, & slepte therin. And he saide vnto Gehasi his childe: Call this womā of Sunem. And whā he had called her, she stode before him. He sayde vnto him: Speake thou vnto her, beholde, thou hast mynistrēd vnto vs in all these thinges, what shal I do for the? Hast thou eny matter to be spoken for to the kyng, or to the chefe captayne of the hoost? She sayde: I dwel amonge my people. He sayde: What hast thou then to do? Gehasi sayde: Alas, she hath no sonne, and hir huszbande is olde. He sayde: Call her. And whā he had called her, she stode at the dore. And he sayde: *Aboute this tyme yf ſ̄ frute can lyue, thou shalt embrace a sonne. She sayde: Alas, no my lorde, thou man of God, lye not vnto thy handmayden. And the woman conceaued, and bare a sonne aboute the same tyme, whā the frute coulde lyue, acordynge as Eliseus had sayde vnto her.

C But whan ſ̄ childe was growne, it fortunēd, ſ̄ he wente forth to his father vnto the reapers, & sayde vnto his father: Oh my heade, my heade. He saide vnto his seruāut: Bring him to his mother. And he toke him, and broughte him to his mother: and she set him vpon hir lappe vntyll ſ̄ noone daye, & thē he dyed. And she wente vp, and layed him vpō the bed of the man of God, & shut the dore, and wēte forth, & called hir huszbande, & sayde vnto him: Sende me one of the seruāutes, and an Asse, I wyl go quckly vnto the man of God, and come agayne. He sayde: Why wilt thou go vnto him? To daye is it nether new moone ner Sabbath. She sayde: Well. And she saddled the asse, & sayde to the yongman: dryue forth, and kepe me not bak with rydinge, and do as I byd the.

So she wente, and came to the man of God vnto mount Carmell. Whā the man of God sawe her ouer agaynst him, he sayde vnto his childe Gehasi: Beholde, the Sunamitisse is there, runne now & mete her, and axe her yf it go well with her, and hir huszbande & hir sonne. She sayde: Well. But whan she came to the man of God vpon ſ̄ mount, she helde him by his fete. And Gehasi stepte to her, to put her awaye. But ſ̄ man of God sayde: Let her alone, for hir soule is in heuynes, and the LORDE hath hyd it fro me, and not shewed it me. She sayde: Whan desyred I a sonne of my lorde? Sayde I not, ſ̄ thou shuldest not mocke me?

D He sayde vnto Gehasi: Girde vp thy loynes, and take my staffe in thy hande, and go thy waye. †Yf eny man mete the, salute him not: and yf eny man salute the, thanke him not, and laye thou my staffe vpon ſ̄ childes face. But the childes mother sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not leaue the. Then gat he vp, and wente after her. As for Gehasi, he wente before them, and layed the staffe vpon the childes face, but there was nether voyce ner felynge. And he wente agayne to mete him, and shewed him, and sayde: The childe is not rysen vp.

And whan Eliseus came in to the house, beholde, ſ̄ childe laye deed vpō his bed. And he wēte in, & shut the dore on thē both, & made his prayer vnto the LORDE, & wente vp, & layed him selfe vpon the childe, & layed his mouth vpon the childes mouth, and his eyes vpon his eyes, and his handes vpon his handes, & so stretched him selfe forth vpon him, so ſ̄ the childes body was warme. And he rose vp, & wente in to the house once hither and thither, & wente vp, & layed him selfe a longe vpon him. Then neded the childe seūē tymes, and afterwarde the childe opened his eyes. And he cried vpon Gehasi, and sayde: Call the Sunamitisse. And whan he had called her, she came in vnto him. He sayde: Take there thy sonne. Then came she, and fell at his fete, and worshipped vnto the grounde, and toke hir sonne, and wente forth.

But whā Eliseus came agayne vnto Gilgal, there was a derth in the londe, & the prophetes children dwelt before him, & he sayde vnto his seruāut: Set on a greate pot, and make potage for the children of the prophetes. Then wente there one in to the fælde, to gather herbes, and founde a Cucumbers stalke, & gathered wylde Cucumbers therof his cotefull. And whan he came, he chopped it small for potage to the pott, for they knewe it not. And whā they poured it forth for the mē to eate, & they ate of ſ̄ potage, they cried and sayde: O thou man of God, death is in the pot: for they mighte not eate it. Neuertheles he sayde: Brynge meel hither. And he put it in the pot, & sayde: Poure it out for the people, that they maye eate. And then was it not bytter in the pot.

There came a man from Baal Salisa, & broughte the man of God bred of the first frutes, namely twentye barlye loanes, & new corne in his garment. But he sayde: Geue it vnto ſ̄ people, that they maye eate. His mynister sayde: †How shall I geue an hidreth men of this? He sayde: Geue it vnto the people, that they maye eate. For thus sayeth the LORDE: They shal eate, and there shall be lefte ouer. And he set it before them, so that they ate, and there lefte ouer, acordinge to þ̃ worde of the LORDE.

The v. Chapter.

NAAMAN the chefe captayne of the kyngye of Syria, was an excellēt mā in the sighte of his lorde, and moch set by (for thorow him the LORDE gaue health vnto Syria) and he was a mightie man, but a leper. And there had men of warre fallen out of Syria, and caried awaye a litle damsel out of the londe of Israel: the same was in seruyce with Naamās wife, and sayde vnto hir mas-tresse: O that my master were with the prophet at Samaria, he wolde heale him from his leprosy.

Then wente he in to his lorde, and tolde him, and sayde: Thus and thus hath the damsel of the londe of Israel spoken. The kyngye of Syria sayde: Go thy waye then, & I wyl wrytte a letter vnto the kyngye of Israel.

B And he wente, and toke with him ten hundred weighte of syluer, and sixe thousande guldens, & ten chaunge of rayment, & broughte the letter vnto the kyngye of Israel, with these wordes:

Whan this letter commeth vnto the, be-holde, thou shalt vnderstonde þ̃ I haue sent my seruauant Naaman vnto the, that thou mayest heale him of his leprosy.

And whan the kyngye of Israel red the letter, he rente his clothes, & sayde: Am I God then, that I can kyll and quykē agayne, þ̃ he sendeth vnto me, to heale the man frō his leprosy? Considre and se, how he seketh an occasion vnto me.

Whan Eliseus the man of God herde, þ̃ the kyngye of Israel had rente his clothes, he sent vnto him, sayenge: Why hast thou rente thy clothes? Let him come to me, that he maye knowe, þ̃ there is a prophet in Israel.

C So Naaman came with horses and charettes, and helde still at the dore of Eliseus house. Then sent Eliseus a messaunger vnto him, sayenge: Go thy waye, and waszshe the seven tymes in Iordane, so shal thy flesh be restored the agayne, & be censed. Then was Naaman wroth, & wente his waye, & sayde: I thoughte he shulde haue come forth vnto me, & to haue stōde here & to haue called vpō the name of the LORDE his God, & to haue touched the place with his hande, & so to haue put awaye the leprosy. Are not þ̃ waters of Amana and Pharphar at Damascon better then all the waters in Israel, þ̃ I might waszshe me therin & be censed? and he turned him, and wētē his waye in displeasure. Then his seruantes gat thē to him, and sayde: Father, yf the prophet had cōmaunded the eny greute thinge, shuldest thou not haue done it? moch more thē yf he saye vnto the: Wasshe the, & thou shalt be cleane. Then wētē he downe, & waszshed him selfe in Iordane seuē tymes (as the man of God sayde) & his flesh was restored him agayne, euen as the flesh of a yonge childe * and he was censed.

And he turned agayne to þ̃ man of God with all his armye. And whan he came in, he stode before him, and sayde: Beholde, I knowe that in all londes there is no God, but in Israel. Take now therfore this blessinge I praye the of thy seruauant. Neuertheles he sayde: †As truly as the LORDE lyueth, before whom I stonde, I wil not take it. And he wolde nedes haue him to take it, but he wolde not. Then sayde Naaman: Mighte there not a burthē of this earth be geuē vnto thy seruauant, as moch as two Mules maye beare? For thy seruauant wyl nomore do sacrifice and offer burntofferynges vnto other goddes, but vnto the LORDE, That the LORDE maye be gracious vnto thy seruauant, yf I worshippe in the house of Rimmon, whā my lorde goeth there in to þ̃ house to worshippe, & leaneth vpon my hande. He sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace.

And as he was gone from him a felde bredth in the londe, Gehasi the seruauant of Eliseus þ̃ man of God thoughte: beholde, my lorde hath spared Naamā this Syrian, so that he hath not taken from him þ̃ which he broughte: As truly as þ̃ LORDE lyueth, I wil rūne after him, & take somthinge of him.

E So Gehasi folowed Naaman. And whā Naaman sawe þ̃ he ranne after him, he lighte downe from the charet to mete him, & sayde: Are all thinges well? He sayde: Yee. But my lorde hath sent me, & caused to saye vnto the: Beholde, there are now come to me fro mount Ephraim two yonge men of the prophetes childrē, geue them a talēte of syluer (I praye the) & two chaunge of rayment. Naamā saide: Go to, take two talētes. And he cōpelled him, ⁊ bande two talentes in two bagges, and two change of rayment, and deliuered it vnto two of his seruantes, which bare it before him. And when he came in ſ̄ darcke, he toke it from their handes, ⁊ layed it a syde in the house, ⁊ let the men go.

And when they were gone their waye, he stode before his lorde. And Eliseus sayde vnto him: Whence comest thou Gehasi? He sayde: Thy seruauent wente nether hither ner thither. But he sayde vnto him: Wentest not my hert with the, when the man turned backe from his charet to mete the? Now thou hast takē the syluer ⁊ the rayment, olyue trees, vynyardes, shepe, oxen, seruantes ⁊ maydens. But the leprosy of Naaman shal cleue vnto the ⁊ to thy sede for euer. *Then wēte he forth from him leporous as snowe.

The bi. Chapter.

THE children of ſ̄ prophetes sayde vnto Eliseus: Beholde, the place where we dwell before ſ̄, is to narrow for vs, let vs go vnto Iordane, ⁊ euery one fetch tymbre there, ſ̄ we maye there buylde vs a place to dwell in. He saide: Go yourre waye. And one sayde: Go to then, ⁊ come with thy seruantes. He sayde: I wil go with you. And he wēte with them. And when they came to Iordane, they hewed downe tymbre. And as one was fellynge downe a tre, the yron fell in to the water, and he cried and sayde: Alas my lorde, ⁊ it is burowed. But the man of God sayde: Where fell it in? And when he had shewed him the place, he cut downe a sticke, and thrust it in there. Then swāme the yron. And he sayde: Take it vp. So he put forth his hande, and toke it.

B And the kyng of Syria warred agaynst Israel, and toke counsell at his seruantes, and sayde: There ⁊ there will we lye. But the man of God sent to ſ̄ kyng of Israel, sayenge: Bewarre ſ̄ thou go not vnto that place, for the Syrians rest there. So the kyng of Israel sent vnto ſ̄ place wherof ſ̄ man of God tolde him, ⁊ kepte it, ⁊ helde watch there, ⁊ dyd that not once or twyse onely.

C Thē was ſ̄ kyng of Syrias herte vexed therfore, and called his seruantes, and sayde vnto them: Wyll ye not tell me, which of our men is fled vnto the kyng of Israel?

Then sayde one of his seruantes: Not so my lorde O kyng, but Eliseus the prophet in Israel telleth the kyng of Israel all that thou speakest in thy chamber where thou lyeest. He sayde: Go yourre waye thē and loke where he is, that I maye sende, and cause him be fetched. And they shewed him and sayde: Beholde, he is at Dothan. Thē sent he thither horses ⁊ charettes, ⁊ a greute power. And whā they came thither by night, they compased the cite aboute. And the mynister of the mā of God arose early to get him vp. And as he wēte forth, beholde, there laye an hoost of men aboute ſ̄ cite with horses and charettes.

Then saide his childe vnto him: Alas syr, how wyll we now do? He sayde: † Feare not, for there are mo of them ſ̄ are with vs, then of those that are with them. And Eliseus prayed ⁊ sayde: LORDE open his eyes, ſ̄ he maye se. Then the LORDE opened ſ̄ childes eyes, ſ̄ he sawe, ⁊ beholde, ſ̄ mount was full of fyrie horses ⁊ charettes rōude aboute Eliseus. And whā they came downe vnto him, Eliseus made his prayer, ⁊ sayde: LORDE smyte this people with byndnes. ‡ And he smote thē with byndnes according to the worde of Eliseus. And Eliseus saide vnto them: This is not ſ̄ waye nor the cite, folowe me, I wil brynge you to the man whom ye seke. And he broughte them vnto Samaria.

And when they came to Samaria, Eliseus sayde: LORDE open these mens eyes, ſ̄ they maye se. And the LORDE opened their eyes, ſ̄ they sawe, ⁊ beholde, they were in the myddes of Samaria. And when the kyng of Israel sawe them, he saide vnto Eliseus: My father, shal I smyte thē? He saide: Thou shalt not smyte thē: loke whom thou takest with thy swerde and bowe, smyte those. Set bred and water before them, that they maye eate and drynke, and let them departe vnto their lorde. Thē was there a greaute dyner prepared. And when they had eaten and dronken, he let them go to departe vnto their lorde. From that tyme forth came the men of warre of the Syrians nomore in to the londe of Israel.

After this it fortuneth, that Benadab the kyng of Syria gathered all his hoost, and wēte vp, ⁊ layed sege vnto Samaria: ⁊ there was a greate derth at Samaria. But they layed sege to the cite so longe, tyll an Asses heade was worth foure score syluer pēs, and the fourth parte of a *Cab of doues donge worth fyue syluer pens. And whan the kyngye of Israel wente vnto the wall, a woman cried vnto him and sayde: Helpe me my lorde O kyngye. He sayde: Yf the LORDE helpe the not, wherwith shal I helpe the? with þ barne or with the wyne presse? And the kyngye sayde vnto her: What ayleth þ? She sayde: This woman sayde vnto me: Geue vs thy sonne, that we maye eate him, to-morow wyll we eate my sonne. So we sod my sonne, ⁊ haue eaten him, and I sayde vnto her on þ thirde daye: Geue vs thy sonne and let vs eate him, but she hath hyd him awaye.

When the kyngye herde the womans wordes, he rente his clothes, whyle he was goynge to the wall. Thē sawe all the people, that he had a sack cloth vnder vpon his body. And he sayde: † God do this and that vnto me, yf the heade of Eliseus the sonne of Saphat shal this daye stonde vpon him. As for Eliseus, he sat in his house, ⁊ the Elders sat by him. And he sent a man before him, but or euer the messaunger came to him, he sayde vnto þ Elders: Haue ye not sene how this childe of murthure hath sent hither, to take awaye my heade? Take hede, whan the messaunger cōmeth, þ ye holde him at the dore. Beholde, þ noyse of his lordes fete foloweth him. Whyle he was thus talkynge with them, beholde, þ messaunger came to him, ⁊ sayde: Beholde, this euell cōmeth of þ LORDE, and what more shal I lōke for of the LORDE?

The vij. Chapter.

ELISEUS sayde: Heare the worde of the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE: † To-morow aboute this tyme shal a buszshel of fyne meel be solde for one Sytle, and two buszshels of barley for one Sytle vnder the porte of Samaria. Then a knyghte (vpon whose hande the kyngye leane) answered the mā of God, and sayde: And though the LORDE made wyndowes in heauē, how coulde such a thinge come to passe? He saide: Beholde, thou shalt se it with thine eyes, ⁊ shalt not eate therof.

And there were foure leporous men at þ dore before the porte, and one sayde vnto another: Why tary we here whyle we dye? Though we thoughte to come in to the cite, yet is there derth in þ cite, and there shulde we be fayne to dye. And yf we tary here, we must dye also. Let vs go now, and flye vnto the hoost of the Syrians. Yf they let vs lyue, we shall lyue: yf they slaye vs, then are we deed. And so they gat them vp early, to come vnto the hoost of the Syrians. And whan they came to the vttemost ende of þ tentes, beholde, there was no body.

§ For the LORDE had made the Syrians to heare a noyse of horses, charettes, and of a mightie greate hoost, so that they sayde one to another amonge thē selues: Beholde, the kyngye of Israel hath hyred the kyngye of the Hethites, and the kyngye of the Egipcians agaynst vs, to come vpo vs. And they gat them vp, and fled early in the twilight, and leftē their bothes, and horses and Asses in the tentes as they stode, ⁊ fled euery man where he mighte saue his life.

Now whan the lepers came to the place of the tentes, they wente in to the tentes, ate and dronke, and toke syluer, golde and rayment, and wente and hyd it: ⁊ came agayne ⁊ entred in to another tent, and toke therout, and wente and hyd it. But one of them saide vnto another: Let vs not do thus, this daye is a daye of good tidynge. Yf we kepe this secrete and byde tyll the lighte mornynge, oure trespase wyl be founde out. Let vs go now therfore, that we maye come, ⁊ tell the kynges house.

And whan they came, they cried at the porte of the cite, and tolde them, and sayde: We came to the tentes of the Sirians, and beholde, there is no mā there, nether yet eny mans voyce, but horses and asses bounde, and the bothes as they stonde. Then cried þ porters and tolde it within in þ kynges house. And the kyngye arose in the nighte, ⁊ sayde vnto his seruantes: I will tell you how þ Syrians deale with vs: they knowe þ we suffer hunger, and are gone out of the tētes, to hyde them selues in the felde, and thynke thus: whan they go out of the cite, we wyll take them alyue, ⁊ come in to the cite. Then answered one of his seruantes, and sayde: Let vs take the fyue horses that remaine, which yet are leftē in the cite (beholde, these are left therein for all þ multitude in Israel, which is destroyed) let vs sende these and se. Thē toke they two charettes with ȝ horses. And the kynge sent them vnto the tentes of the Syrians, and sayde: Go youre waye and se.

¶ And whan they wente after thē vnto Iordane, beholde, the waye laye full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast from thē, whyle they made haist. And whan the messaungers came agayne, and tolde the kynge, the people wente forth, and spoyled the tentes of the Syrians. And a buszshel of fyne meell was solde for a Sytle, and two buszshels of barlye for a Sytle also, *acordinge to the worde of the LORDE. But the kynge appoynted the knyghte (vpon whose hande he leened) to be at the gate, & the people trode vpon him, so that he dyed, euen as the man of God sayde, whan the kynge came downe vnto him. And it came to passe euen as ȝ man of God tolde the kynge, whā he sayde: Tomorrow aboute this tyme shall two buszshels of barlye be solde for one Sytle, and a buszshel of fyne meel for one Sytle vnder the gate at Samaria. And the knyghte answered the man of God, and sayde: Beholde, though ȝ LORDE made wyndowes in heauen, how coulde such a thinge come to passe? Neuertheles he sayde: Beholde, with thine eyes shalt thou se it, and shalt not eate therof. And euen so fortunited it vnto him, for the people trode vpon him in the gate, ȝ he dyed.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ ELISEUS spake vnto the womā, † whose sonne he had restored vnto life agayne, and saide: Get the vp, & go with thine housholde, and be a straunger where thou canst: for the LORDE shall call for a derth, which shal come in to the londe seven yeare lōge. The woman gat her vp, and dyd as the man of God sayde, & wente with hir housholde, and was a straunger in the londe of the Philistynes seven yeare. But whan the seven yeares were ended, the woman came agayne out of the Philistynes lōde, and wente forth to crye vpon the kynge for hir house and londe. The kynge spake vnto Gehasi the seruaunt of the man of God, & sayde: Tell me all the greates actes that Eliseus hath done. And whyle he was tellynge the kynge how he had made one that was deed, to lyue agayne, beholde, the woman whose sonne he had caused to reuyue, came euen in the meane season, and cried vnto the kynge for hir house and londe. Then sayde Gehasi: My lorde O kynge, this same is the womā, and this is hir sonne, whom Eliseus restored vnto life agayne. And the kynge axed ȝ woman, and she tolde him. Then the kynge delyuered her a chamberlayne, & saide: Restore her agayne all that is hers, and all the increase of the londe, sence the tyme that she left the londe vntyll now.

‡ And Eliseus came to Damascon, & Benadab the kynge of Syria laye sicke. And it was tolde him, and sayde: The man of God is come hither. Then sayde the kynge vnto Hasael: Take giftes with the, & go mete the man of God, and axe counsell at ȝ LORDE by him, and saye: Maye I recouer from this sicknesse? Hasael wente for to mete him, and toke rewardes with him, and of all the goodes at Damascon, as moch as fortye Camels mighte beare. And whan he came, he stode before him, and sayde: Thy sonne Benadab the kynge of Syria hath sent me vnto the, sayenge: Maye I recouer from this sicknes?

Eliseus sayde vnto him: Go thy waye and tell him: Thou shalt recouer. But the LORDE hath shewed me, ȝ he shal dye ȝ death. And the man of God loked earnestly, & made a troublous countenance, & wepte. Thē sayde Hasael: Wherefore wepeth my lorde? He sayde: I knowe what euell thou shalt do vnto the children of Israel. Thou shalt burne their stronge cities with fyre, and slaye their yonge men with the swerde, and kylle their yonge children, and ryppe vp their wemen with childe.

Hasael sayde: How so, is thy seruaunt a dogg, that he shulde do soch a greate thyng? Eliseus saide: § The LORDE hath shewed me, ȝ thou shalt be kynge of Syria. And he wēte his waye from Eliseus, & came to his lorde, which saide vnto him: What saieth Eliseus vnto the? He sayde: He tolde me, Thou shalt recouer. But on the nexte daye he toke ȝ bed couerynge, and dypte it in water, and spred it ouer him, and he dyed, & Hasael was kynge in his steade.

In the fyfth yeare of Ioram the sonne of Achab kynge of Israel, was Ioram ȝ sonne of Iosaphat kynge of Iuda. ¶ Two & thirtie yeare olde was he whā he was made kyng, & reigned eighte yeare at Ierusalem, & walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, as the house of Achab dyd (for Achabs daughter was his wife) & he dyd ſ̄ which was euell in ſ̄ sighte of the LORDE. Neuertheles the LORDE wolde not destroye Iuda for his seruauunt Dauids sake, *as he promysed him, to geue him euer a lanterne amoge his childrē.

At ſ̄ same tyme fell ſ̄ Edomites awaye from Iuda, & made a kyngē ouer them selues: ſ̄ cause was this, Ioram had gone thorow Seira, and all the charettes with him, & had gotten him vp by nighte, and smytten the Edomites that were aboute him, and ſ̄ rulers ouer the charettes, so that the people fled vnto their tentes: therefore fell the Edomites awaye from Iuda vnto this daye. At the same tyme fell Libna awaye also.

What more there is to saye of Ioram, & all ſ̄ he dyd, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Ioram fell on slepe with his fathers, & was buried with his fathers in ſ̄ cite of Dauid, † & Ochosias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the twolueth yeare of Ioram the sonne of Achab kyngē of Israel, was Ochosias ſ̄ sonne of Ioram kyng in Iuda. Two and twentye yeare olde was Ochosias when he was made kyngē, and reigned one yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Atalia the daughter of Amri kyngē of Israel, & he walked in the waye of the house of Achab, & dyd that which was euell in the syght of ſ̄ LORDE, euen as dyd the house of Achab: for he was sonne in lawe in the house of Achab. And he wente with Ioram the sonne of Achab in to the battayll agaynst Hasael ſ̄ kingē of Syria vnto Ramoth in Gilead, but ſ̄ Syrians smote Ioram. "Then Ioram the kingē turned backe, to be healed at Iesreel of ſ̄ woundes, wherwith the Syrians had wounded him at Ramoth, whā he foughte with Hasael kingē of Syria. And Ochosias ſ̄ sonne of Iorā kingē of Iuda, came downe to viset Ioram the sonne of Achab at Iesreel, for he laye sicke.

The ii. Chapter.

ELISEUS the prophet called one of the prophetes childrē, & sayde vnto him: ^bGirde vp thy loynes, and take this cruse of oyle with the, and go vnto Ramoth in Gilead: and whā thou cōmest thither, thou shalt se there one Iehu, ſ̄ sonne of Iosaphat the sonne of Nimsi, and go in, and byd him stonde vp amonge his brethren, and brynge him in to the ynnmost chamber, & "take thou ſ̄ cruse of oyle, and poure it vpon his heade, & saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue anointed the to be kyngē ouer Israel: & thou shalt open the dore, and flye, and not tary. And the prophetes yonge man, the childē wente his waye vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And whan he came in, beholde, the captaynes of the hoost sat there, and he sayde: I haue somewhat to saye vnto the O captayne. Iehu saide: Vnto whom amonge vs all? He sayde: Euen vnto the o captayne.

Then stode he vp, and wente in. So he poured the oyle vpon his heade, and sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: I haue anoynted ſ̄ to be kyngē ouer the LORDES people of Israel, "and thou shalt smyte thy lorde Achabs house, that I maye auenge the bloude of my seruantes the prophetes, and the bloude of all the LORDES seruantes, from the hande of Iesabel, that all the house of Achab maye periszshe. And I wyl rote out from Achab, "euen him that maketh water agaynst the wall, and the closed vp and the desolate in Israel: and the house of Achab wyll I make euen as the house of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, and as the house of Baesa the sonne of Ahia, and ſ̄ dogges /shall eate vp Iesabel vpon the felde at Iesrael, and noman shall burye her. And he opened the dore, and fled.

And whā Iehu came forth to his lordes seruantes, they saide vnto him: Are all things well? Wherefore came this madd felowe vnto the? He saide vnto them: Ye knowe the man well, & what he hath spoken. They sayde: That is not true, but tell thou vs. He sayde: Thus and thus hath he spoken vnto me, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue anoynted the to be kyngē ouer Israel. Then made they haist, and euery one toke his garment and laied them vnder him in maner of a iudges seate, and blew the trompet, and sayde: Iehu is made kingē. So Iehu the sonne of Iosaphat the sonne of Nimsi, made a confederacion agaynst Ioram. As for Iorā he laye before Ramoth in Gilead with all Israel agaynst Hasael the kyng of Syria. *But Ioram the kyng was turned backe, y he might be healed of the woundes wherwith the Syrians had wounded him, whā he foughte with Hasael the kyng of the Syrians.

And Iehu sayde: Yf it be youre mynde, there shall noman escape out of the cite, to go and tell it at Iesrael. And he rode, and departed vnto Iesrael: for Ioram laye there, and Ochosias the kyng of Iuda was come downe to vyset Ioram. But the watchman that stode vpon the tower at Iesrael, sawe the company of Iehu commynge, and sayde: I se a company. Then sayde Ioram: Take a charet, and sende to mete thē, and saye: Is it peace? And the charettman rode to mete them, and sayde: Thus sayeth the kyng: Is it peace? Iehu sayde: What hast thou to do with peace? Turne the behynde me. The watchman tolde it, and sayde: The messaunger is come vnto them, and cōmeth not agayne. Then sent he another charettman, which when he came to them, saide: Thus sayeth the kyng: Is it peace? Iehu sayde: What hast thou to do with peace? Turne y behynde me.

And the watchman tolde it, and sayde: He is come to them: and commeth not agayne, and the goynge is as it were the goynge of Iehu the sonne of Nimsi: for he dryueth on as he were mad. Then sayde Ioram: Binde the charet fast. And they bounde the charet, and so they wente forth, Ioram the kyng of Israel, and Ochosias the kyng of Iuda, every one vpon his charet, to mete Iehu. And they founde him vpon the felde of Naboth the Iesraelite. And whan Ioram sawe Iehu, he sayde: Iehu, is it peace? But he sayde: What peace? The whordome and witchcraft of thy mother Iesabel is not yet come to an ende.

Then turned Ioram his hande and fled, and sayde vnto Ochosias: There is treason Ochosias. But Iehu toke his bowe, & shot Ioram betwene the armes, that the arowe wente thorow his hert, and he fell downe in his charet. And Iehu sayde vnto Bidekar the knyghte: Take and cast him in the pece of londe of Naboth the Iesraelite: for I remembre sence thou rodest with me in a charet after Achab his father, that the LORDE wolde laye this heuy burthen vpon him. I holde (sayde the LORDE) I wyl recompence the y bloude of Naboth and of his childrē, euen in this pece of londe. Take him now and cast him in to that pece of londe, †acordynge to the worde of the LORDE.

Whan Ochosias the kyng of Iuda sawe this, he fled by the waie vnto y garden house. But Iehu folowed after him, and commaunded to smyte him also vpon his charet in the goynge vp towarde Gur, which lieth by Ieblaam: and he fled vnto Megiddo, and dyed there. And his seruantes caused him to be caried vnto Ierusalem, and there they buried him in his awne graue with his fathers in the cite of Dauid. Ochosias reigned ouer Iuda in y eleuenth yere of Iorā y sonne of Achab. And whan Iehu came to Iesrael, and Iesabel herde therof, she coloured hir face, and decked hir heade, and loked out at the wyndowe. And whan Iehu came vnder the gate, she sayde: †Prospered Symri well that slewe his lorde?

And he lifte vp his face to the wyndow, and sayde: Who is with me? Then resorted there two or thre chamberlaynes vnto him. He sayde: Cast her downe headlynges. And they cast her downe headlynges, so that y wall and the horses were sprenkled with hir bloude, and she was troddē vnder fete. And whan he came in, and had eaten and dronken, he sayde: Loke vpon yonder cursed woman, & burye her, †for she is a kynges daughter. Neuertheles whan they wente in to burye her, they founde nothyng of her, but the szkull and the fete, and the palmes of her handes. And they came agayne and broughte him worde. He saide: This is euen it that the LORDE spake by his seruaut Elias the Thesbite, and sayde: "In the felde of Iesrael shal the dogges eate Iesabels flesh. So the deed carcase of Iesabel became euen as donge in the felde of Iesrael, so y a man coule not saye: This is Iesabel.

The x. Chapter.

ACHAB had thre score and ten sonnes at Samaria. †And Iehu wrote a letter, and sent it to Samaria, vnto the rulers of the cite Iesrael, euen vnto the Elders, & to Achabs tutors, sayenge these wordes: Whan this letter commeth vnto you with whom are youre lordes sonnes, charetes, horses, stronge cities, & ordynaunce, loke which is the best and most righteous amonge youre lordes sonnes, & set him vpon his fathers seate, and fighte for youre lordes house.

Neuertheles they were sore afrayed, and sayde: Beholde, two kynges were not able to stonde before him, how wyl we then endure? And they that were ouer the house and ouer the cite, and the Elders and tuters sent vnto Iehu, sayenge: We are thy seruauentes, we wyl do all that thou sayest vnto vs: We wil make no man kynge, do thou what pleaseth the. Then wrote he the seconde letter vnto them with these wordes: Yf ye be myne, and herken vnto my voyce, then take the heades of the men youre lordes sonnes, and brynge me them tomorow by this tyme vnto Iesrael.

B The kynges sonnes were thre score men and ten, and y chefe men of the cite broughte the vp. Now when this letter came they toke the kynges sonnes, and slewe them euen thre score men and ten, and layed their heades in baszkettes, and sent them to him vnto Iesrael. And when the messaunger came, & tolde him, and sayde: They haue broughte the heades of the kynges children, he sayde: Laye them vpon two heapes at the dore of the porte tyll tomorow.

And on the morow when he wente forth, he stode, and sayde vnto all the people: Are ye righteous? Beholde, I haue made an appoyntmēt against my lorde, and slayne him, who hath slayne all these then? Vnderstonde ye now therfore, that there is not fallen vpon the earth one worde of the LORDE, which he spake agaynst the house of Achab: and the LORDE hath done, euen * as he sayde by his seruaut Elias. So Iehu smote all the remnaunt of the house of Achab at Iesrael, all his greates men, his kynsfolkes, and his prestes, tyll there was not one lefte ouer. And he gat him vp, wente his waye, and came to Samaria.

C By the waye there was a shepherdes house, where Iehu founde the brethren of Ochosis kynge of Iuda, and sayde: Whence are ye? They sayde: We are Ochosis brethren, and are goynge downe to salute the kynges children, and the quenes children. He sayde: Take them alyue. And they toke them alyue, and slewe them by the welles syde at the shepherdes house, euen two and fortye men, and let not one of them remayne.

* 3 Re. 21. c. † 1er. 35. a.

And when he wente from thence, he foude Ionadab y sonne of † Rechab, which met him, & saluted him. And he sayde vnto him: Is thyne hert righte, as myne hert is with thyne hert? Ionadab sayde: Yee. Yf it be so (sayde he) then geue me thy hande. And he gaue him his hande. And so he caused him to syt besyde him in the charet, and sayde: Come with me, and se my zeale for the LORDE. And they caryed him with him vpon his charet. And when he came to Samaria, he smote all that remayned of Achab at Samaria, tyll he had destroyed him, acordynge to the wordes of the LORDE, ‡ which he spake vnto Elias.

And Iehu gathered all the people together, and sayde vnto them: § Achab did Baal but litle seruyce, Iehu wyl serue him better. Call vnto me now therfore all Baals prophetes, all his seruantes and all his prestes, that there be none wantynge, for I haue a greates sacrifice to do vnto Baal. Who so euer is myssed, shal not lyue. But Iehu dyd it craftely, that he mighte destroye all the mynisters of Baal. And Iehu sayde: Sanctifie y feast vnto Baal, and proclame it. And Iehu sent in to all Iesrael, and caused all Baals ministers to come, so that there was nomā lefte behynde, which came not. And they came in to Baals house, so that the house of Baal was full from one corner to another.

Then sayde he vnto him that had the rule of the vestrye: Brynge forth rayment for all Baals mynisters. And he broughte forth the rayment. And Iehu wente in to Baals house with Ionadab the sonne of Rechab, and sayde vnto Baals mynisters: Search and se that there be not here amōge you eny mynyster of the LORDE, but onely Baals mynisters.

And when they came in to offer sacrifices and burntofferynges, Iehu appoynted him foure score men without, & sayde: Yf eny of these men escape whom I delyuer vnder youre handes, then shal the same mans soule be for his soule. Now whā he had made an ende of the burntofferynge, Iehu sayde vnto the fote-men and knyghtes: Go in, & smyte euery man, let noman go forth. And they smote the with the edge of the swerde. And the fote men and knyghtes threw the awaie and wete vnto the cite of Baals house, and brought forth the piler in y house of Baal, and brent it, and brake downe Baals pyler with the house of Baal, and made a preuy house therof vnto this daie. Thus Iehu destroyed Baal out of Israel. But Iehu lefte not of from the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat (which caused Israel to synne) namely, from the golden calues at Bethel and at Dan. And the LORDE sayde vnto Iehu: Because thou hast bene wyllinge to do that which was righte in my sighte, ⁊ hast done vnto Achabs house all that was in my hert, *therfore shall thy children syt vpon y^e seate of Israel vnto the fourth generacion.

¶ Neuerthelesse Iehu was not diligent to walke in the lawe of the LORDE God of Israel with all his hert: for he lefte not of frō the synnes of Ieroboam which made Israel to synne. At the same tyme beganne the LORDE to be greued at Israel. †For Hasael smote them in all the borders of Israel from Iordane Eastwarde, and all the londe Gilead of the Gaddites, Rubenites and Manassytes, from Aroer that lyeth on the ryuer by Arnon, and Gilead and Basan.

What more there is to saye of Iehu, and all that he dyd, and all his power, beholde, it is wryten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Iehu fell on slepe with his fathers, ⁊ they buried him in Samaria. And Ioahas his sonne was kyng in his steade. The tyme that Iehu reigned ouer Israel, is eight and twentye yeares at Samaria.

The xi. Chapter.

ATHALIA the mother of Ochosias, whā she sawe that hir sonne was deed, ⁊ gat her vp, and destroyed all the kynges sede. But Ioseba kynges Iorams daughter the syster of Ochosias, toke Ioas the sonne of Ochosias and stale him awaye with his nurse in the chamber from amonge the kynges children which were slayne, and she hyd him from Athalia, so that he was not slayne. And he was hyd with her in the house of the LORDE sixe yeares. But Athalia was quene in the londe.

⁊ Neuertheles in the seuenth yeare sent Ioiada, and toke the rulers ouer hūdreds with the captaynes and fote men, and caused thē to come to him in to the house of the LORDE and made a couenant with them, and toke an oath of them in the house of the LORDE, and shewed them the kynges sonne, and cōmaunded them, and sayde: This is it that ye shall do: One thirde parte of you which enter on the Sabbath, shall kepe the watch in the kynges house, and one thyrdre parte shal be at the porte of Sur, and one thirde parte shal be at y^e porte which is behynde the fote men, and ye shal kepe the watch at the house of Massa. But two partes of you all that go of on the Sabbath, shal kepe the watch in the house of the LORDE aboute the kinge and ye shall get you rounde aboute y^e kyng and euery one with his weapen in his hande: and who so euer cōmeth within y^e wall, let him die, so that ye be with the kinge, whā he goeth out and in.

⁊ And the rulers ouer the hundreds dyd all as Ioiada the prest had commaunded them, and toke vnto them their men which entred vpon the Sabbath, with those that wente of on the Sabbath, and came to Ioiada y^e prest. And the prest gaue the captaynes speares and shyldes which had bene kynges Dauids, and were in the house of the LORDE. And the fote men stode aboute the kyng, euery one with his weapen in his hande, frō the corner on the righte syde of the house vnto the corner of the lefte syde, euen vnto the altare and to the house. And he broughte forth the kynges sonne, and set a crowne vpon his heade, and toke the ⁊ witnes, and made him kyng, and they were glad, and clapped their handes together, and sayde: God saue the kyng.

⁊ And whan Athalia herde the noyse of the people that ranne together, she came to the people in to the house of the LORDE, and loked, and beholde, the kyng stode by the piler, as the vse was, and the syngers and trōpettes by the kyng: and all the people of y^e lōde were glad, and blew with trompettes. But Athalia rente hir clothes, ⁊ sayde: Vproure, vproure. Neuertheles Ioiada y^e prest commaunded y^e rulers ouer hundreds, which were appointed ouer the hoost, and saide vnto them: Brynge her without the wall, ⁊nd whosoer foloweth hir, let him dye of the swerde (for the prest had sayde, that she shulde not dye in the house of the LORDE.) And they layde handes vpon her, and she wente in by the waye where the horses go in to y^e kynges house, and there was she slayne.

Then made Ioiada⁴ a couenant betwene the LORDE and the kyng, and the people, y^e they shulde be the people of the LORDE. Likewyse also betwixte the kyng and þ̄ people. Then wente all the people of the londe in to the house of Baal, and brake downe his altares, and destroyed his ymages right well. And Mathan the prest of Baal slewe they before the altare: And the prest appoynted the officers in the house of the LORDE, and toke the rulers ouer hundreds, and the captaynes, and the fote men, and all þ̄ people of the londe, & broughte the kyngedowne from the house of the LORDE, and came the waye from the porte of the fote men vnto the kynges house, and he sat vpon the kynges seate. And all the people of the lode were glad, and the cite was at rest. As for Athalia, they slewe her with the swerde in þ̄ kynges house. And Ioas was seuen yeare olde, whan he was made kyng.

The xij. Chapter.

IN the seuēth yeare of Iehu, was Ioas made kyng,^a and reigned fortye yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Zibea of Bersaba. And Ioas dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada þ̄ prest taught him. But they put not downe þ̄ hye places: for the people offred & brent incense yet vpon the hye places.

And Ioas sayde vnto the prestes: All the money that is sanctified to be bestowed vpō þ̄ house of the LORDE, namely the money þ̄ euery man geueth vnto the treasury, and þ̄ money that euery man geueth for his soule, and all the money that euery man geueth of a fre hert, to be bestowed on the house of the LORDE, let the prestes take it vnto them, euery one his porcion: with that shall they repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE, where they fynde that there is eny decaye.

But whan þ̄ prestes repayred not the decaye in the house vnto the thre and twētieth yeare of kyng Ioas, Ioas the kyng called Ioiada the prest with the other prestes, and sayde vnto them: Wherefore do ye not repayre the decaye in the house?

Jherfore shall ye not take the money vnto you now euery one his porcion, but shall geue it to the decaye of the house. And the prestes agreed to take no money of the people, and to repayre the decaye of the house.

^a 2 Par. 24. a.

Then Ioiada the prest toke a chest, and bored an hole aboue therin, and set it on the righte hande besyde the altare, at the entrynge in to the house of the LORDE. And the prestes that kepte the thresholde, put all the money therein that was broughte vnto the house of the LORDE. Whan they sawe then that there was moch money in the chest, * þ̄ kynges scribe came vp with the hye prest, and bounde the money together, and tolde it as moch as was founde in the house of the LORDE. And so the ready money was geuen vnto them that wrought, and were appoynted to the house of the LORDE, and they gaue it forth to the carpenters and to thē that buylded and wroughte in the house of the LORDE, namely, to the dawbers and masons, and to them that boughte tymber and fre stone, to repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE and all that they founde to haue nede of repayinge in the house.

Howbeit there were no syluer chargers, flat peces, basens, trompettes, ner eny other vessell of golde and syluer made on the house of the LORDE, of the money that was brought vnto the LORDES house: but it was geuen vnto the workmen to repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE therewith. The men also that the money was deluyered vnto, for to geue the workmen, neded not to make eny acomptes, but did their busynes vpon credence. But the money of trespase offerynges and synneofferynges was not broughte vnto the house of the LORDE: for it was the prestes.

At the same tyme wente Hasael the kyng of Syria vp, and foughte agaynst Gath, and wanne it. And whan Hasael set his face to go vp to Ierusalem, kyng Ioas toke all that was sanctified, which his fathers Iosaphat, Ioram and Ochosias the kynges of Iuda had halowed, and what he himselfe had sanctified, and all the golde that was founde in the treasures of the house of the LORDE, and in the kynges house, and sent it vnto Hasael the kyng of Syria. And so he departed from Ierusalem.

What more there is to saye of Ioas, and all that he dyd, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And his seruantes made insurreccion and conspyred, and smote him in the house of Millo, at the goynge downe vnto Silla. For Iosebar the sonne of Simeath, and Iosabad the sonne of Somer his seruantes snote him to death: and he was buried with his fathers in the cite of David. And Amasias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The iiij. Chapter.

IN § XXIII. yere of Ioas the sonne of Ochosias kynge of Iuda, was Ioahas the sonne of Iehu kynge ouer Israel at Samaria, seuentene yere: ¶ dyd ¶ which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked after the synnes of Ieroboam ¶ sonne of Nebat (which caused Israel to synne) and lefte not of from them. And ¶ wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vpon Israel, ¶ he deluyered them ouer vnder the hande of Hasael kynge of Syria, and vnder the hande of Benadad the sonne of Hasael, as longe as they lyued.

And Ioahas besoughte the face of the LORDE. And the LORDE herde him, for he considered the myserie of Israel, how the kynge of Syria oppressed them. And ¶ LORDE gaue Israel a sauoure, which broughte them out of the power of the Syrians, so ¶ the children of Israel dwelt in their tentes, like as afore tyme.

33 Yet lefte they not from the synnes of the house of Ieroboam, which caused Israel to synne, but walked in them. The groue at Samaria stode styll also. For of the people of Ioahas there were no mo lefte, but fyfthe horsmen, ten charettes, and ten thousande fote men: * for the kynge of Syria had destroyed them, and made them as the dust in the barne.

What more there is to saye of Ioahas, and all that he dyd, and his power, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ioahas fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria, ¶ Ioas his sonne was kynge in his steade.

C In the seuen and thirtieth yere of Ioas kynge of Iuda, was Ioas the sonne of Ioahas kynge ouer Israel at Samaria sixtene yere. And he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne, but walked in them. What more there is to saye of Ioas, and what he dyd, ¶ his power, how he foughte with Amasias kynge of Iuda, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ioas fell on slepe with his fathers, and Ieroboam sat vpon his seate. And Ioas was buried in Samaria with the kynges of Israel.

As for Eliseus, he fell in to a sicknes, wherof he dyed. And Ioas the kynge of Israel came downe vnto him, and wepte for him, and saide: † My father, my father, the charet man of Israel, and his horsmen. Eliseus sayde vnto him: Take the bowe and the arrowes. And whan he had taken the bowe and the arrowes, he sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: Bende the bowe with thine hande. And he bent it with his hāde. And Eliseus layed his hande vpon the kynges hande, and sayde: Open that wyndowe towarde the East. And he opened it. And Eliseus saide: Shute. And he shot. He sayde: one arrowe of the saluacion of the LORDE, one arrowe of saluacio agaynst the Syrians: and thou shalt smyte the Syrians at Aphek, tyll they be brought to naughte.

And he sayde: Take ¶ arrowes. And whā he had taken them, he sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: Smyte the earth. And he smote thre tymes and stode still. Then was the mā of God wroth at him, and sayde: Yf thou haddest smytten fyue or sixe times, thou shuldest haue smytten ¶ Syrians, tyll thou haddest vtterly brought them to naughte. But now shalt thou smyte them thre tymes.

Whan Eliseus was deed and buried, the men of warre of the Moabites fell in to the londe the same yere. And it fortunēd ¶ they buryed a certaine man. But whā they sawe the men of warre, they cast the man in to Eliseus graue. † And whan he was therin, and-touched Eliseus bones, he reuyued, and stode vpon his fete.

So Hasael the kynge of Syria oppressed Israel, as longe as Ioahas lyued. But the LORDE was gracious vnto them, and had mercy vpon them, and turned him to them for his couenauntes sake, with Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, and wolde not destroye thē ¶ nether dyd he cast them out from his presence vnto this houre.

And Hasael the kinge of Syria dyed, and Benadad his sonne was kynge in his steade. But Ioas turned backe, and toke out of the hande of Benadad the sonne of Hasael the cyties which he had takē in battail out of the hande of his father Ioahas : Thre tymes dyd Ioas smyte him, and broughte the cities of Israel agayne.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IN the seconde yeare of Ioas [¶] sonne of Ioahas kyng of Israel, was Amasias the sonne of Ioas kyng of Iuda made kyng: *twe and twenty yeare olde was he, when he was made kyng, [¶] reigned nyne and twenty yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Ioadan of Ierusalem. And he dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE: yet not as his father Dauid, but euen as his father Ioas did so dyd he also: for [¶] hys places were not put downe, but the people offred and brent incēse yet vpon the hys places. Now when he had gotten the power of the kyngdome, he smote his seruantes [†] which had smyttē the kyng his father: but the children of [¶] deed slayers slewe he not, accordinge to [¶] which is wryttē in the boke of the lawe of Moses, wherē the LORDE hath cōmaunded [¶] sayde: [‡] The fathers shal not dye for the children, [¶] the children shal not dye for the fathers: but euery one shal dye for his awne synne.

B Ten thousande of the Edomites smote he also in the Salt valley, and wanne Sela in battayll, and called it Iatheel vnto this daye. [§] Then sent Amasias messaungers vnto Ioas the sonne of Ioahas the sonne of Iehu kyng of Israel, sayenge: Come hither, let vs se one another. But Ioas [¶] kyng of Israel sent vnto Amasias the kyng of Iuda, sayenge: The hawthorne that is in Libanus, sent to the Cedar tre in Libanus, sayenge: Geue thy doughter vnto my sonne to wife. But a wyld beest of the felde ranne ouer [¶] hawthorne, and trode it downe. Thou hast smyttē the Edomites, therefore is thine hert waxen proude: Take the prayse, and byde at home: why stryuest thou for myfortune, [¶] thou mayest fall, and Iuda with the? Howbeit Amasias consented not.

C Then wēt Ioas the kyng of Israel vp, and they sawe one another, he and Amasias the kyng of Iuda at Beth Semes which lyeth in Iuda. But Iuda was smytten before Israel, so that euery one fled in to his tente. And Ioas the kyng of Israel toke Amasias the kyng of Iuda, the sonne of Ioas the sonne of Ochosias at Beth Semes, and came to Ierusalem, and brake downe [¶] wall of Ierusalem from [¶] porte of Ephraim vnto the corner porte, euen foure hundred cubites lōge: and toke all the golde and syluer, and ornementes that were founde in the house of the LORDE, and in [¶] treasures of the kynges house, [¶] the children also to pledge, [¶] departed agayne to Samaria.

What more there is to saie of Ioas, what he dyd, and of his power, [¶] how he foughte with Amasias the kyng of Iuda, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ioas fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried at Samaria amonge [¶] kynges of Israel. And Ieroboam his sonne was kyng in his steade.

But Amasias the sonne of Ioas kyng of Iuda, lyued after the death of Ioas the sonne of Ioahas kyng of Israel, fiftene yeare. What more there is to saie of Amasias, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And they conspyred agaynst him at Ierusalem, but he fled vnto Lachis. And they sent after him vnto Lachis, and slewe him there. And they broughte him vpon horses, [¶] he was buried at Ierusalem with his fathers in [¶] cite of Dauid. [¶] And all the people of Iuda toke Asarias in his sixteenth yeare, and made him kyng in steade of Amasias his father. He buylded [¶] Eloth, and broughte it agayne vnto Iuda, after that the kyng was fallen on slepe with his fathers.

In the fyfteenth yeare of Amasias the sonne of Ioas kyng of Iuda, was Ieroboam the sonne of Ioas kyng ouer Israel at Samaria, one and fortye yeare. And he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne.

But the borders of Israel broughte he agayne from Hemath vnto [¶] see that lyeth in the playne felde, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE God of Israel, which he spake by his seruaut  Ionas [¶] sonne of Amithai the prophete, which was of ^{††} Gath Ephraim. And Ieroboam fell on slepe with his fathers, with the kynges of Israel. And Zacharias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xv. Chapter.

IN the seuen & twentieth yeare of Ieroboam kynge of Israel, reigned Asarias the sonne of Amasias kynge of Iuda: and * was sixtene yeare olde when he was made kynge, and reigned two and fyfye yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Iechalia of Ierusalē. And he dyd righte in the sighte of the LORDE, acordinge to all as dyd Amasias his father, sauynge that they put not downe the hye places. For the people dyd sacryfice and brent incense yet vpon the hye places. Howbeit the LORDE smote the kynge, so that he was leper vnto his death, & dwelt in a frye house. But Iotham the kynges sonne ruled the house, and iudged the people in the londe.

In the eight and thirtieth yeare of Asarias kynge of Iuda, was Zacharias the sonne of Ieroboam kynge ouer Israel at Samaria sixe monethes. And he dyd ſ which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, euen as his fathers dyd. He departed not from ſ synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne. Iuda, & reigned one moneth at Samaria. For Menahem the sonne of Gadi wēte vp from Thirza, & came to Samaria, and smote Sellum the sonne of Iabes at Samaria, & slewe him, and was kynge in his steade.

What more there is to saye of Sellum, & of his sedicion which he stered vp, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. At the same tyme dyd Manahem smyte Tiphsa, & all ſ were therin, & the coastes therof from Thirza, because they wolde not let him in, and smote all their women with childe, and rypete them vp.

In the nyne & thirtieth yeare of Asarias kynge of Iuda, beganne Manahem the sonne of Gad to reigne ouer Israel ten yeares at Samaria, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE. As long as he lyued, departed he not from ſ synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne. And Phul the kynge of Assiria came in to the lōde. And Manahem gaue vnto Phul a thousande talentes of syluer to holde with him, and to cōfirme him in the kyngdome. And Manahem raysed vp a taxe in Israel vpon the richest, fyfte Sycles of syluer vpon euery man, to geue vnto ſ kynge of Assiria. So the kynge of Assiria wēte home agayne, and taried not in the londe.

What more there is to saye of Manahem, & all ſ he dyd, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Manahem fell on slepe with his fathers. And Pecahia his sonne was kynge in his steade.

$\text{\textcircled{f}}$ In the tyme of Pecah the kyng of Israel, came Teglathalasser the kyng of Assiria, & toke Eion, Abel Beth Maecha, Ianoha, Kedes, Hasor, Gilead, Galile, and all the londe of Nephtali, & caried the awaye in to Assiria.

And Osea the sonne of Ela conspyred agaynst Pecah the sonne of Romelia, & slue him, and was kyng in his steade in the twētieth yere of Iotham the sonne of *Osias. What more there is to saye of Pecah, & all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

$\text{\textcircled{b}}$ In the seconde yere of Pecah the sonne of Romelia kyng of Israel, was Iotham the sonne of Osias kyng of Iuda, & was fyue and twentye yere olde whan he was made kyng, and reigned sixtene yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ierusa the daughter of Sadok. And he dyd $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ which was righte in $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ sighte of the LORDE, accordinge vnto all as dyd Osias his father, sauynge that he put not downe the hye places: for the people offred & brent incense yet vpon the hye places. He buylded the hye porte of the house of the LORDE. What more there is to saye of Iotham, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wryttē in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda.

At $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ same tyme beganne $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ LORDE to sende Rezin $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ kyng of Syria, & Pecah $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ sonne of Romelia in to Iuda. And Iotham fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid his father. And Ahas his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xvi. Chapter.

$\text{\textcircled{a}}$ IN the sevententh yere of Pecah $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ sonne of Romelia, was Ahas the sonne of Iotham kyng of Iuda. Twētye yere olde was Ahas whā he was made kyng, & reigned sixtene yere at Ierusalem, & dyd not $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ which was righte in the sighte of $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ LORDE his God, as dyd Dauid his father: for he walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, †Yee and caused his sonne to go thorow the fyre, after the maner of the abhominacions of the Heythen, whom the LORDE droue awaye before the childrē of Israel. And he dyd sacrifice, and brent incense vpon the hye places, & vpon all hilles, and amonge all grene trees. † Then wente Rezin the kyng of Syria, and Pecah the sonne of Romelia kyng of Israel vp to Ierusalem to fighte agaynst it, and layed sege to Ahas: but they coule not wyne it. At the same tyme dyd Rezin the kyng of Syria, brynge $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ Eloth agayne vnto Syria, and thrust $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ Iewes out of Eloth. But the Syrians came & dwelt therin vnto this daye.

Neuertheles Ahas sent messaungers vnto Teglathalasser $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ kyng of Assiria, sayēge: I am thy seruauit & thy sonne, come vp & helpe me out of $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ hande of the kyng of Syria, & of the kyng of Israel, which are rysen vp agaynst me. And Ahas toke the syluer & golde $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ was founde in $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ house of $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ LORDE, & in the treasures of $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ kynges house, & sent a present to $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ kyng of Assiria. ¶ And $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ kyng of Assiria cōsented vnto him, & wente vp to Damascon, & wanne it, & caried them awaye vnto Cira, & slewe Rezin. And kyng Ahas wēt to Damascon for to mete Teglathalasser $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ kyng of Assiria. And whā he sawe an altare $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ was at Damascon, kyng Ahas sent a patrone & symilitude of $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ same altare vnto the prest Vrias, euen as it was made. And Vrias the prest buylded an altare, and made it cordinge as kyng Ahas had sent vnto him from Damascon, tyll Ahas $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ kyng came from Damascon.

¶ And whan $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ kyng came from Damascon, & sawe the altare, he offred theron, & kyndled his burntofferynge and meatofferynge vpon it, and poured his drynkofferings theron, & caused the bloude of $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ deedofferynge which he offred, to be sprenkled vpon the altare. But the brasen altare that stode before the LORDE, put he awaye, so that it stode not betwene the altare and the house of the LORDE, but set it in the corner on the north syde of the altare.

¶ And Ahas the kyng cōmaunded Vrias $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ prest, & sayde: Vpō the greate altare shalt thou kyndle $\text{\textcircled{f}}$ burntoffrynge in the mornynge, & the meatoffrynge in the euenynge, & the kynges burntoffrynge & his meatoffrynge, & the burntoffrynge of all the people in the londe, with their meatoffrynge & drynkoffrynge. And kynge Achas brake downe the seates, and put awaye the *ketell from aboue, and toke the lauer from the brasen bullockes that were there vnder, and set it vpon y paument of stone. And the pulpit for the Sabbath which they had buylded in the house, and y entrie of the kynges house turned he vnto the house of the LORDE, for the kynge of Assirias sake.

What more there is to saye of Achas, what he dyd, beholde, it is wryten in y Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Achas fell on slepe with his fathers, ⁊ was buried with his fathers in the cite of Daud. And Ezechias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xviij. Chapter.

IN the twolueth yere of Achas the kynge of Iuda, begāne Oseas y sonne of Ela to reigne ouer Israel at Samaria nyne yere, and dyd y which was euell in y sighte of the LORDE, but not as y kynges of Israel y were before him. Agaynst him dyd Salmanassar y kynge of Assiria come vp. And Oseas was subiecte vnto him, ⁊ gaue him trybutes. But whā y kynge of Assiria perceaued y Oseas had conspyred ⁊ sent messaungers to Sua y kynge of Egipte, ⁊ payed not trybute yearly to y kynge of y Assirians, he beseged him ⁊ put him in preson. † And the kynge of Assiria wente vp in to all the londe and to Samaria, and layed sege vnto it thre yere. ‡ And in the nyenth yere of Oseas dyd y kynge of Assiria wyne Samaria, § and caried Israel awaye in to Assiria, and set them at Halah and at Habor by the water Gosan, and in the cities of the Meedes.

¶ For whan the childrē of Israel synned agaynst y LORDE their God (y broughte thē out of y londe of Egipte, from the hāde of Pharaο kynge of Egipte) and serued other goddes: and walked after the customes of the Heythē, whom the LORDE had dryuen out before the children of Israel, and dyd as the kynges of Israel, and prouoked y LORDE their God, and dyd secretly the thinges that were not righte in the sighte of y LORDE their God: namely in that they buylded them hye places in all cities, both in castels and stronge cities, and set vp pilers and groues, vpon all hye hilles, and amonge all grene trees, and brent incense there in all y hye places, euen as dyd the Heythen, whom the LORDE had cast out before them, ⁊ wroughte wicked thinges, wherwith they prouoked the LORDE vnto wrath, ⁊ serued the Idols, wherof the LORDE sayde vnto them: ¶ Ye shal not do soch a thyng.

And whan the LORDE testified in Israel and Iuda by all the prophetes and Seers, sayenge: ¶ O turne agayne from youre euell wayes, and kepe my commaundemētes and ordynaunces, accordinge to all y lawe which I gaue vnto youre fathers, and that I sent vnto you by my seruantes the prophetes: they wolde not herken,  but hardened their neckes, acordinge to the hardneck of their fathers, which beleued not on the LORDE their God. Yee they despyed his ordynaunces and his couenaunt which he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he witnessed amonge them, and walked in their awne vanities, and became wayne folowinge the Heythen, which dwelt rounde aboute them, concernynge whom the LORDE had commaunded them, that they shulde not do as they dyd. Neuertheles they forsoke all the commaundementes of the LORDE their God †† and made them two molten calues and groues, and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, ⁊ serued Baal, and ‡ caused their sonnes and daughters to go thorow the fyre, and medled with soythsayers and witches, and gaue them selues ouer to do that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath.

Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which turned Israel back from f LORDE, τ caused thē to synne so sore. Thus walked the childrē of Israel in all f synnes of Ieroboam, which he had done, τ departed not frō them, vntyll f LORDE put Israel out of his presence, accordinge as he had spokē by all his seruantes f prophetes. *So Israel was caried awaye out of their awne londe to Assiria vnto this daye.

The kynge of Assiria caused men to come frō Babilon, from Cutha, frō Aua, from Hemath τ Sepharuaim, τ caused thē to inhabite f cities in Samaria in steade of the children of Israel. And they toke possession of Samaria, τ dwelt in f same cities. But whā they begāne to dwell there, τ feared not f LORDE, the LORDE sent lyons amōge thē, which slewe them. And they caused it be sayde vnto f kynge of Assiria: The Heythē whom thou hast broughte hither, τ caused them to inhabite the cities of Samaria, knowe not the lawe of f God of the londe. Therefore hath he sent lyons amōge them, τ beholde, they slaye thē, because they knowe not the ordinaunce of the God of the londe.

f The kynge of Assiria cōmaunded τ saide: Bringe thither one of f prestes f were caried awaye frō thence τ let him go thither, τ dwell there, τ teach thē the ordinaunce of the God of f londe. Then came one of f prestes which were caried awaye from Samaria, τ dwelt at Bethel, τ taughte them how they shulde feare f LORDE. But euery people made thē goddes, τ put thē in the houses vpon f hye places, which the Samaritanes had made, euery people i their cities wherin they dwelt. They of Babilō made Sochoth Benoth. They of Chut made Nergel. They of Hemath made Asima. They of Aua made Nibehas τ Tharthak. They of Sepharuaim burnt their sonnes vnto Adramelech and Anamelech f goddes of thē of Sepharuaim.

f And whyle they feared f LORDE, they made prestes in f hye places of f lowest amonge them, τ put them in f houses of f hye places: thus they feared f LORDE, τ serued f goddes also, accordinge to f custome of euery nacion, from whence they were broughte. And vnto this daye do they after f olde fashion, so f they nether feare f LORDE, ner yet kepe their awne ordinaunces and lawes, after the lawe and commaundement that the LORDE cōmaunded the childrē of Iacob, \dagger vnto whom he gaue f name of Israel, and made a couenaunt with them, and commaunded them, and sayde: \dagger Feare none other goddes, and worshippe them not, and serue them not, and offer not vnto them: but the LORDE which broughte you out of the lōde of Egipte, with greate power and outstretched arme, Him feare, him worshippe, τ vnto him do sacrifice: and the statutes, ordinaunces, lawe τ cōmaundement which he hath caused to be wrytten vnto you, those se that ye kepe, that ye allwaye do therafter, and feare none other goddes. And forget not the couenaunt which he hath made with you, lest ye feare other goddes. But feare f LORDE youre God, he shall deluyer you from all youre enemies. Neuertheles they wolde not herken, but dyd after their olde custome.

Thus these Heythen feared the LORDE, and serued their Idols also, and so dyd their children and childers childrē likewise. Euē as their fathers haue done before them, so do they vnto this daye.

The xviij. Chapter.

IN the thirde yere of Oseas f sonne of Ela f kynge of Israel, f reigned Ezechias f sonne of Achas kynge of Iuda. And he was fyue and twentie yere olde whan he was made kynge, τ reigned nyne τ twentye yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Abi the daughter of Zachary. And he dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, accordinge vnto all as dyd Dauid his father. \parallel He put awaye the hye places, and brake downe the pilers, τ roted out the groues, and brake the brasen serpente * which Moses had made. For vnto that tyme had the children of Israel brent incēse vnto it. And it was called Nehusthan. He put his trust in the LORDE God of Israel, so that after him there was not his like amōge all the kynges of Iuda nether had bene before him. He cleued vnto the LORDE, and departed not backe from him, and kepte his commaundementes, which the LORDE had cōmaunded Moses. And the LORDE was with him. And whither so euer he wēt forth, he behaued him selfe wysely. He resisted the kynge f of Assiria, and was not subdued vnto him.

* He smote the Philistynes also vnto Gasa, and their borders, from the castels vnto the stronge cities.

In the fourth yere of Ezechias kynge of Iuda^d (ȝ was the seventh yere of Oseas the sonne of Ela kynge of Israel) came Salmanasar the kynge of Assiria vp agaynst Samaria, and layed sege vnto it, and wanne it after thre yeres in the sixte yere of Ezechias, that is in the nyenth yere of Oseas kynge of Israel, thē was Samaria wonne. And the kynge of Assiria caried Israel awaye vnto Assiria, and set them at Halah and Habor by the water Gosan, and in the cities of the Meedes. And all because they herkened not vnto the voyce of the LORDE their God, and had transgressed his couenant: And as for all that Moses the seruaut of the LORDE had commaunded thē, they had nether herkened vnto eny of those, ner done them.

C In the fourtēth yere of kynge Ezechias dyd Sennacherib ȝ kynge of Assiria^a come vp agaynst all the stronge cities of Iuda, ȝ coquered thē. Then sent Ezechias the kynge of Iuda to ȝ kynge of Assiria vnto Lachis, sayenge: I haue offended, turne back fro me: loke what thou layest vnto me, I wil beare it. Thē the kynge of Assiria layed vnto Ezechias the kynge of Iuda, thre hundred talentes of syluer, ȝ thirtie talentes of golde. † So Ezechias gaue all ȝ syluer ȝ was foude in ȝ house of the LORDE, ȝ in the treasures of ȝ kynges house. At ȝ same tyme brake Ezechias the kynge of Iuda the dores of the tēple of ȝ LORDE, ȝ the plates of golde which he him selfe had caused to laye ouer thē, ȝ gaue thē vnto the kynge of Assiria.

¶ And the kynge of Assiria sent Thartan, and the chefe chamberlayne, ȝ the chefe butler from Lachis to kynge Ezechias with a greate power vnto Ierusalem. And they wēte vp: and when they came there, they stode styll at the condyte by the ouer pole, which lyeth in the waye vp to the fullers londe, and called vnto the kynge. Thē came there forth vnto them Eliachim the sonne of Helchias the stewarde, and Sobna the scribe, ȝ Ioah the sonne of Assaph the Secretary.

D And the chefe butler sayde vnto thē: Tell kynge Ezechias: Thus sayeth ȝ greate kynge, eue the kynge of Assiria: What presumption is this ȝ thou trustest vnto? Thinkest thou, ȝ thou hast yet counsell and power to fighte? Where vnto trustest thou then, that thou art fallen of fro me? Beholde, putttest thou thy trust in this broken staffe of rede, in Egipte? which who leaneth vpon, it shall go in to his hande, ȝ pearse it thorow. Euen so is Pharao the kynge of Egipte vnto all them that put their trust in him. But yf ye wolde saye vnto me: We put oure trust in ȝ LORDE oure God. Is not that he, whose hye places and altares Ezechias hath takē downe, and sayde vnto Iuda and Ierusalē: Before this altare which is at Ierusalē, shal ye worshippe?

Make a multitude now therfore vnto my lorde the kynge of Assiria, and I wil geue ȝ two thousande horses, let se yf thou be able to man them: how wilt thou then endure before the smallest pryncce of my lordes subiectes? And trustest thou vnto Egipte because of the charettes and horsmen? But thinkest thou that I came vp hither without ȝ LORDE to destroye these cities? The LORDE hath commaunded me: Go vp in to that londe and destroye it.

Then sayde Eliachim the sonne of Helchia ȝ Sobna and Ioah vnto the chefe butler: Speake to thy seruantes in the Syriās language, for we understonde it, and speake not vnto vs in the Iewes speche before the eares of the people that are vpon the wall. Neuertheles ȝ chefe butler sayde vnto thē: Hath my lorde then sent me vnto thy lorde, or to the, to speake these wordes? Yee euen vnto the men, which syt vpon the wall, that they maye eate their owne donge and drynke their owne stale with you. So the chefe butler stode and cried with loudē voyce in the Iewes language, and spake and sayde: Heare the worde of the greate kynge the kynge of Assiria. Thus sayeth the kynge: Let not Ezechias disceaue you, for he is not able to delyuer you fro my hāde: ȝ let not Ezechias make you to trust in the LORDE, sayenge: The LORDE shall delyuer vs, and this cite shal not be geuen in to the handes of ȝ kynge of Assiria. Folowe not ye Ezechias, for thus sayeth the kynge of Assiria:

As for the people, they helde their peace, and gaue him no answer: for the kyng had commaunded and sayde: Answer him nothing. Then came Eliachim the sonne of Helchia \hat{y} stewarde, and Sobna the scribe, and Ioah the sonne of Assaph the Secretary vnto Ezechias with rente clothes, and tolde him the wordes of the chefe butler.

And whā kyng Ezechias seruantes came to Esay, Esay sayde vnto them: Speake thus vnto youre lorde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Feare not thou the wordes \hat{y} thou hast herde, wherwith the kyng of Assirias seruantes haue blasphemed me. Beholde, I wil put him in another mynde, so \hat{y} he shall heare tydinges, \hat{a} go agayne in to his awne countre, \hat{a} in his awne londe wil I cause him to fall thorow the swerde.

Then turned he back, \hat{a} sent messaungers to Ezechias, \hat{a} caused to saye vnto him: Let not thy God disceau the, on whom thou trustest \hat{a} sayest: Ierusalem shal not be geuē in to the hāde of the kyng of Assiria. Beholde, thou hast herde what the kynges of Assiria haue done vnto all londes, \hat{a} how they dāned them, \hat{a} shalt thou be deliyuered? Haue \hat{y} goddesses of \hat{y} Heithen deliyuered thē, whom my father destroyed, as Gosan, Haran, Reseph, \hat{a} the childrē of Eden which were at Thalassar? And whan Ezechias had receaued the letters of the messaungers and had red them, he wente vp vnto the house of the LORDE, and layed them abrode before the LORDE, \hat{a} made his prayer before the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, thou that syttest vpō the Cherubins, thou onely art God amonge all \hat{y} kyngdomes of the earth, thou hast made heauen and earth. Enclnye thine eare O LORDE, and heare: open thine eyes, and beholde, and heare the wordes of Sennacherib, which hath sent hither to blaspheme the lyuynge God. But now O LORDE helpe thou vs out of his hande, that all the kyngdomes vpon earth maye knowe, that thou LORDE art God alone.

I haue dygged and dronke vp the ſtraunge waters, and with ꝑ ſoles of my fete haue I dried vp the See.

But haſt thou not herde how that I haue done this longe agoo, and haue prepared it from the begynnynge? Now haue I cauſed it for to come, that contentious ſtronger cities mighte fall in to a waist heape of ſtones, ⁊ they that dwell therein, ſhal be faynte, and fearfull and a ſhamed, *and ſhal be as the graſſe vpon the felde, and as ꝑ grene herbe and hay vpon the houſe toppes, that wythereth afore it be growne vp. I knowe thy habitacion, thy out and ingoynge, and that thou rageſt agaynſt me. For ſo much then as thou rageſt agaynſt me, and ſeynge thy preſumption is come vp to myne eares, therefore wyll I put a rynge in thy noſe, and a brydle bytt in thy lippes, and wyll brynge the agayne, euen the ſame waye thou cameſt.

And let this be a token vnto the O Ezechias. In this yere eate ꝑ which is fallen, in the ſeconde yere ſoch as groweth of it ſelfe: In ꝑ thirde yere ſowe and reape, and plante vynyardes, and eate the frute therof. And the daughter Iuda which is eſcaped ⁊ remayneth, ſhall from hence forth take rote beneth, and beare frute aboue. For the remnant ſhal go forth from Ieruſalem, ⁊ they ꝑ are eſcaped, ſhall go out fro mount Sion. The gelouſy of the LORDE Zebaoth ſhall brynge this to paſſe.

Therefore thus ſayeth the LORDE concerninge ꝑ kynge of the Assyrians: He ſhall not come in to this cite, and ſhall ſhute no arowe therein, nether ſhal there come eny ſhyld before it, nether ſhall he dygge eny backe aboute it, but ſhal go agayne the waye that he came, and ſhall not come in to this cite, ſayeth the LORDE: And I wyll defende this cite, to helpe it for myne awne ſake, and for my ſeruauſt Dauids ſake.

And in the ſame nighte wente the angell of the LORDE, and ſmote in the hoost of the Assyrians, an hundreth and fyue and foure ſcore thouſande men. And when they gatt them vp in the mornynge, beholde, all laye full of deed coarſes. † So Sennacherib the kynge of Assyria brake vp, and departed, and returned, and abode at Ninieue. And as he worſhipped in ꝑ houſe of Neſrach his god, his awne ſonnes Adramalech and Sarazer ſmote him with the ſwerde, and fled in to ꝑ londe of Ararat. And Aſarhadon his ſonne was kynge in his ſtede.

The xx. Chapter.

AT that tyme was Ezechias deediſicke, ⁊ And the prophet Eſay ꝑ ſonne of Amos, came to him, ⁊ ſayde vnto him: Thus ſayeth ꝑ LORDE: Set thine houſe in ordre for thou ſhalt dye ⁊ not lyue. And he turned, his face to the wall, and prayed vnto ꝑ LORDE, and ſayde: Remembre (O LORDE) that I haue walked faithfully before the, ⁊ with a perfecte hert, and haue done ꝑ which is good in thy ſyghte. And Ezechias wepte ſore. But when Eſay was not gone out of halfe the cite, ꝑ worde of ꝑ LORDE came to him, ⁊ ſayde: Turne back, ⁊ tell Ezechias ꝑ pryncer of my people: Thus ſayeth ꝑ LORDE God of thy father Dauid: I haue herde thy praier, ⁊ conſidered thy teares. Beholde, I wil heale ꝑ: on the thirde daye ſhalt thou go in to ꝑ houſe of the LORDE, ⁊ fiftene yeaſes wil I adde vnto thy life, ⁊ wyll delyuer the ⁊ this cite from the kynge of Assyria, ⁊ this cite wil I defende for myne awne ſake, and for my ſeruauſt Dauids ſake. And Eſay ſayde: Bringe hither a quantite of fygges. And when they broughte them, they layed them vpon the ſore, and it was healed.

Ezechias ſayde vnto Eſay: Which is ꝑ token, that the LORDE wyll heale me, and that I ſhal go vp in to the houſe of ꝑ LORDE on the thirde daye? Eſay ſayde: This token ſhalt thou haue of the LORDE, that the LORDE ſhal do acordynge as he hath ſayde. Shall the ſadowe go ten degrees forwarde, or ſhal it turne ten degrees backward? Ezechias ſayde: It is an eaſy thinge for the ſadowe to go ten degrees downewarde, ꝑ is not my mynde: but that it go ten degrees backward. Then cryed the prophet Eſay vnto the LORDE, ⁊ the ſadowe wente backe ten degrees in Achaſ Dyall, which he was deſcended afore.

At the ſame tyme Merodach Baladan the sonne of Baladan kynge of Babilon, sent letters and presentes vnto Ezechias, for he had herde that Ezechias had bene sicke. And Ezechias reioysed with them, ⁊ shewed them all the house of rotes, the syluer, golde, spyces, and the best oyle, and the house of ordinaunce, and all that was founde in his treasures. There was nothinge in his house and in all his domynion, but Ezechias shewed it them.

Then came Esay the prophet vnto kynge Ezechias, and sayde vnto him: What haue these men sayde? and whence came they vnto the? Ezechias sayde: They came to me out of a farre countre, euen from Babilon. He sayde: What haue they sene in thyne house? Ezechias sayde: They haue sene all that is in my house, and there is nothinge in my treasures but I haue shewed it them. Then sayde Esay vnto Ezechias: Heare the worde of the LORDE: Beholde, * the tyme commeth, that it shall all be caried awaye vnto Babilon, and whatsoever thy fathers haue layed vp vnto this daye, and there shall nothinge be lefte, sayeth the LORDE. † Yee and the children which come of the, whom thou shalt beget, shalbe taken awaye, to be chamberlaynes in the kynge of Babilons palace. Ezechias sayde vnto Esay: It is good that the LORDE hath spoken. And he sayde morouer: Let there be peace yett and faithfulness in my tyme.

What more there is to saye of Ezechias, and all his power, and what he dyd, and of the pole and water condyte, wher by he conueyed water in to the cite, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. ‡ And Ezechias fell on slepe with his fathers, and Manasses his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xxi. Chapter.

MANASSES was twolue yeare olde, when he was made kinge, ⁊ reigned fyue and fyfthe yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Hephziba. And he dyd that which was euell in ⁊ sight of the LORDE (euen after the abhominacions of the Heithen, whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel) and waxed frowarde, and builded vp the hye places which his father Ezechias had destroyed,^b and sett vp Baals altares, and made groues (as Achab the kynge of Israel dyd) and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued them. And buylded altares in the LORDES house, wherof the LORDE sayde: I wyll set my name at Ierusalem. And in both the courtes of the house of the LORDE buylded he altares vnto all the hoost of heauē. And ⁊ caused his sonne to go thorow the fyre, and regarded byrdescreynge and tokens, and maynteyned soyshtsayers, and expounders of tokens, and so moch dyd he of this which was euell in the sight of the LORDE, that he prouoked him vnto wrath.

A groue Idol also which he had made, set he in the house, wherof the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid and to Salomon his sonne: In this house, and at Ierusalem (¶ which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel) wil I set my name for euer, and wyl not cause ⁊ fote of Israel to be remoued eny more from the londe, which I gaue vnto their fathers, yee so that they obserue and do acordinge vnto all that I haue charged them, and after all the lawe that my seruauent Moses comāunded them. Neuertheles they wolde not herken, but Manasses disceaued them, so ⁊ they dyd worse then the Heithen, whom the LORDE expelled before ⁊ children of Israel.

Then spake the LORDE by his seruantes the prophetes, and saide: Because that Manasse the kynge of Iuda hath gone these abhominacions, which are worse then all ⁊ abhominacions that the Amorites haue done which were before them, and hath caused Iuda also to synne agaynst their God, therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: ¶ Beholde, I wyll brynge soch a plage vpon Ierusalem and Iuda, that who so euer heareth it, both his eares shal glowe, and ouer Ierusalem wyll I stretch forth the lyne of Samaria, and the weighte of the house of Achab, and wyll wype out Ierusalem, euen as one wyppeth a platter, and I wyl ouerthrowe it. And ⁊ remnaunt of myne inheritance wil I cast out, ⁊ scatter them abroad, ⁊ wil deluyuer them in to the hādes of their enemies, to be spoyled and rent of all their enemies: because they haue done ⁊ which is euell in my sighte, ⁊ haue prouoked me vnto wrath, sence the daye that I broughte their fathers out of Egipte, vnto this daye. wherwith he caused Iuda for to synne, so y they dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE.

What more there is to saie of Manasses, and all that he dyd, and his synnes which he comytted, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Manasses fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in the garden besyde his house, namely, in the garden of Vsa, and Amon his sonne was kyng in his steade.

Two and twente yeare olde was Amon whan he was made kyng, and he reigned two yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Mesumeleth, y daughter of Harus of Iatba, and he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, as Manasses his father had done, and walked in all the waye which his father walked, and serued the Idols which his father had serued, and worshipped them, and forsoke the LORDE the God of his father, and walked not in the waye of the LORDE.

And his seruantes conspyred agaynst Amon, and slewed the kyng in his house. But the people of the londe slewed all them y had cospyred agaynst kyng Amon. And the people of the londe made Iosias his sonne kyng in his steade. As for other thinges that Amon dyd, beholde, they are wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And he was buried in his graue in Vsas gardē. And Iosias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xxij. Chapter.

IOSIAS was eight yeare olde whā he was made kyng, and reigned one and thirtie yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Iedida the daughter of Adaia of Bascath, and he dyd that which was righte in y sighte of the LORDE, and walked in all y waye of David his father, and turned not asyde, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte.

And in the eighteenth yeare of kyng Iosias, the kyng sent Saphan y sonne of Asalia the sonne of Mesulam the scribe, in to y house of the LORDE, and sayde: *Go vp to Helchias the hye prest, that the money that is brought vnto y house of y LORDE (which the tresholde keepers haue gathered of y people) maye be deluyered vnto them, that they maye geue it to the workmen which are appoynted in the house of the LORDE, and to geue it vnto the labourers in the house (y they maye repayre the decaye of the house) namely, vnto the carpenters, and buylders, and masons, and to them y bie timber and fre stone for the repaireinge of the house: but so y there be no accomptes taken of them concernynge the money, that is vnder their hande, but y they deale withall vpon credence.

And Helchias y prest sayde vnto Saphā the scribe: *I haue founde the boke of the lawe in the house of the LORDE. And Helchias gaue the boke vnto Saphan, that he might reade it. And Saphan the scribe bare it vnto the kyng, and brought him worde agayne, and sayde: Thy seruantes haue gathered together y money y was founde in the house, and haue deluyered it vnto the workmē, which are appoynted in y house of the LORDE. And Saphan the scribe tolde the kyng and sayde: Helchias the prest hath deluyered me a boke, and Saphan red it before the kyng.

But whan the kinge herde the wordes of the boke of lawe, he rente his clothes. And the kyng cōmaunded Helchias the prest, and Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, and Achbor the sonne of Michaia, and Saphan the scribe, and Asaia y kynges seruauant, and sayde: *Go youre waye and axe counsell at the LORDE for me, for the people, and for all Iuda, concernynge the wordes of this boke that is founde: for greate is the wrath of the LORDE that is kyndled ouer vs, because oure fathers haue not herkened vnto the wordes of this boke, to do all that is wrytten vnto vs therin.

Then wente Helchias the prest, and Ahicam, Achbor, Saphan and Asaia vnto Hulda the prophetisse y wife of Sellū the sonne of Thecua the sonne of Harham the keeper of y clothes, and she dwelt at Ierusalem in the seconde porte, and they spake vnto her. And she sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth y LORDE God of Israel: Tell the man that sent you vnto me, Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I wil brynge euell vpon this place, and the inhabitors therof, euen all the wordes of y lawe which the kyng hath caused to be red, because they haue forsaken me, and brent incense vnto other goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath with all the workes of their handes. Therefore is my wrath kindled agaynst this cite, and shall not be quenched.

But tell this vnto the kyng of Iuda, which hath sent you to axe counsell at the LORDE: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Because thine hert is not departed fro the wordes which thou hast herde, and hast humbled thyselfe before the LORDE, to heare what I haue spoken agaynst this place and the inhabitants therof (how that they shall become a very desolacion and curse) ¶ hast rente thy clothes, and wepte before me, I haue herde it, sayeth the LORDE: "therefore wyll I gather the vnto thy fathers, so y thou shalt be put in to thy graue in peace, and thine eyes shall not se all the euell that I wyll brynge vpon this place. And they brought the kynge worde agayne.

The xxiij. Chapter.

¶ AND the kynge sent forth, and "all the Elders in Iuda and Ierusalem resorted vnto him, and the kynge wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, and all the men of Iuda, and all the inhabitants of Ierusalem with him, the prestes and prophetes and all the people both small and greate, "and all the wordes of the boke of the couenaunt that was founde in the house of the LORDE, were red in their eares. And the kinge stode vpon a piler, "and made a couenaunt before the LORDE, that they shulde walke after the LORDE, and to kepe his commaundementes, witnesses, and ordinaunces with all their hert and with all their soule, y they shulde set vp the wordes of this couenaunt, which are wrytten in this boke. And all the people entred in to the couenaunt.

And the kynge comaunded Helchias the hie prest, and the prestes of the secōde course, and the keepers of the thresholde, y they shulde put out of the temple all the vessels which were made for Baal, and for the groue, and for all the hoost of heauen, ¶ he brent them without Ierusalem in the valley of Cedron, and the dust of them was carryed vnto Bethel.

¶ 33 And he put downe the Kemurims, whō the kynges of Iuda had founded, to burne incense vpon the hie places, in the cities of Iuda, and aboute Ierusalem. He put downe also them that brent incense vnto Baal, to the Sonne, and the Mone, and the twolue tokens, and to all y hoost of heauen. And the groue caused he to be carryed from the house of the LORDE out of Ierusalem in to y valley of Cedron, and brent it in the valley of Cedron, and made it to dust, and cast the dust vpon the graues of y comen people. And he brake downe the whorekeepers houses which were by the house of the LORDE, wherin the women made mansions for the groue.

And he caused all the prestes for to come out of the cities of Iuda, and suspended y hie places, where the prestes brent incense, from Geba vnto Berseba. And brake downe the hie places in the portes, that were at y dore of the gate of Iosua y shreue of the cite, at the leftte hande as one goeth to the cite porte. Yet had not the prestes of the hie places offred vpon the altare of the LORDE at Ierusalem, but ate vneuened bred amonge their brethren.

¶ C He suspended y Tophet also in the valley of the children of Ennon, that noman shulde cause his sonne or his daughter to go thorow y fyre vnto Moloch. And he put downe the horses, which y kynges of Iuda had set vnto the Sonne, at the intringe in to the house of the LORDE, besyde the chest of Netham Melech the chamberlayne which was at Paruarim, and the charettes of the Sonne brent he with fyre, and the altares vpon the rofe of Achabs perler, which the kynges of Iuda had made. And the altares ¶ which Manasses had made in the two courtes of the house of the LORDE, dyd the kynge breake downe. And ranne from thence, and cast the dust of them in to the broke Cedron.

And the hie places that were before Ierusalem on the righte hande of Mount Mashith ¶ which Salomon the kynge of Israel had buylded vnto Astaroth the abhominacion of Sidon, and to Camos the abhominacion of Moab, and to Malcom the abhominacion of the children of Ammon, those did the kynge suspende, and brake the pilers, and rote out the groues, and fylled their places with mens bones.

¶ D And the altare at Bethel, and the hie place that Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat made, which caused Israel to synne, the same altare brake he downe, and the hie place, ¶ brent the hie place, and made it to dust, and brent vp the groue. And he sayde: What titell is this, that I se here? And the men of the cite sayde vnto him: It is the graue of the man of God, which came from Iuda, and cried out this that thou hast done agaynst þe altare of Bethel. And he sayde: Let him lye, no man touche his bones. Thus were his bones deliuered with the bones of the prophet that came from Samaria.

¶ He put awaye also all the houses of the hye places in the cities of Samaria (which the kynges of Israel had made to prouoke þe LORDE vnto wrath) and dyd with them accordinge to all as he had done at Bethel. And all þe prestes of the hye places that were there, offred he vp vpon the altares, and so brent he mens bones thereon, and came agayne to Ierusalem.

* And the kynge commaunded the people, and sayde: Kepe Easter vnto the LORDE youre God, † as it is written in the boke of this couenaut. For there was no Easter so kepte as this, sence the tyme of the Iudges which iudged Israel, and in all the tymes of the kynges of Israel, and of the kynges of Iuda: but in the eighteenth yere of kynge Iosias, was this Easter kepte vnto the LORDE at Ierusalem.

And Iosias expelled all soysayers, expounders of tokes, ymages and Idols, and all the abominacions which were sene in the londe of Iuda and at Ierusalem, that he mighte set vp the wordes of the lawe, which were written in the boke, that Helchias þe prest foude in the house of þe LORDE.

¶ His like was no kynge before him, which so couerted vnto þe LORDE with all his hert, with all his soule, & with all his strength, accordinge to all the lawe of Moses. And after him came there not vp soch another. Yet turned not the LORDE from the indignacion of his greate wrath, wherwith he was displeased ouer Iuda, because of all the prouocation wherwith Manasses had prouoked him. And þe LORDE sayde: ‡ I wil put Iuda out of my presence also, euen as I haue put awaye Israel: and this cite which I haue chosen, wyl I cast out, namely, Ierusalem, & the house wherof I sayde: My name shalbe there. What more there is to saye of Iosias, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda.

* In his tyme wete Pharao Necho þe kynge of Egipte vp agaynst the kynge of Assyria by the water Euphrates. But kynge Iosias wente agaynst him, and dyed at Megiddo, whā he had sene him. And his seruantes caried him deed fro Megiddo, & brought him to Ierusalē, & buried him in his graue. And the people of the londe toke ¶ Ioahas the sonne of Iosias, and anoynted him, and made him kynge in his fathers steade.

And he dyd þe which was euell in þe sight of þe LORDE, euen as his fathers had done. But Pharao Necho toke him presoner of Reblatha in the londe of Hemath, þe he shulde not reigne at Ierusalem: & raysed a taxe vpo the londe, an hundredth talētes of siluer, & one talente of golde. And Pharao Necho made Eliachim þe sonne of Iosias kynge in his father Iosias steade, & turned his name Ioachim. ¶ But Ioahas toke he, & brought him in to Egipte where he dyed. And Ioachim gaue the siluer & golde vnto Pharao, yet taxed he the londe, þe he might geue þe syluer acordinge to Pharaos cōmaundement. Euery one amonge the people in þe londe taxed he after his abilitie in siluer & golde, to geue it vnto Pharao. was with the chefe captayne, brake downe the walles rounde aboute Ierusalem. As for the other people that yet were lefte in the cite, and were fallē vnto the kinge of Babilon, and the other comen people, Nabusaradan the chefe captayne caryed them awaye. And of the poorest people dyd the chefe captaine leaue in ¶ londe to be wynegardeners and plowmen.

But the brasen pilers in the house of the LORDE, and the seates, and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the LORDE, dyd ¶ Caldees breake downe, and caryed the metall vnto Babilon. And the pottes, shouels, fleshokes, spones, ¶ all ¶ brasen vessell that was occupied in the seruyce, caryed they awaye. And ¶ chefe captayne toke awaye ¶ censors and basens ¶ were of golde and syluer, two pilers, one lauer, and the seates ¶ Salomon had made for ¶ house of the LORDE. The metall of all these ornamentes coulede not be weyed. *Eightene cubytes hye was one piler, and ¶ knoppe theron was of brasse also, ¶ thre cubytes hye: ¶ the rope and the pomgranates vpon the knoppe rounde aboute, were all of brasse. After the same maner was the other piler also with the rope.

¶ And the chefe captayne toke Seraia the prest of the first course, ¶ Sophony the prest of the seconde course, and thre dorekeepers, and one chamberlayne out of the cite, which was appoynted ouer ¶ men of warre: and fyue men that were euer before the kynge, which were founde in the cite: and Sophar the captayne, which taught the people of ¶ londe to fighte: and thre score men of ¶ people of the londe, that were founde in the cite: these dyd Nabusaradan ¶ chefe captayne take, and broughte them to the kynge of Babilon vnto Reblatha. And the kynge of Babilon slewe them at Reblatha in ¶ londe of Hemath. Thus was Iuda caryed awaye out of his awne londe. ¶ But ouer the remnaunt of the people in the londe of Iuda, whom Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon lefte behynde, he set Godolias ¶ sonne of Ahicam ¶ sonne of Saphan. Now whā all the captaynes of the soudyers, ¶ the men herde, that the kynge of Babilon had made Godolias gouernoure, they came to Godolias vnto ¶ Mispā, namely, Ismael ¶ sonne of Nathanas, ¶ Iohanna ¶ sonne Carea, ¶ Seraia ¶ sonne of Tanhometh the Netophatite, ¶ Iesanas ¶ sonne of Maechati with their men. And Godolias sware vnto them ¶ to their men, ¶ sayde vnto them: ¶ Feare not ye ¶ officers of the Caldees, tary in the londe, ¶ submytte youre selues vnto the kynge of Babilon, ¶ ye shal prospere. ¶ But in the seuēth moneth came Ismael the sonne of Nathanas the sonne of Elisama (of the kynges kynred) and ten men with him, and slewe Godolias, and the Iewes and Caldees that were with him at Mispā. Then all the people gat them vp, both small and greate, and the captaynes of the hoost, and came in to Egipte, for they were afayed of ¶ Caldees.

Howbeit in the seuē and thirtieth yere after that I Joachim the kynge of Iuda was caryed awaye on the seuē and twenty daye of the twoluēth moneth, Euilmerodach the kynge of Babilon in the first yere of his reigne, lifte vp the heade of I Joachim ¶ kynge of Iuda out of preson, and spake louyngly vnto him, and set his trone aboue ¶ trones of ¶ kynges that were with him at Babilon, and chaunged the clothes of his captiuyte. And he ate allwayne before him as longe as he lyued. And he appoynted him his porcion, which was euer geuē him daylie of the kynge, as longe as he lyued.

The children of Leui are these: Gerson, Kahath and Merari. These are the names of the children of Gerson: Libni and Semei. The names of the childrē of Kahath are these: Amram, Iezohar, Hebron and Vsiel. The names of the children of Merari are: Maheli and Musi. These are the kynreds of the Leuites amonge their houtholdes.

B Gersons sonne was Libni, whose sonne was Iahath, whose sonne was Sima, whose sonne was Ioah, whose sonne was Iddo, whose sonne was Serah, whose sonne was Ieathrai. Kahats sonne was Aminadab, whose sonne was Corah, whose sonne was Assir, whose sonne was Elcana, whose sonne was Abiasaph, whose sonne was Assir, whose sonne was Thahath, whose sonne was Vriel, whose sonne was Vsia, whose sonne was Saul.

The childrē of Elkana were, Amasai & Ahimoth, whose sonne was Elkana, whose sonne was Elkana of Zuph, whose sonne was Nahath, whose sonne was Eliab, whose sonne was Ieroham, whose sonne was Elkana, whose sonne was Samuel. Those first borne sonnes were Seni and Abija.

Meraris sonne was Maheli, whose sonne was Libni, whose sonne was Simei, whose sonne was Vsa, whose sōne was Simea, whose sōne was Haggia, whose sōne was Asaia.

These are they whom David appoynted to synge in the house of the LORDE, where the Arke rested, & they mynistrēd before the habitation of the Tabernacle of witnes with synginge, vntyll Salomon had buylded the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, and they stode after their maner in their office. And these are they ſtode & their children. Of ſ children of Kahath was Heman ſ synger, the sonne of Ioel, the sonne of Samuel, the sonne of Elkana, the sonne of Ieroham, ſ sonne of Eliel, the sonne of Thoah, the sonne of Zuph, the sonne of Elkana, the sonne of Mahath, the sonne of Amasai, the sonne of Elkana, the sonne of Iohel, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Sophonias, the sonne of Thahath, the sonne of Assir, the sonne of Abijasaph, the sonne of Corah, the sonne of Iezehar, the sonne of Kahath, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel.

C And his brother Assaph stode at his righte hande, and Assaph was the sonne of Barachia, the sonne of Simea, the sonne of Michael, ſ sonne of Maeseia, the sonne of Malchija, the sonne of Athin, ſ sonne of Serah, the sonne of Adaia, the sonne of Ethan, the sonne of Sima, the sonne of Simei, the sonne of Iahath, the sonne of Gerson, the sonne of Leui.

Their brethren the childrē of Merari, stode on the left hande, namely, Ethan the sonne of Kusi, the sonne of Abdi, the sonne of Malluch, the sonne of Hasabia, the sonne of Amazia, the sonne of Helchia, ſ sonne of Amzi, the sonne of Bani, the sonne of Samer, the sonne of Maheli, the sonne of Musi, the sonne of Merari, the sonne of Leui.

As for their brethrē the Leuites, they were geuen to all the offices in the habitation of the house of the LORDE: but the office of Aaron and his sonnes was to kyndle the fyre vpon the altare of burntofferynges, and vpon the altare of incense, and to all the busynes in the most holy, and to make attonement for the people, acordinge as Moses ſ seruauent of God commaunded.

These are the children of Aaron: Eleasar his sonne, whose sonne was Phineas, whose sonne was Abisua, whose sonne was Buki, whose sonne was Vsi, whose sonne was Serahia, whose sonne was Meraioth, whose sonne was Amaria, whose sonne was Achitob, whose sonne was Sadoc, whose sonne was Ahimaas.

And this is their habitation and rowme in their borders, namely of Aarons children of the kynred of ſ Kahathites: for this lot fell vnto them. * And they gaue thē Hebron in the londe of Iuda, & the suburbs of the same rounde aboute. But the felde of ſ cite & the villages therof, gaue they vnto Caleb the sonne of Iephune. Thus gaue they vnto the children of Aaron these fre cities, Hebron & Libna with their suburbs, Iather, & Esthemoa, Hilen, Debir, Asan and Bethsemaes, with their suburbs. And out of the trybe of Ben Iamin, Geba, Alemeth and Anathot with their suburbs, so ſ all the cities in their kined were thirtene. The other childrē of Kahath of their kynred, had out of ſ halfe trybe of Manasses, ten cities by lot. The children of Gerson of their kynred, had out of ſ trybe of Isachar, & out of the trybe of Asser, & out of the trybe of Nephtali, & out of the trybe of Manasses in Basan, thirtene cities. The childrē of Merari of their kynred, had by lot out of the trybe of Ruben, & out of the trybe of Gad, and out of the trybe of Zabulon, twolue cities.

* Iosu. 14. d. and 21. b.

And vnto þ̄ Leuites gaue the childrē of Israel cities with their suburbes, namely by lot, out the trybe of the children of Iuda, ⁊ out of the trybe of the childrē of Simeon, ⁊ out of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin, euen those cities, which they appoynted by name. * But the kynreds of the children of Kahath had the cities of their borders out of the trybe of Ephraim.

So gaue they now vnto thē (namely vnto the kynred of the children of Kahath) þ̄ fre cities, Sicheim vpon mount Ephraim, Geser, Iakmeam, Bethoron, Aialon, and Gath Rimon with their suburbes. And out of þ̄ halfe trybe of Manasses, Aner and Bileam with their suburbes. But vnto the children of Gerson they gaue out of the kynred of the halfe trybe of Manasses, Golā in Basan and Astharoth with their suburbes. Out of the trybe of Isachar, Kedes, Dabroth Ramoth, and Anem with their suburbes. Out of the trybe of Asser, Masal, Abdō, Hukoh and Sehob, with their suburbes. Out of the trybe of Nephtali, Kedes in Galile, Hāmon and Kiriathaim with their suburbes. Vnto the other children of Merari gaue they out of the trybe of Zabulon, Rimano and Thabor with their suburbes. And beyōde Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho eastwarde besyde Iordane out of the trybe of Ruben, Bezer in the wildernes, Iahza, Kedemoth and Mepaath with their suburbes. Out of the trybe of Gad, Ramoth in Gilead, Mahanaim, Heszon and Iaeser with their suburbes.

The viij. Chapter.

THE children of Isachar were, Thola, Pua, Iasub and Simrom, these foure. The children of Thola were, Vsi, Rephaia, Ieriel, Iahemai and Iebsam and Samuel, heades in the house of their fathers of Thola, ⁊ mightie men in their kynred, † in nombre in the tyme of Dauid, two and twentie thousande and sixe hundred. The children of Vsi were, Iesrahia. The children of Iesrahia were, Michael, and Obedia, Ioel and Iesia: all these fyue were heades. And with them amonge their kynred in the house of their fathers there were ready harnesssed men of warre to the battayll, sixe and thirtie thousande: for they had many wyues and children. And the mightie men of their brethren in all the kynreds of Isachar, were seūē and foure score thousande, and were all nombred.

The children of Ben Iamin, were, Bela, Becher, and Iedieel, these thre. The children of Bela, were, Ezbon, Vsi, Vsiel, Ieremoth ⁊ Iri, these fyue, heades in þ̄ house of their fathers, mightie men: and were nombred two ⁊ twentie thousande and foure and thyrtye.

The x. Chapter.

AND all Israel were nombred: and beholde, they are wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda, and now are they caried awaie vnto Babylō for their synne, euen they y afore dwelt in their possessions and cities, namely Israel, y prestes, Leuites and Nethinim. But at Ierusalem dwelt certayne of the children of Iuda, some of the children of Ben Iamin, some of the children of Ephraim and of Manasses. * Namely of the children of Phares the sonne of Iuda, was Vthai the sonne of Ammihud the sonne of Amri, the sonne of Imri, the sonne of Bani. Of Soloni, Asaia y first sonne, and his other sonnes. Of the children of Serah, Ieguel and his brethren, sixe hundreth, foure score and ten.

Of the children of Ben Iamin, Sallu y sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Hodauia, y sonne of Hasnua. And Iebneia the sonne of Ieroham. And Ela the sonne of Vsi the sonne of Michri. And Mesullam the sonne of Sephatia the sonne of Reguel the sonne of Iebneia. And their brethren in their kinreds nyne hundreth and syxe and fyfye. All these were heades of the fathers in the house of their fathers.

Of the prestes: Iedaia, Ioiarib, Iachim, And Asaria the sonne of Helchia,^b the sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Meraioth, the sonne of Achitob, prync in the house of God. And Adaia the sonne of Ieroham, the sonne of Pashur, the sonne of Malchia. And Maesai the sonne of Adiel the sonne of Iachsera, the sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Messylemeth, the sonne of Immer. And their brethren heades in the house of their fathers a thousande, seuen hundreth and thre score valeaunt men in executyng the offyce in the house of God.

Of the Leuites of the children of Merari, Semaia the sonne of Hasub, the sonne of Asrikam, the sonne of Hasabia. And Bakbakar the carpenter and Galal. And Mathania y sonne of Micha y sonne of Sichri, the sonne of Assaph. And Obadia the sonne of Semaia, the sonne of Galal, y sonne of Elkana, which dwelt in the villages of the Netophathites.

The porters were: ^dSallum, Acub, Talmon, Ahiman, with their brethren, and Sallum the chefest: for hither to had the children of Leui kepte the watch at the eastsyde of the kinges gate by armies. And Sallum the sonne of Core, the sonne of Abiassaph, the sonne of Corah, and his brethren of his fathers house.

The Corahytes were in the worke of the seruyce, to kepe the thresholds of the Tabernacle: and their fathers in the hoost of the LORDE, to kepe the intraunce. Phineas the sonne of Eleasar was the pryncce ouer them, because the LORDE had bene with him before. Sacharia the sonne of Meselechia was keper at the dore of the Tabernacle of witnesse.

All these were chosen out to be keepers of the thresholds euen two hundreth and twolue. These were nombred in their villages. And Dauid and Samuel the Seer fouded them thorow their faith, that they and their children shulde kepe the house of the LORDE, namely to kepe the watch of y house of the Tabernacle.

These dorekeepers were appointed towarde the four wyndes, towarde the East, towarde the West, towarde the North, towarde y South. But their brethrē were in their villages, that they might come allwaye on the seuenth daye to be with them: for vnto these foure maner of chefe dorekeepers were the Leuites committed. And they had the ouersight of the chestes and treasures in y house of God.

In the nighte season also remayned they aboute the house of God: for their dewtye was to geue attendaunce to open euery mornynge. And some of them had the ouersight of the mynistryng vessel: for they bare the vessell out and in. And some of thē were appoynted ouer the vessell, and ouer all the holy vessell, ouer the fine wheate floure, ouer y wyne, ouer the oile, ouer the frankencense, ouer the swete odoures: but some of y prestes children made the ^fincense.

Vnto Mathithia one of the Leuites the first sonne of Sallum the Corahite, were y pannes cōmytted. And certayne of the Kathathites their brethren were appointed ouer the shewbred, to prepare it euery Sabbath daye.

These are the heades of the singers amōge the fathers of the Leuites chosen out ouer the chestes: for daye and night were they in

The xi. Chapter.

THE Philistynes foughte agaynst Israel. And they of Israel fled before the Philistynes, and f wounded fell vpon mount Gilboa. And the Philistynes folowed vpon Saul and his sonnes, and smote Ionathas, Abinadab and Malchisua f sonnes of Saul. And the battayll was sore agaynst Saul. And the archers came vpon him, so that he was wounded of the archers. Then sayde Saul vnto his weapenbearer: Drawe out thy swerde, and thrust it thorow me, that these vicircumcysed come not, and deale shamefully with me. Neuertheles his weapenbearer wolde not, for he was sore afrayed. Then toke Saul his swerde, and fell therein. Whan his weapenbearer sawe that Saul was deed, he fell vpon his swerde also, and dyed.

Thus died Saul and his three sonnes, and all his housholde together. And whan the men of Israel which were in f valley, sawe, that Saul and his sonnes were deed, they lefte their cities and fled: and the Philistynes came and dwelt therein.

3 On the morowe came the Philistynes to spoyle the slayne, and founde Saul, and his sonnes lyenge vpon mount Gelboa, and stryped him out, and toke his heade, and his harness, and sent it aboute in to f londe of the Philistynes, and caused it to be shewed before their Idoles and the people. And his weapens layed they in the house of their god, and stycte vp his heade vpon the house of Dagon.

But whan all they of Iabes in Gilead herde of euery thinge, that the Philistynes had done vnto Saul, they gat them vp (as many as were men of armes) and toke the body of Saul and of his sonnes, and broughte them vnto Iabes, and buryed their bones vnder the Oke at Iabes, and fasted seuen dayes.

Thus dyed Saul in his trespass which he commytted agaynst the LORDE, because he kepte not the worde of the LORDE: f because he axed counsell at the soythsayr, and axed not at the LORDE, therefore slewe he him, f turned the kyngdome vnto Dauid.

The xij. Chapter.

AND all Israel resorted to Dauid vnto 2 Hebron, and sayde: Beholde, we are thy bone and thy flesh. And afore tyme whan Saul reigned, thou leddest Israel out and in. So the LORDE thy God hath sayde vnto the: Thou shalt kepe my people of Israel, and thou shalt be the pryncie ouer my people of Israel. And all the Elders of Israel came to the kyng vnto Hebron. And Dauid made a couenaunt with them at Hebron before the LORDE. And they anoynted Dauid to be kyng ouer Israel f accordynge to the worde of the LORDE by Samuel.

And Dauid and all Israel wete vnto Ierusalem, that is Iebus: for the Iebusites dwelt in the lode. And the citesyns of Iebus saide vnto Dauid: Thou shalt not come in hither. Howbeit Dauid wane f castell of Siö, which is f cite of Dauid. And Dauid sayde: Who so euer smytheth f Iebusites first, shal be a pryncie f captainne. The Ioab f sonne of Zeruia clymmed vp first, f was made captainne. So Dauid dwelt in f castell, therefore was it called f cite of Dauid. And he buylded f cite roude aboute, fro Millo forth on euery syde. As for f remnaunt of f cite, Ioab buylded it, f repayed it. And Dauid wete forth f grewe, f the LORDE Zebaoth was with him.

These are f chefe amöge f mightie mē of Dauid, which dealt valeauntly with him in his kyngdome with all Israel, to make him kyng, accordinge to the worde of f LORDE ouer Israel. And this is f nombre of Dauids

And the LORDE gaue a greate health.

¶ And thre of the cheſteſt thirtie wēte downe to the rocke vnto Daudi in to the caue of Adullam. But the Philistynes hoost laye in the valley of Rephaim. As for Daudi, he was in the caſtell. And the Philistynes people were then at Bethleem. And Daudi was deſyrous, and ſayde: O that ſome wolde geue me to drynke of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate. Thē brake thoſe thre in to the Philistynes hoost, and drue of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate, and caried it, and broughte it vnto Daudi. Neuertheles he wolde not drynke it, but poured it vnto the LORDE, and ſayde: God let this be farre fro me, ſ̄ I ſhulde do it, and drynke the bloude of theſe men in ſ̄ parell of their life: for with the parell of their life haue they broughte it: therfore wolde he not drynke it. This dyd the thre Worthies.

Abisai the brother of Ioab, he was the chefeſt amonge thre. And he liſte vp his ſpeare, and ſmote thre hundred. And he was famous amonge thre, and before the thirde, more honorable then the two, yet came he not vnto the thre.

¶ Benaia the ſonne of Ioiada the ſonne of Iſhail of Cabzeel, ^b was a man of greate actes. He ſmote two lyons of the Moabites. And he wente downe, and ſmote a lyon in the myddes of a well in the tyme of ſnowe. He ſmote a man of Egipte alſo, which was fyue cubites greate of ſtature, and had in his hande a ſpeare like a weuers lome. Yet wente he downe to him with a ſtaffe, and toke the ſpeare out of his hande, and ſlewe him with his awne ſpeare. This dyd Benaia the ſonne of Ioiada, and was a famous man amonge thre Worthies, and moſt awncient amonge thirtie. But vnto the thre came he not. Howbeit Daudi made him of his ſecrete counceill.

Asareel, Isasbeam & Korahyte, Ioela and Sabadia the children of Ieroham of Gedor.

Of the Gaddites resorted there vnto Dauid to the castell in the wyldernesse, mightie Worthies and men of armes, which hadled speares and swerdes, and had faces like lions, & were as swifte as the Roes vpon & mountaynes. The fyrst Eser, the seconde Obadia, the thyrd Eliab, the fourth Masmanna, & fyfth Ieremia, the sixte Athai, the seueth Eliel, the eight Iohanna, the nyenth Elsabad, the tenth Ieremia, & eleuenth Machbanai. These were of the children of Gad, heades in the hoost, the leest ouer an hundreth, and & greatest ouer a thousande. These are they which in the fyrst moneth wente ouer Iordane, whan it was full on both the shores, so that all the valleys were eauen both towarde the East and towarde the West.

There came of the children of Ben Iamin also and of Iuda vnto the castell of Dauid. But Dauid wente forth vnto them, and answered and sayde vnto them: Yf ye come to me in peace, and to helpe me, my hert shal be with you. But yf ye come vpō disceate, and to be mine aduersaries (where as there is yet no vnrighte in me) the God of oure fathers loke vpon it, and rebuke it. Neuertheles the sprete endued Amasai the captayne amonge thirtie, and he sayde: We are thine O Dauid, and holde with the thou sonne of Isai. Peace, peace be with the, peace be with thy helpers, for thy God helpeth the. Then Dauid receaued them, and made them captaynes ouer the men of warre.

And of Manasses there fell certayne vnto Dauid, whan he came to the battayll with the Philistynes agaynst Saul, and helped them not, *for the prynces of & Philistynes counceled to let him go from them, and sayde: Yf he fell vnto his lorde Saul, it mighte cost vs oure neckes. Now whā he departed vnto Siclag, there fell vnto him of Manasses, Adna, Iosabad, Iediael, Michael, Iosabad, Elihu, Zilthai, heades ouer thousandes in Manasses. And they helped Dauid against the men of warre: for they were all valeaunt Worthies, and were captaynes ouer the hoost. And euery daye came there some to Dauid, to helpe him, till there was a greate hoost as an hoost of God.

And this is the nombre of the heades harnessed vnto the warre, which came to Dauid vnto Hebron, for to turne the kyngdome of Saul vnto him, acordynge to the worde of the LORDE.

The childrē of Iuda, which handled speares and swerdes, were sixe thousande, & eight hundreth ready harnessed vnto & warre. Of the children of Simeon noble men of armes for the battayll, seuen thousande and an hundreth. Of the children of Leui foure thousande and sixe hundreth. And Ioiaa the prynce amonge them of Aaron with thre thousande and seuen hundreth. Sadoc the yonge valeaunt man of armes with his fathers house, two and twentye rulers. Of the children of Ben Iamin Sauls brother, thre thousande: for vnto that time helde many of thē yet with the house of Saul.

Of & children of Ephraim, twentie thousande and eight hundreth valeaunt men of armes, and famous in the house of their fathers. Of the halfe trybe of Manasses, eightene thousande, named by name, to come and make Dauid kyng. Of the children of Isachar (which were men of vnderstondynge, whan nede requyred to knowe what Israel shulde do) two hundreth captaynes, and all their brethren folowed their worde. Of Sabulon, soch as wente forth in the hoost to & warre, ready with all maner of weapons for the battayll, fyfitye thousande, beyng of one mynde to kepe them selues in ordre.

Of Nephtali, a thousande captaynes, & with them soch as handled shyld and speare, seuen and thyrtye thousande. Of Dan, ready harnessed to the battayll, eight and twentye thousande, and sixe hundreth. Of Asser, soch as wente forth in & hoost, ready harnessed to the battayll, fortye thousande. From beyonde Iordane, of the Rubenites, Gaddites and the halfe trybe of Manasses, with all maner of weapons to the battayll, an hundreth and twentye thousande.

All these men of warre, ready harnessed to the battayll,* came with a whole hert vnto Hebron, to make Dauid kyng ouer all Israel. And all Israel besyde were of one hert, that Dauid shulde be made kyng. And there were they with Dauid thre dayes, eatynge and drynkyng: for their brethren had prepared for them. And soch neighbours as were aboute them vntyll Isachar, Zabulon and Nephtali, brought bred vpon Asses, Camels,

AND Dauid helde a councell^a with the captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundreds, and with all the prynces, and sayde vnto all the congregacion of Israel: Yf it lyke you, and yf it be of the LORDE oure God, let vs sende forth on euery syde to oure other brethren in all the countrees of Israel, and to the prestes and Leuites in the cities where they haue suburbes, & they maye be gathered together vnto vs, and let vs fetch the Arke of oure God agayne vnto vs: for by Sauls tyme we axed after it. Thē sayde the whole cōgregation, that the same shulde be done, for it pleased all the people well.

So Dauid gathered all Israel together from Sihor of Egipte, tyll a man come vnto Hemath, to fetch the Arke of God from Kiriath Iearim. And Dauid wente vp with all Israel to Kiriath Iearim, which lieth in Iuda, to brynge from thence the Arke of God the LORDE, that sytteth vpō the Cherubins, where the name is named: and they caused the Arke of God to be caried vpō a new cart from the house of Abinadab.

Vsā and his brethren droue the cart. As for Dauid and all Israel, they played with all their strength before God, with songes, with harpes, with psalteries, with tabrettes, with Cymbales and trompes.

But when they came to the barne floore of Chidon, Vsā stretched out his hande to holde the Arke: for the oxen wente out asyde. Then waxed the wrath of the LORDE feare ouer Vsā, & smote him, because he stretched out his hāde to the Arke, so & he dyed there before God. Thē was Dauid sory, because & LORDE had made soch a rente vpō Vsā, and called the place Perez Vsā, vnto this daye. And Dauid stode in feare of God the same daye, & sayde: How shal I brynge & Arke of God vnto me? Therefore wolde he not let & Arke of God be broughte vnto him in to & cite of Dauid, but caried it in to & house of Obed Edom the Gathite. So the Arke of God abode with Obed Edom in his house thre monethes. And & LORDE blessed Obed Edoms house and all that he had.

AND Hiram & kynge of Tyre^a sent messangers vnto Dauid and Cedre tymber, and masons and carpenters, to buylde him an house. And Dauid perceaued, that the LORDE had confirmed him kynge ouer Israel: for his kyngdome increased for his people of Israels sake. And Dauid toke yet mo wyues at Ierusalem, & begat yet mo sonnes & daughters. And the names of them & were borne vnto him at Ierusalem, are these: Sammua, Sobab, Nathan, Salomon, Iebehar, Elisua, Elipalet, Noga, Nepheg, Iaphia, Elisamma, Baal Iada, Eliphalet.

And when the Philistynes herde that Dauid was anoynted kynge ouer all Israel, they wente vp all to seke Dauid. Whan Dauid herde that, he wente forth agaynst them. And the Philistynes came, and scattered thē selues beneth in & valley of Rephaim. And Dauid axed councell at God, & sayde: Shal I go vp agaynst the Philistynes? and wilt thou delyuer them in to my hande? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Go vp, and I wil delyuer them in to thy hande. And when they were gone vp to Baal Prasim, Dauid smote them there. And Dauid sayde: God hath deuyded myne enemies thorow my hande, euen as the water parteth asunder: therefore called they the place Baal Prasim. And there lefte they their goddes. Then * commaunded Dauid to burne them with fyre.

But the Philistynes gat them thither agayne, and scattered them selues beneth in & valley. And Dauid axed councell at God agayne. And God sayde vnto him: Thou shalt not go vp behynde them, but turne the from them, that thou mayest come vpon thē ouer agaynst the Peertrees. So whan thou hearest aboue vpon the Peertrees the noyse of the goynge, go thou forth then to the batayll: for God is gone forth then before the to smyte the hoost of the Philistynes. And Dauid dyd as God commaunded him. And they smote the hoost of the Philistynes from Gibeon forth vnto Gaser. And Dauids name was noysed out in all londes. And the LORDE caused & feare of him to come vpō all the Heythen.

Arke of God, & pitched a Tabernacle for it. At that tyme sayde Dauid: The Arke of God is not to be borne, but onely of f Leuites: *for them hath the LORDE chosen to beare the Arke of the LORDE, and to mynister vnto him for euer. Therefore gathered Dauid all Israel together vnto Ierusalem, to brynge vp the Arke of the LORDE vnto the place which he had prepared for it.

And Dauid broughte the children of Aaron & the Leuites together. Of the children of Kahath: Vriell the chefe with his brethren, an C. and twentye. Of the children of Merari: Asaia the chefe with his brethren, two C. and twentye. Of the childrē of Gerson: Ioel the chefe with his brethren, an C. and thirtie. Of f childrē of Elizaphan: Semaia the chefe with his brethren, two hundreth. Of the childrē of Hebron: Eliel the chefe, with his brethren, foure score. Of the children of Vsieel: Amminadab the chefe, with his brethren, an hundreth and twolue.

B And Dauid called Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes, and the Leuites, namely Vriell, Asaia, Ioeli, Semaia, Eliel, Aminadab, and sayde vnto them: Ye are the heades of f fathers amonge the Leuites: sanctifye youre selues therefore & youre brethren, f ye maye brynge vp the Arke of the LORDE God of Israel, to the place f I haue prepared for it. †For afore whan ye were not there, the LORDE oure God made a rent amonge vs, because we soughte him not, as we shulde haue done. So f prestes & the Leuites halowed the selues, f they mighte brynge vp the Arke of the LORDE God of Israel. And the children of Leui bare the Arke of God the LORDE vpon their shulders with the stauies theron, †as Moses comaunded accordinge to f worde of the LORDE.

And Dauid spake vnto f rulers of f Leuites, that they shulde ordeyne some of their brethren to be syngers with psalteries, harpes and loude instrumentes, and Cimbales, to syng loude with ioye.

C Then the Leuites appoynted Heman f sonne of Ioel: and of his brethren Assaph the sonne of Barachias: and of the children of Merari their brethren, Ethan the sonne of Cusaia: and with them their brethren of the seconde course, namely Zacharias, Iaesiell, Semiramoth, Iehiel, Vnni, Eliab, Benaia, Maesia, Mathithia, Elipheleia, Mikneia, Obed Edom, Ieiel, the dore keepers. For Heman, Assaph and Ethan were syngers, with brasen belles makynge a loude noyse: but Zacharias, Iaesiell, Semiramoth, Iehiel, Vnni, Eliab, Maesia & Benaia with Phalteries to Alamoth: Mathithia, Elipheleia, Mikneia, Obed Edom, Ieiel & Asaia with harpes to syng aboute them on hye. Chenania the ruler of the Leuites was the master of Musick to teach them for to syng, for he was a man of vnderstandinge.

And Barachias and Elcana were the dorekeepers of the Arke. But Sachania, Iosaphat, Nathaneel, Amasai, Zacharias, Benaia, Elieser the prestes, blew the trompettes before f Arke of God. And Obed Edom and Iehia were dorekeepers of the Arke.

So Dauid and the Elders of Israel, and the captaynes ouer thousandes wente vp to fetch the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE out of the house of Obed Edom with ioye. And whan God had helped the Leuites f bare the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, there were offred seuen bullockes & seuen rāmes. And Dauid had a lynnē garment vpō him, and so had all the Leuites f bare the Arke, and f syngers, and Chenania the master of Musick with the syngers. Dauid had an ouerboddy cote of linnen vpon him also.

Thus all Israel brought vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE with myrth, with trompettes, tabrettes, & loude Cymbales, with psalteries and harpes. Now whan the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE came in to the cite of Dauid, Michol f daughter of Saul looked out at a wyndowe: & whā she sawe kynge Dauid daunsynge & playenge, she despyed him in hir hert.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND whā they brought in the Arke of God, *they set it in f Tabernacle, that Dauid had pitched for it, and offred burnt-offerynges & thankofferynges before God. And whā Dauid had ended the burnt-offerynges and thankofferynges, he blessed the people in the name of the LORDE, & distributed vnto euery man in Israel (both vnto man and woman) a cake of bred, and a pece of flesh and a meece of potage.

And he appoynted before the Arke of f LORDE certayne Leuites to mynister, that they shulde geue prayse, thanks and laouinges vnto the LORDE God of Israel: namely Assaph the first, Zacharias the seconde, Ieiel, Semiramoth, Iehiel, Mathithia, Eliab, Benaia, Obed Edom and Iehiel, with psalteries and harpes. But Assaph with loude Cymbales. Benaia and Iehasiel the prestes with tabrettes, allwaye before the Arke of y couenaunt of God.

At the same tyme ordeyned Dauid first of all to geue thakes vnto the LORDE by Assaph and his brethren.

O geue thanks vnto the LORDE, call vpon his name, tell the people what thinges he hath done.

O let youre songes be of him: prayse him, and let youre talkynge be of all his wonderous workes.

Geue his holy name a good reporte: let y heart of them reioyce, that seke the LORDE.

O seke the LORDE and his strength, seke his face euermore.

Remembre his maruelous workes that he hath done, his wonders, and the iudgmētes of his mouth.

Ye sede of Israel his seruauant, ye children of Iacob his chosen.

He is the LORDE oure God, his iudgmētes are in all londes.

Be myndefull euer of his couenaunt what he hath commaunded in to a thousande generations.

* Which he made with Abraham, † and his oath vnto Isaac.

And he ‡ confirmed the same vnto Iacob for a perpetuall lawe, and to Israel for an euerlastinge couenaunt.

And sayde: Vnto the wyl I geue y londe of Canaan, y metelyne of youre inheritaunce.

Whā they were yet but small † fewe in nōbre, and straungers in the same londe.

And they wente from one nacion to another, † from one realme to another people.

He suffred no man to hurte them, and reproued euen kynge for their sakes.

§ Touch not myne anynted, † do my prophetes no harme.

¶ O synge vnto y LORDE, let all y earth be tellynge of his saluacion from daye to daye.

Declare his holynes amōge the Heythē, † his wonderous workes amonge y people.

For the LORDE is greate, and can not worthely be praysed, and more to be had in awe then all goddes.

As for all the goddes of the Heythē, they are but Idols: † but it is the LORDE that made the heauens.

Thanksgeuyng and worshipe are before him, strength and ioye is in his place.

Ascrybe vnto the LORDE ye kynreds of nacions: ascrybe vnto the LORDE worshipe and strength.

Ascrybe vnto the LORDE the honoure of his name: brynge presentes, and come before him, and worshipe y LORDE in y bewtye of holynes.

Let the whole earth stōde in awe of him: he hath made the compase of the worlde so fast, that it can not be moued.

Let the heauens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: and let it be tolde amonge the Heythen, that the LORDE reigneth.

Let the See make a noyse, and the fulnesse therof: let the felde be ioyfull, and all that therein is.

Let all the trees in the wod leape for ioye before the LORDE, for he commeth to iudge the earth.

O geue thanks vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for euer.

And saye: Helpe vs O God oure Sauoure, and gather vs together, and delyuer vs from the Heythen, that we maye geue thanks vnto thy holy name, and synge prayses vnto the in thy Psalmes.

Praysed be the LORDE God of Israel from euerlastinge to euerlastinge: and let all people saye, Amen, And: Prayse be vnto the LORDE.

So he lefte Assaph and his brethren there before the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE, to mynister allwaye before the Arke, euery daye his daye worke. But Obed Edom and their brethren, eight and thre score, and Obed Edom the sonne of Iedithun, and Hossa, to be dore keepers. So all the people departed, eury one to his house: and Dauid returned also to blesse his house.

The xliij. Chapter.

IT fortunēd whā Dauid dwelt in his house, he sayde vnto ⁊ prophet Nathan: Beholde, I dwell in a house of Cedar, and the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE is amonge the curtaynes.

Nathan saide vnto Dauid: What so euer is in thine hert, that do: for God is with ⁊. But the same night came ⁊ worde of God vnto Nathan, and sayde: Go and speake to Dauid my seruauant: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou shalt not buylde me an house to be an habitacio: for I haue dwelt in no house sence the daye that I broughte forth the children of Israel, vnto this daye: But where the Tabernacle and habitacion hath bene, there haue I bene where so euer I haue walked in all Israel. Spake I euer to eny of the Iudges in Israel (whom I commaunded to kepe my people) and sayde: Wherfore do ye not buylde me an house of Cedre tymber?

So shalt thou speake now vnto my seruauant Dauid: Thus sayeth the LORDE Zebaoth: I toke the from the pasture behynde the shepe, that thou shuldest be the prynce ouer my people, and haue bene with the whither so euer thou wētest, and haue roted out all thine enemies before the, and haue made the a name, accordinge to the name of the greates men that are vpō earth. And for my people of Israel, I wyll appoynte them a place, and wyl plante them, that they maye dwell there, and nomore to be remoued. And the childrē of wickednes shal oppresse them nomore, like as afore tyme, whan I cōmaunded the Iudges ouer my people of Israel. And I wyl subdue all thine enemies, and do declare vnto the, that the LORDE wyl buylde the an house.

* But whan thy dayes are fulfilled, that thou departest hence with thy fathers, I wyl after the rayse vp thy sede, which shall be euē one of thy sonnes: his kyngdome wyl I stablizhe, he shal buylde me an house, ⁊ I wyl make his seate sure for euer. I wyl be his father, and he shal be my sonne. And I wyl not withdrawe my mercy from him, as I haue withdrawn it frō him that was before the: But I wyl set him in my house and in my kyngdome for euer, so that his seate shalbe sure for euermore.

And whā Nathan had spoken vnto Dauid accordinge to all these wordes ⁊ all this vision, kynge Dauid came and sat him downe before the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE God, who am I? and what is my house, ⁊ thou hast broughte me thus farre? And this (O God) hast thou thoughte yet to litle, but hast spoken of thy seruantes house yet longe for to come. And thou LORDE God hast lokēd downe vpon me from aboue, euen as one man loketh vpon another. What more shal Dauid saye vnto the, ⁊ thou bryngest thy seruauant to soch honoure? Thou knowest thy seruauant O LORDE, for thy seruantes sake and accordinge to thy hert hast thou done all these greates things, that thou mightest shewe all greates things vnto thy seruauant. LORDE: there is none lyke the, and there is no God but thou, of whom we haue herde with oure eares. And where is there a people vpon earth as thy people of Israel, where God wente to delyuer him a people, and to make him selfe a name thorow greates ⁊ terrible things, to cast out the Heythen before thy people, whom thou hast delyuered out of Égypte? and thy people of Israel hast thou made thy people for euer, and thou LORDE art become their God.

Now LORDE, let the worde be verified for euer, that thou hast spoken ouer thy seruauant and ouer his house, ⁊ do as thou hast spoken: and let thy name endure and be magnified for euer, that it maye be sayde: The LORDE Zebaoth, the God of Israel is the God in Israel, and that the house of thy seruauant Dauid maye be stablyszhed before the: for thou LORDE hast opened the eare of thy seruauant, that thou wilt buylde him an house. Therefore hath thy seruauant founde (confydence) to make his prayer before the. Now LORDE, thou art God, and hast promysed soch good vnto thy seruauant. Begynne now to blesse the house of thy seruauant, that it maye be euermore before the: for loke what thou blestest (O LORDE) the same is blessed for euer.

The xii. Chapter.

AFTER this smote Dauid the Philistynes, and subdued them,* and toke Gath & the vyllages therof out of the hande of the Philistynes. He smote the Moabites likewise, so that the Moabites were subdued vnto Dauid, and gaue him trybute. He smote Hadad Eser also † kyng of Zoba in Hemath, whan he wente to set vp his power by the water Euphrates.

And Dauid toke from him a thousande charettes, seuen thousande horsmen, and twēty thousande fote men. And Dauid lamed all the charettes, and kepte an hundreth charettes ouer. And the Syrīs came from Damascon, to helpe Hadad Eser the kyng of Zoba. Howbeit Dauid smote two & twentie thousande of the same Syrians, and layed men of warre at Damascon in Syria, so that the Syrians were subdued vnto Dauid, and broughte him trybute. For the LORDE helped Dauid, whither so euer he wente.

And Dauid toke the shyldes of golde, ‡ Hadad Esers seruautes had, & broughte the to Ierusalē. And out of Tibeath & Chun the cities of Hadad Eser, toke Dauid very moch brasse, * wherof Salomon made the brasen lauer, and pilers, and brasen vessels.

¶ And whā Thogu the kyng of Hemath herde, † Dauid had smytten all ‡ power of Hadad Eser, he sent his sonne Hadorā vnto kyng Dauid, to salute him & to blesse him, because he had foughtē with Hadad Eser, & smyttē hī (for Thogu had warre with Hadad Eser) and all the same vessels of golde, syluer and of brasse, dyd kyng Dauid consecrate vnto the LORDE, with the syluer and golde that he had taken from the Heythē, namely, from the Edomites, Moabites, Ammonites, Philistynes, and Amalechites.

C And Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia smote eightene thousande of the Edomites in the Salt valley, and layed mē of warre in Edomea, so that all the Edomites were subdued vnto Dauid: for † LORDE helped Dauid, whither so euer he wente.

Thus Dauid reigned ouer all Israel, and executed iudgment and righteousnes vnto all the people. Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia was captayne ouer the hoost. Iosaphat the sonne of Ahilud was Chaunceler. Sadoc the sonne of Achitob, and Ahimelech ‡ sonne of Abiathar, were prestes. Sausa was Scrybe. Benaiā the sonne of Ioiada was ouer the Chrethians & Pletians. ¶ And Dauids sonnes were chiefe at † kynges hande.

The xii. Chapter.

AND after this dyed Nahas † kyng of the childrē of Ammon, ¶ and his sonne was kyng in his steade. Then sayde Dauid: I wil do mercy vpon Hanun the sonne of Nahas, for his father dyd mercy vpon me: and so he sent messangers to comforte him ouer his father. And whā Dauids seruautes came in to the londe of the children of Ammon vnto Hanun to comforte him, the prynces of the children of Ammon sayde vnto Hanun: Thinkest thou that Dauid honoureth thy father in thy sighte, that he hath sent cōforters vnto the? Yee his seruautes are come vnto the, to search and to ouerthrowe, and to spye out the londe. Then toke Hanun the seruautes of Dauid, and shoue them, & cut the halfe of their garments of, euē by the loynes, & so let the go. And they wente their waye, & sent men to tell Dauid. Neuertheles he sent to mete them (for † men were put to greateshame) and the kyng sayde: Abyde at Iericho, tyll youre beerdes be growne, and then come agayne.

¶ Whan the childrē of Ammon sawe, that they stynked in † sighte of Dauid, both Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousande talētes of syluer, to hyre charettes and horsmen out of Mesopotamia, out of Maecha and out of Zoba: and hyred two and thirtie thousande charettes, & † kyng of Maecha with his people, which came & pitched their tentes before Medba. And the children of Ammon gathered them selues together out of their cities, and came to the battayll. Whan Dauid herde that, he sent Ioab thither with all the hoost of the men of armes. And the childrē of Ammon were gone forth, and prepared them selues to the battayll before the gate of the cite. But the kynges † were come, kepte them asyde in the felde.

¶ Now whā Ioab sawe that the battayll was agaynst him both before and behynde, he chose of all the best yonge men in Israel, and prepared him selfe agaynst ſyrians. As for ſ residue of the people, he put them vnder the hande of Abisai his brother, that they shulde prepare them selues agaynst the children of Ammon, and he sayde: Yf ſyrians be to mightie for me, helpe thou me: but yf the childre of Ammon be to ströge for ſ, I shall helpe the: take a good corage vnto the, and let vs quyte oure selues manly for oure people and for the cities of oure God: neuertheles the LORDE do what pleaseth him. And Ioab made him forth with the people that was with him, to fighte agaynst ſyrians: & they fled before him. And whan the children of Ammon sawe ſ the Syrians fled, they fled also before Abisai his brother, and wente in to the cite. And Ioab came to Ierusalem.

But whan the Syrians sawe that they were smyttē before Israel, they sent messaungers, and broughte forth ſyrians which were beyonde the water. And Sophach the chefe captayne of Hadad Esar wente before them. Whā this was tolde Dauid, he gathered all Israel together, and wente ouer Iordane. And whan he came at them, he set ſ battayll in araye agaynst them. And Dauid prepared him selfe to ſ battayll agaynst ſyrians, & they foughte with him: but ſyrians fled before Israel. And Dauid slewe of the Syrians seuē thousande charettes, & fortye thousande fote men. And Sophach the chefe captayne slewe he also. And whan Hadad Esars seruantes sawe that they were smyttē before Israel, they made peace with Dauid & his seruantes. And the Syrians wolde helpe the childre of Ammon no more.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND whan ſ yeare came aboute, what tyme as ſ kynges vse to go forth, Ioab broughte the power of the hoost, & destroyed the londe of the children of Ammon, and came and layed sege vnto Rabba. But Dauid abode at Ierusalem. *And Ioab smote Rabba, and brake it downe. And Dauid toke their kynges crowne from his heade, and founde the weighte of a talent of golde theron, & precious stones. And it was set vpō Dauids heade. And very moch spoyle caried he out of the cite. As for the people that were therein, he broughte thē forth, & parted them in sunder with sawes, & hokes & betels of yron. Thus dyd Dauid vnto all ſ cities of the childre of Ammon. And Dauid departed againe, with the people vnto Ierusalem.

Afterwarde arose there warre at Gasar with the Philistynes. Then Sibechai ſ Husathite smote Sibai, which was one of the children of Rephaim, and he subdued him. And there arose warre agayne with the Philistynes. Thē Elhamah ſ sonne of Iair smote Lahemi ſ brother of Goliath ſ Gathite, whose speares staff was like a weeuers lome. Afterwarde was there a battayll at Gath, where there was a man of a greate stature, ſ had sixe fyngers and sixe toes, which make foure and twentye. And he was borne also of Rapha, and spake despytefully vnto Israel. But Ionathas the sonne of Simea Dauids brother smote him. These were the childre of Rapha at Gath, & fell thorow ſ hande of Dauid, and of his seruantes.

The xxij. Chapter.

AND Sathan stode agaynst Israel, & entysed Dauid to nombre Israel. And Dauid sayde vnto Ioab & to ſ rulers of the people: Go youre waye, nombre Israel from Berseba vnto Dan, and brynge me the nombre of thē, that I maye knowe it. Ioab sayde: The LORDE make his people an hundreth tymes mo then they are now. But my lorde ō kyng, are they not all my lordes seruantes? Why doth my lorde then axe thereafter? Wherefore shal there a trespase come vpon Israel?

Neuertheles the kynges worde preuayled agaynst Ioab. And Ioab wente forth, and walked thorow all Israel, and came to Ierusalem, and delyuered vnto Dauid ſ nombre of the people that was tolde. And of all Israel there were a thousande tymes a thousande, and an hundreth thousande men, that drue out the swerde: and of Iuda foure hundreth thousande and seuētye thousande men, which drue out the swerde. As for Leui and Ben lamin, he nombred them not amonge these: for the kynges worde was abhominable vnto Ioab.

But this displeased God righte sore: for he smote Israel. And Dauid sayde vnto God: I haue synned greuously, that I haue done this. But now take awaye the trespase of thy seruaunt: for I haue done very vnwysely. And the LORDE spake vnto Gad Dauids Seer, & sayde: Go speake to Dauid, & saye: Thus saith the LORDE: Thre thinges laye I before the, chose þy one of them, þy I maye do it vnto the. And whā Gad came to Dauid, he spake vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Chose þy ether thre yeare derth, or thre monethes to flye before thine aduersaries, & before the swerde of thine enemies, þy it maye ouertake the: or thre dayes þy swerde of the LORDE, & pestilēce in the londe, þy the angell of the LORDE maye destroye in all þy coastes of Israel. Loke now what answer I shal geue vnto him þy sent me. Dauid sayde vnto Gad: I am in greate trouble: yet wyl I rather fall in to þy hande of the LORDE, for his mercy is excecadyngre greate, & I wil not fall in to the handes of men.

Then dyd the LORDE cause pestilence to come in to Israel, so that thre fell of Israel thre score & ten thousande mē. And God sent the angell to Ierusalē for to destroye it. And euen in the destruccion the LORDE considered, and he repēted of the euell, and sayde vnto the angell þy destroyer: It is ynough, holde now thy hande.

The angell of the LORDE stode besyde þy barne of Arnan þy Iebusite. And Dauid lifte vp his eyes, and sawe the angell of þy LORDE stondinge betwene heauē and earth, and a naked swerde in his hande stretched out ouer Ierusalem. Then Dauid and þy Elders beyngre clothed with sack cloth, fell vpō their faces. And Dauid sayde vnto God: Am not I he that caused the people to be nombred? I am he that hath synned and done euell: as for these shepe, what haue they done? LORDE my God, let thine hande be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house, and not agaynst thy people to plague them.

And the angell sayde vnto Gad, that he shulde speake vnto Dauid, that Dauid shulde go vp, & set vp an altare in the barne of Arnan the Iebusite. So Dauid wente vp acordinge to þy worde of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORDE. But whan Arnan turned him, and sawe the angell (and his foure sonnes with him) they hyd thē selues: for Arnan throszshed wheate.

Now whan Dauid came to Arnan, Arnan looked, and was aware of Dauid, and wēte forth out of the barne, and worshipped Dauid with his face to the grounde. And Dauid sayde vnto Arnan: Geue me rowme in the barne, to buylde an altare vnto the LORDE therin: for þy full money shalt thou geue it me, that the plague maye cease from the people.

But Arnan sayde vnto Dauid: Take it vnto the, and let my lorde the kynge do as pleaseth him. Beholde, that oxē geue I for a burnt-offerynge, and those vessels to the oxē, and wheate for the meatofferynge, I geue it all. Neuertheles the kynge sayde vnto Arnan: Not so: but for þy full money wyl I bye it: for that which is thine wyl not I take for the LORDE, and offere a burntofferynge for naughte.

So Dauid gaue Arnan for þy rowme, sixe hundredre Sycles of golde in weight. And there buylde Dauid an altare vnto þy LORDE, & offred burntofferynges & slayn-offerynges. And whan he called vpō the LORDE, he herde him thorow the fyre from heauē vpon þy altare of the burntofferynge. And þy LORDE sayde vnto the angell, that he shulde put his swerde in to his sheeth.

At the same tyme whā Dauid sawe, that the LORDE had herde him vpon the corne floore of Arnan þy Iebusite, he dyd sacrifice there. For þy habitacion of þy LORDE which Moses had made in the wyldernes, and the altare of burntofferynges, was at that tyme in the hye place at Gibeon. But Dauid coule not go thither to seke God before it, for he feared the swerde of the LORDES angell. And Dauid sayde: * Here shal be þy house of God þy LORDE, and this the altare of burnt-offerynges for Israel.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND Dauid cōmaunded to gather together the straungers that were in þy londe of Israel, and appoynted masons to hewe stone for the buyldinge of the house of God. And Dauid prepared moch yron for nales in the dores of the portes, and for soch thinges as were to be naled together, and so moch brasse, that it was not to be weyed: and Cedre trees innumerable: for they of Zidon & Tyre brought Dauid moch Cedre tymbre: for Dauid thoughte, Salomō my sonne is but a childe and tender: But the house that shal be buylde vnto the LORDE, shal be greate, that his name & prayse maye be exalted in all londes, therfore wyl I prouyde for him. So Dauid made grete prouysion before his death.

32 And he called Salomon his sonne, & commaunded him to buylde the house of the LORDE God of Israel, and sayde vnto him: My sonne, *I was minded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, but the worde of † LORDE came vnto me, and sayde: Thou hast shed moch bloude, and strycken many battayls, therfore shalt thou not buylde an house vnto my name, for as moch as thou hast shed so moch bloude vpon the earth before me. Beholde, the sonne which shal be borne vnto the, shal be a quyetee man: and I wyl cause him to be in rest from al his enemies on euery syde, for his name shalbe Salomon: for I wyl geue peace and rest vpon Israel as longe as he lyueth. He shal buylde an house vnto my name. He shal be my sonne, and I wyl be his father. And I wyl stablyshe ‡ seate of his kyngdome vpō Israel for euer.

¶ Now my sonne, the LORDE shal be wyth the, and thou shalt prospere, that thou mayest buylde an house vnto the LORDE thy God, acordinge as he hath spoken of the. The LORDE also shal geue the wysdome & vnderstondyng, and shal commytte Israel vnto the, that thou mayest kepe the lawe of the LORDE thy God. But then shal thou prospere, yf thou take hede to do after the ordynaunces and lawes which the LORDE commaunded Moses vnto Israel. Be stronge, and take a good corage vnto the, feare not, and be not faynt harted. Beholde, I haue in my pouerte prouyded for the house of the LORDE, an hundreth thousande talentes of golde, and a thousande tymes a thousande talentes of syluer, and brasse and yron without nombre: for there is so moch of it.

And tymbre and stone haue I prepared, thou mayest get more therof. Thou hast many workmen also, mesons and carpenters in stone and tymber, and all maner of men that haue vnderstondyng in all worke off golde, syluer, brasse, and yron without nombre. Yet get the vp, and be doynge, and the LORDE shal be with the.

33 And Dauid commaunded all the rulers of Israel, to helpe Salomon his sonne, and sayde: Is not the LORDE youre God with you, and hath geuen you rest on euery syde? for he hath deluyd the inhabitors of the londe in to youre handes, and the londe is subdued before the LORDE and before his people. Geue ouer youre hert now therfore and youre soule, to seke the LORDE youre God, and get you vp, and buylde a Sanctuary vnto the LORDE God, that the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE and the holy vessels of God, maye be brought in to the house, which shalbe buylded vnto the name of the LORDE. So Dauid made Salomon his sonne kynge ouer Israel, whan he himselfe was olde, and had lyued ynough.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND Dauid gathered all the rulers in 34 Israel together, and the prestes & Leuites, to nombre † Leuites from thirtie yere olde & aboue. And ‡ nombre of the (which were ströge men) frō heade to heade, were eight and thirtie thousande: of whom there were foure & twentie thousande, which dyd their diligence in the worke ouer † house of the LORDE, and sixe thousande officers and Iudges, and foure thousande porters, & foure thousande that songe prayes vnto † LORDE with instrumentes, which he had made to synge prayse with all.

And Dauid made the ordinaunce amonge the children of Leui, namely amōge Gerson, Kahath & Merari. The Gersonites were: Laedan and Simei. The children of Laedan: the first, Iehiel, Sethan, and Ioel, these thre.

The children of Simei were: Salomith, Hasiel and Haran, these thre. These were the chefe amonge the fathers of Laedan. These also were the children of Simei: Iahath, Sina, Ieus and Bria, these foure were Simeis children also. Iahath was the first, Sina the seconde. As for Ieus and Bria, they had not many childrē, therfore were they couēted but for one fathers house.

35 † The children of Kahath were: Amram, Iezehar, Hebron and Vsiel, these foure. The childrē of Amram were: Aaron and Moses. ‡ As for Aaron, he was separated, to be sanctified for the Most holy, he & his sonnes for euer, to burne incense before the LORDE, & to mynister and blesse in † name of the LORDE for euermore. The xrb. Chapter.

Ⓐ THIS was ⁊ ordinance of the childrē of Aaron. ⁊ The children of Aaron were, Nadab, Abihu, Eleasar and Ithamar. But
 Nadab and Abihu dyed before their fathers, and had no children. And Eleasar and Ithamar were prestes. And Dauid ordred them after his maner: Sadoc out of the children of Eleasar, and Ahimelech out of the children of Ithamar, accordinge to their nombre and office. And there were mo chefe stronge men founde amonge the children of Eleasar, then the children of Ithamar. And he ordeyned them after this maner: namely, sixtene out of ⁊ childrē of Eleasar to be rulers thorow out their fathers house: ⁊ eight of the children of Ithamar thorow out their fathers house. Neuertheles he ordeyned them by lot, because that both the pryncipall of the children of Eleasar and of Ithamar were in ⁊ Sanctuary, and chefe before God. And the Scribe Semeia the sonne of Nethaneel one of the Leuites, wrote them vp before ⁊ kynge and before the rulers, and before Sadoc the prest, ⁊ before Ahimelech the sonne of Abiathar, ⁊ before the chefe of the fathers amonge the prestes ⁊ Leuites: namely one fathers house for Eleasar, and the other for Ithamar.

Ⓑ And the first lot fell vpon Ioarib, the seconde vpon Iedana, the thirde vpō Harim, the fourth vpon Seorim, the fifth vpō Malchia, the sixte vpon Meiamin, the seuenth vpon Hakoz, the eight vpon ⁊ Abia, the nyenth vpon Iesua, the tenth vpon Sechania, the eleuenth vpon Eliasib, the twolueth vpon Iakin, the thirteenth vpon Hupa, the fourteenth vpon Iesebeab, the fiftenth vpon Bilga, the sixteenth vpon Immer, the seuententh vpon
 Hesir, the eightenth vpon Hapizez, the nyen-

 Maasia. This is their course after their office, to go in to the house of the LORDE, accordinge to their maner vnder their father Aaron, as the LORDE God of Israel commaunded him.

The children of Merari were: Maheli & Musi, whose sonne was Iaesia. The childrē of Merari of his sonne Iaesia were: Soham, Sacur & Ibrī. Maheli had Eleasar: for he had no sonnes. Of Cis, the children of Cis were: Ierahmeel and Musi. The children of Musi were, Maheli, Eder and Ieremoth. These are the childrē of & Leuites thorow out & house of their fathers. And the lot was cast for them also besyde their brethren the children of Aaron, in the presence of kynge Dauid and Sadoc and Ahimelech, and before the chefe fathers amonge the prestes & Leuites, as well for the leest brother as for the chefest amonge the fathers.

The xxvi. Chapter.

AND Dauid with the chefe captaynes sundered to the offices amonge & childrē of Assaph, Heman & Iedithun & prophetes with harpes, psalteries & Cymbales, and they were nombred vnto the worke acordinge to their offyce. Amonge the childrē of Assaph was Sakur, Ioseph, Nethania, Asarela, childrē of Assaph vnder Assaph which prophecyed besyde & kynge. Of Iedithun: The children of Iedithun were, Gedalia, Zori, Iesaia, Hasabia, Mathithia (Simei) these sixe vnder their father Iedithun with harpes, whose prophescieng was to geue thanks and to praise the LORDE. Of Heman: The children of Heman were Bukia, Mathania, Vsiel, Sebucl, Ierimoth, Hanania, Hanani, Eliatha, Gilthi, Romamthieser, Iaszbaksa, Mallothi, Hothir and Mehesioth. All these were the children of Hemā the kynges Seer in the wordes of God to lyfte vp the horne: for God gaue Heman fourtene sonnes & thre daughters.

All these were vnder their fathers Assaph Iedithun and Heman, to synge in the house of the LORDE with Cymbales, Psalteries & harpes, acordinge to the office in the house of God besyde the kynge. And their nombre with their brethren, which were taughte in the songe of the LORDE (euery one hauynge vnderstandinge) was two hundreth & eight and foure score. And they cast the * lottes ouer their offyce, for the leest as for the greatest, for the master as for the scolar.

And the first Lot fell vpō Ioseph which was of Assaph: the seconde vpō Gedolia with his brethrē and sonnes, of whom there were twolue. The thirde vpō Sacur with his sonnes & brethrē, of w^ho there were twolue. The fourth vpon Iezri with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The xxviij. Chapter.

OF the ordinaūces of the dorekeepers. Amonge the Korahytes was Meseleimia of the children of Assaph. The children of Meselechia were these: the fyrstborne Zacharias, the seconde Iediael, ⁊ thirde Sebadia, the fourth Iathniel, ⁊ fifth Elam, the sixte Iohanen, the seuenth Elioenai. The children of Obed Edom were these: the firstborne Semaia, the seconde Iosabad the thirde Ioah, the fourth Sachur, ⁊ fyfth Nethaneel, the sixte Ammiel, the seuenth Isachar, the eight Pegulthai: for God had blessed him. And vnto Semaia his sonne there were sonnes borne also, which bare rule in the house of their fathers: for they were mightie valeaunt men. The children of Semaia were, Athni, Rephael, Obed and Elsabad, whose brethren were valeaunt men, Elihu and Semachia: all these were of the children of Obed Edom. Meselechia had children and brethren which were stronge men, euen eightene.

33 Hossa of the children of Merari had children, Simri the chefest: for ⁊ fyrstborne was not there, therefore dyd his father appoynte him to be chefest, the secōde Helchias, ⁊ thirde Tebalia, ⁊ fourth Zacharias. All the children and brethren of Hossa were thirtene.

This is the ordinaunce of the dorekeepers amonge the heades of the valeaunt men in the offyce besyde their brethren, to mynister in the house of the LORDE. And the lot was cast for the small as for ⁊ greate thorow out the house of their fathers at euery dore. The lot towarde the East fell vpon Meselechia. And the lot was cast for Zacharias his sonne, which was a man of prudent counsell, ⁊ vnto him it fell towarde the North: But vnto Obed Edom towarde the South, and to his sonnes besyde the house of Esupim. And vnto Supim and Hossa towarde the West by the gate of Salechet in the strete of the burntofferings, where the tabernacles stonde together.

Ⓢ Towarde the East were there sixe of the Leuites. Towarde the north foure on ⁊ daie tyme. Towarde the south foure on the daye season likewyse. Besyde Esupim two ⁊ two. By Parbar westwarde were there foure in the strete, and two besyde Parbar. These are the ordinaunces of the dorekeepers amonge the children of the Korahites, and the children of Merari. Of the Leuites, was Ahia ouer the treasures of the house of God, and ouer the treasures that were sanctified.

Of the children of Laedan, the childrē of the Gersonites. Of Laedan were these the heades of the fathers, namely ⁊ Iehielites. The children of the Iehielites were, Sethā and his brother Ioel ouer the treasures of the house of the LORDE. Amonge the Amramites, Iezeharites, Hebronites and Vsielites, was Sebul the sonne of Gerson the sonne of Moses, prynce ouer the treasures. His brother Elieser had a sonne Rechabā, whose sonne was Iesaia, whose sonne was Iorā, whose sonne was Sichri, whose sonne was Selomith: the same Selomith and his brethren were ouer all the treasures of the thinges that were halowed, which kinge Dauid halowed, and the pryncipall of the fathers amonge the rulers ouer thousandes ⁊ ouer hundredes, and rulers in the hoost (of warres and spoyles had they halowed it, to repayre the house of the LORDE) and ouer all ⁊ Samuel the Seer, and Saul the sonne of Cis, ⁊ Abner the sonne of Ner, and Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia had halowed: what soeuer was sanctified, it was vnder the hande of Selomith and his brethren. Amonge the Iezeharites was Chenaia with his sonnes for the worke without ouer Israel, officers ⁊ Iudges. Amonge the Hebronites was Hasabā ⁊ his brethren, valeaunt men, a thousande and seuen hundreth, ouer the offices of Israel on this syde Iordane westwarde for all maner worke of the LORDE, and to serue the kinge.

But amonge the Hebronites was Ieria the chefest amonge the Hebronites of his kined amōge the fathers. And search was made amonge them, and in the fortieth yeare of kynge Dauid there were founde valeaūt men at Iaaser in Gilead, and their brethren mightie men, two thousande and seuen hundreth pryncipall fathers, and Dauid set the ouer the Rubenites, Gaddites, and ouer the halfe trybe of Manasses, for all soch busynes as belonged vnto God and the kynge.

The xxvij. Chapter.

THE children of Israel aordinge to their nombre, were heades of the fathers, and ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, ⁊ officers waytinge vpon the kynge, to go of ⁊ on after their course euery moneth one, in all ⁊ monethes of ⁊ yeare. Euery course had foure ⁊ twentye thousande.

Ouer the first course of the first moneth, was Iasebeam ⁊ sonne of Sabdiel, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande. Of the children of Phares was the pryncipall amonge all the chefe captaynes in the first moneth.

Ouer the course of the seconde moneth was Dodai the Ahohite, and Mikloth was the prynce ouer his course. And vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The thirde pryncipall captayne of the thirde moneth, was Benaia the sonne of Ioiada † prest, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande. * This is † Benaia the Worthie amonge thirtie and aboue thirtie, And his course was vnder his sonne Ammi Sabad.

The fourth in † fourth moneth was Asahel the brother of Ioab, and Sabadia his sonne after him, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

B The fifth in the fifth moneth was Samehuth the Iesrahite, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The sixte in the sixte moneth, was Ira † sonne of Ickes the Thecoite, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The seuenth in the seuenth moneth, was Helez the Pelonite of the children of Ephraim, and vnder his course were foure and twēty thousande.

The eight in the eight moneth, was Sibechai the Husathite of † Sarehites, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The nyenth in the nyenth moneth, was Abieser the Anthothite of the childre of Iemini, † vnder his course were foure and twēty thousande.

The tenth in the tenth moneth, was Maheraï the Netophatite of the Serahites, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The eleuenth in the eleuēth moneth, was Benaia the Pargathonite of the children of Ephraim, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The twoluēth in the twoluēth moneth was Heldai † Netophatite of Athniel, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

C Ouer the trybes of Israel were these: Amonge the Rubenites was Prynce Elieser the sonne of Sichri. Amonge the Simeonites was Sephatia the sonne of Maecha. Amonge the Leuites was Hasabia the sonne of Kemuel. Amonge the Aaronites was Sadoc. Amōge Iuda was Elihu one of Dauids brethren. Amonge Isachar was Amri the sonne of Michael. Amonge Zabulō was Iesmaia the sonne of Obadia. Amonge Nephtali was Jeremoth the sonne of Asriel. Amonge the children of Ephraim was Hosea the sonne of Asasia. Amonge the halfe trybe of Manasses was Ioel the sonne of Pedaia. Amonge the halfe trybe of Manasses in Gilead was Ieddo the sonne of Zacharias. Amonge Ben Iamin was Iaesiell the sonne of Abner. Amonge Dan was Asareel the sonne of Ieroham. These are the princes of the trybes of Israel.

But Dauid toke not the nombre of them that were twenty yeare olde and there vnder: for the LORDE had promysed to multiplie Israel as the starres of the skie. † Howbeit Ioab the sonne of Zeruia had begonne to nombre them, and performed it not: for there came wrath vpon Israel for the same cause, therefore came not the nombre in to † Cronicles of kynge Dauid.

Ouer the kynges treasures was Asmaueth D the sonne of Adiel. And ouer the treasures in the lōde, in the cities, vyllages and castels was Ionathan the sonne of Vsia. Ouer the huszbandmen to tyll the lōde was Esri the sonne of Chelub. Ouer the vynyardes was Simei the Ramathite. Ouer the wyne Cellers and treasures of wyne was Sabdi the Siphimite. Ouer the oyle gardens and Molbery trees in the lowe felde, was Baal Hanan the Gaderite. Ouer the treasure of the oyle was Ioas. Ouer † oxen of the pasture at Saron was Sitari the Saronite. Ouer the oxen in the valleys was Saphath the sonne of Adlai.

Ouer the Camels was Obil the Ismaelite. Ouer the asses was Iehethia the Meronothite. Ouer the shepe was Iasis the Hagarite. All these were rulers ouer kynge Dauids goodes. Ionathan Dauids vncl was of the counsell a wyse man and a scribe. And Iehiel the sonne of Hachmoni was with the kynges children. † Achitophel also was of the kynges counsell. Husai the Arachite was the kynges frende. After Achitophel was Ioiada † sonne of Benaia and Abiathar. As for Ioab, he was the kynges chefe captayne of warre.

ouer the goodes and catell of the kyng and of his sonnes, with the chāberlaines, warryers and valeaunt men. And Daud the kyng stode vp vpon his fete, and saide: Heare me my brethren and my people: *I was mynded to buyde an house, where the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE shulde rest, and a fote stole for the fete of oure God, and prepared my selfe for to buyde, But God sayde vnto me: "Thou shalt not buyde an house vnto my name, for thou art a man of warre, and hast shed bloude.

35 †Now hath the LORDE God of Israel chosen me out of all my fathers house, ‡I shulde be kyng ouer Israel: for †Iuda hath he chosen to be the Prynce, and in the house of Iuda amonge my fathers children hath he had pleasure vnto me, to make me kyng ouer all Israel: and amōge all my sonnes (for the LORDE hath geuen me many sonnes) he hath chosen Salomon my sonne, to syt vpon the seate of the kyngdome of the LORDE ouer Israel, and hath sayde vnto me: §Salomon thy sonne shall buyde me an house and my courtes: for I haue chosen him to be my sonne, ¶I wil be his father, ¶I wyll stablishe his kyngdome for euer, yf he be constant to do after my commaundementes and lawes, as it is this daye. Now in the sight of all Israel the congregation of the LORDE, and in the eares of oure God, se that ye obserue and seke all the commaundemētes of the LORDE youre God, that ye maye possesse this good londe and that ye and youre children maie haue ‡inheritaunce therof for euer.

¶ And thou my sonne Salomō, knowe thou the God of thy father, and serue him with all thy hert, and with the desyre of thy soule: for the LORDE searcheth all hertes, and vnderstandeth all thoughtes ¶I ymaginacions. Yf thou seke him, thou shalt fynde him: but yf thou forsake him, he shall refuse the for euer. Take hede now, for the LORDE hath chosen the, to buyde an house to be the Sāctuary: be stronge, and make it.

¶ And Daud gaue Salomon his sonne a patrone of the Porche, and of his house, and of the celles and perlors and ynnerner chābers, and of the house of the Mercyseate, ¶I of all that he had in his mynde, namely of the courte of the LORDES house, and of all the oratories rounde aboute the treasures in

‡ house of God, and of the treasures of soch thinges as were halowed, of the ordinaunces of the prestes, and Leuites, and of all ‡ busynesse of the offyces in the house of the LORDE.

¶ Golde (gaue he him) after ‡ golde weight for all maner of vessels of euery offyce, and all siluer ornaments after the weight for all maner of vessell of euery offyce: and weight for the golden candilstickes and golden lampes, for euery candilstycke and his lampes his weight: likewise for the siluer candilstickes gaue he the weight to the candilstickes ¶I his lampes, acordynge as was requyred for euery candilstycke. He gaue golde also for ‡ tables of the shewbred, for euery table his weight: and syluer lykwise for the syluer tables. And pure golde for the fleshokes, basens and censors: and for the golden cuppes, vnto euery cuppe his weight: and for the siluer cuppes, vnto euery cuppe his weight: and for the altare of incense his weight, of the most pure golde.

¶ And a patrone of the charett of the golden Cherubins, that they mighte sprede out them selues, and couer the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE. All this is geuen me in wrytinge of the hande of the LORDE, to make me vnderstonde all the workes of the patrone.

¶ And Daud sayde vnto Salomō his sonne: Be thou manly and stronge, and make it, feare not, and be not fayntharted, the LORDE God my God shal be with the, and shall not withdrawe his hande, ner fayle the, tyll thou haue fynished euery worke for the seruyce in the house of the LORDE. Beholde, the courses of the prestes and Leuites to all the offyces in the house of God are with the in euery worke, and are willinge, and haue wisdom to all the offyces: and so haue the prynces and all the people for euery thinge that thou hast to do.

The xxx. Chapter.

¶ AND kyng Daud sayde vnto all the ‡ congregation: God hath chosen Salomon one of my sonnes, which yet is yonge and tender. But the worke is greate: for it is not a mans palace, but the LORDE Gods. Yet haue I after all my abillite prepared vnto the house of God, golde for the vessels of golde, syluer for them of syluer, brasse for them of brasse, yron for stones of yron, wod for them of wod, Onix stones, set Rubyes, ¶I stones of dyuerse coloures, ¶I all precious stones, ¶I Marble stones in multitude. Besydes this, for the good wyl ꝑ I haue to the house of God, I haue of myne awne proper good thre M. talētes of golde of Ophir, ⁊ seuen M. talētes of pure syluer, which I geue vnto the holy house of God, besyde all ꝑ I haue prepared, to ouerlaye ꝑ walles of the house, ꝑ the same which ought to be of golde, maye be of golde: ⁊ that it which ought to be of syluer, maye be of syluer: and for all maner of worke by the hande of the craftesmen. And who is now fre wyllinge, to fyll his hande this daye vnto the LORDE?

33 Then were the prynces of the fathers, ꝑ prynces of the trybes of Israel, the captaynes ouer thousandes ⁊ ouer hundredes, the rulers ouer the kynges busynes, fre wyllinge, ⁊ gaue to ꝑ mynistracion in the house of God fyue M. talētes of golde, and ten M. guldens, and ten M. talētes of syluer, eightene M. talētes of brasse, and an hundred M. talētes of yron. And by whom so euer were foude stones, they gaue them to the treasure of the house of the LORDE, vnder the hāde of Iehiel the Gersonite.

And ꝑ people were glad that they were fre wyllinge: for they gaue it with a good wyl (euen with all their hert) vnto the LORDE. And Dauid also ꝑ kyng reioysed greatly, and praysed God, and sayde before the whole congregacion: Prayed be thou O LORDE God of Israel oure father, vnto the belongeth worshippe and power, glory, victory ⁊ thanks: for all that is in heauen and earth, is thine: thine is ꝑ kyngdome, and thou art exalted aboue all prynces. Thine are riches and honoure before ꝑ, thou reignest ouer all, in thy hande consisteth power and might, in thy hāde is it to make euery man greate and stronge.

10 Now thiike we the oure God, and prayse ꝑ name of thy glory: For who am I? What is my people? that we shulde be able with a fre wyl to offre, as this is done? For of the commeth all, and of thy hande haue we geuen it the: * For we are but pilgrims ⁊ strangers before the, as were all oure fathers. Oure life vpon earth is as a shadowe, and here is no abydinge. O LORDE oure God, all this abundaunce that we haue prepared to buylde the an house vnto thy name, came of thy hande, and is thine altogether. I knowe my God, that thou tryest the hert, and that vnfaynednes is acceptable vnto the: therfore haue I geuē all this with an vnfayned hert, euē with a good wyl, and now haue I had ioye to se thy people (which here are present) offre with a fre wyl vnto the. O LORDE God of oure fathers Abraham, Isaac, ⁊ Israel, kepe thou euermore soch purposes and thoughtes in ꝑ hertes of thy people, ⁊ prepare thou their hertes vnto the. And graunte my sonne Salomon a perfecte hert, that he maye kepe thy cōmaundementes, thy testimonies, ⁊ thy statutes, that he maye do all, ⁊ buylde this palace, which I haue prepared.

And Dauid sayde vnto the whole cōgregacion: O prayse the LORDE youre God. And all the cōgregacion praysed ꝑ LORDE God of their fathers, ⁊ bowed them selues, ⁊ worshipped the LORDE ⁊ then the kyng, and offred sacrifices vnto the LORDE. And on ꝑ nexte morow offred they burntofferynges, a M. bullockes, a M. rāmes, a M. lābes with their drynkofferynges, ⁊ plenteously offred they amonge all Israel. And they ate and dranke ꝑ same daie before the LORDE with greate ioye, and made Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng ꝑ seconde tyme, and anoynted him to be ꝑ pryncce for the LORDE, ⁊ Sadoc to be the prest.

15 Thus sat Salomon vpon the seate of ꝑ LORDE, kyng in his fathers steade, ⁊ prospered. And all Israel obeyed him, ⁊ all ꝑ rulers ⁊ mightie men, ⁊ all kyngs Dauids children submytted themselues vnto kyng Salomon. And ꝑ LORDE made Salomon excellent ⁊ greate in ꝑ sighte of all Israel, ⁊ and gaue him soch a glorious kyngdome, as none had before him ouer Israel.

So had Dauid now bene kyng ouer all Israel. And ꝑ tyme that he was kyng ouer Israel, is fortye yeares: At Hebron reigned he seuen yeare, and at Jerusalem thre ⁊ thirtie yeare, ⁊ dyed in a good age, full of dayes, riches and honoure. And Salomon his sonne was kyng in his steade.

These actes of kyng Dauid (both ꝑ first and last) beholde, they are wrytten amonge the actes of Samuel the Seer, and amonge the actes of the prophet Nathan, and amonge the actes of Gad the Seer, with all his kyngdome, power and tymes which passed vnder him, both vpon Israel ⁊ vpon all the kyngdomes of the earth.

The first Chapter.

AND Salomon the sonne of Dauid was stablyshed in his kyngdome, *and the LORDE his God was with him, & made him exceedinge greate. And Salomon spake vnto all Israel, to the captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, to the Iudges, and to all y prynces in Israel, and to the chefest fathers, so that they wente (Salomon and the whole congregacion with him) vnto the hye place which was at Gibe: * for there was y Tabernacle of y witness of God, † which Moses the seruaut of the LORDE had made in y wyldernes. ‡ For Dauid had brought vp the Arke of God from Kiriath Iarim, whan he

As for y brasen altare § which Bezaleel the sonne of Uri the sonne of Hur had made, it was there before the habita- of the LORDE: and Salomon and the con- gregacion soughte God. And Salomon offred a thousande burntofferings vpō the brasen altare that stode before the Tabernacle of witness.

In the same night appeared God vnto Salomon, and sayde vnto him: Axe, what shal I geue the? And Salomon sayde vnto God: Thou hast done greate mercy vnto my father Dauid, and hast made me kyng in his steade. Now LORDE God, let thy worde that thou hast promysed vnto my father

Then sayde God vnto Salomon: For so moch as thou art so mynyed, and hast not desyred riches ner good, ner honoure, ner the soules of thine enemies, ner longe life, but hast requyred wyszdom and knowlege, to iudge my people, ouer whom I haue made the kynge, wyszdom thefore and knowlege be geuen the. ¶ So came Salomon from the hye place (which was at Gibeon) *vnto Ierusalē from † Tabernacle of witness, and reigned ouer Israel. And Salomon gathered him charettes and horsmen, so that he had a thousande and foure hundreth charettes, ‡ twolue thousande horsmen: and those appoynted he to be in the charet cities, and with the kynge at Ierusalem. And the kynge broughte it so to passe, that there was as moch syluer ‡ golde at Ierusalē as stones: and as many Ceders, as the Molberyes trees, that are in the valleys. Sēde me now thefore a wyse mā to worke with golde, syluer, brasse, yron, scarlet, purple, yalow sylke and soch one as can graue carued worke with the wyse men that are with me in Iewry and Ierusalem, whom my father Dauid ordeyned. The iij. Chapter.

AND Salomon beganne to buylde the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem vpon the mount Moria, *that was shewed vnto Dauid his father, which Dauid had prepared for the rowme, vpon the corne floore of Arnan the Iebusite. In the seconde daye of the seconde moneth in the fourth year of his reigne begāne he to buylde. And so layed Salomon the foundation to buylde the house of God: first the length thre score cubytes, the bredth twenty cubites: and the Porche before the wydenes of the house, was twenty cubites longe, but the height was an hundreth and twenty, and he ouerlayed it on the ynsyde with pure golde.

But the greате house sylde he with Pyne tre, and ouerlayed it with the best golde, and made palme trees and throwne worke thereon, and ouerlayed the house with precious stones to beutifye it. As for the golde, it was golde of Paruaīm. And the balkes and postes aboue, and the walles, and the dores of it ouerlayed he with golde, and caused Cherubins to be carued on the walles.

He made also the house of the Most holy, whose length was twenty cubites accordinge to the wydenesse of the house: and the bredth of it was twenty cubites likewyse, and he ouerlayed it with the best golde by sixe hundreth talentes. And for nales he gaue fifty Sicles of golde in weight, and ouerlayed the chambers with golde. He made also in the house of the most holy, two Cherubins of carued worke, and ouerlayed them with golde: and the length on the wynges of the Cherubins, so that one wyng had fyue cubytes, and touched the wall of the house: and the other wyng had fyue cubytes also, and touched the wynges of the other Cherub.

Euen so had one wynges of the other Cherub fyue cubites likewyse, and touched the wall of the house: and his other wyng had fyue cubites also, and touched the wynges of the other Cherub: so that these wynges of the Cherubins were spred out twenty cubites wyde. And they stode vpō their fete, and their face was turned to the house warde.

He made a vayle also of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple and linnenworke, and made Cherubins thereon. And before the house he made two pilers fyue and thirtie cubites longe, and the knoppes aboue thereon, fyue cubytes. And he made throwne worke for the quere, and put it aboue vpon the pilers: and made an hundreth pomgranates, and put them on the wrythren worke. And he set vp the pilers before the temple, the one on the righte honde, and the other on the left: and that on the righte honde called he Iachin, and it on the left honde called he Boos.

The iiij. Chapter.

HE made a brasen altare also, twenty cubytes longe, and twenty cubytes brode, and ten cubites hye. †And he made a molten lauer ten cubites wyde frō the one syde to the other rounde aboute, and fyue cubytes hye. And a metelyne of thirtie cubites mighte comprehend it aboute. And ymages of Bullockes were vnder it. And aboute the lauer (which was ten cubites wyde) there were two rowes of knoppes, ƿ were molten withall.

It stode so vpon the bullockes, that thre were turned towarde the north, thre towarde the west, thre towarde the south, and thre towarde the east, and the lauer aboue vpon them, and all their hynder partes were on the ynsyde. The thickness of it was an hand bredth, and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a floured rose. And it conteyned thre thousande Batthes.

And he made ten kettels, wherof he set fyue on the righte hande and fyue on the left, to waszshe in them soch thinges as belonged to the burntofferynge, that they mighte thrust them therin: but ƿ lauer (made he) for the prestes to wash in.

* 1 Par. 22. d.

† 3 Reg. 7. d.

B Ten golden candelstickes made he also as they ought to be, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made ten tables, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made an hundreth basens of golde. He made a courte likewise for the prestes, and a greate courte, and dores in the courte, and ouerlayed f dores with brasse. And the lauer set he on the righte syde towardes the south east. And Hiram made cauldrons, shouels and basens.

So Hiram fynished the worke which he made for kynge Salomon in the house of God: namely the two pilers with the roundels and knoppes aboue vpon both the pilers, and both the wrythen ropes to couer both the roundels of f knoppes aboue vpō the pilers, and the foure hundreth pomgranates on both the wrythē ropes, two rowes of pomgranates on euery rope, to couer the roundels of the knoppes that were aboue vpon the pilers.

C He made the stoles also and f kettels vpon the stoles, and a lauer, and twolue bullockes there vnder. And pottes, shouels, fleshokes, and all their vessels made Hiram Abif of pure metall for kynge Salomon vnto the house of the LORDE. In the coaste of Iordane dyd the kynge cause them to be molten in thicke earth betwene Suchoth and Zaredatha.

And Salomon made all these vessels which were so many, that the weight of f metall was not to be soughte out. And Salomon made all the ornamentes for the house of God: namely, the golden altare, the tables and the shewbreds thereon, the candelstickes with their lampes of pure golde, to burne before the Quere accordinge to the maner: and the floures and the lampes and the snoffers were of golde, all these were of pure golde.

And the knyues, basens, spones and pottes, were of pure golde. And the inтраunce and his dores within vnto the Most holy, and the dores of the house of the temple were of golde. Thus was all f worke fynished, which Salomon made in the house of the LORDE.

The b. Chapter

AND Salomon broughte in all f his father Dauid had sanctified,* namely, syluer and golde, and all maner of ornamentes, and layed them in the treasures of the house of God. *Thē gathered Salomon all the Elders in Israel together, all f heades of the trybes, prynces of the fathers amōge the childrē of Israel vnto Ierusalē, to brynge vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE out of the cite of Dauid, that is Sion. And there resorted vnto the kynge all the men in Israel at the feast, that is in the seuenth moneth, and all f Elders in Israel came.

And f Leuites toke the Arke, and broughte it vp with the Tabernacle of witness, and all the holy vessels that were in the Tabernacle: and f prestes and Leuites broughte them vp. As for kynge Salomon and all the cōgregacion of Israel that was gathered vnto him before the Arke, they offred shepe and oxen, so many, that no man coulde nombre ner reken them.

Thus the prestes broughte the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE vnto hir place in to the quere of the house, euen in to f Most holy vnder the wynges of the Cherubins, so that the Cherubins spred out their wynges ouer the place of the Arke: and the Cherubins couered the Arke and the stauēs thereof from aboue. And the stauēs were so longe, f the knoppes of them were sene from the Arke before the quere, but on the outsyde were they not sene. And it was there vnto this daye. And there was nothinge in the Arke, saue the two tables, which Moses put therin at Horeb, whan the LORDE made a couenaunt with the childrē of Israel, what tyme as they were departed out of Egipte.

And whan the prestes wente out of the Sanctuary (for all f prestes that were founde, sanctified them selues, because the courses were not kepte) the Leuites with all those that were vnder Asaph, Heman, Iedithun and their children and brethren, beyng clothed in lynnen, songe with Cymbales, psalteries and harpes, and stode towardes the east parte of the altare, and an hundreth and twenty prestes with them, which blew with trompettes. And it was, as yf one dyd trompet and synge, as though a voyce had bene herde of praysinge and geuyng thanks vnto the LORDE.

And whan the voyce arose from f trompettes, cymbales and other instrumentes of musick, and from praysinge the LORDE (because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer) the house of the LORDE was fylled on the ynsyde with a cloude, so ⁊ the prestes coulde not stonde to mynister for the cloude: for the glory of the LORDE fylled the house of God.

The vi. Chapter.

THEN sayde Salomon: The LORDE sayde, "that he wolde dwell in a darck cloude: I haue buylded an house to be an habitacion vnto the: ⁊ a seate, ⁊ thou mayest dwell there for euer. And the kynge turned his face, and blessed all the congregacion of Israel: for the whole cōgregacion of Israel stode, ⁊ he sayde: Prayed be the LORDE God of Israel, which promysed by his mouth vnto my father Dauid, and with his hande hath fulfilled it, whā he sayde: * Sēce the tyme that I broughte my people out of the londe of Egipte, I haue chosen no cite in all ⁊ trybes of Israel, to buylde an house for my name to be there, nether haue I chosen eny man to be prynce ouer my people of Israel. † But Ierusalem haue I chosen, for my name to be there: ⁊ Dauid haue I electe, to be prynce ouer my people of Israel.

13 And when my father Dauid was mynded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel, the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid my father: Where as thou wast mynded to buylde an house vnto my name, thou hast done well: howbeit thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sonne which shall come out of thy loynes, shal buylde the house vnto my name.

Thus hath ⁊ LORDE now performed his worde, that he spake: for I am come vp in my father Dauids steade, and syt vpon the seate of Israel, euen as the LORDE sayde, ⁊ haue buylded an house vnto the name of ⁊ LORDE God of Israel, ⁊ in it haue I put ⁊ Arke, wherin is the couenant of ⁊ LORDE, which he made with the childrē of Israel.

C And he stode before the altare of the LORDE in the presence of the whole congregacion of Israel, and spred out his handes: for Salomon had made a brasen pulpit, and set it in the myddes of the court, fyue cubites longe, and fyue cubites brode, and thre cubites hye: vpon the same stode he, and fell downe vpon his knees in the presence of the whole cōgregacion of Israel, and helde out his handes towarde heauē and sayde: † O LORDE God of Israel, there is no god like the, nether in heauen ner vpon earth, thou that kepest couenant and mercy for thy seruantes, that walke before the with all their hert. Thou hast kepte promes with my father Dauid thy seruauit: With thy mouth thou saydest it, and with thy hande hast thou fulfilled it, as it is come to passe this daye. Now LORDE God of Israel, make good vnto my father Dauid thy seruauit, that which thou hast promysed him, ⁊ sayde: Thou shalt not want a man before me, to syt vpon the seate of Israel: yf thy children kepe their waye, so ⁊ they walke in my lawe, like as thou hast walked before me: Now LORDE God of Israel, let thy worde be verified, which thou hast promysed vnto Dauid thy seruauit.

For thinkest thou that God in very dede dwelleth amonge men vpon earth? ‡ Beholde, the heauen and ⁊ heauens of all heauens maye not cōteyne the: how shulde then this house do it, which I haue buylded? But turne the vnto the prayer of thy seruauit, and to his supplicaciō (O LORDE my God) that thou mayest heare the thankesgeuyng and prayer, which thy seruauit maketh before the, so that thine eyes be open ouer this house daye and night, euen ouer this place (wherin thou saydest thou woldest set thy name) that thou mayest heare the prayer, which thy seruauit shall make in this place. Heare now therefore the intercession of thy seruauit and of thy people of Israel, what so euer they shall desyre in this place: heare thou it from the place of thy habitacion, euē from heauen: and when thou hearest it, be mercifull.

^b Whan eny mā synneth agaynst his neghboure, and an ooth be put vpon him which he ought to sweare, and the ooth commeth before thine altare in this house, then heare thou from heauen, and se ⁊ thy seruauit haue righte, so that thou rewarde the vngodly, and recōpence him his waye vpon his awne heade, and to iustifye the righteous, and to geue him accordinge to his righteounes.

Whan thy people of Israel is smyttē before thy enemies (whyly they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they turne vnto the, and knowlege thy name, and make their prayer and intercession before the in this house, then heare thou them from heauen, and be mercifull vnto the synne of thy people of Israel, & brynge them agayne in to the londe, ȳ thou hast geuen them and their fathers.

* When the heauen is shut vp, so that it rayne not (for so moch as they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they make their prayer in this place, and knowlege thy name, and turne from their synnes (whan thou hast brought them lowe) heare thou them then in heauen, and be mercifull vnto the synne of thy seruantes, and of thy people of Israel, that thou mayest teach them the good waye wherin they shulde walke, and let it rayne vpon thy londe which thou hast geuen thy people to possesse.

¶ When a dert, or pestilence, or drouth, or blastinge, or greshopper or catipiller, is in the londe : Or whan their enemye layeth sege to their portes in the lode, or whan any other plague or disease happeneth, who so euer they maketh his prayer or petition amonge any maner of men, or amonge all thy people of Israel, yf eny man fele his plague and disease, and spredeth out his handes vnto this house, heare thou then from heauen, euen from ȳ[†] seate of thy habitacion, and be mercifull : and geue euery man accordinge to all his wayes, in so moch as thou knowest his hert (for thou onely knowest the hert of the children of men) that they maye feare the, and allwaye walke in thy wayes, as longe as they lyue in the londe, which thou hast geuen vnto oure fathers.

And whan eny straunger which is not of thy people of Israel, commeth out of a farre cowntre because of thy greate name, and mightie hande, and out stretched arme, and commeth to make his prayer in this house, heare thou him then from heauē, euen from the seate of thy habitacion : and do all for ȳ which that straunger calleth vpō the, that all the nacions vpon earth maye knowe thy name, and feare the, as thy people of Israel do : and that they maye knowe, how ȳ this house which I haue buylded, is named after thy name.

Whan thy people go forth to ȳ battayll agaynst their enemies, the waye that thou shalt sende them, and shall praye vnto the[†] towarde the waye of this cite which thou hast chosen, and towarde the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name, heare thou the their prayer and petition from heauen, and helpe them to their righte.

¶ Whan they synne agaynst the (for there is no man that synneth not) and thou be wroth at them, and geue them ouer before their enemyes, so that they cary them awaye captiue in to a cowntre farre or nye, and yf they turne within their hertes in the londe where they are presoners, and so conuerte, and make their intercession vnto the in the londe of their captiuyte, and saye : We haue synned, and done amysse, and haue bene vngodly : and so turne them selues vnto ȳ with all their hert and with all their soule in the londe of their captiuyte, wherin they are presoners : and make their prayer towarde the waye of their owne londe, which thou gauest vnto their fathers, and towarde the cite which thou hast chosen, and towarde the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name : then heare thou their prayer and supplicacion from heauen, euen from the seate of thy dwellynge, and helpe them to their righte, and be mercifull vnto thy people that haue synned agaynst the. My God, let thine eyes now be opē, and let thine eares geue hede vnto prayer in this place. ¶ Aryse now O LORDE God vnto thy restinge place, thou and the Arke of thy strength. Let thy prestes O LORDE God be clothed with health, and let thy sayentes reioyce ouer this good. LORDE God, turne not awaye the face of thine anoynted : thinke vpon the mercies of thy seruaunt Dauid.

The vij. Chapter.

AND whā Salomō had ended his prair, there fell a fyre from heauen, and consumed the burntofferynge and the other offeringes. And the glory of the LORDE fylled the house, so that ȳ prestes coulde not go in to the house of the LORDE, while ȳ glory of the LORDE filled ȳ LORDES house. And all the children of Israel sawe the fyre fall downe, and the glory of the LORDE ouer the house : and they fell on their knees with their faces to the grounde vpon the pavement, and worshipped, and gaue thanks vnto the LORDE, because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer. As for the kynge and all the people, they offred before the LORDE.

¶ Psal. 131. a.

For kynge Salomon offred two and twētye thousande bullockes, and an hundreth thousande and twentye thousande shepe, & so both the kynge and all the people dedicated the house of God.

But the prestes stode in their watches, & the Leuites with the musicall instrumentes of the LORDE, which kynge Dauid had caused to make for to geue thanks vnto the LORDE, (because his mercy endureth for euer) with psalmes of Dauid thorow their hande. And the prestes blew trumpettes ouer agaynst them, and all Israel stode.

And Salomon halowed the myddelmost courte, which was before the house of the LORDE, for there prepared he the burnt-offerynges and the fat of the slayne offeringes: for the brasen altare that Salomon made, might not conteyne all the burntofferings, meattofferings, and the fat.

* And at the same tyme helde Salomon a feast seuen daies longe, and all Israel with him a very greate congregacion, from Hemath vnto the ryuer of Egipte, and on the eight daie helde he a conuocacion. For the dedication of the altare helde they seuen daies, and the feast seuen dayes also.

But on the thre and twentyeth daie of the seuenth moneth he let the people go vnto their tentes ioyfull and with mery hertes because of all the good, that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid, vnto Salomō, and to his people of Israel.

Thus fynished Salomō the house of ¶ LORDE, and the kinges house, and all ¶ came in his hert to make in the house of the LORDE, and in his awne house, prosperously. And the LORDE appeared vnto Salomon in the nighte season, and sayde vnto him: I haue herde thy prayer † and chosen this place vnto my selfe for an house of sacrifice.

Beholde, whan I shut the heauē so ¶ it raine not, or commaunde the greshopper to cōsume the londe, or cause a pestilence to come amonge my people, to humble my people, which is named after my name: and yf they praye, and seke my face, and turne from their euell wayes, thē wyl I heare them from heauen, and wyl forgeue their sinne, and heale their londe. So shal myne eyes now be open, and myne eares shal be attente vnto prayer in this place. Thus haue I now chosen this house, and sanctified it, that my name maye be there for euer: and myne eyes and my hert shal allwaye be there.

And yf thou walke before me, as thy father Dauid walked, so that thou do all that I commaunde the, and kepe myne ordinaūces and lawes, then wyl I stablishe the seate of thy kyngdome, acordynge as I promysed thy father Dauid, and sayde: Thou shalt not wante a man to be lorde ouer Israel. But yf ye turne backe, and forsake myne ordynaunces and commaudemētes which I haue layed before you, and so go youre waye, and serue other goddes, and worshippe them, thē wyl I rote † you out of my londe that I haue geuen you: and this house which I haue sanctified vnto my name, wil I cast awaye out of my presence, and geue it ouer to be a byworde and fabell amoge all nacions. And euery one that goeth by, shall be astonnyed at this hye house, and shall hyse at it, and saye: § Wherfore hath the LORDE deale thus with this londe and with this house? Then shall it be sayde: Euen because they haue forsaken the LORDE God of their fathers (which brought them out of the londe of Egipte) ¶ haue cleued vnto other goddes, ¶ worshipped them, and serued thē: therefore hath he brought all this euell vpon thē.

The viij. Chapter.

AND after twentye yeares (wherin Salomon buylded the house of the LORDE and his awne house) he buylded the cyties also which Hiram gaue vnto Salomon, and caused the children of Israel to dwell therein. And Salomon wente vnto Hemath Zoba, and made it stronge, and buylded Thadmor in the wyldernes, and all the cornecities which he buylded in Hemath. He buylded the vpper and lower Bethoron likewise, so that they were stronge cities with walles, portes and barres. And Baelath, and all the cornecities which Salomon had, and all the cities of the charettes and of the horse men, and all that Salomon had lust to buylde, both at Ierusalem and vpon Libanus, and in all the londe of his domynion.

All the remnaunt of the people of the Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuites and Iebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, and their children which they had lefte behynde them in the londe, (whom the children of Israel had not vterly destroyed) those dyd Salomon make trybutaries vnto this daye. As for the children of Israel, Salomon made no bondmen of them vnto his worke, but they were men of warre, and chefe captaynes, and ouer his charettes & horsmen. And the chefe of kynge Salomons officers were two hundreth and fyttie, which ruled the people.

And Salomon caused Pharaos doughter to be fetched vp out of the cite of Dauid, in to the house that he had buylded for her: for he sayde: My wyfe shall not dwell in the house of Dauid the kynge of Israel, for it is sanctified, in as moch as ſ Arke of the LORDE is come in to it.

C Then offered Salomon burntofferynge vnto the LORDE vpon the LORDES altare, which he had buylded before the porche, euery one vpon his daye to offre after the comaundemente of Moses, on the Sabbathes, Newmones & at the appoynted seasons of the yeare, euen thre tymes, namely in ſ feast of vnleueded bred, in the feast of wekes, & in the feast of Tabernacles.

And he set the prestes in ordre to their ministracion *acordynge as Dauid his father had appoynted, and the Leuites in their offyces, to geue thanks and to mynister in the presence of the prestes, euery one vpon his daye. And the dorekeepers in their courses, euery one at his dore, for so had Dauid the mā of God commaunded.

D And they departed not from the kynges comaundement ouer the prestes and Leuites in euery matter and in the treasures. Thus was all Salomons busynesse made ready, from the daye that the foundation of the LORDES house was layed, tyll it was fynished, so that the house of the LORDE was all prepared.

*Then wente Salomon vnto Ezeon Geber, and vnto Eloth by the See syde in the londe of Edomea. And Hiram sent him shippes by his seruantes which had knowlege of the See, and they wente with Salomōs seruantes vnto Ophir, and fetched from thence foure hundreth and fyftyte talentes of golde, and broughte it vnto kynge Salomon.

The ix. Chapter.

*A*ND when the *quene of rich Arabia herde the fame of Salomon, she came with a very greate tryne to Ierusalem (with Camels that bare spyces and golde, and precious stones) to proue Salomon with darke sentences. And when she came vnto Salomon, she spake vnto him all that she had deuyded in hir mynde. And the kynge tolde her all hir matters, & Salomon had nothinge in secreete, but he tolde it her.

And when the Quene of riche Arabia sawe the wysdome of Salomon, and ſ house that he had buylded, the meates of his table, the dwellinges of his seruantes, ſ offices of his mynisters and their garmentes, & his butlers and their apparell, and his parler where he wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, she coude no longer refrayne. And she sayde vnto the kynge: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behaueoure and of thy wysdome: howbeit I wolde not beleue their wordes, tyll I came my selfe, & sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe of thy greate wysdome hath not bene tolde me: there is more in ſ then the fame that I haue herde. Happye are thy men, and happie are these thy seruantes, ſ allwaye stonde before the, and heare thy wysdome. Praiseyd be the LORDE thy God, which had soch pleasure vnto the, that he hath set the vpon his seate to be kynge vnto the LORDE thy God. Because thy God loueth Israel, to set them vp for euer, therefore hath he ordeyned ſ to be kynge ouer them, that thou shuldest mayntayne iustice and equitye.

And she gaue ſ kynge an hundreth and twentye talentes of golde, & very moch spyce & precious stones. There were no mo soch spyces as these that the Quene of riche Arabia gaue vnto kynge Salomō. And Hiram seruantes and the seruantes of Salomon, which broughte golde from Ophir, broughte costly tymber also & precious stones.

And of the same costly tymber dyd Salomon cause to make staires in the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and harpes and psalteries for the Musicians. There was no soch tymber sene before in the londe of Iuda. But kynge Salomon gaue the Quene of riche Arabia all that she desyred and axed, & moch more then she had broughte vnto the kynge. And she returned, and departed in to hir londe with hir seruantes.

The golde that was broughte vnto Salomon

in one yere, was sixe hundreth and sixe and thre score talentes, besydes that ƿ chapmen and marchauntes broughte. And all the kynges of the Arabians, and the lordes in ƿ londe broughte golde and syluer vnto Salomon. Of the which kynges Salomon made two hundreth speares of beaten golde, so ƿ sixe hundreth peces of beaten golde came vpo one speare: ƿ thre hundreth shildes of beaten golde, so that thre hundreth peces of beaten golde came to one shyld: and the kyng put the in the house of the wod of Libanus.

And the kyng made a greate seate of Yuery, and ouerlaid it with pure golde: and the seate had sixe steppes, and a fotestole of golde festened vnto the seate, and it had two leanynges postes vpon both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode beside the leanynges postes, and there stode twolue Lions vpo the syxe steppes on both the sides. In all realmes hath not soch one bene made.

And all kynges Salomons drynkyng vessels were of golde, and all the vessels of the house of the wod of Libanus, were of pure golde: for syluer was rekened nothinge in Salomons tyme. For the kynges shippes wente vpon the See with the seruantes of Hirā, ƿ came once in thre yere, and brought golde, syluer, Yuery, Apes and Pecoakes.

Thus was kynges Salomon greater then all the kynges vpon earth, in riches and wysdome. And all the kynges of ƿ earth desired (to se) Salomons face, and to heare his wysdome, which God had geuen him in his hert. And they brought him yearly euery mā his present: Iewels of siluer and golde, raymēt, harnesse, spyes, horses and Mules.

And Salomon had foure thousande charet-horses, and twolue thousande horsmen, and put them in the charet cities, and with the kyng at Ierusalem. And he was lorde ouer all the kynges from the water vnto the londe of the Philistynes, and to the coaste of Egipte. And the kyng brought it so to passe, that there was as moch syluer at Ierusalem as stones: and as many Ceders, as there were Molbery trees in the valleys. And there were horses broughte vnto him out of Egipte, and out of all countres.

What more there is to saye of Salomon, both of his first and of his last, beholde, it is writtē in the Cronicles of the prophet Nathan, and in the prophecies of Ahia of Silo, ƿ in ƿ actes of Ieddi the Seer against Ieroboā ƿ sonne of Nebat. And Salomō reigned at Ierusalē ouer all Israel fortie yeres. And Salomon fell on slepe with his fathers, ƿ was buried in the cyte of Dauid his father. And Roboā his sonne was kige i his steade.

The x. Chapter.

ROBOAM wente vnto Sicheim: for all Israel was come vnto Sicheim: to make him kinge. And whan Ieroboā the sonne of Nebat herde that, which was in Egipte (*whither he was fled for kynges Salomon) he came agayne out of Egipte. And they sent for him and called him. And Ieroboam came with all Israel, and spake to Roboam, and sayde: Thy father made oure yocke greuous: make thou lighter now ƿ harde bondage of thy father, and ƿ heuy yocke that he layed vpon vs, and we wyll submytte oure selues vnto the. He sayde vnto them: Come to me agayne ouer thre dayes. And ƿ people wente their waye.

And Roboam the kyng axed couñell at the Elders, which had stonde before Salomon his father whyle he lyued, and he sayde: What is youre counsell, that I maye geue this people an answer? They spake vnto him, and sayde: Yf thou be louyng vnto this people, and deale gently with them, and geue them good wordes, then shal they allwaye be obedient vnto the. Neuerthelesse he forsoke the counsell of the Elders that they had geuen him, and toke counsell at ƿ yonge men which were growne vp with him, and stode before him. And he sayde vnto the: What is youre counsell, that we maye answer this people, which haue spoken vnto me, and saide: Make oure yock lighter, ƿ thy father layed vpon vs? The yongemen ƿ were growne vp with him, spake vnto him, and sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the people, that haue talked with the ƿ spoken: Thy father made oure yock to heuy, make thou oure yock lighter, Thus shalt thou saye vnto them: My litle finger shalbe thicker then my fathers loynes. Yf my father hath layed an heuy yock vpon you, I wyl make youre yock the more. My father chastened you with scourges, but I wyl beate you with scorpions.

Now whan Ieroboam and all the people came to Roboam on the thirde daye (acord-ynge as y kinge sayde: Come to me againe on the thirde daie) the kynge gaue the anharde answer. And Roboā the kynge forsoke y counsell of the Elders, t spake vnto the after y yonge mens counsell, t sayde: Yf my father haue made youre yock to heuy, I wil make it yet heuyer. My father chastened you with scourges, but I wyl beate you with scorpiōs. Thus the kynge folowed not y peoples minde: for so was it determyned of God, y y LORDE might stablishe his worde,

* which he spake by Ahia of Silo, vnto Ieroboā y sonne of Nebat. But whan all Israel sawe that the kynge wolde not consente vnto them, y people answered the kynge, and sayde:
What porcion haue we then in Dauid, or inheritaunce in the sonne of Isai? Let every man of Israel get him to his tent. Loke thou now to thy house Dauid. And all Israel wente vnto their tentes, so that Roboam reigned but ouer the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Iuda. And Roboam sent forth Adoram the rentgatherer, but the children of Israel stoned him to death. And kynge Roboā strengthened himselfe vpon his charet, to flye vnto Ierusalem. Thus fell Israel awaie fro the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

The xi. Chapter.

AND whan Roboam came to Ierusalem, he gathered together the house of Iuda and Ben Iamin (euen an hūdreth and foure score thousande chosen men of armes) to fyghte agaynst Israel, that they mighte brynge the kyngdome agayne vnto Roboam. But y worde of the LORDE came to Semaia the man of God, and sayde: Speake to Roboam the sonne of Salomon kynge of Iuda, and to all Israel y are in Iuda and Ben Iamin, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shal not go vp, ner fyght agaynst youre brethren:
let euery man go home agayne, for this is my dede. They herkened vnto the wordes of y
LORDE, and wete not forth agaynst Ieroboā.
As for Roboā, he dwelt at Ierusalem, and buylded vp the stronge cities in Iuda, namely Bethleā, Etan, Tekoa, Bethzur, Socho, Adullā, Gath, Maresa, Siph, Adoraim, Laches, Aseka, Zarega, Aialon, and Hebron (which were the fensed cities in Iuda and Ben Iamin) t he made them stronge, and set prynces therin, t

prouyded them of vytayles, oyle and wyne, and in all cities prepared he shildes and speares, and made them very stronge. And Iuda and Ben Iamin were vnder him.

The Prestes and Leuites also came vnto him out of Israel and from all the borders therof, And lefte their suburbs t possession, and came to Iuda vnto Ierusalem: for Iero-boam and his sonnes expelled them, that they shulde not execute the offyce of y presthode vnto y LORDE. But for himselfe he fouded prestes to y hye places, t to feldedeuels t calues, which he caused to make. And after them came there men out of all the trybes of Israel, which gaue ouer their hertes to seke y LORDE God of Israel, t came to Ierusalem for to offre vnto the LORDE God of their fathers. And so strengthened they y kingdome of Iuda, and mātayned Roboam the sonne of Salomon thre yere longe: for they walked in y waye of Dauid t Salomon thre yeres.

And Roboam toke Mahelath y daughter of Ieremoth y sonne of Dauid to wife, t Abihail the daughter of Eliab y sonne of Isai, which bare him these sonnes: Ieus, Semaria t Sa-ham. After her toke he Maecha the daughter of Absalom, which bare him Abia, Athai Sisa and Selomith. But Roboam loued Maecha the daughter of Absalom better then all his wyues t concubynes: for he had eightene wyues and thre score cōcubynes, and begat eight t twentye sonnes, and thre score dōugh-ters. And Roboam set Abia the sonne of Maecha to be heade and prynce amonge his brethren: for he thoughte to make him kynge:
for he was wyse, t more mightie then all his sonnes in all the countrees of Iuda t Ben Iamin, and in all the stronge cities. And he gaue them plenteousnes of fode, and desyred many wyues

The xij. Chapter.

BUT whā the kyngdome of Roboam was confirmed and stablyshed, he forsoke the lawe of the LORDE t all Israel with him.
And in the fyfth yere of Roboam wete Sisack the kynge of Egipte vp agaynst Ierusalem (for they had transgressed agaynst the LORDE) with a thousande and two hundreth charrettes, and with thre score thousande horsmen, and the people were innumerable that came with him out of Egipte, Libya, Suchim t out of Ethiopia, and he wanne the strōge cities that were in Iuda, and came to Ierusalem.

Then came Semaia ꝑ prophet vnto Roboam and to ꝑ rulers of Iuda (which were gathered together at Ierusalem for Sisack) ⁊ sayde vnto them : Thus sayeth ꝑ LORDE : Ye haue leste me, therfore haue I leste you also in Sisacks hande. The rulers in Israel with the kynge submytted them selues, and sayde : The LORDE is righteous.

33 But whā the LORDE sawe ꝑ they hūbled them selues, ꝑ worde of the LORDE came to Semaia, ⁊ sayde : They haue humbled them selues, therfore wyl I not destroye them, but I wyl geue them a litle delyuerance, that my indignacion fall not vpon Ierusalem by Sisack : for they shalbe subdued vnto him, ꝑ they maye knowe what it is to serue me, ⁊ to serue the kyngdomes of the worlde.

Thus wēt Sisack the kynge of Egipte vp to Ierusalem, ⁊ toke the treasures in the house of the LORDE, ⁊ the treasures in the kynges house, and caried all awaye, and toke the shyldes of golde, * that Salomon caused to make : in steade wherof kynge Roboā made shyldes of stele, and commytted thē vnto the chefe fotemen, which kepte the dore of the kynges house. And as oft as the kynge wente in to the house of the LORDE, ꝑ fote men came ⁊ bare them, ⁊ brought them againe in to ꝑ fote mens chāber. And for so much as he submytted himselfe, ꝑ wrath of ꝑ LORDE turned frō him, so that all was not destroyed : for there was yet some good in Iuda.

Ⓒ Thus was Roboam the kynge stablished in Ierusalem, and reigned. One and fortye yeare olde was Roboam whā he was made kynge, and reigned seuentene yeare at Ierusalem in the cite, † which the LORDE had chosen out of all the trybes of Israel, to set his name there. His mothers name was Naema an Ammonitisse : and he did euell, and prepared not his hert to seke the LORDE.

These actes of Roboam, both fyrst and last, are wrytten in the actes of Semaia the prophet, ⁊ of Iddo the Seer, and are noted, ⁊ so are the warres that Roboam and Ieroboam had together as longe as they lyued. And Roboam fell on slepe with his fathers and was buried in the cite of David, ⁊ Abia his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xiiij. Chaptr.

Ⓐ IN the eighteenth yeare of kynge Ieroboam, was Abia kynge in Iuda, ⁊ reigned thre yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Michaila the daughter of Vriell of Gibeā. And there was warre betwene Abia and Ieroboam. And Abia prepared himselfe to the battayll with foure hūdreth thousande stronge chosen men of warre. But Ieroboam made himselfe ready to fight agaynst him with eight hūdreth thousande chosen men of strength.

And Abia gatt him vp vpon the hyl Zemaraim, which lyeth vpon mount Ephraim and sayde : Herken vnto me thou Ieroboam and all Israel : Knowe ye not that the LORDE God of Israel hath geuen Dauid ꝑ kyngdome of Israel for euer, vnto him and his sonnes with a Salt couenaut ? But Ieroboā the sonne of Nebat, the seruaut of Salomon Dauids sonne, gat him vp ⁊ fell awaye from his lorde. And there resorted vnto him vagaboundes and children of Belial, and haue strengthened them selues against Roboā the sonne of Salomō : for Roboam was but yonge and of a fearfull hert, and coulde not resiste them.

Now thinke ye to set youre selues against 33 the kyngdome of the LORDE amonge the sonnes of Dauid, for so much as there is so greate a multitude of you, ⁊ haue ꝑ golden calues † ꝑ Ieroboam made you for goddes. § Haue ye not expelled the prestes of the LORDE the children of Aaron and the Leuites ? and haue made you prestes of youre awne, euen as the people of the londes ? Who so euer commeth to fylle his hande with a yonge bullocke and seuen rammes, shal be preste vnto them that are not goddes.

But with vs is ꝑ LORDE oure God, whō we forsake not : and the prestes that minister vnto the LORDE, the children of Aaron and the Leuites in their busines, and euery mornyng and euery euenyng kyndle they the burntofferynges vnto the LORDE, and the swete incense, and prepare the shewbred vpon the pure table, and the golden candlesticke with his lampes, to be kyndled euery euenyng : for we wayte vpon the LORDE oure God.

Ⓒ As for you, ye haue forsaken him. Beholde, God is the captayne of oure hoost, and with vs are his prestes, and the blowyng trompettes, to trompe agaynst you. Ye children of Israel, fight not agaynst the LORDE God of youre fathers : for ye shal not prospere.

¶ Num. 10. a.

Neuertheles Ieroboam made a preuy watch on euery syde, to come vpon them behynde, so that they were before Iuda, and ꝑ preuy watch behynde. Now whā Iuda turned them, beholde, there was battayll before thē ⁊ behynde. Then cryed they vnto ꝑ LORDE, ⁊ the prestes tromped with the trompettes, ⁊ whā euery man in Iuda gaue a shoute, God plagued Ieroboam and Israel before Abia and Iuda. And the children of Israel fled before Iuda, and God gaue them in to their handes, so that Abia ⁊ his people dyd a greate slaughter vpon them, and there fell wounded of Israel fyue hundreth thousande chosen men.

Thus were the children of Israel subdued at that tyme, but the children of Iuda were comforted, for they put their trust in ꝑ LORDE God of their fathers. And Abia folowed vpon Ieroboam, and wanne cities frō him, Bethel with the vyllages therof, Iesana with hir vyllages, and Ephron with the vyllages therof, so that Ieroboam came nomore to strength, as longe as Abia lyued. And the LORDE smote him that he dyed.

Now whan Abia was strengthened, he toke fourtene wyues, and begat two and twenty sonnes and sixtene daughters. What more there is to saye of Abia, and of his wayes and his doynge, it is wrytten in the storie of the prophet Iddo. And Abia fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him in ꝑ cite of Dauid: and Asa his sonne was kyng in his steade. In his tyme was the londe in rest ten yeares.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND Asa dyd that which was good ⁊ right in the sighte of the LORDE his God, and put away the straunge altares, and the hye places, and brake the pilers, and hewed downe the groues, and sayde vnto Iuda, that they shulde seke the LORDE God of their fathers, and to do after ꝑ lawe and commaundementes. And the hye places and ymages put he awaye out of all the cities of Iuda: and the kyngdome had rest before him. And he builded strōge cities in Iuda, whyle the londe was in quietnes, ⁊ whyle there was no warre agaynst him in the same yeares: for ꝑ LORDE gaue him rest.

And he sayde vnto Iuda: Let vs buylde vp these cities, and fense them rounde aboute with walles and towres, with portes and barres, while the londe is yet with vs: for we haue soughte the LORDE oure God, and he hath geuen vs rest on euery syde. So they buylde, and it wente prosperously with thē. And Asa had an hoost of mē which bare shildes ⁊ speares, out of Iuda thre C. thousande, and out of Ben Iamin two hūdreth and foure score thousande, that bare shyldes ⁊ coulede shute with bowes, and all these were mightie stronge men.

But Serah the Moryan came out against thē with an hoost of a thousande times a thousande, and with thre hundreth charrettes, and came vnto Maresa. And Asa wente forth agaynst him. And they prepared them selues to the battayll in the valley Zephata beside Maresa. And Asa called vpon ꝑ LORDE his God and sayde: *LORDE, it is no differēce with ꝑ, to helpe by fewe or by many. Helpe vs O LORDE oure God: for oure trust is in the, ⁊ in thy name are we come forth against this multitude. LORDE oure God, let no man preuayle agaynst the.

And the LORDE smote the Moriās before Asa and before Iuda, so that they fled. And Asa with ꝑ people that was by him, folowed vpon them vnto Gerar. And the Moriās fell, so that none of them remained alyue, but were smytten before the LORDE and before his hoost. And they caried excedinge moch spoyle from thence. And he smote all the cyties aboute Gerar, for a fearfulness of the LORDE came vpon them. And they spoyled all the cities, for there was moch spoyle in them. They smote the tentes of the catell also, and toke many shepe and Camels, and came agayne to Ierusalem.

The xv. Chapter.

AND the sprete of God came vpō Asarias the sonne of Obed, which wente forth to Asa, and sayde vnto him: Heare me Asa and all Iuda ⁊ Ben Iamin: The LORDE is with you, whyle ye are with him: and yf ye seke him, he wyll be founde of you. But yf ye forsake him, he shal forsake you also. Neuertheles there shal be many dayes in Israel, that there shalbe no true God, no preste to teach, ⁊ no lawe. And whan they turne in their trouble vnto the LORDE God of Israel, and seke him, he shalbe founde.

+ Ose. 3. b.

At that tyme shall it not be well with him that goeth out and in: for there shal be grete vprours vpon all them y dwell on the earth. For one people shall all to smyte another, & one cite another: for God shal vexe them with all maner of trouble. But be ye stronge, and let not youre handes be feble: for youre worke hath his rewarde.

¶ Whan Asa herde these wordes, and the propheciege (of Asarias the sonne) of Obed the prophet, he toke a corage vnto him, and put awaye the abhominacions out of all y londre of Iuda and Ben Iamin, and out of the cities that he had wonne vpon mount Ephraim: and renewed the LORDES altare, which stode before the porche of the LORDE. And all Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered them selues together, and the straungers with them out of Ephraim, Manasses and Simeon: for there fell many vnto him out of Israel, whan they sawe that the LORDE his God was with him. And they resorted vnto Ierusalem in the thirde moneth of the fyfteenth yere of the reigne of Asa, and the same daye offred they vnto the LORDE of the spoyle that they had broughte, seuen hūdreth oxen, and seuen thousande shepe.

¶ And they entred in to y couenaunt, that they wolde seke the LORDE God of their fathers, with all their hert and with all their soule. And who so euer wolde not seke y LORDE God of Israel, shulde dye, both small & greate, both man and woman: and they sware vnto the LORDE with loude voyce, with shoutinge, with trompettes and with shawmes. And all Iuda were glad ouer the ooth: for they had sworne with all their hert, and they soughte him with a whole wyll: and he was founde of them, and the LORDE gaue them rest on euery syde.

¶ And Asa y kynge put downe his mother from the mynistracion, that she had founded in the groue vnto Miplezeth. And Asa roted out hir Miplezeth, and beate it in sunder, and brent it by the broke Cedron. But the hye places were not put downe out of Israel. Yet was the hert of Asa perfecte as longe as he lyued. And loke what his father had halowed, and that he him selfe had halowed, he broughte it in to y house of God, syluer, golde and ornāmetes. And there was no warre vnto the fyue and thirtieth yere of the reigne of Asa.

* 3 Re. 15. c.

The xvi. Chapter.

IN the sixe and thirtieth yere of y reigne of Asa, wente Baesa the kynge of Israel vp agaynst Iuda, and buylded Rama, to let Asa the kynge of Iuda, y he shulde not go out and in: But Asa toke forth the treasure in the house of the LORDE, and the syluer and golde in the kynges house, and sent it vnto Benadad y kynge of Syria, which dwelt at Damascon, and caused to saye vnto him: There is a couenaunt betwene me and the, betwene my father and thy father, therefore haue I sent y syluer and golde, that thou mayest breake y couenaunt with Baesa the kynge of Israel, that he maye departe fro me.

Benadad herkened vnto kynge Asa, and sent his hoost agaynst the cities of Israel, which smote Eion, Dan and Abel Maim, and all the corne cities of Nephtali. Whan Baesa herde that, he lefte of from buyldinge Rama, and ceased from his worke. But kynge Asa toke all Iuda vnto him, and caried awaye y stones and tymber (wherwith Baesa buylded) and he buylded Geba & Mizpa withall.

At the same tyme came Hanani the Seer vnto Asa the kynge of Iuda, and sayde vnto him: Because thou hast trusted vnto the kynge of Syria, and not put thy trust in the LORDE thy God, therefore is the power of the kynge of Syria escaped thy hāde. * Were not the Moryans and Lybians a greate multitude with exceedinge many charettes and horsmen? Yet gaue the LORDE them in to thy hande, whan thou dydest put thy trust in him: for the eyes of the LORDE loke rounde aboute all londes, to strength them y are in him with all their hert. Thou hast done vn-wysely, therefore shalt thou haue warre from hēce forth. But Asa was wroth at y Seer, and put him in preson: for he murmured with him ouer this thinge. And Asa oppressed certayne of the people at y same tyme.

These actes of Asa both first and last, behold, they are written in the boke of y kynges of Iuda & Israel. And Asa was diseased in his fete in the nyne and thirtieth yere of his reigne, and endured ther ouer. † Nether soughte he the LORDE in his sicknesse, but trusted vnto Phisicians. Thus fell Asa on slepe with his fathers, & dyed in the one and fortieth yere of his reigne, & was buried in his awne sepulchre which he had caused to be grauen for him selfe in the cite of Dauid. And they layed him vpon his bed, which was fylled with swete odoures & all maner of spices (made after þe Apotecaries craft) and made a very greate burnynge.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND Iosaphat his sonne was kynge in his steade, & waxed mightie against Israel. And he put men of warre in all the stronge cities of Iuda, and set officers in the londe of Iuda, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had wonne. And the LORDE was with Iosaphat: for he walked in the olde wayes of his father Dauid, & soughte not Baalim, but the God of his father, & walked in his commandmentes, & not after the workes of Israel: therefore dyd the LORDE stablyshe the kyngdome in his hãde. And all Iuda gaue presentes vnto Iosaphat, & he had greate riches & worshipp. And whan his hert was coraged in the wayes of the LORDE, he put downe styll the hye places and groues out of Iuda.

In the thirde yeare of his reigne sent he his prynces, Benhail, Obadia, Zacharias, Nethaneel & Michaia, to teach in the cities of Iuda: & with them the Leuites: Semaia, Nethania, Sebadia, Asahel, Semiramoth, Ionathan, Adonia, Tobia & Tob Adonia, & with them þe prestes Elisama & Ioram. And they taughte in Iuda, & had the boke of the lawe of þe LORDE with them, & wente aboute in all þe cities of Iuda, & taughte the people.

And the feare of the LORDE came vpon all þe kyngdomes in the countrees that laye aboute Iuda, so þe they foughte not agaynst Iosaphat. And the Philistynes broughte presentes and trybute of syluer vnto Iosaphat. And the Arabians broughte him seuē thousande and seuē hundredth rammes, and seuē thousande and seuē hundredth he goates. Thus increased Iosaphat, & grewe euer greater. And he buylded castels and corne cities in Iuda. And dyd moch in the cities of Iuda, and had valeaunt and mightie men at Ierusalem.

C And this was þe ordinance thorow out the house of their fathers, which were rulers ouer the thousandes in Iuda. Adna a captayne, & with him were thre hũdredth thousande mightie men. Nexte vnto him was Iohanan þe chefe, and with him were two hundredth and foure score thousande. Nexte him was Amasia the sonne of Sichri the fre wyllinge of þe LORDE, and with him were two hundredth thousande valeaunt men. Of the children of Ben Iamin was Eliada a mightie man, and with him were two hundredth thousande ready with bowes and shyldes. Nexte vnto him was Iosabad, and with him were an hundredth and foure score thousande harnessed men of warre. All these wayted vpon the kynge, besydes those that the kynge had layed in the strõge cities thorow out all Iuda.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND Iosaphat had greate riches and worshipp, and made frendshippe with Achab. * And after two yeares wente he downe to Achab vnto Samaria. And Achab caused many shepe and oxẽ to be slayne for him and for þe people that were with him. And he counceled him to go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And Achab the kynge of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat the kynge of Iuda: Go with me vnto Ramoth in Gilead. He sayde vnto him: I am as thou, and my people as thy people, we wyll go with the vnto the battayll.

But Iosaphat sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: Axe counsell (I praye the) this daye at the worde of the LORDE. And the kynge of Israel gathered the prophetes together, euen foure hundredth men, & saide vnto them: Shal we go to the battayll vnto Ramoth in Gilead, or shal I let it alonẽ? They sayde: Go vp, God shal delyuer it in to the kynges hãde. But Iosaphat sayde: Is there not yet one prophet of the LORDE here, þe we maye axe at him? The kynge of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat: There is yet one man, at whom we maye axe of þe LORDE: but I hate him, for he prophecieth me no good, but allwaye euell, namely Micheas the sonne of Iemla. Iosaphat sayde: Let not the kynge saye so. And the kynge of Israel called one of his chamberlaynes, & sayde: Brynge hither soone Micheas the sonne of Iemla.

And the kynge of Israel, and Iosaphat the kynge of Iuda, sat either of them vpon his seate, arrayed in their garments. Euen in the place at the dore of the porte of Samaria sat they, and all þe prophetes prophecied before them. And Sedechias the sonne of Cnaena had made him hornes of yron, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: With these shalt thou puszhe at the Syrians, tyll thou brynge them to naughte. And all the prophetes prophecied likewyse, & sayde: Go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead, and thou shalt prospere, and y LORDE shal delyuer it in to the kynges hande.

And the messauger that wente to call Micheas, spake vnto him, and sayde: Beholde, y wordes of the prophetes are with one acorde good before the kyng: let thy worde (I praye the) be as one of theirs, and speake thou good also. But Micheas sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, loke what my God sayeth vnto me, y wyl I speake. And whan he came to the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto him: Micheas, shulde we go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to the battayll, or shulde we let it alone? He saide: Go vp, and ye shal prospere. It shal be geue you in youre handes. But y kyng sayde vnto him: I charge y yet agayne, that thou tell me nothinge but y trueth in the name of the LORDE.

C Then saide he: I sawe all Israel scatered abrode vpō the mountaynes, as the shepe y haue no shepherd. And the LORDE sayde: Hauē these no lorde? Let euery one turne home agayne in peace. Thē sayde the kyng of Israel vnto Iosaphat: Dyd not I tell the, y he wolde prophecie me no good, but euell?

And he sayde: Therfore heare ye the worde of the LORDE: *I sawe the LORDE syt vpon his seate, and all the hoost of heauen stondinge at his righte hande & at his lefte. And the LORDE sayde: Who wyl disceauē Achab the kyng of Israel, that he maye go vp & fall at Ramoth in Gilead? And whan one sayde thus, another so, there came forth a sprete, and stode before y LORDE, and sayde: I wyl disceauē him. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherwith? He sayde: I wyl go forth, and be a false sprete in the mouth of all his prophetes. And he sayde: Thou shalt disceauē him, and shalt be able: go thy waye, and do so. Beholde now, †the LORDE hath geuen a false sprete in the mouth of all these thy prophetes, and the LORDE hath spokē euell agaynst the.

D Then stepte forth Sedechias the sonne of Cnaena, and smote Micheas vpon the cheke, and sayde: Which waye is the sprete of y LORDE departed from me, to speake thorow the? Micheas sayde: Beholde, thou shalt se it, whan thou comest in to y ynnmost chamber to hyde the. But the kyng of Israel sayde: Take Micheas, and let him remayne with Amōn the ruler of the cite, and with Ioas the sonne of Melech, and saye: Thus sayeth the kyng: Put this man in preson, and fede him with bred and water of trouble, tyll I come agayne in peace. Micheas saide: Yf thou comest agayne in peace, then hath not the LORDE spoken thorow me. And he sayde: Herken to all ye people.

So the kyng of Israel, and Iosaphat y kyng of Iuda wente vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And y kyng of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat: Chaunge thy clothes, and come to the battayll in thine araye. And y kyng of Israel chaunged his rayment, & came in to the battayll. But the kyng of Syria had commaunded the rulers of his charettes: Ye shal fighte nether agaynst small ner greate, but onely agaynst the kyng of Israel.

Now whan the rulers of the charrettes sawe Iosaphat, they thoughte: It is y kyng of Israel, and they wēte aboute to fighte agaynst him. But Iosaphat cryed, and the LORDE helped him. And God turned them from him: for whan the rulers of the charettes sawe that it was not y kyng of Israel, they turned back from him. But a certayne man bended his bowe harde, & shot the kyng of Israel betwene the mawe and the longes. Thē sayde he vnto his charet man: Turne thine hādē, and cary me out of the hoost, for I am wounded. And the battayll was sore the same daye. And the kyng of Israel stode vpon his charet agaynst the Syrians vntyll the euenyng, and dyed whā the Sonne wente downe.

The xix. Chapter.

BUT Iosaphat the kyng of Iuda came home agayne in peace vnto Ierusalem. And Iehu y sonne of Hanani the Seer wēte forth to mete him, & sayde vnto kyng Iosaphat: Shuldest thou so helpe the vngodly, and loue them that hate the LORDE? And for this cause is y wrath vpō the from the LORDE: neuertheles there is some good founde in the, that thou hast put the groues out of the londe, and hast prepared thine hart to seke God. So Iosaphat abode at Ierusalem.

† Eze. 14. b.

B And he wente agayne amonge the people, from Berseba vnto moût Ephraim, and broughte them agayne to the LORDE God of their fathers. And he set Iudges thorow out the londe, in all the stronge cities of Iuda, and a certayne in euery cite. And sayde vnto the Iudges: Take hede what ye do: for ye execute not the iudgment of man, but of the LORDE, and he is with you in iudgmēt: therfore let the feare of the LORDE be with you, and bewarre, and do it: for with the LORDE oure God there is no vnrighteousnes, ner respecte of personnes, ner acceptinge of giftes.

C And at Ierusalem dyd Iosaphat ordeyne certayne of the Leuites and prestes, and of the awnciēt fathers of Israel for y iudgment of the LORDE, and ouer the matter of the lawe, and caused them to dwell at Ierusalem, and commaunded them, and sayde: Se that ye do thus in the feare of the LORDE, in faithfulness and in a perfect hert. In all causes that come vnto you from youre brethren (which dwell in their cities) betwene bloude and bloude, betwene lawe and commaundement, betwene statutes and ordinaunces ye shal enforme them, y they synne not against the LORDE, and so the wrath to come vpon you and youre brethren. Do thus, and ye shal not offende.

Beholde, Amaria the prest is chefe ouer you in all causes of y LORDE: so is Sabadia the sonne of Ismael pryncie in the house of Iuda in all the kynges matters: Ye haue officers likewise the Leuites before you. Take a good corage vnto you, and be doynge, and the LORDE shalbe with the good.

The xv. Chapter.

AFTER this came the childrē of Moab, the children of Ammon, and certayne of Amanim with them, to fighte against Iosaphat. And they came and tolde Iosaphat, and sayde: There cometh a greate multitude agaynst the from beyonde the See of Syria, and beholde, they are at Hazezon Tamar, that is Engaddi.

And Iosaphat was afrayed, and set his face to seke y LORDE, and caused a fast to be proclaimed in all Iuda. And Iuda came together to seke the LORDE. And out of all y cities of Iuda came they to seke the LORDE. And Iosaphat stode amōge y cōgregacion of Iuda and Ierusalem in the house of y LORDE before the new court, and sayde:

O LORDE God of oure fathers, art not thou God in heauen, and hast domynion in all the kyngdomes of the Heythen? And in thy hande is strength and power, and there is no man that can withstōde the. Hast not thou oure God expelled the inhabitants of this londe before thy people of Israel? and hast geuē it vnto the sede of Abraham thy louer for euer? so that they haue dwelt in it, and haue buylded the a Sanctuary vnto thy name therin, and sayde: Yf there come eny plague, swerde, iudgmēt, pestilence, or derth vpon vs, we wyll stonde before this house euen before the (for thy name is in this house) and wyll crye vnto the in oure trouble, and thou shalt heare, and shalt saue vs. Beholde now, the children of Ammon, of Moab, and they of mount Seir, vpon whom * thou woldest not suffre the children of Israel to go, when they wente out of the londe of Egipte, but they were fayne to departe from thē, and not to destroye them: and beholde, they deale contrarely with vs, and come to thrust vs out of the inheritance, that thou hast geuen vs in possession. O oure God, wylt thou not iudge them? For in vs is no strength to withstōde this greate multitude that commeth agaynst vs. We knowe not what we shulde do, but oure eyes loke vnto the. And all Iuda stode before the LORDE, with their children, wyues and sonnes.

But vpon Iehasiel the sonne of Zacharias, the sonne of Benaia, the sonne of Iehiel, the sonne of Mathania the Leuite of y children of Assaph, came the sprete of the LORDE in the myddes of the congregacion, and sayde: Geue hede all thou Iuda, and ye inhabitants of Ierusalem, and thou kyng Iosaphat: Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto you: Be not ye afrayed, nether feare ye this greate multitude: for it is not ye that fighte, but God. Tomorrow shal ye go downe vnto thē. And beholde, they go vp by Sis, and ye shal fynde them at the reed see by the broke before the wyldernes of Ieruel: for ye shal not fighte in this cause. Do ye but steppe forth, and stonde, and se the health of the LORDE that is with you. Feare not O Iuda and Ierusalem, and be not afrayed, tomorrow go ye forth agaynst them, and the LORDE shal be with you.

Thē Iosaphat bowed him selfe with his face to the earth, and all Iuda, and the inhabitants of

* Deut. 2. c.

Ierusalem fell before the LORDE, ⁊ worshipped the LORDE. And the Levites of ⁊ childrē of the Kahathites ⁊ of the children of the Corahites arose to prayse the LORDE God of Israel with loude voyce on hye. And they gat them vp early in ⁊ mornynge, and wete forth by the wyldernesse of Thekoa.

And when they were gonge out, Iosaphat stode, ⁊ sayde: Herkē vnto me O Iuda, ⁊ ye indwellers of Ierusalē: Put youre trust in the LORDE youre God, ⁊ ye shal be safe: and geue credence vnto his prophetes, ⁊ ye shall prospere. And he gaue counsell vnto ⁊ people, and appoynted the syngers vnto ⁊ LORDE, and them that gaue prayse in the bewtye of holynes, to go before the harnessed mē, ⁊ to saye: O geue thanks vnto the LORDE, for his mercy endureth for euer. And when they beganne to geue thanks and prayse, * the LORDE caused the hynder watch that was come agaynst Iuda, to come vpon the childrē of Ammon, Moab ⁊ them of mount Seir, and they smote them. Then stode the children of Ammon ⁊ Moab agaynst them of mount Seir, to damne them, and to destroye them. And when they had destroyed them of mount Seir, one helpēd another to destroye them selues also. And when Iuda came to Mispā vnto the wyldernes, they turned them towardē the multitude, and beholde, the deed bodies laye vpō the earth, so that none was escaped.

And Iosaphat came with his people to deuyde the spoyles of them. And they founde amonge them so moch goodes and rayment and precious Iewels (which they toke from them) that they coulde not beare them. And thre dayes were they deuydinge the spoyle, for it was so moch. On the fourth daye came they together in to the valley of blessinge: for there blessed they the LORDE. Therefore is the place called the valley of blessinge vnto this daye.

So euery man of Iuda ⁊ Ierusalem turned back agayne, ⁊ Iosaphat before them, to go to Ierusalē with ioye: for ⁊ LORDE had geuen them gladnesse on their enemies. And they entred in to Ierusalem with psalteries, harpes ⁊ trompettes vnto the house of the LORDE. And there came a feare of God ouer all the kyngdomes in the londes, when they herde that the LORDE had foughte agaynst ⁊ enemies of Israel. Thus was ⁊ kyngdome of Iosaphat in quyetnes, ⁊ God gaue him rest on euery syde.

And Iosaphat reigned ouer Iuda, ⁊ was fyue ⁊ thirtie yeare olde when he was made kyng, ⁊ reigned fyue ⁊ twentye yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Asuba the daughter of Silhi. And he walked in the waye of his father Asa, ⁊ departed not asyde from doynge ⁊ which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE: sauynge that ⁊ hye places were not put downe, for the people had not yet prepared their hert to the God of their fathers. What more there is to saye of Iosaphat, both the first ⁊ the last, beholde, it is wrytten in the actes of Iehu ⁊ some of Hanani, which he noted vp in the boke of the kynges of Israel.

Afterwarde dyd Iosaphat the kyng of Iuda agree with Ahasia the kyng of Israel, which was vngodly in his doynge. And he agreed with him to make shippes, for to go vpon the see. And they made the shippes at Ezeon Gaber. But Elieser the sonne of Dodana of Maresa prophecied agaynst Iosaphat, and sayde: Because thou hast agreed with Ahasia, therefore hath the LORDE broken thy workes. And so ⁊ shippes were broken, ⁊ mighte not go vpon the See.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND Iosaphat fell on slepe^b with his fathers, ⁊ was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid, ⁊ Ioram his sonne was kyng in his steade. And he had brethrē the sonnes of Iosaphat: Asaria, Iehiel, Zacharias, Asaria, Michael ⁊ Sephatia. All these were the children of Iosaphat kyng of Iuda. And their father gaue them many giftes of syluer, golde ⁊ Iewels, with stronge cities in Iuda. But the kyngdome gaue he vnto Ioram: for he was the first borne.

But whan Ioram came vp ouer his fathers kyngdome, ⁊ had gotten the power of it, he slewe all his brethrē with the swerde, ⁊ certayne rulers also in Israel. † Two ⁊ thirtie yeare olde was Ioram when he was made kyng, ⁊ reigned eight yeare at Ierusalē, ⁊ walked in the waye of ⁊ kynges of Israel, euen as the house of Achab dyd (for Achabs daughter was his wife) ⁊ he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE.

B Neuertheles \S LORDE wolde not destroe the house of Dauid, for the couenauntes sake, *which he made with Dauid, and acordinge as he had sayde, \S he wolde geue him and his children a lanterne for euermore.

At \S same tyme fell \S Edomites awaye from Iuda, and made a kyngre ouer them selues: for Ioram had gone ouer with his captaynes and all the charettes with him, \S had gotten him vp in the night season, and slayne the Edomites on euery syde, and the rulers of the charettes: therfore fell \S Edomites awaye from Iuda vnto this daye. At \S same tyme fell Lybna awaye from him also: because he forsoke the LORDE God of his fathers. He made hye places also on the mountaynes in Iuda, and caused them of Ierusalem to go awhorynge, and disceaue Iuda.

C But there came a wrytinge vnto him fro the prophet Elias, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of thy father Dauid: Because thou hast not walked in the wayes of thy father Iosaphat, nether in \S wayes of Asa the kyngre of Iuda, but walkest in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, and makest Iuda and them of Ierusalem to go awhorynge after the whordome of the house of Achab, and hast slayne thy brethren also of thy fathers house, which were better the thou. Beholde, the LORDE shal smyte the with a greate plague on thy people, on thy children \S thy wyues, and on all thy substaunce. But thou thy selfe shalt haue moch sicknesse in thy bowels, tyll thy bowels go forth from daye to daye for very disease.

B So \S LORDE raysed vp agaynst Ioram, the sprete of the Philistynes, \S Arabians, which lye besyde the Morians, and they wente vp in to Iuda, and waysted it, and caried awaye all the substaunce that was founde in the kynges house, \S his sonnes, and his wyues, so \S there was not one sonne lefte him, saue Ioahas his yöggest sonne. And after all this dyd \S LORDE smyte him in his bowels, with such a sicknesse as coulde not be healed. And whyle that endured from daye to daye, whan the tyme of two yeaeres was expyred, his bowels wente from him with his sicknesse, and he dyed in euell diseases.

And they made not a burninge ouer him, as they dyd vnto his fathers. Two and thirtie yeaere olde was he whā he was made kyngre, and reigned eight yeaere at Ierusalem, and walked not well. And they buried him in the cite of Dauid, but not amōge the sepulcres of the kynges.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND they of Ierusalem* made Ochosias B his yöggest sonne kyngre in his steade: for the men of warre that came with the hoost of the Arabians, had slayne all \S first, therfore reigned Ochosias the sonne of Ioram kyngre of Iuda. Two and fortye yeaere olde was Ochosias whan he was made kyngre, and reigned one yeaere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Athalia the daughter of Amri. And he walked also in \S wayes of the house of Achab: for his mother entysed him so \S he was vngodly. Therfore dyd he euell in \S sighte of the LORDE, euen as \S house of Achab: for they were his counsell geuers after his fathers death, to destroye him, and he walked after their counsell.

And he wente with Ioram the sonne of Achab kyngre of Israel, to the battayll vnto Ramoth in Gilead, agaynst Hasael the kyngre of Syria. But the Syriās smote Ioram, so \S he turned back to be healed at Iesreel: for he had woundes that were geuen him at Rama, whan he foughte with Hasael the kyngre of Syria. And \dagger Asarias the sonne of Ioram kyngre of Iuda wēte downe to vyset Ioram \S sonne of Achab at Iesreel, which laye sicke: For it was ordeyned of God vnto Ochosias, that he shulde come to Ioram, \S so to go forth with Ioram agaynst Iehu \S sonne of Nimsi, \dagger whom the LORDE had anoynted to rote out the house of Achab.

Now whan Iehu wolde be auēged of \S house of Achab, he founde certayne rulers of Iuda, and \S childrē of Ochosias brethren which serued Ochosias, and he slewe them. \S And he soughte Ochosias, and they ouertoke him, whā he had hyd him at Samaria: \S he was broughte vnto Iehu, which slewe him, and they buried him, for they sayde: He is the sonne of Iosaphat, which soughte \S LORDE with all his hert. And there was no man more of the house of Ochosias that mighte be kyngre.

Whan Athalia the mother of Ochosias sawe \S hir sonne was deed, \S she gat hir vp, \S destroyed all the kynges sede in the house of Iuda. But Iosabeath f kynges sister toke Ioas f sonne of Ochosias, and stalle him awaye frō amonge the kynges childrē f were slayne, a put him with his norse in a chamber. Thus Iosabeath kyng Iorams daughter, the wyfe of Ioiada the prest, hyd him from Athalia, so f he was not slayne: for she was Ochosias sister. And he was hyd with them in the house of God sixe yeares, for so moch as Athalia was quene in the londe.

The xxij. Chapter.

BUT in the seventh yeare was Ioiada bolde, and toke the rulers ouer hundreds: namely Asaria f sonne of Ieraham, Ismael f sonne of Iohanan, Asaria f sonne of Obed, Maeseia f sonne of Adaia, and Elisaphat f sonne of Sichri with him, in to the couenaunt: and they wente aboute in Iuda, and broughte f Leuites together out of all the cities of Iuda, and the chefe fathers of Israel, to come vnto Ierusalem. And all the cōgregacion made a couenaunt with the kyng in the house of God, and he sayde vnto them: Beholde, the kynges sonne shal be kyng, * euē as the LORDE spake cōcernyng the children of Dauid.

This is it therfore f ye shal do: The thirde parte of you that entre on the Sabbath, shalbe amonge the prestes a Leuites, which are dorekeepers at the thresholds: a one thirde parte in the kynges house, and one thirde parte at the grounde porte. But all the people shalbe in the courtes of the house of the LORDE, and that no man go in to the house of the LORDE, excepte the prestes and Leuites that mynister there, they shal go in: for they are halowed. And let all f people wayte vpon the LORDE. And the Leuites shal get them rounde aboute f kyng, euery one with his weapen in his hande. And who so els goeth in to f house, let him dye. And they shal be with the kyng whā he goeth out a in.

And the Leuites a all Iuda dyd as Ioiada f prest had commaunded, and euery one toke his men that entred on the Sabbath, with those f wente of on the Sabbath: for Ioiada f prest suffred not those two companies to parte asunder. And Ioiada f prest gaue the captaynes ouer hundreds speares a shyldes, and kyng Dauids weapens, which were in the house of God, and set all the people euery one with his weapen in his hande, from the righte corner of the house, vnto the lefte corner of the altare, and to the house warde aboute the kyng. And they broughte forth the kynges sonne, a set the crowne vpon his heade, and gaue them the \dagger wytnesse, a made him kyng. And Ioiada with his sonnes anoynted him, a sayde: God saue the kyng.

But whan Athalia herde the noyse of f people f ranne together and praysed f kyng, she wente forth to the people in to f house of the LORDE, and loked: and beholde, f kyng stode in his place at f intraunce, and the rulers and trompettes aboute f kyng: and all the people of the londe were glad, a blew the trompes, and there were syngers f coulde playe with all maner of muscail instrumentes. But she rēte hir clothes, a sayde: Sedicion, sedicion. Neuertheles Ioiada f prest gat him forth with the captaynes ouer hundreds and rulers of the hoost, and sayde vnto them: Brynge her forth betwene f walles, a who so euer foloweth her, shal be slayne with f swerde: for the prest had cōmaunded, that she shulde not be slayne in f house of the LORDE. And they layed handes on her. And whan she came at the intrance of the horsgate of the kynges house, they put her to death there.

And Ioiada made a couenaunt betwene him and all the people, and the kyng, f they shulde be the people of the LORDE. Thē wēte all the people in to the house of Baal and destroyed it, a brake downe his altares a ymages, a slewe Mathan the prest of Baal before the altare. And Ioiada appoynted f officers in the house of the LORDE amōge the prestes a Leuites \dagger whom Dauid had ordeyned for f house of the LORDE, to offere burnt sacrifices vnto f LORDE, as it is wrytten in the f lawe of Moses: with ioye a songes made by Dauid. And f porters set he at f gates of f house of f LORDE, f none shulde entre, which were defiled with eny maner of thinge.

And he toke the captaynes ouer hūdrede and the mightie men and lordes of f people, and all the people of the londe, and brought the kinge downe from the house of the LORDE, and broughte him thorow the hye porte of the kynges house, and caused the kinge sit vpon the seate royall. And all the people of the lōde were glad, and the cite was at rest. But Athalia was slayne with the swerde.

The xliiij. Chapter.

ASOAS^a was seven yeare olde when he was made kynge, and reigned fortie yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Zibea of Berseba. And Ioas dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada the prest lyued. And Ioiada gaue him two wiues, & he begat sonnes & daughters. Afterwarde deuyed Ioas to renue the house of the LORDE, & gathered together the prestes and Leuites, & sayde vnto thē: Go forth vnto all the cities of Iuda, & gather the money of all Israel, to repayre ŷ house of God yearly, and do it righte soone: but the Leuites made no haist.

Then the kynge called Ioiada the pryncipall, and sayde vnto him: Why lokest thou not vnto the Leuites, ŷ they bringe in from Iuda and Ierusalem, *the colleeccion which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE appoynted to be gathered amōge Israel for the Tabernacle of witnes? For ŷ vngodly Athalia & hir sonnes haue waisted the house of God: and all that was halowed for the house of the LORDE, haue they bestowed on Baalim.

BThen commaunded the kynge to make a chest, and to set it without at the intraunce of the house of the LORDE: & caused it to be proclaimed in Iuda and Ierusalē, that they shulde bringe in to the LORDE, the colleccio, which Moses the seruaunt of God appointed vnto Israel in ŷ wildernes. Thē were all ŷ rulers glad, & so were all ŷ people, & brought it, and cast it in to the chest, tyll it was full.

And whan the tyme was ŷ the Leuites shulde brynge the Arke at ŷ kinges cōmaundement (whan they sawe ŷ there was moch money therin) then came the kinges scribe, & he ŷ was appoynted of the chefe prest, and emptyed the chest, and caried it againe in to his place. Thus dyd they euery daye, so that they gathered moch money together. And ŷ kinge and Ioiada gaue it vnto ŷ workmasters of ŷ house of the LORDE, and they hired masons and carpenters to repayre the house of ŷ LORDE, and men that coulde worke in yron and brasse, to repayre the house of ŷ LORDE.

And the labourers wrought, so that ŷ repairinge in ŷ worke wente forwarde thorow their hande, and they set the house of God in his bewtye, and made it stronge. And whan they had perfourmed this, they brought the resydue of the money, before the kynge and Ioiada, wherof there were made vessels for the house of the LORDE, vessels for the ministracion and burntofferings, spones and ornamentes of golde and siluer. And they offred burntofferings allwaye in the house of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada lyued.

And Ioiada waxed olde, and had lyued longe ynough, and dyed, & was an hundreth and thirtie yeare olde whan he dyed: and they buried him in the cite of Dauid, amonge the kynges, because he had done good vnto Israel, and towarde God & his house. And after the death of Ioiada, came the rulers in Iuda, and worshipped the kynge.

Then consented the kynge vnto thē. And they forsoke the house of the LORDE God of their fathers, and serued ŷ groues and ymages. Then came ŷ wrath of the LORDE vpo Iuda and Ierusalem because of this trespase of theirs. Yet sent he prophetes vnto thē, ŷ they shulde turne vnto the LORDE, & they testified vnto thē: but they wolde not heare.

And the sprete of God came vpon † Zachary the sonne of Ioiada the prest, which stode ouer ŷ people, & sayde vnto thē: Thus sayeth God: Wherfore do ye transgresse the cōmaundementes of the LORDE, which shall not be to youre prosperite: for ye haue forsaken ŷ LORDE, therefore shal he forsake you. Neuertheles they conspyred agaynst him, & stoned him at ŷ kynges cōmaundement in ŷ courte of the house of the LORDE. And Ioas ŷ kinge thought not on the mercy ŷ Ioiada his father had done for him, but slewe his sonne. Notwithstandinge whā he dyed, he sayde: The LORDE shal loke vpon it, and requyre it.

BAnd whan the yeare was gone aboute, ŷ power of the Syrians wente vp, & came to Iuda & Ierusalem, and destroyed the rulers in the people, and sent all the spoiles of them vnto Damascon. For the power of the Syrians came but with a fewe men, yet gaue ŷ LORDE a very greate power in to their hande: because they had forsaken ŷ LORDE God of their fathers. They executed iudgment also vpon Ioas. And when they departed frō him, they lefte him in greate sicknesses.

Neuertheles his seruantes conspyred against him (because of the bloude of the childrē of Ioiada the prest) ⁊ slewe him vpō his bed, ⁊ he dyed, and they buryed him in the cite of Dauid, but not amonge the sepulchres of the kynges. They that conspyred against him, were these: Sabad ⁊ sonne of Simeath the Ammonitisse, and Iosabad the sonne of Simrith the Moabitisse. As for his sonnes, and the summe that was gathered vnder him, and the buyldinge of the house of God, beholde, they are wrytten in the storye in the boke of the kynges. And Amasias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xrb. Chapter.

A FYVE and twenty yeare olde was Amasias whan he was made kyng, and reigned nyne and twenty yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ioadan of Ierusalem. And he dyd ⁊ which was right in the sighte of the LORDE, but not with a whole hert. Now whan his kingdome was in strēgh, he slewe his seruantes which had slayne the kinge his father. But their childrē slewe he not, for so is it wrytten in the boke of the lawe of Moses, *where the LORDE cōmaundeth, and sayeth: The fathers shal not dye for the children, nether shal the children dye for the fathers: but every one shal die for his awne synne.

And Amasias broughte Iuda together, and set them after the fathers houses, after the rulers ouer thousandes ⁊ ouer hundredes amonge all Iuda and Ben Iamin, and nombred them from twenty yeare olde ⁊ aboue, and founde of thē thre hundredth thousande chosen men, which were able to go forth to the warre, and caryed speares and shyldes. And out of Israel appoynted he an hundredth thousande stronge men of warre for an hundredth talentes of siluer.

33 But there came a man of God vnto him, and sayde: O kyng, Let not the hoost of Israel come with the: for the LORDE is not with Israel, nether with all the childrē of Ephraim. For yf thou comest to shewe thy boldnes in the battail, God shal make the fall before thine enemies. For God hath power to helpe, and to cause for to fall. Amasias sayde vnto the man of God: What shal be done then with ⁊ hundredth talentes ⁊ I haue geuē ⁊ soudyers of Israel? The mā of God sayde: The LORDE hath yet more thē this to geue the. So Amasias separated out the men of warre which were come to him out of Ephraim, ⁊ they shulde departe vnto their place. Then waxed their wrath very whote agaynst Iuda, and they wente agayne vnto their place in wrothfull displeasure. And Amasias strēghed himselfe, and caried out his people, and wente forth in to the Salt valley, and smote ten thousande of the children of Seir.

And the childrē of Iuda toke ten thousande of thē alyue, whom they broughte vp to the toppe of a mountayne, and cast thē downe headlinges from the toppe of the mount, so that they all to barst in sunder. But ⁊ childrē of the men of warre whom Amasias had sent awaye agayne (that they shulde not go to the battayll with his people) fell in to the cities of Iuda, from Samaria vnto Beth Horon, and smote thre thousande of mē, and toke moch spoyle.

And whan Amasias came agayne from the slaughter of the Edomites, he broughte the goddesses of the children of Seir, and made them his goddesses, and worshipped before them, ⁊ brent incense vnto them. Then was the LORDE very wroth at Amasias, ⁊ sent vnto him a prophet, which sayde vnto him: Why sekest thou the goddesses of the people, which coulde not delyuer their folke from thy hande? And whan he talked with him, the kyng sayde vnto him: Haue they made ⁊ of the kynges counsell? Ceasse, why wilt thou be smytten? Then the prophet ceased, ⁊ sayde: I perceaue, that the LORDE is mynded to destroye ⁊, because thou hast done this, and herkenest not vnto my counsell.

* And Amasias ⁊ kyng of Iuda toke coucell, ⁊ sent vnto Ioas the sonne of Ioahas ⁊ sonne of Iehu, kyng of Israel, sayēge: Come, let vs se one another. But Ioas the kyng of Israel sent vnto Amasias ⁊ kyng of Iuda, sayenge: The hawthorne in Libanus sent vnto ⁊ Cedre tre in Libanus, sayēge: Geue thy daughter vnto my sonne to wife. But a wylde beest in Libanus ranne ouer ⁊ hawthorne, ⁊ trode it downe. Thou thinkest: Beholde, I haue smytten the Edomites, therefore is thine hert proude to boaste. Now hyde at home: why stryuest thou after mysfortune, that thou mayest fall ⁊ Iuda with the?

Neuertheles Amasias consented not: for so was it broughte to passe of God, y they mighte be geuen in to the handes of the enemies, because they soughte the goddess of y Edomites. Then wente Ioas the kynge of Israel vp, & they sawe one another, he and Amasias the kynge of Iuda, at Beth Semes which lyeth in Iuda. But Iuda was smyttē before Israel, and they fled euery one vnto his tent.

¶ And Ioas the kynge of Israel toke Amasias y kynge of Iuda, the sonne of Ioas y sonne of Ioahas, at Beth Semes, & broughte him to Ierusalem, & brake downe the wall of Ierusalē, from y porte of Ephraim vnto the corner porte, euē foure hundredh cubites longe; and toke with him all the golde, and siluer, and all the ornamentes that were foude in y house of God with Obed Edom, and in the treasures in the kynges house, and the childrē to pledge vnto Samaria. And Amasias the sonne of Ioas kynge of Iuda, liued after the death of Ioas the sonne of Ioahas kynge of Israel fiftene yeare.

What more there is to saye of Amasias (both the first and last) beholde, it is written in y boke of the kynges of Iuda & Israel. And frō the tyme forth that Amasias departed from the LORDE, they conspyred against him at Ierusalem. But he fled vnto Lachis. Thē sent they after him vnto Lachis, & slewe him there. And they brought him vpō horses & buried him beside his fathers in the cite of Iuda.

The xxvi. Chapter.

¶ THEN all the people of Iuda toke Osias, which was systene yeare olde, and made him kynge in steade of his father Amasias. He builded Eloth, & broughte it agayne vnto Iuda, after that the kynge was fallen on slepe with his fathers. Sixtene yeare olde was Osias whan he was made kinge, and reigned two and fiftie yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Iechalia of Ierusalem. And he did right in the syght of the LORDE, as his father Amasias had done, and soughte God as longe as Zacharias lyued, which taughte in the visyons of God: and as longe as he sought the LORDE, God made him to prospere.

For he wente forth, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes, and brake downe y wallēs of Gath, and the wallēs of Iabne, and the wallēs of Aszdod, and buylded cities aboute Aszdod, & amonge the Philistynes. For God helped him agaynst the Philistynes, against the Arabians, agaynst them of Gur Baal, & agaynst the Meunites. And y Ammonites gaue Osias presentes, & his name came in to Egipte: for he was excedinge stronge. And Osias buylded towres at Ierusalem vpon the cornerporte, and on the valley gate, and on other corners, and made them stronge. He buylded castels also in the wyldernesse, and dygged many welles: for he had many catell, both in the medewes and in the playnes, huszbandmen also and wynegardeners on the mountaynes and on Carmel: for he delyted in huszbandrye.

And Osias had an hoost of men of warre goynge forth to the battaill, which were nobred vnder the hande of Ieiel the scribe & of Maesa the officer, vnder the hāde of Hanania of the kynges rulers. And the nombre of the chefe fathers amonge the stronge mē of warre, was two thousande and syxe hundredh. And vnder the hande of the hoost thre hundredh thousande, and seven thousande and fyue hundredh mete for the battaill, in the strength of an armye to helpe the kinge agaynst the enemies. And Osias prepared for all the hoost, shyldes, speares, helmettes, brestplates, bowes and slyngstones. And at Ierusalē he made ordinaunce cōingly, to be vpon the towres and in the pynnacles, to shute arowes and greate stones. And the fame of him came farre abrode, because he was specially helped, tyll he became mightie.

And whan his power was greate, his hert arose to his awne destruccion: for he trespassed agaynst the LORDE his God, and wente in to the temple of the LORDE, to burne incense vpon the altare of incense. But Asarias the prest wente after him, and foure score prestes with him, valeaunt men, and withstode kynge Osias, and saide vnto him: *It belongeth not vnto thy offyce (Osias) to burne incense vnto the LORDE, but vnto the prestes belongeth it, euen vnto the children of Aaron, which are halowed to burne incense. Go forth out of the Sanctuary: for thou offendest, and it shall be no worshippe vnto the before God the LORDE.

And Osias was wroth, and had a censoure in his hande. And whyle he murmured with the prestes, the leprosy spronge out of his foreheade in the presence of the prestes in the house of the LORDE before the altare of incense. And Asarias the chefe prest turned his heade towarde him, and so dyd all the prestes, and beholde, he was leper in his foreheade. And they put him out from thence. Yee he made haist himselfe to go forth, for his plage came of the LORDE. Thus became Osias f kynge a leper vnto his death, and dwelt full of leprosy in a fre house: for he was put out of the house of the LORDE. But Ioram his sonne had the ouersight of the kynges house, and iudged the people in the londe.

What more there is to saie of Osias (both first and last) Esay the sonne of Amos hath wrytten it. And Osias fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buryed him with his fathers in the pece of grounde beside f kynges sepulchres: for they sayde: He is leporous. And Iotham his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xxvij. Chapter.

IOTHAM was fyue and twentye yeare olde when he was made kynge, ^aand reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ierusa the daughter of Sadoc: t he dyd righte in the sighte of the LORDE as did Osias his father: sauynge f he wente not in to the temple of the LORDE, and the people yet marred them selues. He buylded the hye porte of the house of f LORDE, and on the wall of Ophel buylded he moche, and buylded the cities vpon the mountaynes of Iuda, and in the woddess buylded he castels and towres.

33 And he fought with the kynge of the children of Ammon, and ouercame them, so that the childre of Ammon gaue him f same yeare an hundredth talentes of siluer, ten thousand quarters of wheate, and ten thousande of barleye. So moche dyd the children of Ammon geue him also in f seconde t thirde yeare. Thus became Iotham mightye, for he gyded his wayes before the LORDE his God.

What more there is to saie of Iotham, t all his warres, and his waies, beholde, it is wrytten in f boke of the kynges of Israel t Iuda. Fyue and twentye yeare olde was he when he was made kynge, t reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem. And Iotham fell on slepe with his fathers, t they buryed him in the cite of Dauid, and Ahas his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xxviij. Chapter.

ACHAS ^awas twentye yeare olde when he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd not that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as did Dauid his father, but walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, and made molten ymages vnto Baalim, and brent incense in the valley of the children of Hennon, and f brēt his awne sonnes in f fire, after the abhominacions of the Heithen, whō the LORDE expelled before the childre of Israel. And he dyd sacrifice and brent incense vpon the hye places and vpon the hilles, and amōge all grene trees.

Therefore dyd the LORDE his God deliuer him in to the hande of the kynge of Syria, so that they smote him, and caryed awaye a greate multitude of his men presoners, and broughte them to Damascon. He was geuen also vnder the hande of the kynge of Israel, so f he dyd a greate slaughter vpon him. For Pecah the sonne of Romelia smote in Iuda an hundredth t twentye thousande in one daye (which all were valeaunt men) euē because they had forsaken f LORDE God of their fathers. And Sichri a mightie mā of Ephraim slewe Maeseia f kynges sonne, t Asrikam the prynce of the house, t Elkana the nexte vnto the kynge. And the children of Israel caried of their brethren presoners two hundredth thousande, women, sonnes and daughters, and toke a greate spoyle from them, and broughte the spoyle vnto Samaria.

33 But euē there was there a prophet of f LORDE, whose name was Obed, which wēt out to mete f hoost that came to Samaria, and sayde vnto them: Beholde, because the LORDE God of youre fathers is wroth at Iuda, therefore hath he geuen them ouer in to youre handes: but ye haue slayne them so abhominably, that it is come vnto heauē. Now thinke ye to subdue the children of Iuda and Ierusalem, to be bondmen and bondmaydens vnto you. Is not this a trespase then with you agaynst the LORDE youre God? Herken now vnto me, and sende f presoners hence agayne, whom ye haue caried awaye from youre brethren: for the wrath of f LORDE is fearece ouer you.

Then gat vp certayne of the chefe of the children of Ephraim, Asarias the sonne of Iohanan, Barachias the sonne of Mesillemoth, Ezechias the sonne of Sallum, & Amasa † sonne of Hadlai, agaynst them † came from † battayll, & sayde vnto them: Ye shal not brynge the presoners in hither, for youre mynde is but to make vs trespase before the LORDE, to make oure synnes and offences the greater: for the trespase is to moch all-ready, & the wrath is feare ouer Israel. So the hoost lefte the presoners & the spoyle before † rulers and before the whole cōgregation.

Then stode vp the men (which now were rehearsed by name) and toke the presoners, and as many as were naked amonge them, clothed they with † spoyle, & deckte them, and put shues vpon their fete, and gaue the to eate and drynke, and anoynted them, and caried them vpon asses (as many as were feble) and broughte them to Iericho to † Palme cite vnto their brethren, and came agayne to Samaria. * At the same tyme sent kynge Ahas vnto the kynges of Assur, † they shulde helpe him. And the Edomites came agayne, and smote Iuda, and caried some awaye captiue. The Philistynes also fell in to the cities in the playne, & toward † south parte of Iuda, & wanne Beth Semes, Aialon, Gederoth, and Socho with the vyllages therof, Timna with the vyllages therof, & Gimso with the vyllages therof, and dwelt therein. For † LORDE subdued Iuda for Ahas sake † kynge of Iuda, because he made Iuda naked, and rebelled agaynst the LORDE. And Teglathpilnesser the kynge of Assur came agaynst him, and beseged him, & he was not mightie ynough for him.

For Ahas spoyled the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and of the rulers, to geue vnto † kynge of Assur, but it helped him not. Morouer kinge Ahas trespassed yet more against the LORDE euen in his trouble, and dyd sacrifice vnto the goddes of them of Damascon, which had smitten him, & sayde: The goddes of the kynges of Syria helpe them, therefore wil I offre vnto them, that they maye helpe me also, where as the same yet were a fall vnto him and to all Israel.

And Ahas gathered the vessels of † house of God together, and brake the vessels in † house of God, & † shut the dores of the house of † LORDE, and made him altares in all corners at Ierusalem, and euery where in the cyties of Iuda made he hye places to burne incense vnto other goddes, and prouoked † LORDE God of his fathers vnto wrath.

What more there is to saye of him and of all his wayes (both first and last) beholde, it is wyrtten in the boke of the kynges of Iuda and Israel. And Ahas fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him in † cite of Ierusalem: for they brought him not amonge the sepulchres of the kynges of Israel. And Ezechias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xxi. Chapter.

EZECHIAS^a was fyue & twenty yeres^a olde whan he was made kynge, & reigned nyne & twenty yeres at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Abia † daughter of Zachary. And he dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, as did his father Dauid. † He opened the dores of † house of the LORDE in the first moneth of † first yere of his raigne, & made them stronge, & brought in the prestes and Leuites, and gathered them together vnto the East streate and sayde vnto them: Herken vnto me ye Leuites, sanctifye youre selues now, that ye maye halowe the house of the LORDE God of youre fathers, and put fylthines out of the Sanctuary: for oure fathers haue trespassed, and done † which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE oure God, and haue forsaken him. For they turned their faces from the habitaciō of † LORDE oure God, & turned their backs on it, and shut the dores of the Porche, and put out the lampes, and brent no incense, & offered no burnt sacrifices in the Sanctuary vnto the God of Israel.

Therefore is the wrath of the LORDE come^b ouer Iuda and Ierusalem, and he hath geuen them ouer to be scatred abroad, desolate and to be hyssed at, as ye se with youre eies. For beholde, euen for the same cause fell oure fathers thorow the swerde, oure sonnes daughters and wyues were caryed awaye captiue. Now am I mynded to make a couenaunt with the LORDE God of Israel, † he maye turne awaie from vs his wrath & indignacion. Now my sonnes, be not ye negligent: † for the LORDE hath chosen you to stōde before him, and to be his mynisters and to burne incense vnto him.

§ Num. 18. a.

Then rose the Leuites : Mahath the sonne of Amasai, and Isel the sonne of Asaria of the children of the Kahathites. Of the children of Merari : Cis the sonne of Abdi, ⁊ Asaria the sonne of Iehaleleel. Of the children of the Gersonites : Ioah the sonne of Simma, and Eden the sonne of Ioah. And of the childrē of Elizaphan : Simri ⁊ Ieiel. And of the childrē of Assaph : Sachary and Mathania. And of the children of Heman : Iehiel and Simei. And of the children of Iedithun : Semaia and Vsiel.

¶ And they gathered their brethren together, and were sanctified, and wente in acordinge to the kynges commaundement at the worde of the LORDE, to clesne the house of ꝑ LORDE. And the prestes entred within in the house of the LORDE to purifye, and put out all the vncleannes that was founde in the tēple of the LORDE, in the courte of the LORDES house: and the prestes toke it vp, and caryed it out in to the broke Cedron. The fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth beganne they to sanctifye them selues, and on the eight daye of the moneth wente they in to the porche of the LORDE, and halowed the house of ꝑ LORDE eight dayes, and fynished it on the sixteenth daye of the fyrst moneth.

And they wete in to the kyngye Ezechias, and sayde : We haue clesned all the house of the LORDE, the altare of burntofferynges, and all his vessels, the table of the shewbred and all the apparell therof : and all the orna-mentes that kyngye Achas cast awaye whā he was kyngye, what tyme as he transgressed, those haue we prepared and halowed. Beholde, they are before the altare of the LORDE.

¶ Thē the kyngye Ezechias gat him vp early, and gathered together the Elders of the cite, and wete vp vnto the house of the LORDE, and they broughte seuen bullockes, seuen rammes, seuen lambes, and seuen he goates to be the synofferynge, for the Sanctuary, ⁊ for Iuda. And he spake vnto the prestes the children of Aaron, that they shulde offre vpon the altare of the LORDE.

So they slewe the bullockes, and the prestes toke the bloude, and sprenkled it vpon ꝑ altare : and slewe the rammes, and sprenkled the bloude vpon the altare : and slewe the lābes, and sprenkled the bloude vpon the altare. And the goates to ꝑ synofferynge brought they before the kyngye and the congregaciō, and layed their handes vpon them : and the prestes slewe them, and sprenkled their bloude vpon the altare to make attonemēt for all Israel : for the kyngye commaunded to offre burnt-sacrifices and sinofferynges for all Israel.

¶ And he set the Leuites in the house of the LORDE with Cymbales, Psalteries and harpes, * as Dauid had commaunded, and Gad the kynges Seer, and the prophet Nathan, for it was the commaundement of the LORDE by his prophetes. And the Leuites stode with the musicall instrumentes of Dauid, ⁊ the prestes with the trompettes. And Ezechias commaunded them to offre burnt-sacrifices vpon the altare. And aboute the tyme that the burnt-sacrifice begāne to be offred the songe of the LORDE beganne also, and ꝑ trompettes, and diuerse instrumentes of Dauid the kyngye of Israel and all the congregacion gaue praise ⁊ thanks : and the songe of the Musicians, and ꝑ blowingye of the trompetters, endured all tyll the burnt-offerynge was fynished.

Now whan the burnt-offerynge was perfourmed, the kyngye and all they that were with him, bowed them selues, and gaue praise and thanks. And Ezechias the kyngye with the rulers commaunded the Leuites to prayse the LORDE with the songes of Dauid and Asaph the Seer. And they gaue prayse tyll they were ioyfull, and they bowed them selues, and worshipped.

¶ And Ezechias answered and saide : Now haue ye fylled youre hādes vnto the LORDE steppe forth, and bryngye hither ꝑ sacrifices and thankofferynges vnto the house of the LORDE. And the congregacion broughte sacrifices and thankofferynges, and euery mā of a fre wyllinge hert brought burnt-offerynges. And the nombre of the burnt-offerynges that the congregacion broughte, was thre score bullockes and ten, an hundreth rāmes, and two hundreth lambes, and all these for the burnt-offerynge vnto the LORDE, and they sanctified sixe hundreth bullockes, and thre thousande shepe.

But the prestes were to fewe, and could not pluck of the skynnes of all the burnt-offerynges, therefore toke they their brethren the Leuites, tyll the worke was fynished, and tyll the prestes were halowed (for the Leuites are easier to be halowed then the prestes) and many of the burnt offerynges were with the fat of the thankofferynges and drynkofferynges to the burnt sacrifices. Thus was the ministration of the house of the LORDE prepared. And Ezechias reioysed with all the people, that they were prepared with God: for it was done righte haistely.

The xxx. Chapter.

AND Ezechias sent in to all Israel and Iuda, and wrote letters vnto Ephraim and Manasses, that they shulde come to the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, to kepe easter vnto the LORDE God of Israel. And the kynge helde a counsell with his rulers, and all the cōgregation at Ierusalem, *to kepe Passeouer in the seconde moneth: for at that tyme they could not kepe it, because the prestes were not sanctified ynough, and the people were not yet come together vnto Ierusalem. And it pleased the kynge well and all the cōgregation. And they appointed it to be proclaimed thorow out all Israel from Berseba vnto Dan, that they shulde come to kepe Passeouer vnto the LORDE God of Israel: for they were not many to kepe it as it is wrytten.

And the postes wente with the letters from the hande of the kynge and of his rulers thorow out all Israell and Iuda, at ʒ kynges commaundement, and sayde: Ye children of Israel, turne you vnto the LORDE God of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, and he shal turne to ʒ escaped, which are lefte ouer amonge you from the hande of the kynge of Assur: and be not ye as youre fathers and brethren, which rebelled agaynst the LORDE God of their fathers, and he gaue thē ouer in to desolacion as ye se youre selues. Be not ye hardnecked now as were youre fathers, but offre youre hāde vnto the LORDE, and come to his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the LORDE youre God, ʒ so shal the indignacion of his wrath turne away from you. For yf ye turne vnto the LORDE, then shal youre brethren and children haue mercy in the sighte of them which holde them in captiuyte, that they maye come agayne in to this londe: †for the LORDE youre God is gracious and mercifull, and shal not turne away his face from you, yf ye conuerte vnto him.

† Exod. 34. c.

And the postes wente from one cite to another in the londe of Ephraim and Manasses, and vnto Zabulon. But they mocked them and laughed them to scorne. Yet were there some of Asser and Manasses, and of Zabulon, that submytted them selues, and came to Ierusalem. And the hande of God came in to Iuda, so that he gaue thē one hert to do after the commaundement of the kynge and the rulers at the worde of the LORDE. And there came together vnto Ierusalē a greate people, to kepe the feast of vnleuened bred in the seconde moneth, a very greate congregacion.

And they gat them vp, and put downe ʒ altares that were at Ierusalem, and all the incense put they awaye, and cast it in to the broke Cedron, and slewe the Passeouer on the fourteenth daye of the secōde moneth. And ʒ prestes and Leuites were ashamed, and halowed them selues, and broughte the burnt offerynges to the house of the LORDE, and stode in their ordinance, as it was acordinge, after the lawe off Moses the man of God. And the prestes sprenkled the bloude from the hande of the Leuites: for there were many in the cōgregation which were not sanctified, therefore dyd the Leuites kyll Passeouer for them which were not clensed, that they mighte be sanctified vnto the LORDE.

There were many people also of Ephraim, Manasses, Isachar and Zabulon, which were not cleane, but ate the Easter lambe not as it is wrytten: for Ezechias prayed for them, and sayde: The LORDE, which is gracious, shalbe mercifull vnto all them that prepare their hertes vnto God, to seke the LORDE God of their fathers, though they be not clensed after the holy purification. And the LORDE herde Ezechias, and healed the people. Thus the children of Israel that were founde at Ierusalē, helde ʒ feast of vnleuened bred seuen dayes with greate ioye. And the Leuites and prestes praysted the LORDE euery daye with the loude instrumentes of the LORDE. And Ezechias spake hertely vnto all ʒ Leuites, which had good vnderstandinge in the LORDE, and they ate the feast seuen dayes, and offred thākofferynges, and gaue thanks vnto ʒ LORDE God of their fathers.

And all the congregacion deuysed to kepe

the feast yet other seuē dayes, and so they helde it those seven dayes also with ioye: for Ezechias the kinge of Iuda gaue an Heueofferynge for the cōgregacion, euen a thousande bullockes, and seven thousande shepe. But the rulers gaue an Heueofferynge for y congregation, euen a thousande bullockes, and ten thousande shepe. And many of the prestes sanctified them selues.

And the whole congregation of Iuda reioyced, the prestes and Leuites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the straungers that were come out of the londe of Israel, and they that dwelt in Iuda, and greate ioye was there at Ierusalem: for sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid the kyng of Israel, was there no soch (ioye) at Ierusalem. And the prestes and Leuites stode vp and blessed the people, and their voyce was herde, and their prayer came in to his holy habitacion in heauen.

The xxri. Chapter.

AND whan all this was fynished, all the Israelites that were founde in y cities of Iuda, wente out, and brake the pilers, and hewed downe the groues, and brake downe the hye places and altares out of all Iuda, Ben Iamin, Ephraim and Manasses, tyll they had destroyed thē. And all the children of Israel wente agayne euery one to his possession vnto their cities.

But Ezechias set the prestes and Leuites in their ordinaunces, euery one after his office, both the prestes and Leuites, for the burnt-sacrifices and thankofferynges, to mynister, to geue thanks and prayse in the gates of the hoost of the LORDE. And the kyng gaue his porcion of his substaūce for the burnt-offerynges in the mornynge and euenynge, and for the burnt-offerynges of the Sabbath, and of the newmone and of the feastes, as it is wrytten in the lawe of the LORDE.

AND he spake vnto y people which dwelt at Ierusalem, that they shulde geue porciōs vnto the prestes and Leuites, y they mighte the more stedfastly endure in the lawe of the LORDE. And whā y worde came forth, the childrē of Israel gaue many fyrst frutes of corne, wyne, oyle, hony, and all maner increace of the felde, and broughte in moch of all maner tithes. And the children of Israel and Iuda which dwelt in the cities of Iuda, broughte the tithes also of oxen and shepe, and the tithes of soch thynges as were sanctified, which they had halowed vnto the LORDE their God, and made here an heape, and there an heape. In the thirde moneth begane they to laye vpon heapes, and in the seventh moneth dyd they fynishe it.

And whā Ezechias with the rulers wente in, and sawe the heapes, they prayed the LORDE, and his people of Israel. And Ezechias axed the prestes and Leuites concernynge the heapes. And Asaria the prest the chefe in the house of Sadoc, sayde vnto him: Sence the tyme that they beganne to brynge the Heueofferynges in to y house of the LORDE, we haue eaten, and are satisfied, and yet is there lefte ouer: for the LORDE hath blessed his people, therefore is this heape lefte ouer. Then commaunded the kyng, that they shulde prepare chestes in the house of the LORDE. And they prepared them, and put in the Heueofferynges, and tithes and that which was halowed, faithfully.

And the ouersight of the same had Chanania the Leuite, and Simei his brother the seconde, and Iehiel, Asasia, Naglath, Asahel, Ierimoth, Iosabad, Eliel, Iesmachia, Mahath and Benaia, ordeyned of the hande off Chanania and Simei his brother, acordinge to the commaundement of kyng Ezechias. But Asaria was pryncie in the house of God. And Core y sonne of Iemna the Leuite the porter of the Eastgate was ouer the frewyllinge giftes of God (which were geuen for Heueofferynges vnto the LORDE) and ouer the Most holy. And vnder his hande were, Eden, Miniamin, Iesua, Semaia, Amaria, and Sachania in the cities of the prestes vpon credence, that they shulde geue vnto their brethre acordinge to their courses, to the leest as to the greatest.

And vnto them that were counted for men childrē from thre yere olde and aboue, amonge all thē that wēte in to the house of the LORDE, euery one vpō his daye to their office in their attendaunces after their courses. And they that were rekened for prestes in the house of their fathers, and the Leuites from twentye yere and aboue, in their attendaunces after their courses. And they that were rekened amonge their children, wyues, sonnes and daughters amonge the whole congregation: for that which was halowed, sanctified they vpon credence. There were men also named by name amonge Aarons children the prestes vpon the felde of the suburbs vnto all the men children amonge the prestes, and to all them that were nombred amonge the Leuites.

Thus dyd Ezechias in all Iuda, and dyd that which was good, righte and true in the sighte of the LORDE his God. And in all the busynes that he toke in hãde concernynge the seruyce of the house of God, acordinge to the lawe and commaundement, to seke his God, that dyd he with all his hert, and therefore prospered he well.

The xxxij. Chapter.

AFTER these actes and faithfulness came Sennacherib^a the kyng of Assur, and wente in to Iuda, and pitched before the ströge cities, and thoughte to plucke them vnto him. And whan Ezechias sawe that Sennacherib came, and that his face stode to fighte agaynst Ierusalem, he deuyced with his rulers and mightie men, to couer the waters of the welles that were without the cite, and they helped him: and there gathered together a greate people, and couered all the welles and water brokes in the myddes of the londe, and sayde: Lest the kynges of Assur fynde moch water whã they come. And he toke a corage vnto him, and buylded all the walles where they were in decaye, and made towres theron, and buylded yet another wall without, and strengthened Millo in the cite of Dauid. And made moch ordinaunce and shyldes, and set captaynes of warre ouer the people.

33 And gathered them vnto him vpon the brode strete by the gate of the cite, and spake hertely vnto them, and sayde: Be stronge and bolde, feare not, and be not afrayed for the kyng of Assur, ner all the multitude that is with him: for there is one greater with vs then with him. With him is a^a fleshy arme, but with vs is the LORDE oure God, to helpe vs and to fighte for vs. And the people trusted vnto the wordes of Ezechias kyng of Iuda.

^a Afterwarde sent Sennacherib the kyng of Assur his seruantes vnto Ierusalem (for he laye before Lachis, and all his hoost with him) to Ezechias the kyng of Iuda, and to all Iuda that was at Ierusalem, sayenge: Thus sayeth Sennacherib the kyng of Assur: Wherin put ye youre trust ye that dwell in the beseged Ierusalem? Ezechias disceaueth you, that he maye delyuer you vnto death, höger, and thyrst, and sayeth: The LORDE oure God shal delyuer vs from the hande of the kyng of Assur. Is it not Ezechias, that hath put away his hye places and altares, and sayde vnto Iuda and Ierusalem: Before one altare shal ye worshippe, and burne incense theron?

Knowe ye not what I and my fathers haue done to all the people in the londes? Haue the goddes of the Heythen in the londes bene able to delyuer their countrees fro my hande? What is he amonge all the goddes of these Heythen (whom my father damned) that was able to delyuer his people fro my hande? The youre God shulde be able to delyuer fro my hande. Therefore let not Ezechias now disceauise you, and let him not perswade you eny soch thinge, and beleue him not. For yf no god of all the Heythē and kyngdomes might delyuer his people fro my hande and from the hande of my progenitours, then shal not youre goddes be able to delyuer you fro my hande.

His seruantes also spake yet more against the LORDE God, and agaynst his seruante Ezechias. And he wrote a letter to blaspheme the LORDE God of Israel, and spake of him, and sayde: Like as the goddes of the Heythen in their londes haue not bene able to delyuer their people from my hande, euen so shal not the God of Ezechias delyuer his people fro my hande.

34 And they cryed with loude voyce in the Iewish langage vnto the people of Ierusalem that were vpon the wall, to make them fearfull and to be fayntharted, that they might wyne the cite. And they spake agaynst the God off Ierusalem, euen as agaynst the goddes off the nacions vpon earth, which were but the workes of mens hondes.

But contrary wyse the kyng Ezechias and the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos prayed, and cryed vnto heauē. And the LORDE sent an angell, which destroyed all the mightie men of the hoost, and the prynces and rulers in the tentes of the kyng of Assur, so that he departed agayne with shame in to his owne londe. And whan he wente in to his gods house, they came of his owne body, slewe him there with the swerde. Thus the LORDE helped Ezechias and them at Ierusalem, out of the hāde of Sennacherib ꝑ kyng of Assur, and of all other, and mayntayned thē frō all on euery syde, so ꝑ many broughte presentes vnto the LORDE to Ierusalem, and Iewels vnto Ezechias the kyng of Iuda. And afterwarde was he exalted in the sighte of all Heythen.

At ꝑ same tyme was Ezechias deedsicke, and he prayed vnto the LORDE, * which made him promes, and gaue him a wonder-token. But Ezechias recōpensēd not acordinge as was geuen vnto him, for his hert was lifted vp: therfore came the wrath vpon him, and vpon Iuda and Ierusalem. Neuertheles Ezechias humbled him selfe because his hert had bene exalted, with them at Ierusalem: therfore came not the wrath of the LORDE vpon them, whyle Ezechias lyued.

And Ezechias had very greate riches and worshipp, and made him treasures of syluer, golde, precious stones, spyces, shyldes, and all maner costly vessell, and corne houses for the increace of corne, wyne and oyle, and stalles for all maner catell, and foldes for the shepe, and buylded him cities, and had many catell of shepe and oxen: for God gaue him very moch good.

It is the same Ezechias that couered the hye water condyte in Gihon, and conveyed it vnder on the west syde of ꝑ cite of Dauid: for Ezechias prospered in all his workes. But whan the interpreters the chefe of Babilon were sent vnto him, to axe question at him (concernynge the wondertokē that had happened in the londe) God lefte him * to be tempted, that it might be knowne what soeuer was in his hert.

What more there is to saye of Ezechias, and of his mercifullnes, beholde, it is wryttē in the vision of the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos, and in the boke of the kynges of Iuda and Israel. And Ezechias fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him ouer the sepulcres of the children of Dauid, and all Iuda and they of Ierusalē dyd him worshipp in his death: and Manasses his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xxxij. Chapter.

MANASSES was twelue yeare olde whā he was made kyng, * and reigned fyue and fifty yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE (euen after the abominacions of the Heythen, whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel) and turned backe, and buylded the hye places, († which his father Ezechias had broken downe) and set vp altares vnto Baalim, and made groues, and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued them. He buylded altares also in ꝑ LORDES house, wherof the LORDE had sayde: ‡ At Ierusalem shal my name be for euer. And vnto all the hoost of heauen buylded he altares in both the courtes of ꝑ house of the LORDE. And in the valley of the sonne of Hennon caused he his awne sonnes to go thorow the fyre, and chosed dayes, ¶ regarded byrdes cryenge, and witches, and founded soythsayers and expounders of tokens, and dyd moch that was euell in the sighte of the LORDE to prouoke him vnto wrath.

Carued ymages also and Idols (which he caused to make) set he vp in Gods house, wherof the LORDE saide vnto Dauid and to Salomon his sonne: In this house at Ierusalem which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel, wyl I set my name for euer and wyl nomore let the fote of Israel remoue frō the londe that I appoynted for their fathers, so farre as they obserue to do all ꝑ I haue commaunded them, in all the lawe, statutes and ordinaunces by Moses. But Manasses disceauned Iuda and them of Ierusalē, so that they dyd worse then the Heythen, whom the LORDE destroyed before the children of Israel. And the LORDE spake vnto Manasses and his people, and they regarded it not.

Therefore dyd the LORDE cause the rulers of the hoost of the kyng of Assur to come vpō thē, which toke Manasses prisoner with bōdes, and bounde him with cheynes, ¶ broughte him vnto Babilon. § And whan he was in trouble, he made intercession before the LORDE his God, and humbled him selfe greatly before the God of his fathers, and prayed and besoughte him. Then herde he his prayer, and broughte him agayne to Ierusalem to his kyngdome. And Manasses knewe that the LORDE is God.

Afterwarde buylded he ꝑ vtmost wall of the cite of Dauid, on the west syde of Gihon by the broke, and at the inтраnce of the Fyshgate, and rounde aboute *Ophel, and made it very hye. And layed captaynes in y ströge cities of Iuda, t put awaye y straunge goddes t Idols out of y house of y LORDE, and all the altares which he had buylded vpo the mount of the house of the LORDE, and in Ierusalem, and cast them out of the cite, and buylded the altare of the LORDE, and offred slaynofferynges and thankofferynges theron, and commaunded Iuda, that they shulde serue the LORDE God of Israel. Neuertheles though the people offred vnto the LORDE their God, yet offred they vpon the hye places.

¶ What more there is to saye of Manasses and of his prayer to his God, and the wordes of the Seers that spake vnto him in the name of the LORDE God of Israel, beholde, they are amonge the actes of the kynges of Israel. And his prayer and intercession, and all his synne and offence, t the rowmes wherin he buylded the hye places t groues and founded ydols, afore he hūbled himselfe, beholde, they are wrytten amonge the actes of the Seers. And Manasses fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him in his house, and Amon his sonne was kyng in his steade.

Two and twētye yeare olde was Amon whā he was made kyng, and reigned two yeare at Ierusalē, and dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, as Manasses his father had done. And Amon offred vnto all the Idols that his father Manasses had made and serued thē. Yet dyd not he humble himselfe before the LORDE, as Manasse his father had submitted himselfe: but Amon trespassed euer more and more. And his seruauantes cōspyred agaynst him, and slewe him in his house. Then smote the people in the londe all them that had conspyred agaynst kyng Amon. And the people in the londe made Iosias his sonne kyng in his steade.

The xxxiiiij. Chapter.

¶ IOSIAS was eight yeare olde when he was made kyng, and reigned one and thirtie yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the wayes of Dauid his father, and turned not asyde, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte. For in the eight yeare of his reigne whā he was yet but a childe, he beganne to seke the God of his father Dauid: and in the twolueth yeare beganē he to cense Iuda and Ierusalē from the hye places and groues, and carued Idols, and molten ymages: and caused the altares of Baalim to be broken downe before him, and the ymages that were theron, hewed he downe. And y groues and carued Idols and moltē ymages brake he in peces, and made them to dust, and scatred it vpon the graues of them that had offred vnto them. And the bones of the prestes brent he vpo the altares, and so clēsed he Iuda t Ierusalē, t in y cities of Manasses, Ephraim, Simeon, and vnto Nephtali in their wyldernesses on euery syde. And whā he had broken downe the altares and groues, and smytten the Idols in peces, and hewed downe all the ymages in all the londe of Israel, he came agayne to Ierusalem.

In the eightēth yeare of his reigne y whā he had censed the londe and the house, he sent Saphan the sonne of Asalia and Maeseia the Shreue of the cite, and Ioath the sonne of Ioahas the Chaunceler, to repayre the house of the LORDE his God. And they came to Helchias y hye prest, and there was deliyuered vnto them the money that was broughte vnto the house of God, which the Leuites (that kepte the threshouldes) had gathered, of Manasses, Epraim, and of all the residue in Israel, and of all Iuda t Ben Iamin, and of them that dwelt at Ierusalē, and they deliyuered it vnto the hādes of the worke men in the house of the LORDE, and gaue it vnto those that wrought in the house of the LORDE, where it was in decaye, y they shulde repayre it. And the same gaue it forth vnto the carpenters and buylders, to bye fire stone and hewen tymber for the balkes in the houses, which the kynges had destroyed. And the men laboured faithfully in the worke.

And ouer them were ordeyned, Iahath and Obadia the Leuites of the children of Merari: Zachary and Mesullam of the children of the Kahathites, to further the worke, and they were all Leuites that coule playe vpon instrumentes. But ouer them that bare burthens and furthered all maner of worke in all the offices, there were scribes, officers and dore keepers of the Leuites. And whā they toke out the money that was broughte vnto y house of the LORDE, Helchias the prest founde the boke of the lawe of the LORDE geuen by Moses. And Helchias answered, and saide vnto Saphan the Scribe: *I haue founde the boke of the lawe in \hat{y} house of \hat{y} LORDE. And Helchias delyuered the boke vnto Saphan. And Saphan bare it vnto the kynge, and broughte \hat{y} kynge worde agayne, and sayde: All that was geuen vnder the handes of thy seruantes, that make they: and \hat{y} money that was founde in \hat{y} house of the LORDE, haue they gathered together, and delyuered it vnto \hat{y} officers, and to the workmen. And Saphan the Scribe tolde the kynge, and sayde: Helchias the prest hath delyuered me a boke.

¶ And Saphan red therin before the kynge. And whan the kynge herde the wordes of the lawe, he rente his clothes. And the kynge commaunded Helchias and Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, and Abdon the sonne of Micha, and Saphan the Scribe, and Asaia the kynges seruaut, and sayde: Go youre waye, axe counsell at the LORDE for me and for the remnaunt in Israel, and for Iuda, concernynge these wordes of the boke that is founde. For greate is the indignacion of the LORDE that is gone forth ouer vs, because oure fathers haue not kepte the wordes of the LORDE, to do acordinge as it is written in this boke. Then wete Helchias (with the other that were sent from the kynge) vnto the prophetisse Hulda the wife of Sallum the Sonne of Thecoath the sonne of Hasra the keeper of the clothes, which dwelt at Ierusalem in the secōde parte, and they spake this vnto her.

¶ And she sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Tell the man \hat{y} sent you vnto me: Thus sayeth \hat{y} LORDE: Beholde, I wil brynge plagis vpō this place and the inhabitors therof, euē all the curses which are written in the boke, that was red before the kynge of Iuda: because they haue forsakē me, and brēt incēse vnto other goddes, to prouoke me with all the workes of their handes. And my indignacion shal go forth vpon this cite, and shal not be quenched.

¶ And after this maner shal ye saye vnto the kynge of Iuda, that sent you to axe counsell at the LORDE: Thus sayeth \hat{y} LORDE God of Israel concernynge the wordes that thou hast herde: Because thine hert is moued, and because thou hast humbled thy selfe in the sighte of God, whan thou herdest his wordes agaynst this place and the inhabitors therof, and hast submytted thy selfe before me, and rent thy clothes, and wepte before me, therefore haue I herde the, sayeth \hat{y} LORDE. Beholde, I wil gather the vnto thy fathers, and thou shalt be layed in thy graue with peace, so \hat{y} thine eyes shal not se all the euell that I wil brynge ouer this place, and the indwellers therof. And they broughte the kynge worde agayne.

¶ Then sent \hat{y} kynge, * and caused all the Elders in Iuda and Ierusalem to come together. And the kynge wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, and all the men of Iuda and inhabitors of Ierusalem, the prestes, the Leuites, and all the people both small and greate: and all the wordes in the boke of the couenaunt that was founde in the house of the LORDE, were red in their eares. And \hat{y} kynge stode in his place, and made a couenaunt before the LORDE, that they shulde walke after the LORDE, to kepe his cōmaundementes, his testimonies, and his statutes with all their hert and with all their soule, to do acordinge vnto all the wordes of the couenaunt that are written in this boke.

¶ And there stode all they that were founde at Ierusalem and in Ben Iamin. And \hat{y} inhabitors of Ierusalem dyd acordinge to the couenaunt of God the God of their fathers. And Iosias put awaye all abhominacions out of all the londes that were the children of Israels, and caused all them that were founde in Israel, to serue the LORDE their God. † As longe as Iosias lyued, departed they not from the LORDE the God of their fathers.

The xxxv. Chapter.

¶ AND Iosias kepte Passeouer^b vnto the LORDE at Ierusalem, and slewe the Passeouer on the fourteenth daye off the first moneth, and set the prestes in their offices, and strenghted them to their mynistracion in the house of the LORDE, and sayde vnto the Leuites that taughte in all Israel, and were sanctified vnto \hat{y} LORDE: Put the holy Arke in the house that Salomon \hat{y} sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel dyd buyde. † Ye shal beare it nomore vpon youre shulders. Se that ye serue now the LORDE youre God, and his people of Israel, and prepare the house of youre fathers in youre courses, as it was appointed by Dauid the kynge of Israel, and by Salomō his sonne: and stonde in the Sanctuary after ȝ course of the fathers houses amonge youre brethren the children of the people, And after the course of the fathers houses amonge the Leuites, and kyll Passeouer, sanctifye and prepare youre brethren, that they maye do accordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

33 And Iosias gaue lambes and yonge kyddes which were males, to the Heueofferynge for the comontye (all to the Passeouer for euery one that was founde) in the nombre thirtye thousande, and thre thousande oxen, all of the kynges good. And his prynces of their awne good wyl gaue to the Heueofferynge for the people, ȝ for the prestes and Leuites (namely, Helchias, Zachary and Iehiel the prynces in ȝ house of God amōge the prestes) for the Passeouer, two thousande and sixe hundreth, And thre hundreth oxen. But Chananias, Semaia, Nathaneel and his brethren, Gasabia, Ieiel and Iosabad the chefe of the Leuites gaue the Leuites to the Heue offerynge for the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, ȝ fyue hundreth oxen.

Thus was the Gods seruyce prepared, and the prestes stode in their place, and the Leuites in their courses accordinge to the kynges commandement. And they kylled the Passeouer, and the prestes toke it off their handes, and sprenkled it: and the Leuites toke the skynnes off them, and remoued the burntofferynge there from, to geue it amonge the porcions of the fathers houses in the multitudes of their congregacion to offre vnto the LORDE, *as it is written in ȝ boke of Moses, Euen so dyd they with the oxen also. And they dighte the Passeouer at the fyre ȝ accordinge to the lawe. And that which was halowed, dighte they in pottes, kettels, and pannes, and made haist for the comon people. Afterwarde prepared they for them selues also and for ȝ prestes: for the prestes the children of Aaron were occupied in the burntofferynges and fat vntyll the nighte. Therefore must the Leuites prepare for them selues and for the prestes the children of Aaron.

C And the syngers the children of Asaph stode in their place (accordinge to ȝ Dauids commandement) and Asaph and Heman, and Iedithim the kynges Seer, and the porters at all the gates. And they departed not from their office. For the Leuites their brethren prepared for them. Thus was all the Gods seruyce prepared the same daye, that the Passeouer mighte be kepte, and the burnt-sacrifices offred vpon the altare off the LORDE accordinge to the commandement of kynge Iosias.

So the children of Israel that were at hande, helde Passeouer at that tyme, and the feast of vnleued bred, seuen dayes. Sence ȝ tyme of Samuel the prophet, was no Passeouer kepte in Israel like this: and no kynge of Israel had holdē such a Passeouer as Iosias dyd, and the prestes, Leuites, all Iuda, and soch as were founde of Israel, and the inhabitants of Ierusalem. In the eightēth yeare of the reigne of Iosias was this Passeouer kepte.

After this, whan Iosias had prepared the house, Necho the kynge of Egipte wente vp to fighte agaynst Carcamis besyde Euphrates. And Iosias wete forth agaynst him. But he sent messaungers vnto him, sayenge: What haue I to do with the O kynge off Iuda? I am not come now agaynst the, but I fighte agaynst another house: and God hath sayde, that I shal make haist. Ceasse from God which is with me, that he destroye the not. Neuertheles Iosias turned not his face from him, but prepared himselfe to fighte with him, and herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouth of God, ȝ came to fighte with him vpon the playne besyde Mageddo. But the Archers shot at kynge Iosias. And the kynge sayde vnto his seruantes: Cary me awaye, for I am sore wounded. And his seruantes toke him from the charet, and caried him vpon his seconde charet, and broughte him to Ierusalem. And he dyed, and was buried amonge the sepulcres off his fathers.

And All Iuda and Ierusalem mourned for Iosias, and Jeremy bewayled Iosias, and all the synginge men and women, spake their lamētacions ouer Iosias vnto this daye, and made a custome therof vnto this daye. Beholde, it is written also amonge the Lamētacions. What more there is to saye of Iosias, and his mercy accordinge to the scripture in the lawe of the LORDE, and of his actes (both first and last) beholde, it is written in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda.

The first Chapter.

IN the "first yere of Cyrus kyng of Persia (that the worde of the LORDE spoken *by the mouth of Ieremy might be fulfilled) the LORDE stered vp the sprete of Cyrus kyng of Persia, & he caused it be proclaimed thorow out all his empyre, yee and by wrytinge also, sayenge: Thus sayeth Cyrus the kyng of Persia: The LORDE God of heauē hath geuen me all the kyngdomes in the londe †and hath commaunded me to buylde him an house at Ierusalem in Iuda.

Who soeuer now amonge you is of his people, the LORDE his God be with him, and let him go vp to Ierusalem in Iuda, and buylde the house of the LORDE God of Israel. He is ‡ God that is at Ierusalē. And who so euer remayneth yet in eny maner of place (where he is a straunger) let the mē of his place helpe him with syluer and golde, with good and catell of a good frewill, for the house of God at Ierusalem.

Then gat vp the pryncipall fathers of Iuda and Ben Iamin, and the prestes and Leuites, and all they whose sprete God had raysted to go vp, and to buylde the house of the LORDE at Ierusalē. And all they that were aboute them, strengthened their hande with vessels of syluer and golde, with good and catell, and Iewels, besydes that which they gaue of their awne frewill. And kyngē Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the LORDES house, *which Nabuchodonosor had takē out of Ierusalem, and put in his gods house. But Cyrus ꝑ kyngē of Persia brought thē forth by Mithredath the treasurer, and nombred thē vnto Seszazar the prynce of Iuda. And this is the nombre of them: thirtye basens of golde, and a thousande basens of syluer, and nyne and twentye knyues, thirtye cuppes of golde, and of other syluer cuppes foure hundredth and ten, and of other vessels a thousande. So that all the vessels both of golde and syluer, were fyue thousande and foure hundredth. Seszazar broughte them all vp, with them that came vp out of the captiuyte off Babilon vnto Ierusalem.

The ij. Chapter.

THESE are the childrē of the londe that wente vp out of the captiuyte (whō Nabuchodonosor the kyngē of Babilon had caried awaye vnto Babilon) and came agayne to Ierusalem and in to Iuda, euery one vnto his cite, and came with Zorobabel, Iesua, Nehemias, Seraia, Reeieia, Mardachai, Bil-san, Mispar, Begeuai, Rehūm and Baena. This is now the nombre of the men of the people of Israel: The children of Phares, two thousande, an hūdreth, and two and seuentye: the children of Sephatia, thre hundredth and two and seuentye: the children of Arath, seven hundredth and fyue and seuentye: the children of Pahath Moab amonge the children of Iesua Ioab, two thousande, eight hundredth and twolue: the children of Elam, a thousande, two hundredth and foure and fifty: the children of Sathu, nyne hundredth, and fyue and forty: the children of Sacai, seuē hundredth and thre score: the children of Bani, sixe hundredth and two and forty: the children of Bebai, sixe hundredth and thre and twenty: the children of Asgad, a thousande two hundredth and two and twenty: the children of Adoniam, sixe hūdreth and sixe and sixty: the children of Bigeui, two thousande and sixe and fifty: the children of Adin, foure hundredth and foure and fifty: the children of Ater of Ezechias, eight and nynety: the children of Bezai, thre hundredth and thre and twenty: the children of Iorath, an hundredth and twolue: the children of Hasum, two hundredth and thre and twenty: the children of Gibbar, fyue and nynety: the children off Bethleem, an hundredth and thre and twenty: the men off Netopha sixe and fifty: the men off Anathot, an hundredth and eight and twenty: the children off Asmaueth, two and forty: the children off Kiriath Arim, Caphira and Beeroth, seven hundredth and thre and forty: the children off Rama and Gaba, sixe hundredth and one and twēty: the men off Michmas, an hundredth and two and twenty: the men of Bethel and Ai, two hundredth and thre and twenty: the childrē of Nebo, two and fyfte: the children of Magbis, an hūdreth and sixe and fifty: the childrē of the other Elam a thousande, two hundredth and foure and fifty: the children of Harim, thre hundredth and twenty: the childrē of Lodhadid and Ono, seuē hūdreth and fyue and twēty: the childrē of Iericho, thre hundredth and fyue and forty: the children of Senaa, thre thousande, sixe hundredth and thirtye.

The prestes. The children of Iedaia of the house of Iesua, nyne hundredth and thre and seuentye: the childrē of Iemmer, a thousande and two and fifty: the children of Pashur, a thousande and two hūdreth, and seven and forty: the childrē of Harim, a thousande and seuentene.

the children of Gasan, the children of Vsa, the children of Passeah, the children of Bessai, the children of Asna, the children of Meunim, the children of Nephussim, the children of Bachuc, the childrē of Hacupha, the children of Harhur, † childrē of Hazeluth, † childrē of Mehira, the children of Harsa, the children of Barcom, the children of Sissera, the children of Thamah, the children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha.

The children of Salomons seruantes. The children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Pruda, the children of Iaela, the childrē of Darcon, the childrē of Giddell, the childrē of Sephatia, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of Ami. All the Nethinims and the children off Salomons seruantes were altogether, three hundreth and two and nyentye.

And these wēte vp also, Mithel, Melath, Thel, Harso, Cherub, Addon and Immer. But they coude not shewe their fathers house ner their sede, whether they were of Israel. The children of Delaia, the children of Tobias, the children of Necoda, sixe hundreth and two and fiftye.

And of the children of the prestes. The children of Habaia, the children of Hacom, the children of Barsillai, which toke one of the daughters of Barsillai the Gileadite to wife, and was counted amonge the same names: these soughte the register of their byrth, and founde none, therefore were they put from the presthode. And Hathirsatha sayde vnto them, that they shulde not eate of the most holy, tyll there rose vp a prest with the *lighte and perfectnesse.

The whole congregacion as one man, was two and fortye thousande, three hundreth and thre score: besyde their seruantes and maydēs, of whom there were seue thousande, three hundreth and seuen and thirtye. And they had two hundreth singinge men and wemen, seue hundreth and sixe and thirtye horses, two hundreth and fyue and fortye Mules, foure hundreth and fyue and thirtye Camels, and sixe thousande, seuen hundreth and twentye Asses.

And certayne of the chefe fathers, when they came to the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, they were well mynded vnto the house of God, that it shulde be set in his place, and gaue after their abylte vnto the treasure of the worke, one and thre score thousande guldens, and fyue thousande pounce of syluer, and an hundreth prestes garmentes. So the prestes and the Leuites, and certayne of † people, and the syngers, and the porters, and † Nethinims dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

The iij. Chapter.

AND whan the seuenth moneth came, and the children of Israel were now in their cities, the people came together euen as one man, vnto Ierusalem. And there stode vp Iesua the sonne of Iosedec and his brethren the prestes, and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and his brethren, and buylded the altare of the God of Israel, to offre burntofferynge theron, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses the man of God, and the altare set they vpon his sokettes (for there was a fearfulness amonge them because of the nacions and lōdes) and offred burntofferings theron vnto † LORDE † in the mornynge and at euen. And helde the feast of Tabernacles † as it is wrytten, and offred burnt sacrifices daylie after the nombre as acordinge was, euery daye his sacrifice. Afterwarde the daylie burntofferynge also, and of the new Mones and of all the feast dayes of the LORDE that were halowed, and allmaner of fre wyllinge offeringes, which they did of their awne fre wyl vnto the LORDE.

† Vpon the first daye of the seuenth moneth beganne they to offre burnt sacrifices vnto the LORDE. But the foundacion of the tēple of the LORDE was not yet layed. Neuertheles they gaue money vnto † masons and carpenters, and meate and drynke and oyle vnto them of Zidon and of Tyre, to brynge thē Cedre tymbre from Libanus by See vnto † Ioppa, accordinge to the cōmaundement of Cyrus the kynge of Persia.

In the seconde yeare of their commynge vnto the house of God at Ierusalem in the seconde moneth, beganne Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and the remnaunt of their brethren the prestes and Leuites, and all they that were come out of the captiuyte vnto Ierusalem, and appoynted the Leuites frō twentye yeare olde and aboue, to se that the worke of the house of the LORDE wēte forwarde. And Iesua stode with his sonnes and brethren, and Cadmiel with his sonnes, and the children of Iuda, to furthur the workmen of the house of God, namely the childre of Henadad with their children and their brethren the Leuites.

C And when the buylders layed the foundation of the temple of the LORDE, the prestes stode in their araye, with trompettes. And the Leuites the children of Asaph with Cimbales, to prayse ȝ LORDE * with the Dytie of Dauid kynge of Israel. And they sung together, geuyng prayse ȝ thankes vnto ȝ LORDE, because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer vpon Israell. And all the people shouted loude in praysinge the LORDE, because the foundation of ȝ house of the LORDE was layed. Neuertheles many of the olde prestes and Leuites and awncient fathers, which had sene the house afore in his foundation, and this was now before their eyes, wepte loude. But many shouted with ioye, so that the noyse gaue a greate sounde, in so much that the people coulde not knowe ȝ ioyfull sounde for the noyse of the wepinge in the people: for the people shouted loude, so that the noyse was herde farre off.

The iiii. Chapter.

B A UT when the aduersaries of Iuda and Ben Iamin herde, that the children of the captiuyte buylded the tēple vnto the LORDE God of Israel, they came to Zorobabel ȝ to the pryncipall fathers, and sayde vnto them: We wyl buylde with you: for we seke the LORDE youre God like as ye do. And we haue done sacrifice vnto him, ^ȝ sence the tyme that Assar Hadon the kynge of Assur broughte vs vp hither. But Zorobabel and Iesua and the other awnciēt fathers of Israel, answered them: It is not mete for vs and you to buylde the house of oure God, but we wyl buylde alone vnto the LORDE God of Israel, ^ȝ as Cyrus the kynge of Persia hath commaunded vs.

Then the folke of the londe hyndered the people of Iuda, and made them afrayed to buylde, and hyndered their deuyce, as longe as Cyrus the kynge of Persia lyued, vntyll the reigne off Darius kynge off Persia. But whan Ahasuerus was kynge, in the begynnynge off his reigne wrote they vnto him a complaynte agaynst them of Iuda and Ierusalem.

And in the tyme of Artaxerses, wrote B Bisellam, Mithridath, Tabeel and the other of their counceill vnto Artaxerses the kynge of Persia. But the scripture of ȝ letter was wrytten in the Syrians speach, and was interpreted in the langage of the Syrians. Rehum ȝ chaunceler, and Simsai the scribe, wrote this letter agaynst Ierusalem to Artaxerses the kynge.

We Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsai the scribe, and other of the counceill of Dina, off Arphasath, off Tarplat, off Persia, off Arach, of Babilon, of Susan, of Deha, and of Elam, and other of the people ^ȝ whom the greate and noble Asnaphar broughte ouer, and set in the cities of Samaria, and other on this syde the water, and in Canaan. And this is ȝ summe of the letter that they sent vnto kynge Artaxerses:

Thy seruauentes the men on this syde the water and in Canaan. Be it knowne vnto ȝ kynge, that the Iewes which are come vp from the to vs vnto Ierusalē in to that sedicious ȝ wicked cite, buylde the same, and make vp ȝ walles of it, ȝ brynge it out of ȝ foundation. Be it knowne now therfore vnto ȝ kynge, ȝ yf this cite be buylded ȝ the walles made vp agayne, thē shal not they geue tribute, toll, and yearly custome, and their deuyce shal do ȝ kynge harme. But now that we all are therby which destroyed the temple, we wolde no longer se the kynges dishonoure. Therfore sent we out, and caused the kynge to be certified therof: That it maye be soughte in ȝ Cronicles of thy progenitours, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Cronicles, and perceaue, that this cite is sedicious and noysome vnto kynges and londes, and that they cause other also to rebell of olde, and for the same cause was this cite destroyed. Therfore do we certifie the kynge, that yf this cite be buylded, and the walles therof made vp, thou shalt kepe nothinge on this syde the water by the reason of it.

Then sent ȝ kynge an answeere vnto Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsai the Scribe, and to the other of their counceill that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde ȝ water. Peace and salutacion. The letter which ye sent vnto vs, hath bene opely red before me, and I haue commaunded to make search: and it is founde, that this cite of olde hath made insurreccion agaynst kynge, & how y vproure and rebellion hath bene commytted therein. There haue bene mightie kynge also at Ierusalē, which haue reigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and toll, tribute and yearly custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after this commaundemēt, forbyd the same men, that the cite be not builded, tyll I haue geuē cōmaundemēt. Take hede now that ye be not negligent here in, lest the kynge haue harme there thorow.

Now whā kynge Artaxerses letter was red before Rehum the chaunceler and Simsai the Srybe and their counsell, they wente vp in all the haist to Ierusalem vnto the Iewes, and forbad them with the arme and auctorite. Then ceased the worke of the house of God at Ierusalem, and continued so vnto the seconde yeare of Darius kynge of Persia.

The b. Chapter.

A THE prophetes, Ageus and Zachary y sonne of Iddo, prophecied vnto y Iewes that were in Iuda and Ierusalē, in the name of the God of Israel. *Then gat vp Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and beganne to buylde the house of God at Ierusalem, and with them the prophetes of God which strenghted thē. At the same tyme came to thē Thatnai the debite on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their counclers, and sayde thus vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? Then tolde we them the names of the men, that made this buyldinge. But the eye of their God came vpon the Elders of the Iewes, that they were not inhibyte, tyll the matter was brought before Darius, and tyll there came a wrytinge therof agayne.

This is the summe of the letter y Thatnai the Debyte on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their counclers of Apharsach (which were on this syde the water) sent vnto kynge Darius. And these are the wordes that B they sent vnto him: Vnto Darius the kynge, all peace. Be it knowne vnto the kynge, that we came in to Iewry to the house of y greate God, which is buylde with all maner of stone, and balckes are layed in the walles, and y worke goeth fast forth, and prospereth in their handes. Neuertheles we axed the Elders and sayde vnto them: Who hath cōmaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We axed their names also, that we might certifie the, and haue wrytten the names of the men that were their rulers.

But they answered vs with these wordes, and sayde: We are the seruauētes of the God of heauen and earth, and buylde the house y was buylded many yeares agoo, *which a greate kynge of Israel buylded and set vp. Howbeit whan oure fathers prouoked the God of heauen vnto wrath, he gaue them ouer in the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon the Caldee, which brake downe this house, & caried y people awaye vnto Babilon.

† Neuertheles in the first yeare of Cyrus the kynge of Babilon, y same kynge Cyrus commaunded to buylde this house of God: for the vessels of golde and siluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusalē, and broughte thē in to y temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kynge take out of y temple at Babilon, ‡ and deliuered them vnto Seszabaz by name, whom he made Debyte, and sayde vnto him: Take these vessels, go thy waye and brynge them vnto the temple at Ierusalem, and let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Seszabazar, and layed y foundation of the house of God at Ierusalem. Sence that tyme hath it bene in buyldinge, and yet is it not fynished. Yf it please y kynge now, let there be search made in y kynges treasure house which is at Babilon, whether it haue bene kynge Cyrus commaundement, that the house of God at Ierusalem shulde be buylded: § sende vs y kynges mynde concernynge the same.

The vi. Chapter.

THEN cōmaunded kinge Darius, that A search shulde be made in y library of y kynges treasure house, which laye at Babilon. So at Egbathanis in a castell that lyeth in the londe of the Meedes, there was founde a boke, & in it was there an acte wrytten after this maner: In the first yeare of kynge Cyrus, cōmaunded the same kynge Cyrus to buylde y house of God at Ierusalem, in the place where the sacrifice is made, & to laye the foundation to beare thre score cubites heyght, ⁊ thre score cubites bredth, ⁊ thre walles of all maner of stones, and one wall of tymber, ⁊ the expences shalbe geuen of the kynges house. And the goldē and syluer vessell of ⁊ house of God (which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusalem, and broughte vnto Babilon) shalbe restored agayne, ⁊ they maye be broughte vnto the temple at Ierusalē to their place in to the house of God.

Get you farre from them therefore, thou Thathnai Debyte beyonde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, ⁊ youre councelers which are beyonde the water. Let them worke in ⁊ house of God, that the Debyte of ⁊ Iewes and their Elders maye buylde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shalbe done to ⁊ Elders of Iuda for the buyldinge of the house of God, that there shal diligently be takē of the kynges goodes, euen of the rentes beyonde the water, ⁊ geuen vnto the men, and that they be not hyndered.

And yf they haue nede of calues, lambes, or goates for the burntofferynge vnto ⁊ God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the prestes at Ierusalem, there shalbe geuen them daylie as is acordinge: and se that this be not done negligētly, that they maye offre swete sauoures vnto ⁊ God of heauen, and praye for the kynges lyfe, and for his children. This commaundement haue I geuē. And what man so euer he be that altereth these wordes, there shal a balke be taken from his house, and set vp, and he shal be hanged thereon, and his house shalbe prysed for the dede.

But the God that dwelleth in heauen, destroye all kynges and people, that put to their hāde to alter and to breake downe the house of God at Ierusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that this be diligently done.

Then Thathnai ⁊ Debyte beyonde ⁊ water, and Sethar of Bosen with their counclers (to whom kynge Darius had sent) dyd their diligence. And ⁊ Elders of the Iewes buylde, and they prospered thorow the prophecieng of Aggeus the prophet and Zachary the sonne of Iddo: and they buylde, and set vp the worke, acordinge to the commaundement of the God of Israel, and after the commaundement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerses kynges of Persia. And they performed the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar, that was the sixte year of the reigne of kynge Darius.

* And the children of Israel, the prestes, the Leuites, and the other children of ⁊ captiuite helde the dedicacion of the house of God with ioye, and offered at the dedicacion of the house of God, an hundreth calues, two hundreth lambes, foure hundreth goates: and for the synofferynge for all Israel, twolue he goates, acordinge to the nombre of the trybes of Israel, and set the prestes in their courses, and ⁊ Leuites in their offices, to mynister vnto God which is at Ierusalē, as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses.

And the children of the captiuite helde Passeouer vpon the fourteenth daye of the first moneth: for ⁊ prestes and Leuites had purified them selues, so ⁊ they were all cleane as one man, and kylled Passeouer for all the children of the captiuite, and for their brethren the prestes, and for them selues. And the childrē of Israel which were come agayne out of captiuite, and all soch as had separated them selues vnto them from the fylthinesse of the Heythen in the londe, to seke the LORDE God of Israel, ate ⁊ helde the feast of vnleuēd bred seuen dayes with ioye: for the LORDE had made them glad, and turned the hert of the kynge of Assur vnto thē, so that their handes were strenghtened in the worke of the house of God, which is ⁊ God of Israel.

The liij. Chapter.

AFTER these actes in the reigne of Artaxerses kynge of Persia, * there wente vp from Babilon, Eszdras the sonne of Seraia, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Helchias, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne Meraioth, the sonne of Serahia, ⁊ sonne of Vsi, the sonne of Buki, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleasar, the sonne of Aaron the chefe prest, which was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moses, † which the LORDE God of Israel dyd geue. And ⁊ kynge gaue him all that he requyred, acordinge to the hande of the LORDE his God vpon him.

And there wente vp certayne of the children of Israel, and of the prestes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Ierusalem, in the seventh yere of kynge Artaxerses. And they came to Ierusalem in the fifth moneth, that is the seventh yere of the kynge. For vpon the first daye of the first moneth, deused he to go vp from Babilon: and on ʒ first daye of the fifth moneth came he to Ierusalem, accordinge to the good hande of God vpon him: For Eszdras prepared his hert to seke the lawe of the LORDE, and to do it, and to teach the precepte & iudgment in Israel.

33 And this is the summe of the letter, that kynge Artaxerses gaue vnto Eszdras the prest, the scribe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the LORDE and of his statutes ouer Israel. Vnto Eszdras the prest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauen, peace and salutation. I haue commaunded, that all they of the people of Israel, and of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, which are mynded of their awne good wyl to go vp to Ierusalem, that they go with the, beyng sent of the kynge and of the seuen lordes of the counsell, to vyset Iuda and Ierusalem, accordinge to the lawe of God, which is in thy hāde: And that thou shuldest take with the, syluer and golde, which the kynge and the lordes of his counsell geue of their awne good wyl vnto the God of Israel (whose habitacion is at Ierusalem) and all the syluer and golde that thou canst fynde in all ʒ cōunte of Babilon: with it that the people and prestes geue of their awne good wil vnto the house of God at Ierusalem.

C Take thou the same, and bye diligently with the same money, calues, lambes, goates, and meatofferynges and drynkofferynges, to be offred vpon the altare of the house of youre God at Ierusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethren to do with the remnaunt of the money, that do after the wyl of youre God. And the vessels that are geuen the for the mynistracion in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Ierusalem.

And what so euer thinge more shal be nedefull for the house of thy God, which is necessary for the to spende, let the same be geuē out of the kynges chamber. I kynge Artaxerses haue commaunded all the treasurers beyonde the water, ʒ loke what so euer Eszdras the prest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauē, requyreth of you, that ye fulfyll the same diligently, vntyll an hundreth talētes of syluer, and tyll an hundreth quarters of wheate, and tyll an hūdreth Batthes of wyne, and tyll an hundreth Batthes of oyle, and salt without measure. Whatsoeuer be-longeth to the lawe of the God of heauen, let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heauē, that there come no wrath vpon the kynges realme & his children.

And knowne be it vnto you, that ye shall haue no auctorite to requyre taxinge & custome, and yearly rentes vpon eny of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims and mynisters in ʒ house of this God. But thou Eszdras (after the wysdome of thy God that is in thy hande) set thou iudges and arbiters, to iudge all the people that is beyonde Iordane, euen all soch as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyl not diligently fulfyll the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shall haue his iudgmēt for the dede, whether it be vnto death, or to be banyshed, or to be condemned in good, or to be put in preson.

Praised be the LORDE God of oure fathers, which so hath inspyred ʒ kynges hert to garnysh the house of God at Ierusalem: and hath enclined his mercy vnto me in the presence of the kynge, and his councelers, and before all the kynges hye estates. And I was comforted (accordinge to the hāde of the LORDE my God ouer me) and so gathered I the heades of Israel together, ʒ they mighte go vp with me.

Of the children of Pahath Moab, Eleoenai the sonne of Serahia, and with him two hundreth males.

Of the children of Sechania, the sonne of Iehasiel, and with him thre hundreth males. Of the children of Adin Ebed, the sonne of Ionathan, and with him fiftie males. Of the children of Elam, Iesaia the sonne of Althalia, and with him seuentie males. Of the children of Sephatia, Sebadia the sonne of Michael, and with him foure score males.

Of the children of Ioab, Obadia the sonne of Iehiel, and with him two hundreth 7 eightene men children. Of the children of Selomith, the sonne of Iosiphia, and with him an hundreth and thre score males.

13 Of the children of Bebai, Zachary the sonne of Bebai, and with him eight and twentye males. Of the children of Asgad, Iohanan the yongest sonne, and with him an hundreth and ten males. Of the last children of Adoniam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Ieiel and Semaia, and with them thre score males. Of the children of Bigeui, Vthai and Sabud, and with them seuē males. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth towarde Aheua, 7 there abode we thre dayes.

And whan I loked amonge the people 7 the prestes, I founde no Leuites there. The sent I Elieser, Ariel, Semaia, Elnathan, Iarib, Elnathan, Natha, Zachary and Mesullam the rulers, and Ioiarib and Elnathan the teachers, and those sent I vnto Iddo 7 chefast at Casiphia, that they shulde fetch us mynysters for the house of oure God, and I tolde them what they shulde saye vnto Iddo and to his brethren the Nethinims at Casiphia.

14 And (acordinge to the good hande of oure God vpon us) they broughte us a wyse man from amonge the children of Maheli the sonne of Leui the sonne of Israel, euen Serebia with his sonnes and brethren, eightene. And Hasabia, and with him Iesaia of the children of Merari, with his brethren 7 their sonnes, twentye. And of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes gaue to mynister vnto the Leuites, two hundreth 7 twentye, all named by name.

15 And euen there at the water besyde Aheua, caused I a fastinge to be proclaimed, 7 we mighte humble oure selues before oure God, to seke of him a righte waye for us, 7 oure children and all oure substaunce. For I was ashamed to require of the kynge, souldyers 7 horsmen, to helpe us agaynst the enemye in the waye. For we had sayde vnto the kynge: The hande of oure God is for the best vpon all them that seke him, and his violence and wrath vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and soughte this at oure God, and he herde us.

And I toke out twolue of the chefe prestes, Serebia and Hasabia, and ten of their brethren with them, and weyed them there the syluer and golde and vessels for the Heue offeringe vnto the house of oure God, which the kynge, and the lordes of his counsell and prynces, and all Israel that were at hande, had geuen to the Heue offeringe: and there weyed I them vnder their hande sixe hundreth and fiftye talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundreth talentes, and in golde an hundreth talentes, twentye cuppes of golde of a thousande guldens, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayde vnto them: Ye are holy vnto the LORDE, therfore are the vessels holy also, and so is the syluer and golde that is geuen of a good wyll vnto the LORDE God of youre fathers: Watch ye therfore and kepe it, tyl ye weye it downe before the chefe prestes and Leuites, and auuncient fathers of Israel at Ierusalem in the chestes of the house of the LORDE. Then toke the prestes and Leuites that weyed syluer and golde 7 vessell, to brynge it to Ierusalem vnto 7 house of oure God.

So we brake vp, from the water of Aheua 16 on the twolueth daye of the first moneth, to go vnto Ierusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon us, and delyuered us frō the hande of the enemies and preuy waytinges by the waye. And we came to Ierusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on 7 fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Vrias the prest, and with him Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and with them Iosabad the sonne of Iesua, and Noadia 7 sonne of Benui the Leuites, acordinge to the nombre 7 weight of euery one. And the weight was all wrytten vp at the same tyme.

And the children of the captiuyte, which were come out of preson, offred burntofferings vnto 7 God of Israel: twolue bullockes for all Israel, sixe and nynetye rammes, seuē and seuentye lambes, and twolue goates for a synofferynge, all to the burnt offeringe of the LORDE. And they delyuered the kynges commission vnto the kynges officers, 7 to the Debytes on this syde the water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

The ix. Chapter.

WHAN all this was performed, the rulers came to me, and sayde: The people of Israel, and the prestes, & Leuites are not separated from the nacions in the londes as touchinge their abhominacions, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Persites, Iebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egipcians, and Amorites. * For they haue taken the daughters of the same, & their sonnes, and haue myxte the holy sede with y nacions in the londes: and the hande of the rulers and lordes of counsell hath bene principall in this trespase.

Whan I herde this, I rente my clothes and my rayment, and plucte out the heer of my heade and of my beard, and sat mournynge. And there resorted vnto me all such as feared the worde of the LORDE God of Israel because of the greates transgression. And I sat mournynge vntyll the euenynge sacrifice. And aboute the euenynge sacrifice I rose vp fro my heynes, and rente my clothes and my raiment, and fell vpon my knees, and spred out my handes vnto the LORDE my God, and sayde:

My God, I am ashamed, and darre not lifte vp mine eies vnto the my God: for oure wickednesses are growne ouer oure heade, & oure trespases are waxen greates vnto y heauē. Sence the tyme of oure fathers haue we bene in greates trespase vnto this daie, † and because of oure wickednesses haue we and oure kynges bene deliuered in to the hande of y kynges of the nacions, in to the swerde, in to captiuyte, in to spoyle, and in to confusion of face, as it is come to passe this daie.

C But now is there a litle and sodane graciousnes come from the LORDE oure God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maie geue vs a nayle in his holy place, that oure God maye lighte oure eyes, and geue vs a litle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and oure God hath not forsakē vs though we be bondmen, and hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in the sighte of the kynges of Persia, that they shulde geue vs lyfe, and promote the house of oure God, and to sett vp the desolacion therof, and to geue vs an hedge in Iuda and Ierusalem.

O oure God, what shall we saye now after this? that we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, which thou hast commaunded by thy seruantes the prophetes, and saide: The londe wherin ye shal come to possesse it, is an vnclane londe thorow the fylthines of the people of the londes, in their abhominacions wherwith they haue made it full of vnclennes on euery syde. Therefore shal ye not geue youre daughters vnto their sonnes, and their daughters shall ye not take vnto youre sonnes, and seke not their peace and welth for euer, that ye maye be stronge, and enioye the good in the londe, and y ye and youre children maye haue the inheritance of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs (because of oure euell dedes and greates trespase) thou oure God hast spared oure wickednesses, and hast geuen vs a deliuerance as it is come to passe.

As for vs, we haue turned backe, & haue let go thy commaundementes, to make contrate with the people of these abhominacions. Wilt thou then be wroth at vs, tyll we be vtterly consumed, so that nothyng remayne, and tyll there be no deliuerance? O LORDE God of Israel, thou art righteous, for we remaine yet escaped, as it is this daie. Beholde, in thy presence are we in oure trespase, for because of it is there no stondinge before the.

The x. Chapter.

AND whan Eszdras prayed after this maner and knowledg, wepte, and laie before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel a very greates congregacion of men and wemen, and children: for the people wepte very sore. And Sachania the sonne of Iehiel one of the children of Elam, answered, and sayde vnto Eszdras: We haue trespassed agaynst the LORDE oure God, in that we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the londe. Now there is hope yet in Israel cōcerninge this, therefore let vs make a couenaūt now with oure God, that we shal put awaye all the wyues (and such as are borne of them) acordynge to the counsell of y LORDE, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, y we maye do acordynge to the lawe. Get the vp therefore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We will be with the, be of good comforte, and do it.

Then rose Eszdras, and toke an ooth of the rulers, prestes and Leuites, and of all Israel, that they shulde do acordinge to this worde: and they swore. And Eszdras stode vp before the house of God, and wente in to the chamber of Iohanen the sonne of Eliasab. And whan he came thither, he ate no bred, and dranke no water: for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had bene in captiuyte.

And they caused a proclamacion be made thorow out Iuda and Ierusalem, vnto all the children which had bene in captiuite, ŷ they shulde gather them selues together vnto Ierusalē: And that who soeuer came not within thre dayes acordinge to the deuyce of the rulers and Elders, all his substaunce shulde be forfett, and he put out from the cōgregation of the captiue.

C Then all the men of Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered them selues together vnto Ierusalem in thre dayes, ŷ is on the twentieth daye of the nyenth moneth: and all the people sat in the strete before the house of God, and trembled because of the matter, and for the rayne. And Eszdras ŷ prest stode vp, and sayde vnto them: *Ye haue transgressed, ŷ ye haue taken straunge wyues, to make the trespass of Israel yet more: confesse now therfore vnto ŷ LORDE God of youre fathers, ŷ do his pleasure, and separate youre selues from the people of the londe, ŷ from ŷ straunge wyues. Tē answered all the cōgregation, ŷ sayde with loude voyce: Let it be done as thou hast sayde. But the people are many, ŷ it is a raynye wether, ŷ they cānot stōde here without, nether is this a worke of one daye or two, for we are many ŷ haue offended in this transgression.

D Let vs appoynte oure rulers therfore in all the cōgregation, ŷ all they which haue taken straunge wyues in oure cities, maye come at the tyme appoynted, and the Elders of euery cite and their Iudges with them, tyll the wrath of oure God because of this matter be turned awaye from vs.

Then were they appoynted Ionathan the sonne of Asahel ŷ Iehasia the sonne of Thecua ouer this matter. And Mesullam and Sabthai the Leuites helped them. And the children of the captiuyte dyd euen so. And Eszdras the prest, and ŷ auñcient fathers thorow the house of their fathers, and all that were now rehearsed by name, separated theselues, and sat them downe on the first daye of the tenth moneth, to examē this matter. And on ŷ first daye of ŷ first moneth broughte they the matter to a conclusion, concernynge all the men ŷ had takē strange wyues.

And amōge the childrē of the prestes there were men founde ŷ had takē strange wyues, namely amōge the children of Iesua the sonne of Iosedec ŷ of his brethrē, Maeseia, Elieser, Iarib and Godolia. And they gaue their hādes there vpon, that they wolde put awaye their wyues: ŷ for their trespass offerynge to geue a rāme for their trespass. Amōge the children of Immer, Hanani ŷ Sabadia. Amōge the childrē of Harim, Maeseia, Elia, Semaia, Iehiel, and Vsia. Amōge ŷ children of Pashur, Elieonai, Maeseia, Ismael, Nethaneel, Iosabad ŷ Eleasa. Amōge the Leuites, Iosabad, Simei and Celaia, He is that Celita, Pethahia, Iuda and Eleasar. Amōge the syngers, Elyasib. Amōge the porters, Sallum, Telem and Vri.

Of Israel. Amōge the children of Pareos, Ramia, Iesia, Malchia, Meiamin, Eleasar, Malchia ŷ Benaia. Amōge ŷ children of Elam, Mathania, Zachary, Iehiel, Abdy, Ieremoth ŷ Elia. Amōge the children of Sathu, Elieonai, Eliasib, Mathania, Ieremoth, Sabad ŷ Asisa. Amōge the children of Bebai, Iohanan, Hanania, Sabai ŷ Athlai. Amōge the children of Bani, Mesullam, Malluch, Adaia, Iasub, Seal and Ieremoth. Amōge the children of Pahath Moab, Adna, Chelal, Benaia, Maesea, Mathania, Bezaleel, Benui and Manasse. Amōge the children of Harim, Elieser, Iesia, Malchia, Semaia, Simeon, Bē Iamin, Malluch ŷ Samaria. Amōge the childrē of Hasum, Mathnai, Mathatha, Sabad, Eliphelet, Ieremai, Manasse ŷ Simei. Amōge the childrē of Bani, Maedai, Amram, Huel, Benaia, Bedia, Chelui, Naia, Meremoth, Eliasib, Mathania, Mathnai, Iaesau, Bani, Benui, Simei, Selemia, Nathan, Adaia, Machnadbai, Sasai, Sarai, Asareel, Selemia, Samaria, Sallum, Amaria, ŷ Ioseph. Amōge the childrē of Nebo, Ieiel, Mathithia, Sabad, Sebina, Iaddai, Ioel, and Benaia. All these had taken strange wyues. And amōge the same wyues there were some, that had borne children.

The first Chapter.

THESE are the actes of Nehemias the sonne of Hachalia. It fortuneth in y^e moneth Chisleu in y^e twētieth yeaere, that I was in the castell at Susan: and Hanani one of my brethren came with certayne mē of Iuda, and I axed them how the Iewes dyd that were deliuered and escaped from the captiuyte, & how it wente at Ierusalē. And they sayde vnto me: The remnaunt of the captiuyte are there in the londe in greate mysfortune & rebuke. *The wallles of Ierusalem are broken downe, and the portes therof are brent with fyre.

Whā I herde these wordes, I sat me downe & wepte, & mourned two dayes, & fasted & prayed before the God of heauen, & sayde: O LORDE God of heauen, thou greate & terrible God, †thou y^e kepest couenaut & mercy for them \hat{y} loue the α obserue thy cōmaundementes: let thy eares marke, α let thine eies be open, \hat{y} thou mayest heare the prayer of thy seruauant, which I praye now before \hat{y} daye and nighte for the children of Israel thy seruauantes, α knowlege the synnes of the children of Israel, which we haue comynnytted agaynst the.

33 And I α my fathers house haue synned also. We haue bene corrupte vnto the, in \hat{y} we haue not kepte the cōmaundementes, statutes α lawes, which thou cōmaundedst thy seruauant Moses. Yet call to remembraunce \hat{y} worde that thou cōmaundedst thy seruauant Moses, and saydest: *Yf ye trāsgresse, then wil I scatter you abroad amonge the naciōs. But yf ye turne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes α do them: though ye were cast out vnto the vttemost parte of heauen yet wyl I gather you from thence, and wyl brynge you from thence, euē vnto the place, that I haue chosen for my name to dwell there. They are thy seruauantes, and thy people, whom thou hast deliuered thorow thy greute power α mightie hande. O LORDE, let thine eares marke the prayer of thy seruauant, α the prayer of thy seruauantes, whose desyre is to feare thy name, α let thy seruauant prospere this daye, α graunte him mercy in the sight of this man: for I was the kynges butlar.

The ij. Chapter.

2 IN the moneth Nisan of the twentieth yeare of kyng Artaxerses, whā the wyne stode before him, I toke vp the wyne, and gaue it vnto \hat{y} kyng, and I was heuy in his presence. Then sayde \hat{y} kyng vnto me: Why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke, that is not \hat{y} matter, but thou art heuy harted. Neuertheles I was sore afrayed, α sayde vnto the kyng: God saue the kynges life for euer, shulde I not loke sadly? the cite of my fathers buryall lyeth wayest, α the portes therof are consumed with the fyre. Then sayde the kyng vnto me: What is thē thy request? Then made I my prayer to the God of heaue, and sayde vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, and yf thy seruauant be fauoured in thy sighte, I beseke the sende me in to Iuda vnto \hat{y} cite of my fathers buryall, that I maye buylde it.

33 And \hat{y} kyng sayde vnto me, α so dyd the quene \hat{y} sat by him: How lōge shal thy iourney cōtynue, and whā wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased \hat{y} kyng to sende me, and I set him a tyme, α sayde vnto the kyng: Yf it please the kyng, let him geue me letters to the Debites beyonde \hat{y} water, \hat{y} they maye conueye me ouer, tyll I come in to Iuda: α letters vnto Assaph the lorde of the kynges wod, \hat{y} he maye geue me wodd for balles to the gates of the palace, which are harde on the house α harde on the walles of the cite, α for the house that I shal entre in to. And \hat{y} kyng gaue me acordinge to the good hande of God vpō me. And whan I came to \hat{y} Debites beyonde the water, I gaue them \hat{y} kynges letters. And the kyng sent captaines and horsmen with me.

But whan Saneballath the Horonite, α Tobias the seruauant of the Ammonites herde \hat{y} , it greued them sore, \hat{y} there was come a man which soughte the welth of the children of Israel. And whan I came to Ierusalem, α had bene there thre daies, I gat me vp in \hat{y} night season, α a fewe men with me: for I tolde no man what God had geuē me in my hert to do at Ierusalem: α there was not one beest with me, saue it \hat{y} I rode vpon. And I rode by nighte vnto the valley porte before the Dragon well, α to the Dongporte, α considered \hat{y} walles of Ierusalem that were broken downe, α the portes therof consumed with the fyre. And I wente ouer vnto \hat{y} Well porte, α to the kynges condyte, α there was no rowme for my beest, \hat{y} it coulde go vnder me. Then wētē I on in the nighte by the broke syde, α cōsidered \hat{y} wall, α turned back, α came home agayne to \hat{y} valley porte.

And \hat{y} rulers knewe not whither I wētē, or what I dyd: for hither to had I not tolde the Iewes α the prestes, the councilers α the rulers, α the other \hat{y} laboured in the worke, α I saide vnto thē: Ye se the myserye \hat{y} we are in, how Ierusalē lyeth wayst, α how \hat{y} gates therof are brent with fyre, come, let vs buylde vp \hat{y} walles of Ierusalē, \hat{y} we be nomore a rebuke. And I tolde thē of the good hāde of my God which was vpō me: And \hat{y} kynges wordes \hat{y} he had spokē vnto me. And they saide: Then let vs get vp. And we buylde, and their handes were strenghted to good.

But whan Saneballat \hat{y} Horonite, and Tobias the seruauant of \hat{y} Ammonites, α Gosem the Arabian herde it, they laughed vs to scorne, and despised vs, & sayde: What is this that ye do? Wyl ye fall awaye agayne from the kynge? Then answered I them, and sayde: The God of heauen shal cause vs to prospere: for we his seruantes are gotten vp, & are buyldinge. As for you, ye haue no porciō ner right, ner remembrance in Ierusalē.

The iij. Chapter.

AND Eliasib the hye prest gat him vp with his brethren the prestes, and buylded the Shepegate. They halowed it, and set vp the dores of it: euen vnto the tower Mea halowed they it, namely vnto the *tower of Hananeel. Nexte vnto him buylded ¶ men of Iericho. And besyde him buylded Sachur the sonne of Imri. But the Fysh-porte dyd the children of Senaa buylde, they couered it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres of it. Nexte vnto him buylded Meremoth the sonne of Vria the sonne of Haco. Nexte vnto him buylded Mesullam ¶ sonne of Barachias ¶ sonne of Mesesabeel. Nexte vnto him buylded Sadoc ¶ sonne of Baena. Nexte vnto him buylded they of Thecoa. But their greate mē put not their neckes to ¶ seruyce of their lordē.

B The Oldgate buylded Ioiada ¶ sonne of Passeah, & Mesullam the sonne of Besodia: they couered it, and set on the dores, lockes & barres of it. Nexte vnto them buylded Melacia of Gibeon, and Iadon of Morono, mē of Gibeon and of Mispā, for the seate of the Debyte on this syde the water. Nexte vnto him buylded Vsiel the sonne of Harhaia the goldsmith. Nexte vnto him buylded Hanania ¶ Apotecarys sonne, & they repayed Ierusalē vnto the brode wall. Nexte vnto him buylded Rephaia the sonne of Hur, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusalem. Nexte vnto him buylded Iedaia the sonne of Harumaph, ouer agaynst his house. Nexte vnto him buylded Hattus the sonne of Hasabenia. But Malchia the sonne of Harim, and Hasub the sonne of Pahath Moab buylded ¶ other pece, and the tower beside the fornace. Nexte vnto him buylded Sallum the sonne of Halohes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusalem, and his daughters.

C The valley gate buylded Hanum, and the citisins of Sanoah. They buylded it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres therof, and a thousande cubytes on the wall, vnto the Dōgeporte. But the Dongeporte buylded Malechia the sonne of Rechab, the ruler of the fourth parte of the vynyards: He buylded it, & set on the dores, lockes & barres therof. But the Wellgate buylded Sallum ¶ sonne of Chal Hose, the ruler of the fourthparte of Mispā: He builded it, & couered it, & set on ¶ dores, lockes, & barres therof, & the wall vnto the pole of Sybah by the kynges garden, vnto the steppes that go downe from the cite of David. After him builded Nehemia the sonne of Aszbuk, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethzur, vntyll the other side ouer agaynst the sepulchres of David, and to the pole Asuia, & vnto the house of the mightie.

After him buylded the Leuites, Rehūm B the sonne of Bani. Nexte vnto him buylded Hasabia ¶ ruler of the halfe quarter at Regila in his quarter. After him buylded their brethrē, Banai the sonne of Henadab, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Segila. After him buylded Eser the sonne of Iesua ¶ ruler of Mispā, the other pece hard ouer against the Harnesse corner. After him buylded Baruc the sonne of Sabai the other pece worshipfully & costly, frō the corner vnto ¶ dore of ¶ house of Eliasib ¶ hye prest. After him builded Meremoth the sonne of Vria the sonne of Hacos the other pece, frō ¶ dore of Eliasibs house, vnto the ende of the house of Eliasib. After him buylded the prestes, E the mē of the countre. After him buylded Ben Iamin and Hasub ouer against their house. After thē buylded Asaria the sonne of Maesia the sonne of Anania nexte vnto his house. After him buylded Benui ¶ sonne of Henadad the other pece from the house of Asaria vnto the turnynge, and vnto the corner.

After him buylded Palal the sonne of Vsai, ouer agaynst the corner & the hye tower, which lieth out ouer frō the kynges house, besyde the courte of the preson. After him Pedaia the sonne of Pareos (As for ¶ Nethinims they dwelt in Ophel, vnto ¶ Watergate, towarde the east where ¶ tower lieth out). After him buylded they of Thecoa ¶ other pece ouer against ¶ greate tower, ¶ lieth outward, and vnto the wall of ¶ Ophel.

But from the Horsgate forth buylded ¶ prestes, euery one ouer agaynst his house. After them buylded Sadoc ¶ sonne of Immer ouer against his house. After him buylded Semaia the sonne of Sachania ⁊ keper of the eastgate. After him buylded Hanania the sonne of Selemia, ⁊ Hanum the sonne of Zalaph ⁊ sixte, ⁊ other peace. After him builded Mesullam the sonne of Berechia ouer against his chest. After him builded Malchia the goldsmithes sonne, vntill ⁊ house of the Nethinims, and of the marchauntes ouer agaynst the councell gate, and to the perler in the corner. And betwene the perler of the corner vnto the Shepegate builded the goldsmithes and the marchauntes.

The iiij. Chapter.

BUT whan Saneballat herde that we builded ⁊ wall, he was wroth, ⁊ toke greate indignacio ⁊ mocked ⁊ Iewes ⁊ saide before his brethre ⁊ the mightie men of Samaria: What do the impotēt Iewes? shall they be thus suffred? shall they offre? shall they performe it in one daie? shal they make ⁊ stones whole againe, ⁊ are brought to dust, ⁊ brent? And Tobias the Ammonite beside him saide: Let thē builde on, yf a foxe go vp, he shall breake downe their stonye wall. Heare O thou oure God, how we are despysed, turne their shame vpon their awne heade, ⁊ thou mayest geue them ouer in to despisinge in the londe of their captiuite. Couer not their wickednesse, ⁊ put not out their sinne fro thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the wall, ⁊ ioyned it whole together, vnto ⁊ halfe heighth. And the people were well mynded to labour.

But whan Saneballat, ⁊ Tobias, and ⁊ Arabiās, ⁊ Ammonites, ⁊ Aszdodites herde, ⁊ the wallles of Ierusalem were made vp, and that they had begonne to stoppe vp ⁊ gappes, they were very wroth, and cōspyred all together, to come and fight against Ierusalem, ⁊ to make an hinderaunce therin. Neuertheles we made oure prair vnto oure God, ⁊ set watchmē vpō the wall daye ⁊ night ouer against them. And Iuda saide: The strēth of the bearers is to feble, ⁊ there is to moch dust, we are not able to builde on the wall. And oure aduersaries thought: They shall not knowe nether se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge thē, and slaye them, ⁊ hynder ⁊ worke. But whan the Iewes that dwelt besyde them, came out of all the places where they dwelt aboute vs, and tolde vs as good as tē tymes, then set I the people after their kynreds with their swerdes, speares ⁊ bowes beneth in the lowe places behynde the wall, ⁊ looked, and gat me vp, and sayde vnto the chefe men and rulers, ⁊ to the other people: Be not ye afraied of them, thinke vpon ⁊ greate LORDE which ought to be feared, ⁊ fighte for youre brethren, sonnes, daughters, wyues, ⁊ houses. Neuertheles whan oure enemies herde ⁊ we had gotten worde of it, God broughte their counsell to naughte, and we turned all againe to the wall, euery one vnto his labour. And from that time forth it came to passe, ⁊ the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the labour, ⁊ the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brest-plates, and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Iuda, which buylded on the wall, ⁊ bare burthens, from those that laded thē. With one hande dyd they ⁊ worke, and with the other helde they the weapon. And euery one ⁊ buylded, had his swerde girde by his side, ⁊ so builded they. And the trompetters stode beside me.

And I sayde vnto the pryncipall men, ⁊ rulers, and to ⁊ other people: The worke is greate ⁊ large, ⁊ we are separated vpon the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place now ye heare the noise of ⁊ trompe, resorte ye thither vnto vs. *Oure God shal fight for vs, ⁊ we wil be labourige in ⁊ worke. And the halfe parte of thē helde ⁊ speares fro ⁊ morninge springe, till ⁊ starres came forth. And at ⁊ same tyme sayde I vnto ⁊ people: Euery one abyde with his seruauant at Ierusalem, ⁊ in the night season we maye geue attendaunce to ⁊ watch, and to labour on the daye tyme. As for me and my brethren, ⁊ my seruantes, and ⁊ men of the watch behynde me, we put neuer of our clothes, so moch as to washe oure selues.

The v. Chapter.

AND there arose a greate complaynte of ⁊ people, ⁊ of their wyues against their brethren the Iewes. And there were some ⁊ sayde: oure sonnes and daughters are to many, let vs take corne for thē, ⁊ eate, that we maye lyue. Some saide: Let vs set oure londes, vynyards ⁊ houses to pledge, ⁊ take vp corne in the derth. But some saide: Let vs borowe money of the kinge vpō vsury for oure londes and vynyardes. Now are oure brethrens bodies as oure awne bodies, and their children as oure children: els shulde we subdue oure sonnes and daughters vnto bondage, and some of oure daughters are subdued allready, and no strength is there in oure handes, and other men shal haue oure londes and vynyardes.

But whan I herde their complaynte and soch wordes, it displeased me sore, and I aduysed so in my mynde, [†] I rebuked the counselors, and the rulers, and sayde vnto them: * Wyl ye requyre vsury one of another? And I broughte a greate congregacion agaynst them, and sayde vnto them: We (after oure abilyte) haue boughte oure brethren the Lewes, which were solde vnto the Heythen. And wyl ye sell youre brethren, whom we haue boughte vnto vs? Then held they their peace, [‡] I coulde fynde nothing to answer.

³³ And I sayde: It is not good that ye do. Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the Heythen oure enemies? I and my brethrē, and my seruantes haue lent them money and corne: but as for vsury, let vs leaue it. Therefore this same daye se that ye restore thē their londes agayne, their vynyardes, oyle gardens and houses, and the hundreth parte of the money of the corne, wyne and oyle that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayde they: We wyl restore them agayne, and wyl requyre nothinge of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, and toke an ooth of thē, that they shulde do so. And I shoke my lappe, and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner frō his house and labour, that maynteyneth not this worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all [†] congregacion sayde: Amen, and prayded the LORDE. And the people dyd so.

[‡] And from the tyme forth that it was comytted vnto me to be a Debyte in the londe of Iuda, namely from the twentieth yeare vnto the two and thirtieth yeare off kynge Artaxerxes (that is twolue yeare) I and my brethrē lyued not of soch sustenance as was geuen to a Debyte: For the olde Debytes that were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, and had takē of thē bred and wyne, and fortye Sycles of syluer: Yee and their seruantes had oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpon the wall, and boughte no lōde. And all my seruantes came thither together vnto [†] worke. Morouer there were at my table an hundreth and fiftie of the Lewes and rulers, which came vnto me, from amonge the Heythen, that are aboute vs. And there was prepared me daylie an oxe, and sixe chosen shepe, and byrdes, and euer once in ten dayes a greate summe of wyne. Yet requyred not I the luyng of a Debyte for [†] bondage was greuous vnto [†] people. Thynte vpō me my God vnto [†] best, acordige to all that [†] I haue done for this people.

The vi. Chapter.

³⁴ AND whan Saneballat, Tobias and Gosem the Arabian, and the other of oure enemyes herde, that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no mo gappes ther in (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Saneballat and Gosem sent vnto me, sayenge: Come and let us mete together in the villages vpon the playne of the cite Ono. Neuertheles they thoughte to do me euell. Notwithstandyng I sent messangers vnto them, sayenge: I haue a greate busynes to do, I can not come downe. The worke shulde stonde still, yf I were negligent, and came downe to you. Howbeit they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after the same maner. And I gaue the same answer.

³⁵ Then sent Saneballat his seruauant vnto me the fifth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherein was wrytten: It is tolde the Heythen, [‡] Gosem hath sayde it, that thou and the Lewes thynte to rebell: for [†] which cause thou buyldest the wall, and wylt be their kynge in these matters, and hast ordeyned the prophetes to preach of the at Ierusalem, and to saye: He is kynge of Iuda.

Now shal this come to the kynges eares: come now therfore, and let us take oure counsell together. Neuertheles I sent vnto him, sayenge: There is no soch thinge done as thou sayest: thou hast fayned it out of thine owne hert. For they were all mynded to make us afayed, and thoughte: They shal withdrawe their handes from the worke, [†] they shal not labour. Howbeit I strēghthed my hande the more.

And I came vnto [†] house of Semaia [‡]

* Deut. 23. c. † 2 Esd. 2. a.

* 2 Esd. 1. 3. c.

sonne of Delaia the sonne of Mechetabeel, & he had shut him selfe within, & sayde: Let us come together in to þe house of God, euē vnto þe myddes of þe tēple, & sparre þe dores of þe tēple: for they wyl come to slaye þe, yee euē in the night wyl they come to put the to death. But I sayde: Shulde soch a mā flye? Shulde soch a mā as I am, go in to þe tēple, to saue his life? I wyl not go in.

For I perceaued, that God had not sent him: Yet spake he propheeye vpon me, neuerthelesse Tobias and Saneballat had hired him for money. Therefore toke he the money, that I shulde be afrayed, and so to do and synne, that they might haue an euell reporte of me, to blaspheme me. My God thynke thou vpon Tobias and Saneballat, acordynge vnto these their workes, and of þe prophet Noadia, and of the other prophetes, þe wolde haue put me in feare.

And the wall was fynished on the fyue & twentyeth daye of the moneth Elul, in two and fyfthe dayes. And whan all oure enemies herde therof, all the Heithen þe were aboute vs, were afrayed, and their corage failed the: for they perceaued, that this worke came of God. And at þe same tyme were there many of þe chefe of Iuda, whose letters wete vnto Tobias, & from Tobias vnto them (for there were many in Iuda that were sworne vnto him: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sachania the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Iohanan had the daughter of Mesullam the sonne of Barachia, and they spake good of him before me, and tolde him my wordes.) And Tobias sent letters, to put me in feare.

The vij. Chapter.

NOW whan we had buylded the wall I hanged on the dores, and the porters, syngers and Leuites were appoynted. And I comaunded my brother Hanani, and Hanania the ruler of the palace at Ierusalem: (for he was a faithfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other) and I sayde vnto them: Let not the gates of Ierusalē be opened vntyll the Sonne be whote. And whyle they are yet stondeinge in the watch, the dores shall be shut and barred. And there were certayne citesyns of Ierusalem appoynted to be watchmen, euery one in his watch, and aboute his house. As for þe cite, it was large of rowme, and greate, but þe people were fewe therin, and the houses were not buylded.

And my God gaue me in my hert, that I gathered together the pryncipall men and þe people, to nombre them, and I founde a register of their nombre, * which came vp afore out of the captiuite (whom Nabuchodonosor þe kyng of Babilō had caryed awaie) and dwelt at Ierusalem and in Iuda, euery one vnto his cite, and were come with Zorobabel, Iesua, Nehemias, Asaria, Raamia, Naheman, Mardachai, Bilsan, Mispereth, Bigeuai, Nehum and Baena.

This is the nombre of the men of the people of Israel. the children of Iericho, thre hundreth and fyue and fortye: the children of Lodhadiid ⁊ Ōno, seuen hundreth and one and twentye: the children of Senaa, thre thousande, nyne hundreth and thirtie.

B The prestes. The children of Iedaia of the house of Iesua, nyne hundreth and thre and seentye: the children of Immer, a thousande and two and fyfye: the children of Pashur, a thousande, two hundreth and seuē and fortye: the children of Harim, a thousande and seuentye.

The Leuites. The children of Iesua of Cadmiel amonge the children of Hodua, foure ⁊ seentye. The syngers. The children of Assaph, an hundreth and eight and fortye. The porters were: The children of Sallum, the children of Ater, the childrē of Talmon, the children of Acub, the children of Hatita, the children of Sobai, altogether an hundreth and eight and thirtie.

32 The childrē of Salomons seruauantes were: The children of Sotai, the childrē of Sophereth, the children of Prida, the childrē of Iaela, the children of Darcon, the childrē of Giddel, the childrē of Sephatia, the childrē of Hatil, ⁊ childrē of Pohereth of Zebaim, the children of Amon. All the Nethinims ⁊ the childrē of Salomons seruauantes, were thre hundreth and two and nynty.

And these wente vp also: Michel, Mela, Thel, Harsa, Cherub, Addō, Immer: but they coude not shewe their fathers house ner their sede, whether they were of Israel. The childrē of Delaia, ⁊ children of Tobia, ⁊ the childrē of Necoda, were sixe hundreth ⁊ two ⁊ fortye. And of the prestes were, the children of Habaia, the childrē of Haco, the children of Barsillai, which toke one of ⁊ daughters of Barsillai the Gileadite to wyfe, and was named after their name. These soughte the register of their generacion, and when they foude it not, they were put from ⁊ presthode. And Hathirsatha sayde vnto them, ⁊ they shulde not eate of ⁊ most holy, tyll there came vp a prest with ⁊ light and perfectnesse.

The whole congregaciō as one mā, was two 33 and fortye thousande thre hundreth, and thre score: besyde their seruauantes and maydes, of whom there were seuen thousande, thre hundreth and seuē and thirtie. And they had two hundreth and seuen and fortie synginge men and wemen, seuen hundreth and sixe and thirtie horses, two hundreth and fyue and fortie Mules, foure hundreth and fyue and thirtie Camels: sixe thousande, seuē hundreth and twentye Asses.

And certayne of the awnciēt fathers gaue vnto the worke. Hathirsatha gaue to the treasure a thousande guldens, fiftie basens, fyue hundreth and thyrtye prestes garments. And some of the chefe fathers gaue vnto ⁊ treasure of the worke, twētye thousande guldens, two thousande and two hundreth poude of siluer. And the other people gaue twētye thousande guldens, and two thousande pounce of siluer, and seuē and thre score prestes garments. And the prestes and Leuites, the Porters, the syngers, and the other of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities.

The viij. Chapter.

NOW when the seventh moneth drue nye, 34 and ⁊ children of Israel were in their cities, all the people gathered them selues together as one man vpon the strete before the Watergate, and sayde vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shulde fetch the boke of the lawe of Moses, which the LORDE commaunded Israel. *And Esdras the prest brought ⁊ lawe before the congregaciō both of men and wemen, and of all that coude vnderstonde it, vpon the first daye of the seventh moneth, and red therin in the strete that is before the Watergate, from ⁊ light mornynge vntyll the noone daye before men and wemen and soch as coulde vnderstonde it: and the eares of all the people were inclined vnto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the scribe stode vpon an hye pulpit of wod, which they had made for the preachinge, & beside him stode Mathithia, Sema, Anania Vria, Ezechias, and Maeseia on his righte hand: And on his lefte honde stode Pedaia, Misael, Malchia, Hasum, Haszbadana, Zachary and Mesullam.

33 And Esdras opened þe boke before all þe people, for he stode aboue all þe people. And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras prayes the LORDE the greates God. And all the people answered Amen, Amen, with their handes vp, and bowed the selues, and worshipped þe LORDE with their faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Bani, Serobia, Iamin, Acub, Sabthai, Hodaia, Maeseia, Celita, Asaria, Iosabad, Hanam, Plaia, and the Leuites, caused þe people to geue hede vnto the lawe, & the people stode in their place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctly and planely, so that men vnderstode the thinge that was red. And Nehemias (which is Hathirsatha) and Esdras the prest and scribe, and the Leuites y caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: This daye is holy vnto the LORDE youre God: be not ye sory therefore, & wepe not. For all þe people wepte, whā they herde the wordes of the lawe.

¶ Therefore sayde he vnto them: Go youre waye, and eate the fat, and drynke the swete, and sende parte vnto them also that haue not prepared themselves: for this daye is holy vnto oure LORDE, be not ye sory therefore: for the ioye of the LORDE is youre strength. And the Leuites styllled all the people, and sayde: Holde youre peace, for the daye is holy, vexe not ye youre selues. And all the people wente their waye to eate and drinke, and to sende parte vnto other, and to make greates myrth, for they had vnderstode the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye were gathered together the chefe fathers amonge all the people, and the prestes and Leuites, vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shulde teach them þe wordes of the lawe. And they founde written in the lawe, * how that the LORDE had commaunded by Moses, that the childre of Israel shulde dwell in bothes in the feast of the seuenth moneth. And so they caused it be declared and proclaimed in all their cities, & at Ierusalem, sayenge: Go vp vnto þe moūt and fetch Olyue braunches, Pynebraunches, Myrtbraunches, Palmebraunches, & braunches of thicketrees, to make bothes as it is written.

And þe people wente vp, and fetched the, and made them bothes, euery one vpon the rofe of his house, and in their courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the Watergate, and in the strete by Ephraims porte. And all the congregacion of them that were come agayne out of the captyuite, made bothes, and dwelt therein: for sence the tyme of Iosua the sonne of Nū vnto this daye, had not the children of Israel done so, and there was very greates gladnesse. And euery daye from the first daie vnto the last, red he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feast, & on the eight daye the gatherynge together, acordynge vnto the maner.

The ix. Chapter.

IN the foure and twentieth daye of this moneth came the children of Israel together with fastinge and sackclothes, and earth vpon them, and separated the sede of Israel from all the straunge children, and stode and knowleged their synnes, and the wyckednesses of their fathers, and stode vp in their place, and red in the boke of the lawe of the LORDE their God foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, and worshipped the LORDE their God foure tymes on the daye. And the Leuites stode on hye, namely Iesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sebania, Buni, Serobia, Bani, and Chenani, and cryed loude vnto the LORDE their God. And the Leuites, Iesua, Cadmiel, Bani, Hasabenia, Serobia, Hodia, Sebania, Pethahia, sayde: Stonde vp, prayse the LORDE oure God for euer: and let thankes be geue vnto the name of thy glorye, which excelleth all thankesgeuyng and prayse. LORDE, thou art alone, thou hast made heauen, and the heauen of all heuens, with all their hoost, the earth and all that therein is, the See and all that is therein: thou geuest life vnto all, and þe hoost of heauen bowe themselves vnto the. Thou art the LORDE, God, that hast chosen Abrā, and broughte him out of Vr in Chaldea, & called him

Abraham,* and founde his hert faithfull before the, † and madest a couenaunt with him, to geue vnto his sede the londe of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Iebusites, and Girgositcs, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou art righteous. ‡ And hast considered the mysery of oure fathers in Egipte, and herde their complainte by the reed See, and shewed tokes and wonders vpō Pharaο, and on all his seruātes, and on all his people of his londe: for thou knewest ¶ they were presumptuous ¶ cruell against them, ¶ so madest thou § the a name as it is this daie. And the reed See partedst thou in sunder before them, so that they wete thorow the myddes of the See drye shod: ¶ their persecuters threwest thou in to the depe as a stone, in the mightie waters, and leddest them on the daye tyme in a cloudy pyler, and on the nighte season in a piler of fyre, to shewe them lighte in the waye ¶ they wente.

¶ Thou camest downe also vpō mount Sinai, and spakest vnto them from heauen, and gauest them righte iudgmentes, true lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, and declared vnto them thy holy Sabbath, and commaunded them preceptes, ordinaunces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruauit: and ¶ gauest them bred from heauen when they were hongrye, and ¶ broughte forth water for them out of the rock when they were thyrstye: and promysed them, ¶ that they shulde go in, and take possession of the londe, where ouer thou haddest lyfte vp thine hande for to geue them.

Neuertheles oure fathers were proude and hardnecked, so that they folowed not thy cōmaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not mynde full of the wonders ¶ thou dyddest for them: but became obstynate and heady, in so moch that they turned back to their bondage in their dishobedience. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracious, mercifull, patient, and of greate goodnesse, and forsoke them not. ¶ And though they made a molten calfe (and sayde: This is thy God, that broughte the out of the londe of Egipte) and dyd greate blasphemies, yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernes, according to thy greate mercy. ¶ And ¶ cloudy piler departed not from them on ¶ daye tyme to lede them the waye, nether the piler of fyre in the night season, to shewe them lighte in the waye that they wente.

And thou gauest them thy good sprete to D enfourme them, †† and withheldest not thy Manna from their mouth, §§ and gauest the water whā they were thirstie. Fortye yeares longe madest thou prouysion for them in the wyldernes, so that they wanted nothinge: ¶¶ their clothes waxed not olde, and their fete swelled not. And thou gauest the kigdomes ¶ nacions, ¶ partedst the according to their porcions, so that they possessed ¶¶ the londe of Sihon kyng of Heszbou, ¶ the londe of Og ¶ kyng of Basan. ¶¶ And their childe multipliedst thou as the starres of heauen, and broughtest the in to the londe wherof thou haddest spoken vnto their fathers, that they shulde go in to it, and haue it in possession.

And ¶ children wente in, and possessed the londe, ††† and thou subdudest before the the inhabitants of the londe, euen the Cananites, ¶ gauest them in to their hande, and their kynges and ¶ people of the londe, ¶ they might do with them what they wolde. And they wanne their stronge cities, ¶ a fat londe, and toke possession of houses ¶ were full of all maner goodes, welles dygged out, vynyards, oylgardens, ¶ many frutefull trees: and they ate ¶ were fylled, ¶ became fat, ¶ lyued in welth thorow thy greate goodnes. Neuertheles they were disobedient, and rebelled agaynst the, and cast thy lawe behynde their backes, ††† and slewe thy prophetes (which exhorted them so earnestly, that they shulde cōuerte vnto the) and dyd greate blasphemies. Therefore gauest thou them ouer in to the hāde of their enemies that vexed them.

And in ¶ tyme of their trouble they cried ¶ vnto the, and thou hardest them from heauen: and thorow thy greate mercy thou gauest them sauours, which helped the out of the hande of their enemies. But when they came to rest, they turned back agayne to do euell before the: therefore leifest thou them in the hande of their enemies, so ¶ they had ¶ dominion ouer them. So they cōuerted, and cryed vnto the, and thou herdest them from heauen, and many a tyme hast thou deluyered them according to thy greate mercy, and testified

Thou art righteous in all ſ̄ thou hast broughte vpō vs: for thou hast done righte. As for vs, we haue bene vngodly, and oure kynges, prynces, prestes & fathers haue not done after thy lawe, ner regarded thy cōmaundementes, & thy earnest exhortaciōs wherwith thou hast exhorted them, & haue not serued ſ̄ in their kyngdome, and in thy greate goodes ſ̄ thou gauest them, and in the large and plenteous lōde which thou gauest them to good, and haue not conuerted from their wicked workes. Beholde, therefore are we in bondage this daye: Yee euen in the lōde that thou gauest vnto oure fathers, to enioye the frutes and goodes therof, beholde, there are we bondmen. And greate is the increase of it vnto the kynges, whom thou hast set ouer vs because of our synnes, and they haue dominion ouer oure bodies and catell, and we are in greate trouble.

And in all this made we a sure couenaunt, & wrote it, & let oure prynces, Leuites & prestes seale it.

The r. Chapter.

¶ THE sealers were: Nehemias (that is) Hathirsatha the sonne of Hachalia and Sedechias, Seraia, Asaria, Jeremy, Pashur, Amaria, Malchia, Hattus, Sebania, Malluch, Harim, Meremoth, Obadia, Daniel, Sinthun, Baruch, Mesullam, Abia, Meiamin, Maasga, Bilgai and Semaia: these were prestes.

* Iosu. 24. c. 2 Par. 15. c. † Deut. 7. a.

The Leuites were: Iesua ſ̄ sonne of Asania, Binui amonge the childrē of Henadad, Cadmiel. And their brethren: Sechania, Hodia, Celita, Plaia, Hauan, Michā, Rehob, Hasabia, Sachur, Serebia, Sebania, Hodia, Bani and Beninu. The heades of the people were: Pareos, Pahath Moab, Elam, Sathu, Bani, Buni, Asgad, Sebai, Adonia, Bigenai, Adiu, Ater, Hezechias, Asur, Hodia, Hasum, Bezai, Hariph, Anathot, Neubai, Magpias, Mesullam, Hesir, Mesesabeel, Sadoc, Iaddua, Platia, Hanan, Anaia, Hoseia, Hanania, Hasub, Halohes, Pilha, Sobek, Rehum, Hasabna, Maeseia, Ahia, Hanan, Anan, Malluch, Harim and Baena.

And the other people, the prestes, Leuites, Porters, syngers, Nethiniims, & all they that had separated them selues from ſ̄ people in the lōdes vnto the lawe of God, with their wyues, sonnes and daughters, as many as coulde vnderstonde it, and their lordes that had rule of them, receaued it for their brethren.

* And they came to sweare, and to bynde them selues with an ooth to walke in Gods lawe, which was geuen by Moses the seruauit of God, that they wolde obserue and do acordinge vnto all the cōmaundementes, iudgements and statutes of the LORDE oure God: † and that we wolde not geue oure daughters vnto the people in the lōde, nether to take their daughters for oure sonnes. ‡ And yf ſ̄ people of the lōde broughte ware on the Sabbath, and all maner of vytayles to sell, that we wolde not take it of them on the Sabbath and on the holy dayes. § And that we wolde let the seuthē yeaere be fre concernynge all maner of charge.

And we layed a statute vpon oure selues, to geue yearly ſ̄ thirde parte of a Sycle to the mynistracion in the house of oure God, namely to the shewbred, to the daylie meatofferynge, to the daylie burntofferynge of ſ̄ Sabbathes, of the new mones and feast dayes, and to the thinges that were sanctified, and to the syn-offerynges, to reconyle Israel with all, and to all the busynes in ſ̄ house of oure God.

And we cast the lot amonge the prestes, Leuites and the people, for offerynge of ſ̄ wod, to be brought vnto ſ̄ house of oure God from yeaere to yeaere, after the houses of oure fathers, that it might be brent at tymes apoynted, vpon the altare of the LORDE oure

AND the rulers of the people dwelt at Ierusalem. But the other people cast lottes therfore, so that amōge ten one parte wente to Ierusalem in to the holy cite to dwell, and nyne partes in the cities. And ⁊ people thanked all the men that were willinge to dwell at Ierusalem.

These are the heades of the londe that dwelt at Ierusalem. In the cities dwelt Iuda euery one in his possession ⁊ was in their cities, namely Israel, the prestes, Leuites, ⁊ Nethinims, and the children of Salomons seruautes. And at Ierusalē dwelt certayne of the children of Iuda ⁊ of Ben Iamin.

^a Of the children of Iuda: Athaia the sonne of Vsia ⁊ sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Sephatia, the sonne of Mahelaleel, of the children of Phares. And Maeseia the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chal Hose, the sonne of Hasaia, the sonne of Adaia, the sonne of Ioarib, the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Siloni. All the childre of Phares that dwelt at Ierusalem, were foure C. and eight ⁊ thre score valeaunt men.

^b These are the childre of Ben Iamin: Sallu the sonne of Mesullam, ⁊ sonne of Ioed, the sonne of Pedaia, the sonne of Colaia, ⁊ sonne of Maeseia, the sonne of Ithiel, ⁊ sonne of Iesaia. And after him Sabai, Sallai: nyne hundreth and eight and twentye. And Ioel the sonne of Sichri had the ouersight of them: and Iuda ⁊ sonne of Hasnua ouer the seconde parte of the cite.

^c Of the prestes there dwelt: Iedaia ⁊ sonne of Ioarib, Iachin. Seraia the sonne of Helchias ⁊ sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Meraioth, the sonne of Achitob, was pryncie in the house of God: ⁊ his brethre that perfourmed the worke in ⁊ house: of whom there were viij. C. and xxij. And Adaia the sonne of Ieroham, the sonne of Plalia, the sonne of Amzi, the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Pashur ⁊ his brethre, chefe amōge the fathers: of whom there were two hundreth and two and fortye. And Amassai the sonne of Asariel the sonne of Ahusai, the sonne of Mesillemoth, the sonne of Immer: and his brethren were valeaunt men, of whom there were an hundreth and eight and twentye. And their ouerseer was Sabdaiel the sonne of Gedolim.

^d Of the Leuites: Semaia the sonne of Hasub, the sonne of Asrikam, the sonne of Hasabia, the sonne of Bunni: And Sabthai and Iosabad of the chefe of the Leuites, in the outwarde busynes of ⁊ house of God. And Mathania the sonne of Micha, the sonne of Sabdi, the sonne of Assaph, which was the principall to begynne the thankesgeuyng vnto prayer. And bachuchia ⁊ seconde amōge his brethren, and Abda the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Iedithun. All the Leuites in the holy cite were two hundreth and foure ⁊ foure score. ^e And ⁊ porters Acub and Talman, and their brethren ⁊ kepte the portes, were an hundreth and two and seuentye. As for the residue of Israel, the prestes and Leuites, they were in all the cities of Iuda, euery one in his inheritance.

And the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel: and Zipha and Gispa belonged vnto the Nethinims. The ouerseer of the Leuites at Ierusalem, was Vsi the sonne of Bani, the sonne of Hasabia, the sonne of Mathania, the sonne of Micha.

B Of the children of Assaph there were syngers aboute f busynes in the house of God: for it was the kynges commaundement cōcernynge them, that f syngers shulde deale faithfully, euery daye as acordinge was.

And Pethaia the sonne of Mesesabeel of the childrē of Serah the sonne of Iuda nexte the kyng in all matters concernynge the people. And the children of Iuda that were without in the townes of their londe, dwelt some at Kiriath Arba, and in the vyllages therof, t at Dibon, and in the vyllages therof: and at Cabzeel, and in f vyllages therof: and at Iesua, Molada, Bethphalet, Hazarsual, Berseba and in their vyllages: t at Siclag and Mochona, and in their vyllages: And at Enrimmon, Zarega, Ieremuth, Sanoah, Adullam and in their vyllages: At Lachis, and in the felde therof: At Aseka, and in the vyllages therof: and dwelt from Berseba vnto the valley of Hinnom.

The children of Ben Iamin of Gaba, dwelt at Michmas, Aia, Bethel and in their vyllages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Anania, Hazor, Rama, Githaim, Hadid, Ziboim, Neballat, Lod, Ono t in the Carpēters valley. And certayne of the Leuites f had porcions in Iuda, dwelt in Ben Iamin.

The xij. Chapter.

THESE are f prestes and Leuites that wente vp with Zorobabel f sonne of Saalthiel and with Iesua: Seraia, Ieremy, Esdras, Amaria, Malluch, Hattus, Sechania, Rehū, Meremoth, Iddo, Ginthoi, Abia, Melamin, Maadia, Bilga, Semaia, Ioiarib, Iedaia, Sallu, Amok, Helchias t Iedaia. These were the heades amōge the prestes and their brethren in the tyme of Iesua. The Leuites were these: Iesua, Bēnui, Cadmiel, Serebia, Iuda and Mathania, ouer the office of thankesgeuyng, they t their brethrē: Bacbuchia t Vnni and their brethrē, were aboute them in the watches.

Iesua begat Ioachim. Ioachim begat Eliasib. Eliasib begat Ioiada. Ioiada begat Ionathan. Ionathan begat Iaddua. And in the tyme of Ioachim were these the chefe fathers amōge the prestes: namely of Seraia was Meraia, of Ieremy was Hanania, of Esdras was Mesullam, of Amaria was Iohanān, of Malluch was Ionathan, of Sebania was Joseph, of Harim was Adna, of Meraioth was Helcai, of Iddo was Zachary, of Ginthon was Mesullā, of Abia was Sichri, of Miniamin B Moadia was Piltai, of Bilga was Sammua, of Semaia was Ionathan, of Ioiarib was Mathnai, of Iedaia was Vsi, of Sallai was Callai, of Amok was Eber, of Helchias was Hasabia, of Gedaia, was Nethaneel.

And in the tyme of Eliasib. Ioiada, Iohanān and Iaddua, were the chefe fathers amōge the Leuites, and the prestes wryttē vnder the reigne of Darius f Persian. The children of Leui the pryncipall fathers were wrytten in the Cronicles, vntyll the tyme of Iohanān the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chefe amōge the Leuites, Hasabia, Serebia and Iesua the sonne of Cadmiel, t their brethren ouer agaynst them, to geue prayse and thankes, acordinge as Dauid f mā of God had ordeyned it, one watch ouer agaynst another. Mathania, Bacbuchia, Obadia, Mesullam, Talmon and Acub were porters in the watch at the thresholds of the gates. These were in the tyme of Ioiachim the sonne of Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and in the tyme of Nehemias the Debyte, and of the prest Esdras the scribe.

And in the dedicacion of the wall at Ierusalem, were the Leuites soughte out of all their places, that they mighte be broughte to Ierusalem, to kepe f dedicacion in gladnesse, with thankesgeuynges, with synginge, with Cymbales, Psalteries and harpes. And the children of the syngers gathered thē selues together from the playne countre aboute Ierusalem, and from the vyllages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Gilgal, t out of the felde of Gibeā t Asmaueth: for f syngers had buylded them vyllages aboute Ierusalem. And f prestes and Leuites purified them selues, and censed the people, the gates and the wall.

And I caused the prynces to go vp vpon the wall, and appoynted two greates queres of thankesgeuyng, which wēt on the righte hande of the wall towarde the Donggate, and after them wēt Hosaia, and halfe of the prynces of Iuda, t Asaria, Esdras, Mesullam, Iuda, Ben Iamin, Semaia and Ieremy: and certayne of the prestes childrē with trompettes, namely Zachary f sonne of Ionathan, the sonne of Semaia, the sonne of Mathania, the sonne of Michaia, the sonne of Sachur, the sonne of Assaph, and his brethren, Semaia, Asareel, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nathaneel and Iuda and Hanani, with the musicall instrumentes of Dauid $\frac{1}{2}$ man of God.

B And Eszdras $\frac{1}{2}$ scribe -before the $\frac{1}{2}$ towarde the Wellgate, and they wente vp ouer agaynst them vpon the steppes of the cite of Dauid at the goynge vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate Eastwarde.

The other quere of thankesgeuyng wente ouer against them, and I after them, and the halfe parte of the people vpon $\frac{1}{2}$ wall, towarde $\frac{1}{2}$ Fornacegate vpwarde, vntyll $\frac{1}{2}$ brode wall, and to $\frac{1}{2}$ porte of Ephraim, and to the Oldgate, and to $\frac{1}{2}$ Fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Meah, vntyll the Shepegate. And in $\frac{1}{2}$ presongate stode they styll, and so stode the two queres of thankesgeuyng of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the prestes, namely Eliachim, Maeseia, Miniamin, Michaia, Elioenai, Zachary, Hanania, with t $\frac{1}{2}$ ropettes, and Maeseia, Semaia, Eleasar, Vsi, Iohanen, Malchia, Elam and Aser. And the syngers songe loude, and Iesrahia was the ouerseer.

E And the same daye were there greate sacrifices offred, $\frac{1}{2}$ they reioysed: for God had geu $\frac{1}{2}$ them greate gladnesse, so that both the wyues and children were ioyfull, $\frac{1}{2}$ the myrth of Ierusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were there men appointed ouer the treasure chestes (wherin were $\frac{1}{2}$ Heue offerynges, the firstlinges and the tithes) that they shulde gather them out of $\frac{1}{2}$ felde aboute the cities, to distribute the vnto the prestes and Leuites accordinge to the lawe: for Iuda was glad of the prestes, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of their God, and the office of the purification. And the syngers $\frac{1}{2}$ porters stode after the commaundem $\frac{1}{2}$ of Dauid $\frac{1}{2}$ of Salomon his sonne: * for in the tyme of Dauid and Assaph, were the chefe syngers founded, and the songes of prayse and thankesgeuyng vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemias, dyd all Israel geue porci $\frac{1}{2}$ vnto the syngers and porters, euery daye his porcion, and they gaue thinges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thinges that were sanctified, vnto the childr $\frac{1}{2}$ of Aaron.

AND what tyme as the boke of Moses was red in $\frac{1}{2}$ eares of the people, there was founde wyrtten therin, $\frac{1}{2}$ the Ammonites and Moabites shulde neuer come in to the congregacion of God, because they mett not the children of Israel with bred and water, $\frac{1}{2}$ and hyred Balaam against the $\frac{1}{2}$, that he shulde curse them: neuertheles oure God turned $\frac{1}{2}$ curse in to a blessinge. Now when they herde the lawe, they separated from Israel euery one that had myxte him selfe therin. And before this had the prest Eliasib deliuered the chest of $\frac{1}{2}$ house of oure God vnto his kynsman Tobia: for he had made him a greate chest, and there had they aforetyme layed the meatofferynges, frankencense, vessell, and the tithes of corne, wyne and oyle (accordinge to the commaundement geuen to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the Heueofferynges of the prestes.

But in all this was not I at Ierusalem: for in $\frac{1}{2}$ two and thirtieth yere of Artaxerses kynge of Babilon, came I vnto the kynge, and after certayne dayes optayned I lycence of the kynge to come to Ierusal $\frac{1}{2}$. And I gat knowlege of $\frac{1}{2}$ euell that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobia, in that he had made him a chest in the courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I cast forth all the vessels of Tobias house out of the chest, and commaunded them to clense the chest. And thither broughte I agayne the vessels of the house of God, the meatofferyng and the incense.

And I perceaued, that the porcions of $\frac{1}{2}$ Leuites were not geuen them, for the which cause the Leuites and syngers were fled, euery one to his londe for to worke. Then reproued I the rulers, and sayde: Why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought all Iuda the tithes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer $\frac{1}{2}$ treasure, euen Selemia $\frac{1}{2}$ prest, and Sadoc the scribe, $\frac{1}{2}$ of the Leuites Pedaia, and vnder their hande Hanan the sonne of Sachur the sonne of Mathania: for they were counted faithfull, and their office was, to distribute vnto their brethren. $\frac{1}{2}$ Thynke vpon me O my God here in, $\frac{1}{2}$ wype not out

Chap. X.

Of the auctorite of Mardocheus vnder the kyng.

The first Chapter.

IN the tyme of Ahasuerus, which reigned from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen and twenty lordes, what tyme as he sat on his seate roiall in the castell of Susan in the thirde yere of his reigne, he made a feast vnto all his prynces and seruantes, namely vnto the mightie men of Persia and Media, to the Debities and rulers of his countrees, that he mighte shewe the noble riches of his kingdome, and the glorious worshippe of his greatnesse, many dayes longe, euen an hundred and foure score dayes.

And whan these dayes were expyred, the kyng made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susan, both vnto greate and small, seuen dayes longe in the courte of the garden by the kynges palace: where there hanged whyte, reed & yalow clothes, fastened with coardes of linnen and scarlet in siluer rynges, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches were of golde and siluer made vpon a pauement of grene, white, yalowe and black Marble. And ⁊ drinke was caried in vessels of golde, and there was euer chaunge of vessell. And the kynges wine was moch acordynge to the power of the kyng. And noman was appoynted what he shulde drinke: for the kyng had commaunded all the officers of his house, that euery one shulde do as it lyked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feast also for the women in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth daye when the kynge was mery of the wine, he cōmaunded Mehuman, Bistha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagtha, Sethar and Charcas, the seuen chamberlaynes (that dyd seruyce in the presence of kynge Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasthi vnder the crowne regall, that he might shewe ſ people and prynces hir fairnesse: for she was bewtiful. But the quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kynges worde by his chamberlaynes. Then was the kynge very wroth, and his indignaciō kyndled in him.

¶ And the kynge spake to ſ wyse men that had vnderstandinge in the indaunaces of the londe (for the kynges matters must be hādled before all such as haue knowlege of the lawe and iudgment: And the nexte vnto him were, Charsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Meres, Marsena and Memuchan, the seuen prynces of the Persiās, and Meedes, which sawe the kynges face, and satt aboue in the kyngdome) What lawe shulde be execute vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not acordynge to the worde of the kynge by his chamberlaines. The saide Memuchā before the kynge ⁊ the prynces: The quene Vasthi hath not onely done euell agaynst the kinge but also agaynst all the prynces and all the people in all the londes of kynge Ahasuerus, for this dede of the quene shall come abrode vnto all wemen, so that they shall despyse their huszbandes before their eyes, and shall saye: The kynge Ahasuers cōmaunded Vasthi ſ quene to come before him, but she wolde not. And so shall the pryncesses in Persia and Media saye lykewyse vnto all the kynges prynces, when they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shall there aryse despytefulnes and wrath ynough. Yf it please the kynge, let there go a kyngly commaundemēt from him, and let it be wrytten acordynge to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come nomore before kynge Ahasuerus, and let the kynge geue the kyngdome vnto another that is better then she.

And ſ this wrytinge of the kynge which shalbe made, be published thorow out all his empyre (which is greate) that all wyues maye holde their huszbandes in honoure, both amonge greate and smal.

This pleased the kynge and the prynces, and the kynge dyd acordynge to the worde of Meinuchan. Then were there letters sent forth in to all the kynges londes, in to euery londe acordinge to the wrytinge therof, and to euery people after their lāguage, ſ euery man shulde be lorde in his awne house. And this caused he be spoken after the language of his people.

* 4 Reg. 24. c.

The ij. Chapter.

AFTER these actes whan the displeasure of kynge Ahasuerus was layed, he thoughte vpon Vasthi, what she had done, and what was concluded concernynge her. Then sayde the kynges seruantes: Let there be fayre yonge virgins soughte for the kynge, and let the kynge appoynte ouerseers in all ſ londes of his empyre, that they maye brynge together all fayre yonge virgins vnto the castel of Susan to the Wemens buyldinge, vnder the hande of Hegai the kynges chamberlayne, that kepeth the wemen, and let him geue them their apparell. And loke which damsell pleaseth the kynge, let her be quene in Vasthis steade. This pleased the kynge, and he dyd so.

In the castell of Susan there was a Iewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the sonne of Iair, the sonne of Simei, the sonne of Cis, the sonne of Iemini, which was caried awaye from Ierusalem, * whan Iechonias the kynge of Iuda was led awaye, (whom Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon caried awaye) and he norished Hadassa (that is Hester) his vnckles daughter: for she had nether father ner mother, and she was a fayre and beutyfull damsell. And whan hir father and mother dyed, Mardocheus receaued hir as his awne daughter.

Now whan ſ kynges cōmaundemēt and cōmyssion was published, ⁊ many dāsels were broughte together vnto the castell of Susan vnder ſ hande of Hegai, Hester, was takē also vnto ſ kynges house vnder ſ hande of Hegai ſ keper of ſ wemē, ⁊ the damsell pleased him, ⁊ she founde grace in his sighte. And he put her with hir maydēs in ſ best place of ſ Womēs buildige. And Hester shewed it not vnto hir people ⁊ hir kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her, ſ she shulde not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery daye before ſ courte of ſ Womēs buyldinge, ſ he might knowe how Hester dyd, and what shulde become of her.

C And whan the appoynted tyme of euery damsell came that she shulde come to \hat{y} kynge Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twolue monethes in the deckynge of the women (for their deckynge must haue so moch tyme, namely sixe monethes with Balme & Myrre, & sixe monethes with good spyes, so were the wemē beutified) then wente there one damsell vnto \hat{y} kynge, and what so euer she requyred, \hat{y} must be geuē her to go with her out of the Womens buyldinge vnto \hat{y} kynges palace. And whan one came in the euenynge, \hat{y} same wēte frō him on \hat{y} morow in to \hat{y} seconde house of women, vnder the hande of Saagas the kynges chamberlayne, which kepte \hat{y} concubines. And she must come vnto the kynge nomore, excepte it pleased the kynge, and that he caused her to be called by name.

Now whan the tyme came of Hester the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle (whom he had receaued as his awne daughter) \hat{y} she shulde come to the kynge, she desyred nothinge but what Hegai the kynges chamberlayne the keper of the women sayde.

And Hester founde fauoure in the sighte of all them that loked vpon her. And Hester was taken vnto kynge Ahasuerus in to the house royall, in the tenth moneth which is called Tebeth, in the seuenthe yere of his reigne.

D And the kynge loued Hester aboue all the women, and she founde grace and mercy in his sighte before all the virgins: and he set the quenes crowne vpon hir heade, and made her quene in steade of Vasthi. And the kynge made a greate feast vnto all his prynces and seruantes (which feast was because of Hester) and let the londes be in quyetnes, & gaue royall giftes.

And whan the virgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Hester shewed hir kynred and hir people, acordinge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Hester dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, like as whan he was hir tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaynes, Bigthan and Theres which kepte the dore, were wroth, and sought to laye their handes on the kynge Ahasuerus: Wherof Mardocheus gat knowlege, and tolde it vnto quene Hester, and Hester certified the kynge therof in Mardocheus name. And whan inquisicion was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was wryttē in the Cronicles before the kynge.

The iij. Chapter.

AFTER these actes dyd the kynge promote Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Agagite, and set him hye, & set his seate aboue all \hat{y} prynces that were with him. And all the kynges seruantes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and dyd reuerence vnto Aman: for the kinge had so comaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruantes which were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: Why transgressest thou the kynges commaundement? And whan they spake this daylie vnto him, and he folowed them not, they tolde Aman, that they mighte see whether Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had tolde them, \hat{y} he was a Iewe. And whā Aman sawe, that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, ner worshipped him, he was full of indignacion & despyte, that he shulde laye hondes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him \hat{y} people of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroye the people of Mardocheus, and all the people that were in the whole empyre of Ahasuerus.

E In the first moneth that is the moneth Nissan, in \hat{y} twolueth yere of kinge Ahasuerus, was there occasion and oportunitie sought by Aman, from one daye to another, and from the same moneth vnto the twolueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar. And Amā sayde vnto kinge Ahasuerus: There is a people scatered abroad and dispersed amonge all people in all the londes of thine empire, and their lawe is cōtrary vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it the kynges profit to suffre the after this maner. Yf it please the kynge, let him wryte, that they maye be destroyed, & so wil I weye downe ten thousande talentes of siluer, vnder the handes of the workmen, to be brought in to the kynges chamber. Then toke the kynge his rynge from his hande, and gaue it vnto Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Agagite the Iewes enemye. And the kinge sayde vnto Aman: Let the siluer be geuen the, and that people also, to do withall what pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scribes called on v thirteenth daye of the first moneth, t there was wrytten (acordynge as Aman commaunded) vnto the kynges prynces, and to the Debites euery where in the londes, and to the capytaynes of euery people in the countrees on euery syde, acordynge to the wrytinge of euery nacion, and after their language in the name of kyng Ahasuerus, and sealed with the kynges ryng. And the wrytynges were sent by postes in to all the kynges lodes, to rote out, to kyll, and to destroye all Iewes, both yonge and olde, childre and wemen in one daye (namely vpon the thirteenth daye of the twolueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar) and to spoyle their goodes.

This was the summe of the wrytinge, v there shulde be a commaundement geuen in all londes, to be published vnto all people, v they shulde be ready agaynst the same daye. And the postes wente in all the haist acordynge to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Susan was the cōmaundement deused. And the kyng t Aman sat t dranke. But v cite of Susan was disquieted.

The iiij. Chapter.

WHAN Mardocheus perceaued all that was done, he rête his clothes, and put on a sack cloth, t aszshes, t wente out in to the myddes of the cite, and cried loude and lamentably, and came before the kynges gate: for there might no man entre within the kynges gate, that had a sack cloth on. And in all lodes t places, as farre as the kynges worde and commaundement extended, there was greate lamentacion amonge the Iewes, and many fasted, wepte, mourned, t laye in sack clothes t in aszshes. So Hesters dāsels, and hir chamberlaines, came and tolde it her. Then was the quene exceedingly astonnyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shulde put them on, and laye the sackclothe from him. But Mardocheus wolde not take them. Thē called Hester Hathac one of the kynges chamberlaines (which stode before her) and gaue him a cōmaundement vnto Mardocheus, that he might knowe what it were, and wherfore he dyd so. So Hathac wente forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cite, which was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of all v had happened vnto him, and of the summe of siluer that Amā had promysed to weie downe in the kynges chamber because of v Iewes for to destroye them, and he gaue him the cōpye of the commaundement, that was deused at Susan to destroye them, that he mighte shewe it vnto Hester, and to speake to her and charge her, v she shulde go in to the kyng, and make her prayer and supplicacion vnto him for hir people.

And whā Hathac came in, and tolde Hester the wordes of Mardocheus, Hester spake vnto Hathac, and cōmaunded him to saye vnto Mardocheus: All the kynges seruantes, and the people in the londes of the kyng knowe, that who so euer cometh within the courte vnto v kyng, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the cōmaundement is that the same shal dye immediatly, excepte the kyng holde out the goldē cepter vnto him, that he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kyng now this thirtie dayes.

And whā Mardocheus was certified of Hesters wordes, Mardocheus bad saie againe vnto Hester: Thynke not to saue thine awne life, whyle thou art in v kynges house before all Iewes: for yf thou holdest thy peace at this tyme, then shal the Iewes haue helpe and delyueraunce out of another place, t thou t thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngdome, for this tymes sake? Hester bad geue Mardocheus this answer: Go thou thy waye then, t gather together all v Iewes v are founde at Susan, t fast ye for me, v ye eate not t drynke not in thre dayes, nether daye ner nighte. I t my damsels wil fast likewise, t so wyl I go in to the kyng cōtrary to the cōmaundement: yf I perishe, I perishe. So Mardocheus wente his waye, t dyd all v Hester had cōmaunded him.

The v. Chapter.

AND on the thirde daye put Hester on hir royall apparell, and stode in the courte of v kynges palace within ouer agaynst the kynges house. And v kyng sat vpo his royall seate in v kynges palace ouer agaynst v dore of the house. And whan the kyng sawe Hester the quene stōdinge in the courte, she founde grace in his sighte. And v kyng helde out the goldē cepter in his hāde towarde Hester. So Hester stepte forth, and touched the toppe of f cepter. Then sayde f kynge vnto her: What wilt thou quene Hester? a what requyrest thou? axe euē the halfe of f empyre, a it shal be geuē the. Hester sayde: Yf it please f kynge, let f kynge a Aman come this daye vnto f banket f I haue prepared. The kynge sayde: Cause Aman to make haist, f he maye do as Hester hath saide.

33 Now whā the kynge a Aman came to f banket f Hester had prepared, the kynge sayde vnto Hester whan he had dronken wyne: Hester, what is thy peticion? it shal be geuē the. And what requyrest thou? euen the halfe of the empyre, it shal be done.

Then answered Hester and sayde: My peticion and desire is, yf I haue founde grace in f sight of the kynge, a yf it please the kinge to geue me my peticion, and to fulfill my request, then let the kynge a Aman come to the banket f I shal prepare for the, and so wil I do tomorrow as the kynge hath sayde.

Then wente Aman forth the same daye ioyfull and mery in his mynde. And whan he sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate, f he stode not vp and kneled before him, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheles he refrained himselfe: and whā he came home, he sent, and called for his frēdes, and Seres his wyfe, and tolde them of the glory of his riches, and the multitude of his children, all together how the kynge had promoted him so greatly, and how that he was taken about the prynces and seruantes of the kynge. Aman sayde morouer: Yee and Hester the quene let no man come with the kynge vnto the banket that she had prepared, excepte me, and tomorrow am I bidden vnto her also with the kynge. But in all this am I not satisfied as longe as I se Mardocheus the Iewe syttinge in f kynges gate. Then sayde Seres his wife and all his frendes vnto him: Let the make a galowe of fiftie cubites hie, a tomorrow speake thou vnto the kynge, that Mardocheus maye be hanged thereon, yf thou comest merely with the kynge vnto the banket. Aman was well content withall, and caused a galowe to be prepared.

The bi. Chapter.

2 THE same night coulede not the kynge slepe, and he commaunded to brynge f Cronicles and storyes: which whā they were red before f kinge, they happened on the
